forget to turn it off as it is necessary to do so in order to stop the flow of water.

Mr. Biggers is exhibiting this clever invention to his friends but has only a rough pattern which he made from a peice of wood with a pocket knife. As soon as he gets one made from brass he will take some steps to place it on the market with a view to selling it to some manufacturing concern.

Honhr Roll Correction.

Through an oversight of the printer in setting the last honor roll the list of irregulars who should have been in the high school list was left off and the following names failed to appear:

- Earl Graham
- Herrman Glass
- Mamie Rush
- Ethel Harbert
- Winnie Floyd
- Alvah Christian
- Curtis Mitchell
- Oswald Mitchell.

Miss Winnie Floyd, who has been entitled to appear on the honor roll three or four times during the present term, has, from unknown cause, been omitted in every instance. Wherever the fault lies, we regret very much that such should be the case and offer the young lady apologies for the oversight.

the public. Effective March 15 last the Western Union company put in operation a schedule of night prices by which a message of fifty words can be sent to any part of the United States for the nominal fee usually charged for ten words at the day rate. For instance a ten word message to Amarillo would cost twenty five cents at the day rate. At the present night rate you could send fifty words for the same price and each additional ten words would cost one fifth of the first charge. This will enable parties who have long messages or letters that require haste in delivery to have same put on the wires at a great saving in cost over the former schedule.

Shall She Vote Or Not in Texas

Women have no right to vote in Texas.

At least such was the decision of the judges, Messrs. R. H. Collier, H. A. Goodwin and J. G. House, who heard the debate at the Christian-Cousins opera house Friday evening of last week, at which time members of the Lone Star Literary Society discussed this all important question, "Resolved that women should not vote in Texas." The affirmative was represented by Jay Faulkner and Roy Rice and the negative by Prof. Ernest Clark and Andy Floyd.

At the invitation of the society a goodly audience gathered at the opera house Friday evening to listen to the proceedings of the open meeting. After calling the house to order the president called upon Prof. J. H. Horton for an address, which was forthcoming in the Professor's usual masterful manner. During the course of his remarks the gentleman said that he felt proud of his high school boys and hoped the audience could take into consideration the fact that this was their first appearance before a public audience in the capacity of debaters, and would judge their efforts accordingly. A wish that need hardly to have been expressed that the boys more than did themselves proud, bringing out some excellent thoughts on the subject at hand as well as showing marked ability in oratory. That the affirmative side won the decision should not be understood to detract from the ability of the boys on the negative side of the fence as they also ably presented their version of the matter and their addresses were applauded repeatedly.

During the intermissions in the program excellent music was furnished by Clay Gardenhire and Appy Taylor on violin and guitar.

At the close of the debate the audience was favored by a "prophecy" from the fertile mind of Walter Voyles, in which the young man said many things that may or not come true and that the audience in a continual prophetic mind he had made up the future styles in men's wearing apparel and wound up by saying,

If they keep on I bet

They'll be wearing clothes like mine yet.

A clever journal read by Appy Taylor, in which he handed out a few "packages" to various members of the high school faculty and student body was next on program. An especially apt joke on a society man of the city brought forth a thundering applause. We are not at liberty to call names as it is said the victim of the joke is carrying a butcher knife in his vest.

After an excellent address by Walter Foster the body moved to adjourn and it was all over. No entertainment that has ever been witnessed in McLean was a more thorough success from the standpoint of wit, humor and oratory and thanks are due to the Lone Star Literary Society for an evening of pleasant enjoyment.

Clever Invention.

An invention that will command more than passing interest has been perfected and patented by S. A. Biggers of this city and will be styled a hydrant valve. The little affair is made of brass and is screwed into the water pipe under the ground in the same manner as the ordinary stop and waste valve but works entirely different. At the upper end of this valve the water pipe is attached which runs above the surface of the ground, but instead of attaching a faucet the pipe is merely bent in a crook, the open end down. When drawing water you simply turn the entire pipe which works loose in the valve. When you wish to stop the flow of water turn the pipe back to its first position and the water is not only cut off but the valve is so made that all accumulated water in the pipe and valve is drained back into the main, leaving it perfectly empty.

By the use of this valve there is absolutely no danger of pipes freezing and bursting as there is no water in the hydrant pipe. Another important advantage over the old style stop and waste valve is the fact that you never

The surest way to build up a business is to sell on MERIT. Price is a shaky bridge, quality a secure foundation. A Business built on price is a flimsy one at best, Without strength or endurance. It occurs to us that when a man wins trade by low prices he stands to lose it the moment another store undersells him. This "price trade" is trade that you can not rely on. For the reason that it jumps from place to place considering price. A man should consider quality as well as price. The best is always the cheapest. We have the quality and our price is right.

The Charter for the McLean Chamber of Commerce having been accepted, that body is now ready to proceed with the work it has outlined for the coming year and to this end the real estate members have installed themselves in the new offices on main street and taken up the work of listing lands for sale.

It is the wish of those in interest that all parties having land for sale in this particular section should come in at once and list same as a man will be started north at once to solicit immigration and various other advertising campaigns will be started. With the present excellent outlook for a big crop year and a general condition of prosperity it is believed that much good may be accomplished by the intelligent efforts of this club and the moral support and influence of the public will greatly facilitate this result.

If you have land or other real or personal property for sale you will not make a mistake by listing it with this body as they are very much alive and are in position to get results for their customers that will be entirely satisfactory. Messrs. Gardenhire, Crabtree, Hodges and Cosby are all authorized to take land listing and if not seen elsewhere can be found at the office of the club in the old Palace Hotel building on Main street.

Need of Companionship.

In an article on "Why Boys Leave Home" a writer in the Ladies' Home Journal gives some excellent advice to parents regarding the home management of boys. The writer secured his information from boys who had been sent to the penitentiary for various crimes. In talking to one hundred boys he found that ninety per cent of them had run away from home between the age of eleven and eighteen years. The following excerpt is illustrating of one reason why boys leave home:

Thirty-Eight per cent ran away from home because of its lack of companionship. They were made to feel as if they were not wanted, in some instances causing their young minds to contemplate suicide—anything to free themselves from a home where Father was too "busy" to "chum" with his lonesome hearted boy.

This lesson was impressed vividly upon my mind by one boy convict's story: "I had fully decided to run away from home six months before I actually did so. Every time I would plan to go Mother's face appeared before me telling me how much she would miss me, how lonesome she would get. Then I would sneak back to my room and unpack my bundle.

"I knew mother loved me; I was in doubt as to father. He was always so distant. I never felt as if I knew him. The climax came one day when Father asked two lazy, worthless fellows to go hunting with him because they rarely missed a shot. I asked Father to let me go, just for the privilege of carrying the 'game.' His answer was partly a scowl, then he said 'No! Stay at home! You'd only be in the way!'

"That nearly broke my heart, sir, and I went back of the barn and cried for over two hours. Then a firm, overmastering resolve seized me: I would run away from home! I packed my tiny bundle, went directly to my Mother's room where she lay sleeping, kissed her without her knowledge, and started down the road. And, sir, every other step that took me away from Mother seemed to tear a cord in my heart; but the other foot that should have belonged to Father kept going in spite of my desire to turn back. I boarded a freight train with a dozen desperate-looking tramps, got to the West after many adventures, got into a fight in a saloon and killed a brakeman. And here I am.

"I would gladly have stayed at home for Mother's sake but there is a freedom even here that Father denied me at home; and then, too," he added as a sickly smile interrupted the fleeting contortion of his boyish face, "they never tell me I'm in the way; they kind of seem to like a fellow—even the guards."

Isn't it time that fathers woke up? A boy's heart is oftentimes hungry for his father's love, wisdom and companionship. He wants a square deal; he wants his father to "chum" with him, to take him fishing or hunting, to be just a father to him! That is what so many, many boys want!

C. E. Minix and wife and daughter, Miss Jennie, were callers at the News office Monday afternoon. The gentleman had us credit him with $1.00 on his subscription.

"THE LEADING DRUG HOUSE"

Will H. Langley
DRUGGIST

THE FARMER HEARD FROM

Our town Chicago and else for as much as some of late have taken in hand to set forth a declaration of the things mostly needed among us, it seemed good to me also having had perfect understanding of all the things of which they wrote to write also that the reader may know of a certainty of those things. Some recent writers undertake to tell what the home dealer does for the farmer who will buy a buggy or other piece of farm machinery will take the old one or piece as part pay yes sir that is a fact and also can pay some one to carry the old one out to the dump. Yes sir money in such trades. Well the mail order house doesn't help build church houses, school houses, and so on. Well when they save so large a per cent to the customer that enables us to do our own building so if farmer Alison or any of his family send their money to the catalogue man is not such a course of conduct right and wise, he is the business furnisher of the country and so it is to his interest as well as his business to be interested in every part of the country in which he lives. It is true that he hasn't the capacity to operate oil fields, run saw mills and preach the Gospel all at the same time successfully but he knows some things and is generally doing the best and right things. He is always ready and willing to obey the divine injunction by earning this bread by the sweat of his brow and in so doing he is true to his God, his fellow man and his country.

W. P. Fox.

The writer of the above probably has some grounds for the assertion that money can be saved by buying from a mail order house—in fact such is often the case. But the main issue, the wisdom of buying your supplies in Chicago, we very much doubt, even taking it from the standpoint of the farmer. Suppose, for instance, the farmer should buy all his supplies by mail and pays express or even local freight charges on it. What would he lose on a shipment of flour or lumber or coal? The merchant who buys in car lots saves you money on such commodities. He can get a lower freight rate. And the local merchant is the only man, with few exceptions, who can afford to buy in car lots.

Another thing, suppose your grocer was located a thousand miles away and you get short of lard or flour or some other necessity. Where would you turn for a supply? Retail merchandising is a benefit to the farmer or other citizen from the fact that he carries all the things you need and you can buy as much as you may want or can pay for at a time and as often as you like. If you buy a spoiled ham or musty flour you return it and get your money back. You can force the home man to give you the best. Can you do this with the man a thousand miles away? If you should take your patronage from the retail man how long would it be until a dozen big mail order houses in as many foreign cities would control the retailing of all merchandise, and then how long would you have the cut prices they are now offering? Would they continue this philanthropic price making? Hardly.

The eliminating of the retail stores would be the means of putting millions of men out of employment and there would be but one recourse for them—the farm. Say you put four million more men to farming. There would be an enormous increase in the output of all farm crops and a corresponding decrease in consumption. Then where would the price of cotton go, or corn, or any other product. Who would buy your butter and eggs and your spring chickens. Would you send Sears and Roebuck a dozen eggs and request them to mail you a pound of coffee in return? In case you had no eggs would you drop them a card and ask them to mail you a pound of coffee and you would pay for it next fall?

There are many reasons why a farmer or other citizen should trade with the home merchant. There are also many reasons why the merchant in the small town should make some arrangements to handle all the products of the farm. A market can be secured for all country produce and if the merchant would make arrangements to buy it he could find a place to sell it.

Farmers and merchants should make their interests mutual and by working together in a spirit of fairness and honesty both would be benefitted and the mail order house would go out of business.

THE MIRROR BABY WAS CRYING

And That Seemed to Have the Desirable Reforming Effect on the Real Child.

"It cannot be a new way to attempt to quiet a crying baby," said the young man, who couldn't be expected to know a great deal about children, "but it certainly was effective.

"The child was sitting up in a carriage red faced and howling, with its mouth wide open and tears streaming out of the corners of its eyes. The nurse was making unavailing efforts to quiet the infant as she wheeled it along.

At a corner there was a store that had a square post in one corner of the show window. The sides of the post were covered with looking glass.

"The nurse wheeled the carriage up close to the window and the baby, still howling, got a glimpse of the image of its angry faced, wailing self in the looking glass. The effect was marvellous. The child stopped crying at once and surveyed the glass with an air almost of being ashamed. Then it broke into a smile, and when the looking glass child also laughed it waved a tiny mittened fist and was borne away, chuckling.

"This, of course, can be explained on scientific grounds as being only a manifestation of curiosity on the part of the child, but the suddenness of the reform instituted by the mirror was impressive to those who saw it."

The Farmer and His Bank Account

The farmer, more so than any other business man, requires the services of a bank, if he manages his farm in a systematic way. While he has no need for a set of book in which to keep a record of every transaction made, yet during the course of a year he must pay out large sums of money for various purposes, and a record for future reference is highly important. Merchants may fail to give a receipt for cash, a neighbor may not recall the payment of money owed, but the farmer who pays his obligations by check has written evidence of such payments which any court must recognize. In the same way he has a record of monies received by the deposit entries on his bank book.

To the farmer, who desires such a record for his business, we extend an invitation to open an account with this bank.

Fire Destroys Residence

Fire Wednesday morning at nine o'clock destroyed the residence of A. B. Gardenhire, together with practically all the contents, entailing a loss of something like $3,000.00, with $2,200.00 insurance.

The exact origin of the fire is not known but it is supposed to have caught from a defective fuse as the first that was seen of the blaze it was apparently in a room on the upper floor. All the larger children had gone to school and Mr. Gardenhire was at his office, leaving Mrs. Gardenhire and the baby at home alone. Mrs. Gardenhire left the baby playing in the front room and went out to the well house to starch some clothes. In a few minutes she noticed a bright light in the window up stairs on the south side and, rushing into the house, found it filled with smoke, which seemed to be boiling down the stairway.

Naturally, her first thought was for the baby and she rushed into the room where she had left it but it was not there. Running through the house and out the back she found the little fellow huddled against the smoke house very badly frightened. Seeing the child to a safe place she ran back to telephone for help but the room in which the telephone was hung was so full of smoke she could not stay in it. She managed, however, to reach around and ring the bell and yell "fire" into the transmitter. Her next effort was to save a picture of some deceased member of the family that hung in a front room. This she managed to tear away from its fastenings but received a slight wound on her hand while doing so.

By this time the general alarm had been turned in and a crowd was accumulating. Several efforts were made to save some of the furniture as it was apparent that the fire was beyond control. A few things were secured from the front but the most of the furniture was lost, including a magnificent piano and a book case that was probably one of the best in the state as it was all hand made of quarter sawed oak. Many other valuable articles of furniture were lost and many heirlooms that were esteemed beyond a cash value.

The wind being very strong the fire was carried to the smoke house in the yard, which it destroyed, but all the contents were saved. There was also a cellar in the yard and this and its contents were destroyed, including an immense supply of canned fruits and lard. On the north of the house the orchard came in for its share of the monster's vengeance and all of the best trees were either burned down or killed.

Fortunately for the young men of the family they had just moved the most of their effects to a little house some hundred yards from the residence and fixed them up a study and all this was saved, together with the few pieces of clothing that Mrs. Gardenhire had at the well house.

The family are for the present occupying the J. O. Scarbrough house on North Main street, but Mr. Gardenhire says he will rebuild on the old site as soon as he gets his insurance and other matters straightened out. The house which burned was one of the best in the city, having nine or ten rooms and every convenience that could be obtained. The wind being in the south, all his barns and other outbuildings were saved, but the yard fence was mostly destroyed.

We are authorized to announce A. B. Gardenhire for the office of commissioner of this precinct. The gentleman hardly needs an introduction from us as he was here with the early settlement of the county and is well and favorably known by all. He seeks the office on his merits as a sound business man and your support is respectfully solicited.

F. M. Paulkzer is having a force at work this week setting his eight acre tract of land east of town to fruit trees of various kinds. Something like eight hundred trees will be set and the number embraces every specimen that will thrive in this locality. Still the spirit of progress holds away in McLean country.

Nath Morris, who has recently sold his place near this city to Mr. Craig of Oklahoma, left the latter part of last week with his family for Eastland county where he will make his home. Mr. Craig has moved his family and taken up residence on his newly acquired home.

W. L. Fullerton of Olustee, Okla., was here the latter part of last week selling seed potatoes, which he raised on his farm near that place. The gentleman was unfortunate in operations this year, having raised only fifteen thousand bushels of Irish potatoes for which he only managed to get $1.50 per bushel. Poor business this potato raising.

Homer T. Wilson Next Week.

Monday and Tuesday nights, March 28 and 29, the people of McLean will have the pleasure of listening to one of the state's greatest orators and ministers, Homer T. Wilson. The gentleman will lecture at the Presbyterian church on the occasions mentioned and the admission will be free to all. Among the many favorable comments on his ability the following have been selected to show what the press thinks of this great man:

EXPRESS, SAN ANTONIO: It was Mr. Wilson's first appearance here, and he thoroughly captured his audience. He has all the gifts of the irresistible orator, presence, voice, sympathy, noble ideas, a rich, varied vocabulary, and all shot through and glorified with the fire of contagious feeling. He is a master of the art and we are glad to know him.

LOUISIANA CHAUTAUQUE: We have not been visited by a man of rarer qualities than Mr. Wilson. It is indeed true of him that he combines the language of Graves, the wit and humor of Burdette, the gracefulness of Booth and the eloquence of Grady.

RICHMOND (VA.) TIMES: The subject of his lecture was 'America's Uncrowned Queen', and by his masterful words and dramatic power, placed the women of America, if possible, on a higher plane in the minds and hearts of his large audience.

NASHVILLE AMERICAN: It was the grandest eulogy on the sphere of womanhood that has ever been delivered at the Capitol, and the whole address was one burst of sublime classic oratory.

FLORIDA STANDARD, JACKSONVILLE: One of the most eloquent and powerful and manly orator who ever swayed with masterful genius an audience in this city is Homer T. Wilson. While Mr. Wilson's elocution is perfect and his manner and gestures unequalled, it is his all-embracing humanity which more than anything else draws together the hearts of the people, and them to the orator in love and admiration.

High School Notes.

We are progressing nicely, taking into consideration the many disadvantages we are laboring under. The loss of our play ground has hurt us more than anything else. This and a few facts that we are soon to bear has taught us the lesson of contentedness. The fact that we are soon to have a new brick school building has also helped to stimulate us.

Walter Foster left Tuesday afternoon for southern Texas. In his farewell address he praised highly the McLean high school and remarked that he was not leaving to look for better educational advantages—'strictly a business proposition.' His address was followed by a few appropriate words from Prof. Horton, who spoke the sentiments of the entire school.

The little tots of Miss Helm's room were victors over Mrs. Vannoy's Children Friday afternoon in a closely contested spelling match. You may think from the number of spelling matches that we have had in the past month that we are trying to specialize on this one subject. This is not the case as we have no "hobbys", but spelling is sadly neglected in many of our public schools of today.
