New FLDS compound uncovered in S. Dakota Is Jeffs hiding in the Black Hills?

A 100 acre parcel of land in a remote corner of the Black Hills of South Dakota turns out to be owned and operated by loyal followers of FLDS Prophet Warren Jeffs, and may be one of the fugitive prophet's hideouts.

The Success received an anonymous e-mail tip about the property, followed by an equally anonymous phone call in which the caller provided details about the property and the people who bought it.

It was a very familiar story. A man named David Allred had fronted the purchase of the property on Oct. 3, 2003, for the sum of $135,000.00. Allred was acting in his capacity as president of Details Unlimited, Inc., a corporation based in Washington County, Utah.

Allred is the man who fronted the purchase of the YFZ Ranch here in Schleicher County. It was also he who claimed the property was intended for use as a corporate hunting retreat. Allred later came forward to face Schleicher County officials and admit he had lied about the purpose of the YFZ Ranch.

Other things sounded familiar, too. Things like strangers driving cars and trucks with out-of-state license plates, women wearing pioneer-style dresses, large log cabin-style homes being erected, and guards on 4-wheelers who challenge anyone approaching the property line. All that, combined with one last piece of information, was enough to convince Success editor Randy Mankin that the tip was legitimate. The final tidbit of information involved trucks bearing the company name Z-Trans coming and going from the South Dakota property.

Z-Trans, Inc. is a corporation registered in St. George, Utah. The company's director and registered agent is Robert Dockstader Allred, another of Warren Jeffs' loyal followers.

Z-Trans trucks are routinely seen entering and leaving the YFZ Ranch here in Schleicher County.

Certain that the anonymous tipster was onto something, The Success staff began tracking down any corporate records that could be accessed over the Internet. Noted author Jon Krakauer and Utah private investigator Sam Brower, were also called in. They had previously helped The Success dig up information on the FLDS property near Mancos, Colorado.

Krakauer and Brower traveled to South Dakota where they scoured Custer County land records and scouted out vantage points from which they could watch the property.

What the men found was a 100 acre parcel of land on which several large buildings have been erected, some of them almost identical to the dozen log cabin-style residences now complete on the YFZ Ranch. They also saw and photographed another warehouse type building onto which a large two-story office and/or residential section was being added.

There was an assortment of trucks, construction equipment, farm equipment, and miscellaneous equipment such as generators and feed storage silos. There were even eight pig feeders clustered together under a clump of trees.

And there were numerous women and children. The women and girls were all clad in long pioneer-style dresses.

Krakauer told The Success that he is convinced the property is a hideout for "FLDS bigwigs," and may even be one of the places where Warren Jeffs has hidden himself in order to avoid arrest by state and federal law enforcement officials.

Jeffs was indicted in 2005 by a Mohave County Arizona grand jury on charges of Sexual Conduct with a Minor and Conspiracy to Commit Sexual Conduct with a Minor. The charges stem from Jeffs' alleged involvement in arranging and officiating over marriages between adult male and under-aged female

April Fools Day parade purse grows

Prize money for the Eldorado, Texas Elgoatarod April Fools Day Parade continues to pour in and now, in addition to a $100 prize for the parade entry most exemplifying the April Fools theme, an additional $75 will be awarded to the most humorous entry plus another $75 to the largest group in the parade. This is the fourth year for the Elgoatarod, a spoof of Alaska's Iditarod, but since the event falls on April 1 and 2 this year, this will be the first such parade to be incorporated into the event.

The parade will begin at 2 PM on Saturday, April 1 and will highlight this year's goat racing event. There is no entry fee, but interested individuals or groups should contact organizer Jim Runge at eoboc@hotmail.com for further details and an entry form. Entrants are encouraged to enter early in order to increase the possibility of even more prizes, but may enter as late as the day of the parade. Entries are being accepted from across the state, because to the knowledge of organizers, there is not a major parade for this special day anywhere in Texas.

The only guideline for parade entries is that they appeal to common decency, since this is a family event. Any type of pedestrian, equine or vehicular entry is welcomed, the more outlandish, the better. Besides being judged on its adherence to the April Fools theme, points will be awarded for action, costuming, creativity, humor, originality and general foolishness.

This year, due to the popularity of the goat races, riders must provide their own "pullers." Goats and carts are provided and anyone may ride, but a teenager or older must accompany riders in order to lead/pull the sometimes stubborn goats. Of course, anyone wishing to bring their own goat and/or cart is not only welcomed, but encouraged. Persons owning a goat but without a cart can bring their goat and hitch him to our "stars." Goats do not have to be trained to run without guidance and unusual conveyances are especially welcomed.

In addition to the numerous goat related contests held in year's past, April Foolishness contest will be held to add to the hilarity. Such things as blindfolded washer tossing, gnat racing, chigger catching contest, 4 x 4 ski races, sack races, three legged races and a Worst Elvis Impersonator contest. mailto:eoboc@hotmail.com mailto:eoboc@hotmail.com

Big Government Falls Flat

During the past year, one of the philosophical justifications for the Bush administration's approach to government has collapsed. It held that President Bush was a "big-government conservative," or in the more striking formulation of the influential, Bush-friendly journalist Fred Barnes, a "strong-government conservative."

In theory, strong-government conservatism is alluring. If government is going to do something, it ought to do it well. In practice, however, strong-government conservatism has mostly been a rationalization for lazy and politically expedient accretions to government. It hasn't given us a strong government, but a further-sprawling government that in many ways is contemptible.

Take the response to Hurricane Katrina. The Department of Homeland Security should be a perfect forum for strong government. Congress and the president identified a goal -- preventing terrorists from attacking us on our soil -- and named a new federal department after it: Homeland Security. They threw 22 disparate government agencies together, apparently on the theory that bigger is stronger.

In the House report on Katrina, there was one target for criticism that has gone unnoticed -- big government itself. The report notes how important it was to share information "within agencies" and "across departments." It didn't happen: "Unfortunately, no government does these things well, especially big governments."

Another signature Bush foray into expansive government is the Medicare prescription-drug plan. It takes one of the nation's problems -- exploding entitlements for the elderly -- and makes it worse. As Michael Mandelbaum argues in his new book, "The Case for Goliath," a major threat to the dominant U.S. role in the world is a declining public willingness to pay for it. Piling up new entitlement costs makes this dynamic even more likely.

Some government programs actually promote strong government. A large, capable military is a foundation of national power. The Patriot Act and the National Security Agency spying program -- by updating governmental capabilities to deal with a new national security threat -- represent strong, flexible government.

But these kinds of programs hardly necessitate an ever-expanding federal government. According to Brian Riedl of the Heritage Foundation, nondefense, nonsecurity and non-Katrina-related discretionary spending has increased 34 percent since 2001. Huge entitlements like Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security are growing at 6 percent to 9 percent annually.

None of this makes for strong government in the conservative sense. It creates a self-perpetuating appetite for even more government. As spending increases, so does pressure for higher taxes. This threatens the most successful Bush domestic initiative, which is of the old-fashioned limited-government variety: tax cuts that helped boost the most important factor in national strength and well-being, a strong private sector.

When the GOP begins its post-Bush departure -- roughly after the midterm elections in November, when the 2008 presidential nomination race begins -- "big-government conservatism" will probably end up on the ash heap. The party will have to relearn what it used to know: A strong government is a limited government.

Global Security Begins at Home

The idea "Think Globally, Act Locally" has influenced many decisions since its first use at an international conference in 1972. It conveys the idea that effective solutions to large problems often begin with steps taken in your backyard.

Today, keeping America safe requires the same concept. While our federal government protects us by meeting global threats abroad, we also need to act locally, addressing the potential security threats posed by illegal immigration.

We are all aware that important military missions are ongoing in dangerous parts of the world, and we are grateful for the courage of our military men and women. However, it would be a dishonor to their service if we did not protect our interests at home with the same dedication and vigor that they show overseas.

Domestic security requires our attention and cannot be overlooked. We must devote additional resources to securing our nation's borders. Our southern border has become a sieve, and protecting Texas's border with Mexico is one way that we can fight the war on terror at home.

Monitoring Texas' border with

Commentary
 by Senator
 Kay Bailey Hutchison

Mexico is no easy task; it spans 1,248 miles -- about the distance from Houston to Washington, D.C. But just because something is difficult does not mean it cannot be done. We have to do whatever it takes to secure our borders because the alternative is simply not an option.

Securing the Texas-Mexico border is also critical to our economy, because illegal immigrants can become a serious expense to local communities in the form of overwhelmed emergency rooms and overburdened schools.

President Bush's recent budget request is a good first step toward dealing with some of the immigration problems facing our state. The president requested $450 million to provide 1,500 new border patrol agents. While this increase is a step in the right direction, it is not enough.

Terrorists are counting on southern border policy to be weak, and we cannot allow that to happen. The 9-11 Commission recommended adding 2,000 new border patrol agents a year each year from 2006 to 2010 -- at a minimum. This increase was also recommended in the National Intelligence Reform Act that became law in December 2004. Leading the fight for new border patrol agents in the Senate, I introduced a budget amendment providing full funding for them.

Last year, we caught over 160,000 other than Mexicans (OTMs) crossing into our country illegally, and we do not know how many we failed to catch. The Census Bureau estimates that over 10 million people reside in our country illegally -- that's more than twice the combined populations of Houston, San Antonio, Dallas and Austin. Immigrants from countries other than Mexico

AG lodges clawback complaint

by Ed Sterling

AUSTIN — Texas and other states on March 3 filed suit against the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services over how states are forced to fund the new federal prescription drug benefit.

Attorney General Greg Abbott, on behalf of Texas, Kentucky, Maine, New Jersey, and Missouri, presented the U.S. Supreme Court with a complaint about the requirement that states pay a portion of the costs associated with federal Medicare drug coverage for persons eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid.

Abbott questioned the constitutionality of annual "clawback" payments -- money states must send each month to the federal government to compensate for savings Congress anticipates states will realize from no longer providing prescription drug coverage for individuals enrolled in Medicaid.

The program is projected to result in net losses to Texas of approximately $100 million from 2006-2009.

Texas Lottery drops bonus ball

After soliciting public comments on how to shore up sagging participation in Lotto Texas the Texas Lottery Commission on Feb. 27 jettisoned the "bonus ball."

The commission revised the game, which debuts April 23, so that players will pick six numbers from a field of 54.

"While there may not be an immediate and magic fix to the decline of our Lotto Texas game," said Lottery Commission Chairman C. Thomas Clowe, "I feel it's our responsibility to take action today to remove the one feature we've heard players disapprove of the most, the bonus-ball feature, and change Lotto Texas back to a pick-six game."

Without the bonus ball, the odds of winning the jackpot will be one in 25.8 million and overall odds of winning any prize will be one in 71, the agency said.

Court hears redistricting case

The U.S. Supreme Court on March 1 heard arguments in the Texas redistricting case relating to the November 2004 election and the dynamics that set the stage for a shift from a 17-15 seat majority for Democrats to a 21-16 seat majority for Republicans.

Attorneys for Mexican-American and African-American plaintiffs said the Texas Legislature violated the federal Voting Rights Act by watering down communities of interest and thus, voting power, in moving district lines.

Furthermore, attorneys for Democratic state legislators said it was unprecedented for district boundaries to be redrawn in the middle of a decade. Federal law requires redistricting after the U.S. Census is taken every 10 years, at the beginning of each decade.

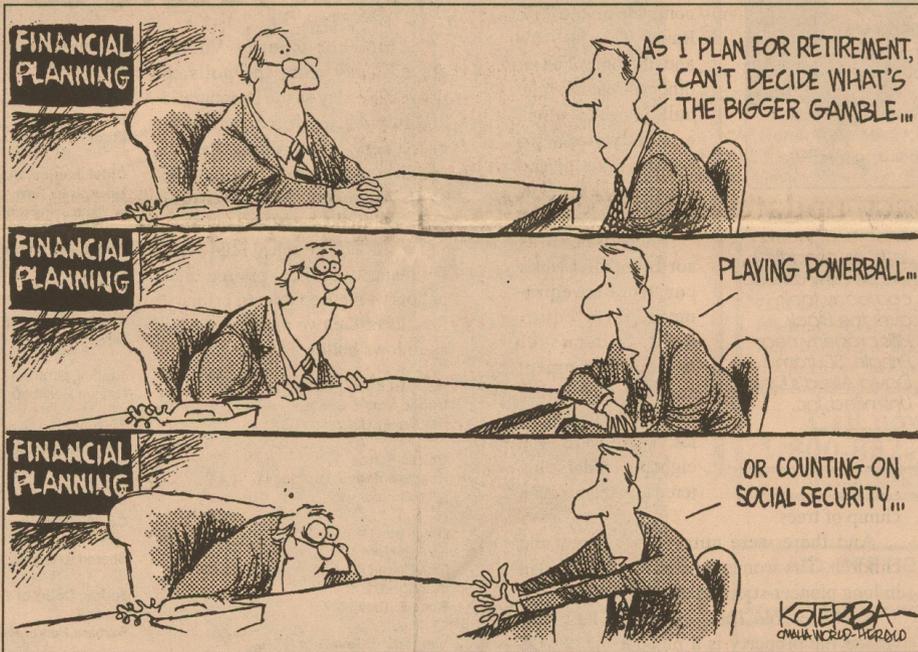

In its defense, the state of Texas argued that it is the Legislature's privilege and legal responsibility to redraw districts when the collective will exists.

The court is expected to render a decision on the case before its term ends in June.

A Visit to the Money Factory

Last summer we took a tour of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving in Fort Worth. It sure was fun seeing all that money. The multi-million dollar facility is modern, state of the art and produces more than half (52-54%) of the US currency. Although it opened in 1991, it didn't get much publicity until a couple of years ago when a visitors' center opened. A website, www.money-factory.gov gets millions of hits and provides information on our dollar bills.

Only two places in the world make US paper currency: Washington, DC and Fort Worth, Texas. To see where your bill was made, look at the top of the bill on the portrait side. If there is a small "FW" at the top, it came from Fort Worth. If there's no "FW" it came from Washington, DC.

Early this year I talked with Charlene Williams, the CEO of the Western Currency Facility. It produces ones, twos, fives, tens, twenties and fifties. "We actually did all the printing on the new fifty dollar bill and we're doing all the printing on the new ten dollar bill which will be released March the second," says Charlene. US Currency started having color with the new 20 dollar bill. Charlene says color makes the bills safer, smarter and more secure. She says about 67 percent of our nation's currency is circulated overseas.

by Tumbleweed
 Smith

The Western branch of the BEP employs more than 700 people who take an immense pride in their work. "They want to turn out a good product. They don't think of it as money. Engravers go thru a seven to ten year apprentice program before they begin their official duties. Printers and pressmen have a four year apprentice program."

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing decided to add a second plant in 1982 after an Air Florida plane crashed into the 14th street bridge in Washington, DC. "Had that plane been closer to the Bureau," says Charlene, "that would have caused a major economic devastation. There had already been talk about putting another plant outside the Washington area. That incident helped to push along that effort. The Bureau in Washington is interesting. It's in what was once an office building that was made into a production facility, so it's a multi-level operation. It's probably the second most popular tourist spot in Washington after the White House."

Eighty cities wanted the facility, but Fort Worth wanted it more than the others. Charlene says it's the civic pride that got the plant in Fort Worth. "Fort Worth people were very committed to getting the facility to locate here. They donated 100 acres of property and a 240,000 square foot building. For the first 100 jobs offered here, we had 14,000 applications. When people come to work here, they pretty much make this their life. Sometimes I ask my employees to guide people on tours because it gives them a chance to talk about what they do and show the pride in their work." The facility makes about 5 billion bills a year. A one lasts 2 months, 5's and 10's last about 3 years, 20's last 5 years, 50's and 100's last about 9 years. Twos have never worn out.

Magazine cites Texas job growth

Gov. Rick Perry announced Site Selection magazine, a national business expansion and relocation tome, has for the second straight year awarded its Governor's Cup to Texas for the most job creation announcements in the nation for 2005.

To be counted, businesses must have a capital investment of at least $1 million, create 50 or more jobs or involve 20,000 square feet of new floor space. Texas secured 842 such projects in 2005 — a 26 percent increase from the previous year, Perry's office said.

The magazine also cited two Texas metropolitan areas among the strongest in the nation for job growth. The Dallas-Forth Worth metro area ranked second and the Houston-Sugar Land-Baytown metro area ranked third.

 We are hard pressed on every side, yet not crushed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; struck down, but not destroyed - always carrying about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life of Jesus also may be manifested in our body.

While a number of Jeffs' faithful surrendered themselves to authorities after being indicted on similar charges, the FLDS prophet did not. He has not been seen publicly since shortly before the charges were announced.

Federal authorities joined the hunt for Jeffs a few weeks later when he was charged in a U.S. District Court with Unlawful Flight to Avoid Prosecution. At that time Utah and Arizona jointly offered a $10,000.00 reward for information leading to Jeffs' arrest and conviction. Recently, the FBI raised the ante, increasing the reward to $60,000.00.

As the investigation into the South Dakota property developed, other interesting parallels with the YFZ Ranch were noted. First, in a document filed with the Custer County Planning Office, David Allred claimed the first three-story log cabin was being built as a "seasonal lodge" and would be used as a "corporate retreat." That's almost word for word what he told Schleicher County citizens when setting up the purchase of the YFZ Ranch.

The property was later transferred by Quit Claim Deed to a company named United Land Management, LLC., a South Dakota corporation operated by Jerold N. Williams, the man who is reportedly the third in command at the YFZ Ranch behind Warren Jeffs and Merrill Jessop. Shortly thereafter, Williams filed documents stating that the building was not being used as a lodge, but as a dormitory to house workers.

Both companies, Details Unlimited, Inc. and United Land Management LLC are listed as delinquent by the Office of Secretary of State in their respective home states.

Other documents relating to septic tanks on the property were signed by a Ben Johnson. That name, too, has an interesting connection to the YFZ Ranch. First, a hunter named Ben Johnson was fined for illegally killing many of the deer on the YFZ property not long after the ranch was bought by Allred. Later, Schleicher County Sheriff David Doran was contacted to help locate a missing person, Susie Blackmore Johnson. The woman is the daughter of Winston Blackmore, the former FLDS bishop of Bountiful, Canada, and Jane Blackmore, his ex-wife.

Doran learned that the woman was married to another man named Ben Johnson and the sheriff actually made phone contact with the woman. Ms. Johnson reportedly told Doran that she was fine and did not want to contact her parents. While she refused to disclose her location the woman was adamant that she was not at the YFZ Ranch and in fact wasn't even in Texas. Jon Krakauer says he thinks there is a very good chance that Susie Blackmore Johnson has been living on the South Dakota property and that she may very well still be there.

"It's pretty clear that this place is very significant to Warren Jeffs," Krakauer said after returning from a scouting trip to the Black Hills. "That's obvious from the pile of money Jerold Williams has been shelling out to build infrastructure."

Of all the people involved in the Warren Jeffs/YFZ Ranch story, Krakauer has perhaps the best instincts. It was he who sensed that New Years Day of 2005 would be a good day to fly over the YFZ Ranch and it was he who snapped the now famous photo of what appears to be a crowd gathered for a dedication ceremony where the FLDS church's massive white temple now stands. In the center of the crowd stands a tall man facing all the others as if he was leading a choir. That man, Krakauer believes, was Warren Jeffs.

Krakauer is an accomplished mountain climber and outdoorsman. He penned a series of nonfiction adventure before finding himself drawn toward the shadowy world of fundamental Mormonism. His runaway best seller Under the Banner of Heaven, a Story of Violent Faith explores the more radical and violent side of several fundamentalist Mormon sects, including the FLDS.

Since the release of that book, Krakauer has devoted much of his time and his personal fortune to tracking down Warren Jeffs. He feels that the Black Hills compound in South Dakota is a significant find.

"I'd bet that after the YFZ Ranch, Warren considers this his most important piece of real estate right now," Krakauer says. "And its importance owes to the fact that it is (or was, before we got wise to it) — such a damn good place for him to hide from the law."

The South Dakota property is indeed remote, located some 9 miles southwest of Pringle, on Farmer Road. The county road actually bisects the property, dividing it into two distinct parcels, the first of which is designated as 1571 Farmer Road and the second as 1578 Farmer Road. Each parcel is surrounded by a barbed wire fence with the only access to them being through four locked steel gates.

"Warren has ordered his followers to take some fairly radical measures to keep the compound under the radar," Krakauer continues. "Heck, a few months ago Warren even decreed that all Utah, Arizona, and Texas license plates on the vehicles at the compound be replaced—and not with South Dakota plates, but instead with Wyoming plates registered to bogus addresses in that state."

"You gotta give the paranoid little freak some credit," Krakauer concluded. "I've been looking really hard for this place, and Warren managed to keep it completely hidden for quite a while."

As we have since the story broke here two years ago, The Success invites comment from Warren Jeffs and/or any of the leaders of his Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. So far, at least, none have been willing to come forward.

Business Tips: Pandemic flu can be your business, too

by Ms. Darcy Maloney, Business Development Specialist

Each night, the news generally has one story about the bird flu currently going around Asia and Europe. The concern of the CDC (Center for Disease Control) is that when this flu virus jumps from bird-to-human transmission, we may be in for a very nasty flu similar to the flu pandemic in 1918.

I began to wonder how this would affect businesses and started to do some research. The government has set up a great website (www.pandemicflu.gov) to track the flu as it travels and to teach Americans how to plan for the possibility of this event. There are suggestions for families, schools, communities and businesses. Many of the planning suggestions at the website are wonderful for planning for the regular flu season (which goes until May) and similar situations, too. What follows here is a digested version of the CDC recommendations for your business.

Plan for the impact on your business: Detail the travel required for your business. List your essential employees and other critical inputs like raw materials, suppliers, sub-contractor services/products, and logistics that are required to maintain business operations. Identifying these before any problem exists may forestall greater problems if the flu hits.

Plan for the impact of a pandemic on your employees and customers: Forecast for absences of your employees due to illness or family illness. Also, in the event of the worst scenario, community containment measures may be enforced which could impact your employees coming to work. Encourage annual influenza vaccination for all employees. Implement guidelines to modify the frequency and type of face-to-face contact (hand-shaking, office layout, shared workstations) among employees and between employees and customers. Encourage electronic coordination between employees rather than face to face meetings.

Establish policies to be implemented during a pandemic: Establish policies for employee compensation and sick-leave absences unique to a pandemic (non-punitive, liberal leave), including policies on when a previously ill person is no longer infectious and can return to work after illness. Establish policies for flexible worksites (like telecommuting) and flexible work hours. Promote respiratory hygiene and cough etiquette for preventing influenza spread at the worksite.

Allocate resources to protect your employees and customers during a pandemic: Provide sufficient and accessible infection control supplies such as hand-hygiene products, tissues and receptacles for their disposal in all business locations. Enhance communications and information technology infrastructures as needed to support employee telecommuting and remote customer access.

Communicate to and educate your employees: Anticipate employee fear and anxiety, rumors and misinformation and plan communications accordingly.

Coordinate with external organizations and help your community: Share best practices with other businesses in the Concho Valley, chambers of commerce, and associations to improve community response efforts.

I must reiterate human-to-human transmission has not yet occurred and may not for two or more years... or never. The concern of the CDC (Center for Disease Control) is once the virus mutates, we could be faced with a flu that will spread rapidly and be more deadly than any we've seen. Early planning is important.

A few years ago, I took my first cruise with my family during the time that concern was over so-called "killer viruses" on cruise ships. All crew members on the ship, from the Captain on down, openly encouraged hand washing. Our cruise was fantastic and no one became sick. According to the CDC, the simple step of washing your hands regularly may be the best planning tool of all!

are coming into our country in large numbers, and we need to make sure they go through proper security channels. Additional funding will help accomplish the Department of Homeland Security's goal of eliminating, by October, the catch and release program in place for OTMs. Of the 160,000 OTMs caught and released, only 30,000 (under 20%) showed for their court hearings. That is unacceptable. I have urged the Department to use temporary facilities to begin detaining non-Mexican illegal entrants immediately instead of releasing them until new facilities are prepared. I have worked in Congress to increase immigration-related funding, and last fall we passed over $31 billion for the Department of Homeland Security, providing $9 billion for Customs and Border Protection, Immigration & Customs Enforcement, and related activities, 250 criminal investigators (for a total of 6,000), and 20,000 detention beds. During the previous Congress, I cosponsored legislation in the Senate reimbursing Texas hospitals approximately $47 million a year for the cost of treating illegal immigrants.

Yet immigration reform requires more than just funding. Last year a community in New Hampshire attempted to prosecute illegal immigrants, but it was thwarted when a judge ruled the federal government has exclusive jurisdiction on civil immigration issues. Other communities around the country have faced similar legal obstacles in their attempts to stem the flow of illegal immigrants. In response, I proposed the Illegal Immigration Enforcement and Empowerment Act. This bill would allow state and local law enforcement to become more involved in the process of catching illegal immigrants. State and local governments should be permitted to pass their own laws so they can prosecute all immigration violations, both civil and criminal. The Illegal Immigration Enforcement and Empowerment Act would allow states to enforce federal immigration law and to create state immigration enforcement provisions in accordance with federal law. It would also authorize the Department of Homeland Security to create a Volunteer Border Marshall Program that would use trained, volunteer, state-licensed peace officers on temporary missions to the border to assist the Border Patrol. This program would provide temporary help to identify and control illegal immigration. It would also supply extra support to stop human and drug trafficking. This is a sensible option for communities that are looking for broader capability. Security at our borders is an investment in national security, and we must attack the problem at every level.

PUBLIC NOTICE BY SCHLEICHER COUNTY
 Chapter 258 of the Texas Transportation Code (AChapter 258") authorizes a county to clarify the existence of a public right of access over certain county roads. Under Chapter 258, the commissioners court of a county may propose and, after an opportunity for affected landowners to object to the inclusion of certain roads, to adopt a county roads map that includes each road in which the county claims the existence of a public interest because of documented county ownership or as a result of the county having continuously maintained the road since before September 1, 1981. Schleicher County (ACounty@) claims the existence of a public interest in certain county roads that are included on a county roads map that has been proposed by the County Commissioners Court for adoption by the County under Chapter 258. A map that shows the county roads proposed to be included on the Chapter 258 county roads map will be available for public inspection during regular business hour in the Schleicher County Courthouse. Under Chapter 258, any person asserting a private right, title, or interest in a road which the County has included in the proposed county roads map may protest the County's claim of a public interest by making a protest at the public meeting described below, or by filing a written protest with the County Judge at any time before the public meeting. The Commissioners Court of Schleicher County will hold a public meeting for the purpose of allowing any person asserting a private right, title, or interest in a road in which the County has claimed the existence of a public right of access, by including it on the proposed county roads map, to protest the County's claim under Chapter 258. That meeting will be held beginning at 10:00 a.m. on March 13, 2006, in the Commissioners Courtroom at the County Courthouse, 2 North Divide Street, Eldorado, Texas. For protest forms or for further information, visit the office of County Judge Johnny Griffin in the Schleicher County Courthouse, or call at (325) 853-2766.

Lady Eagles softball squad shuts out S.A. Central JV

by Syllas Politte

On Friday February 24, 2006, the Eldorado Lady eagles faced San Angelo Central's JV for the second time in 4 days. The outcome of this contest was no different than before with the Lady Eagles securing the victory, but the way it was done was very different. In some less than ideal playing conditions, the Lady Eagles shutout the Lady 'Cats 22-0 with the game ending in the 3rd inning.

Again the Lady Eagles were led by dominate defense, powerful pitching and hot bats. Freshman ace Bridgett Mitchell improved her perfect record to 3 wins and 0 losses on the season allowing 1 hit and recording 6 strikeouts. For the first time in my 4 years of watching this team the Lady Eagles gave up 0 errors. That is an amazing feat for any team.

As great as the defense played, the Lady Eagle's offense scored more runs than they had in the previous contests combined. Again the youth of the Lady Eagle's was just the spark the team needed for one of the best scoring outings in school history. Freshman Corie Williams led the way at the plate hitting 3-4 with 2 runs-batted-in. Freshman Haley Higgins and Jessie Valero and Senior Melinda Hernandez added 4 doubles on this day with Valero recording 2. Williams, Higgins, Mitchell, Valero and Cassandra Buitron each recorded RBIs with Williams, Higgins, Mitchell and Valero each having 2 a piece.

The Lady Eagles have sure picked a fine time to put all the elements together as they head into the San Angelo softball tournament this weekend March 2-4, 2006. The Lady Eagles will face some great competition in pool play as they face Midland Christian JV, Early, Kermit and district rival Sonora. The first game of the tournament will be today in San Angelo. The Lady Eagles have many hurdles ahead of them in this tournament. They will face faster pitchers, better hitters and proven playoff teams. Coach Brian Daniels said, "We have a tough pool to play in, but it will be a good indicator of where we are as a team. With many of the teams on the Lady Eagles schedules advancing in the 2A State Basketball Playoffs, they have had many games canceled up to this point. An already short non-district schedule got shorter, but the Lady eagles have played well enough to get off to their best start in 3 years.

The Lady Eagles will open up district play against rival Sonora at Lady Eagles softball field Tuesday March 7, 2006 at 4 pm.

These girls know that they are in a loaded district 2-2A, but are head into district with confidence. Haley Higgins said about playing Sonora, "You always want to beat Sonora, but we really want to beat them." Hopefully all the Lady Eagles will share her desire and start the run for the first District Championship in school history. I am certain that if the Lady Eagles continue to improve the way they have been they could be playing well into April and May.

FAMILY FEATURES

With a simple addition, you can add a flavorful, healthy boost to many everyday recipes. "One hundred percent orange juice is one of the most popular and naturally healthy beverages, and it enhances a recipe's nutrition and taste," said Chef Michel Nischan, a healthy-cooking expert and author of "Taste Pure and Simple" and "Homegrown Pure and Simple."

- Adding 100% orange juice to recipes can have many benefits, from boosting antioxidants to providing daily fruit servings. Most importantly, using pure orange juice when cooking and baking adds essential vitamins and nutrients such as potassium, folate and vitamin C.
- Try these juicy recommendations from Chef Michel Nischan:
- To reduce salt and add flavor, replace half the soy sauce called for in a marinade with 100% orange juice.
- Substitute 100% orange juice for the water in your oatmeal for a nutrient boost.
- Use pure orange juice instead of water or milk in quick bread or muffin recipes for added antioxidants.
- Try pure orange juice as a sodium-free marinade or glaze and take advantage of its meat-tenderizing abilities.

Look for more of Chef Nischan's healthy recipes using orange juice at www.FloridaJuice.com/Nischan.

Wake-Up Recipes With 100% Orange Juice

Orange, Almond and Buckwheat Pancakes

Prep time: 20 minutes
Cook time: 50 minutes
Makes: 6 servings, 2 (4-inch) pancakes each

- 1 cup sliced almonds*, divided
- 1 whole orange
- 1 egg
- 2/3 cup 100% orange juice
- 1 cup 2% reduced fat milk
- 2 tablespoons grapeseed oil or canola oil
- 3/4 cup buckwheat flour
- 1 cup all purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt

Preheat oven to 375°F.
Spread almonds over a cookie sheet and bake 5 to 7 minutes until nicely browned. Remove and cool at room temperature.
Grate zest of orange, being careful not to grate into white pith. Peel remainder of skin and slice between membranes to separate each orange segment. Set aside for garnish.
Combine egg, orange juice, milk and oil in medium bowl and mix well. In large bowl, combine both flours, baking powder and salt with reserved orange zest. Add liquid to dry ingredients and mix thoroughly, being sure to leave some lumps. Set aside 1/4 cup almonds for syrup, then gently mix remaining 3/4 cup into batter until ingredients are combined, but still lumpy. (Do not over-beat or stir until smooth, as this will make pancakes tough.)
Ladle batter onto hot, non-stick skillet coated with cooking spray and cook until some bubbles begin to appear on top, about 3 minutes. Flip cake over and cook 2 minutes. Serve immediately with Orange-Almond Syrup (recipe follows), and garnish with orange segments.

*Note: While almonds provide a healthy fat, this ingredient may be removed to reduce the recipe's fat content by 18 grams.

Orange-Almond Syrup

- 1 cup 100% orange juice
- 1 cinnamon stick
- 1/2 cup light maple syrup
- 1/4 cup reserved roasted almonds

Simmer orange juice and cinnamon stick in small saucepot over medium heat until reduced to 1/2 cup, about 15 minutes. Add maple syrup. Remove cinnamon stick, stir in reserved roasted almonds and serve warm.

Zesty Shrimp and Orange Fajitas With Whole Wheat Tortillas

Zesty Shrimp and Orange Fajitas With Whole Wheat Tortillas

Prep time: 30 minutes
Total time: 2 1/2 hours (2 for marinating)
Makes: 6 (14 1/2-ounce) servings

- 1 cup 100% orange juice
- 1/4 cup fresh lime juice
- 1 medium onion, peeled and cut into 1/4-inch strips
- 2 medium red bell peppers, seeded and cut into 1/4-inch strips
- 2 medium yellow peppers, seeded and cut into 1/4-inch strips
- 3 oranges, peeled and cut into segments
- 1 cup fresh cilantro leaves
- 2 teaspoons ground cumin
- 2 teaspoons ancho chili powder
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 24 10- to 15-count shrimp (about 1 1/2 pounds), peeled and de-veined
- 2 tablespoons grapeseed or canola oil, divided
- Non-stick cooking spray
- 12 6- to 8-inch whole wheat tortillas
- Large cloth napkin or dish towel to keep tortillas warm

Combine all ingredients, except shrimp and oil, in medium mixing bowl. Season with salt and pepper. Toss shrimp into marinade and refrigerate 2 hours.
To cook, remove shrimp from marinade and let drain 5 minutes. Drain vegetables from marinade through large colander over saucetop. Bring reserved marinade liquid to boil, then reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes; set aside.

Heat large cast-iron skillet over medium-high heat. Add half of oil to skillet. Add shrimp and sauté until lightly browned and cooked through. Remove shrimp from skillet and keep warm. Add other half of oil to skillet, followed by drained vegetables. Cook until onions are translucent, about 5 minutes. Turn heat up to high and spread vegetables evenly throughout skillet. Vegetables will start to brown on bottom of skillet. Arrange shrimp over vegetables and add reserved marinade.

Heat large skillet over medium-high heat. Lightly spray one side of each tortilla with non-stick cooking spray. Place tortilla, sprayed-side down, into hot skillet. Cook until tortilla begins to expand, about 1 minute, then flip and cook another minute. Place tortilla on large napkin. Repeat until all tortillas are cooked. Stack tortillas as cooked, then wrap with napkin and place on serving plate.

Serve immediately with side of your favorite guacamole and plate of warmed whole wheat tortillas.
