

Farmers Program Short Course Here Friday & Saturday

Every minute of the time scheduled for the Farmers Short Course to be held in McLean Friday and Saturday of this week will be filled with interesting discussion or demonstration.

A large number of speakers have been secured, each an expert in his line, and ample time has been allotted to take care of each subject in an efficient manner.

Quite a bit of interest has been manifested this week in the course, as many farmers have called the news in regard to it.

The meeting will open at the Chamber of Commerce hall Friday morning at 9 o'clock, the first 50 minutes being given to the opening exercises, in which Rev. B. W. Williams will give the invocation, Rev. E. R. Rives the address of welcome, and Banker E. B. Hedrick the answered response.

The next hour will be used by C. C. Lowry of Lubbock, Chick Hitchery as his subject; and C. T. Adams of Claude will speak on the Economic Ration for Cattle.

After noon, Mrs. Wischkaemper of Alamo will speak on poultry and Mrs. Jones of Wheeler on cooking and canning. From 2:05 to 3:05 p. m. J. L. Lester of Pampa will speak on cotton and Bryan Roby on McLean on sweet potatoes.

The concluding numbers will be spraying, by T. R. Broun of Wheeler, and Concrete, by L. Wright of Amarillo.

Saturday at 9 a. m. opening exercises, with Rev. D. H. Brynoff giving the invocation; music by band, etc. Followed by a discussion on brooding and incubation of poultry by Miss Eunice Floyd of McLean, and a talk on dairy products by a competent speaker.

T. R. Broun of Wheeler will speak on pruning, and G. L. Boykins of Candon on chick rations.

After noon A. A. Tampke of McLean will discuss soldering, rafter, Ford ignition and troubles; P. Bennett of Amarillo, cattle improvement.

This will be followed by a question and round table discussion by M. D. Bentley of McLean. Saturday's work will close with talk on grapes by R. O. Dunkle of Bedford, and terracing by A. A. Tampke of McLean.

This program is being sponsored by the McLean Chamber of Commerce, Supt. Geo. Tummins and A. A. Tampke of the McLean high school, and it is hoped that a large number will avail themselves of the opportunity to attend the various speakers.

There will be no charges connected with the program, but everyone will feel welcome to attend the sessions.

Oil Wells Show Progress This Week's Production

Some progress was shown in oil production the past week in the McLean pool.

Cubine No. 1 is being cleaned out and is now spraying oil, and while no reliable estimate can be made until the well is completed, many say that it is good for better than 100 barrels.

Constantine-Chapman just topped the sand and has 1600 feet of oil in the hole. The six inch casing is set in this well and it should be a paying producer.

St. Clair-Crews had 35 feet of the 95 foot bridge cleaned out Wednesday and was spraying oil. Various estimates place this well from 150 to 250 barrels when completed.

Other tests in the field report no new progress since last week.

Several of the new wells will now require offsets, and interest is picking up in this territory.

Prof. R. C. Davidson, director of the McLean Scotch band, has accepted a similar position with the Groom band and will spend Saturdays in Groom.

McLean Golf Club Organized; Bourland Pres.

A Golf Club for McLean was organized last Thursday evening, when the following officers were elected: President, F. H. Bourland; secretary-treasurer, S. B. Morse; finance committee, Sammie Cubine, Jot Montgomery, John Haynes, C. C. Bogan, W. S. White; greens committee, C. P. Hamilton Jr., Chester Lander, Vernon Rice, Victor Back, J. R. Back, Dr. W. L. Campbell.

A course has been laid out on the Mrs. A. A. Christian land west of the Lefors road just at the edge of town, and players are testing their skill every afternoon now.

We are informed by the secretary that anyone interested is at liberty to join, and the cost per member is much cheaper now than it will be in the future when certain improvements are made. When one member of a family joins it entitles all members to the privileges of the club.

The game of golf has become as important to the business man as athletics are to the school boy, as business cares and troubles can be forgotten in this fascinating sport; then there is the healthful side to be considered, golf being one of the most beneficial exercises known.

Those who have already joined the club are: W. E. Bogan, H. Clement, L. V. Lonsdale, D. N. Massay, E. L. Cubine, F. H. Bourland, Hansel Christian, C. C. Bogan, J. S. Morse, Jot Montgomery, John Haynes, Vester Smith, Porter Smith, D. E. Upham, R. H. Keesee, W. S. White, Victor Back, Roy Campbell, A. V. Kce, Johnnie B. Back, W. L. Campbell, C. C. Lander, O. G. THE STORY

PROLOGUE.—While despondent over the enforced hiding of her fiancé, Jim Dallas, player in self defense of Homer Parkinson, member of an influential family, Sybil Saunders, popular actress, is engaged to play Viola in a charity performance of "Twelfth Night" on Gull Island, on the Maine coast. In the company are Sybil's bosom friend, Anne Tracy, Anne's brother Joe, young wastrel, and Alec Stokes, an actor infatuated with Sybil.

CHAPTER I.—After the play, which is a big hit, Wally Shine, official photographer, learns something of the jealousy existing in the company.

CHAPTER II.—Hugh Bassett, director of the play, and Anne Tracy's fiancé, tells Joe he has heard he is spying on Sybil in an effort to learn the whereabouts of Jim Dallas and earn the reward offered by the Parkinson family. The boy denies it.

CHAPTER III.—Joe Tracy is arranging for a vacation trip. To Anne he betrays his enmity toward Sybil Stokes tells Sybil he has news of Jim Dallas, and to secure privacy they arrange to meet in a small summer house.

CHAPTER IV.—The sound of a pistol shot startles the assembled company. Investigation shows a revolver has been taken from a desk in the library. Flora, Stokes' wife, bursts in with the announcement that Sybil has been shot and her body carried off by the tide.

Two more figures followed him. One was Rawson, the district attorney, whom the vivid light revealed as a man much younger than Williams, tall and narrow shouldered, with a lean New England visage and a pair of horn spectacles astride a high-bridged nose. The other was disposed of with a casual hand-wave and a murmur of "Patrick," brought, it was explained, to take charge of the causeway. Rawson, it appeared, knew Gull Island well, having been there several times on legal business for Mr. Driscoll.

As they walked back Bassett told his story. He noticed that the younger man's questions were sharp and to the point and before they had gone half way realized that Rawson was of a much higher grade of education and intelligence than his coadjutor. A smart chap, he thought, and felt his burden lightened—they could do good teamwork.

Williams observed with grim relish: "You couldn't have a murder committed in a better place than this—better for us. Once you're on here it's a d—d hard business getting off. These folks are as good as in prison. Now, Mr. Bassett, just where does that causeway lie?"

The channel stretched before them, a shining expanse, ripple-crested, summits of rock emerging. The receding water was like a silver veil being slowly withdrawn, its delicate tissue torn by sharp-edged projections. Bassett pointed beyond the wharf:

"There! Below the water there are steps cut in the rock that lead down to it. The whole stretch won't be clear till nearly midnight."

Williams gave his instructions to the man Patrick—a watch on the causeway, anyone stopped who came from the mainland or attempted to leave the island. Patrick, a silent massive countryman, with a stolid bulldog face, thrust out his chin and nodded. He slouched off, the sound of his heavy boots loud on the rocks. The others turned toward the house, the light from its opened door falling outward in a long golden square.

The occupants of the room heard them and looked at one another. Mrs. Cornell, with clenched hands, slowly stood up, and the rest, like people in church who see a figure rise and simultaneously follow its example, got to their feet.

The three men entered and under the shadow of the gallery paused for a moment surveying the standing figures such as they might have looked at some spectacle arranged for their approval. Bassett, with no precedent to guide him, walked toward his associates and announced:

"Ladies and gentlemen, the authorities have come. Mr. Rawson and Mr. Williams."

They bowed and then not knowing what to do next, subsided into their seats. The men came forward, moving to the long table, where Williams sat down, fumbling in his pocket for a fountain pen and paper and clearing a space for the taking of notes. Rawson, surveying the seated assemblage, said:

"This is the whole of your company Mr. Bassett?"

"All who were here at the time of the murder. Several of the actors and assistants left at five-thirty and Joe Tracy, one of the company, at a quarter to seven."

"You saw them go?"

"I saw the first lot go. I didn't see Tracy. But," he looked at Anne, "this is his sister, Miss Tracy. She probably did."

"Did you, Miss Tracy?" said Rawson. Her voice was very low but steady and clear:

"Yes, he went."

"Well, that disposes of them," said Rawson.

There were a few formalities to go through. A general agreement on the time of the murder—a few minutes before seven disposed of that, and the interrogation of Mrs. Stokes, the one eye-witness, followed.

She began well, telling the story she had told Bassett. When she described her first view of Sybil running to the edge of the Point, Rawson interrupted with a question:

"Was she running fast, as if someone was after her, as if she was frightened?"

"Yes, she was running fast, but I don't know whether she was frightened. I wasn't close enough to see anything like that, and I didn't have time to see. Just as I was looking at her the shot came."

"Did you notice the direction it came from?"

"No—it was like a sort of loud snap in the air. I heard it and she staggered along a few steps and went over."

She Staggered Along a Few Steps and Went Over.

"Did you hear any sounds—foot-steps? A person makes a noise on this rocky ground?"

"I didn't hear a thing." She leaned toward Rawson with haggard insistence. "I couldn't hear anything. I was stunned. Mr. Bassett asked me that and you all seem to think I ought to have heard the person—the murderer—or tried to catch him. But I hadn't any sense, I just stood there paralyzed, not grasping what had happened."

"Mr. Bassett says you went out on the rocks and tried to catch the body."

"Oh, yes. Then I came back to life. I ran down into the hollow and out on the rocks as far as I could go. And she was going by on the current—her hair and her dress all whirled about. Oh God, why was I the one to see it?"

Stokes addressed her, his voice low and urgent:

"Flora, just try to answer quietly."

She paid no attention to him, her eyes riveted on Rawson.

"And then you came back to the house?"

"Yes, but I stood there watching her for a few minutes. I don't know how long, desperate, not knowing what to do. And then I started to run back here and I fell down. I suppose I was shaking so and the rocks were slippery. I think I fell twice, but I don't know. I seemed to be half crazy."

"You saw or heard nothing on your way back?"

"No, no, I keep telling you," her voice grew higher. "I never saw anybody. If anybody was there he must have been hiding. They could have heard me—I was screaming." She turned to the others. "Wasn't I screaming?"

Bassett confirmed her statement and she went on, her voice still higher, the cords in her neck starting out:

"Of course they heard me and hid—got out of the way. Some stranger. We were all in the house, everybody here was in the house. It couldn't have been any of them."

Stokes half rose: "Flora—please!"

She turned violently on him:

"Why shouldn't I say it? I'm not afraid. I was the only person outside and it couldn't have been me." She faced round on Rawson. "Nobody could think that. Ask them—these people. They'll tell you."

"That's not at all necessary, Mrs. Stokes," Rawson was mild and suave.

"Now, if you'll try to be calm—"

"Calm, calm," she groaned and bent almost double, dropping her face into her hands. Stokes got up, chalk-white in the lamplight:

"My wife's pretty well knocked out, Mr. Rawson."

"Quite understandable, Mr. Stokes. We won't trouble her any more just now. And if the rest of you ladies and gentlemen will refrain from saying what you think or offering suggestions we'll get on a good deal quicker."

They went on to Stokes, who was very clear and composed. He had walked about—down the path to the pine wood and round that end of the house. It was absolutely still and he had heard nobody. He was not sure of the direction of the shot as he had been reading a paper at the time. Like the rest of them he had had no suspicion of anything serious or, of course, he would have investigated.

Everybody else was in the house. Bassett indicated their positions, pointing them out as he explained their whereabouts.

Miss Saunders' movements followed. She had spent the earlier part of the evening sitting on the cliffs with Miss Tracy. Miss Tracy had left her some time after six, Miss Saunders saying she would follow but wanted to see the end of the sunset. No one had seen her come back but she had come back, for shortly before seven Mrs. Cornell had noticed her leaving the house.

Mrs. Cornell, invested with the grisly excitement of the hour, was eager to tell what she knew. She had been standing at the window of her room, and she saw Sybil on the path below passing the end of the balcony. Mrs. Cornell was surprised for it was not far from supper time and Sybil was still in her Viola dress. She had not watched her, but had gone back to lock the trunk. Both she and Miss Pinkney agreed that the shot had followed soon after—about six or seven minutes they thought.

They diverged to the place of the murder, the Point. The last person who had been there was Shine, somewhere round six-thirty, though he couldn't swear to the time. He'd stayed there perhaps ten minutes, walking round, and had then gone up to the garden. As far as he could see the place was deserted. In answer to the question, had he seen anyone on his way back, he said he had seen Mrs. Stokes reading a paper on the balcony.

This ended the interrogations for the time being. The company was told they might retire to their rooms. But they were to understand that they were held on Gull Island for the present, no going off on any pretext or holding communication with anyone on the mainland. Also—and Mr. Rawson was emphatic—once in their rooms they were to stay in them unless sent for by him. He did not want any wandering about in the halls or talking together.

They rose wearily and prepared to go. Stokes helped his wife to her feet and Bassett edged between the chairs toward Anne.

"How are you?" he murmured, for her appearance shocked him.

"All right. There's nothing the matter with me."

"Try to get some rest."

"Will they wait us any more tonight?"

"I don't think so—not you, anyway."

Stokes and Flora moved toward the hall door, the woman limply hanging on her husband's arm. Rawson's voice arrested them:

"Mr. and Mrs. Stokes, just wait a minute. Where is your room or rooms?"

"We're together in a room on this floor out in the hall here opposite the stairs."

"I'd rather Mrs. Stokes went up to the second floor." He turned to Bassett. "You have space up there, I suppose?"

"Space!" It came from Miss Pinkney before Bassett had time to answer—these hirings of the law did not realize where they were. "We've put up more people here than you could get into one of those flea-bitten hotels up your way."

"Take her things up there. You help her."

Flora turned stricken eyes on her husband. He said nothing but very gently loosened her fingers on his arm. They trailed away, Miss Pinkney stalking ahead. Mrs. Cornell and Anne made their exit by the opposite door. Both were silent as they climbed the stairs. Mrs. Cornell's door opened and closed on her, and Anne fared on to hers on the side stretch of the gallery. She looked down into the lighted room, saw Shine move toward the entrance, heard his voice, loud and startled:

"Why, there's someone down by the dock!"

The other men wheeled sharply, on the alert. She stopped, head bent, listening.

JOE GLASS RESIGNS FROM AVIATION COMPANY

The following, taken from the Tampico (N. M.) Daily News, should be of interest to our readers. Joe Glass is a McLean boy.

Tampico will soon lose its greatest air pilot following the resignation this week of Joe Glass, superintendent of the flying corps of the Cia. Mexicana de Aviacion, because of ill health.

After faithful services with the company here since its organization in 1924, Glass will leave about the middle of the month for Houston, where he expects to engage in commercial aviation as his own business.

When the Cia. Mexicana de Aviacion was organized in October, 1924, it employed Glass as its chief pilot. He has remained in that capacity since that time.

Before flying with the present company in Tampico, he was with the Cia. Mexicana de Transportacion Aerea also in Tampico. It was the first aviation company organized in Mexico and Glass was the first to fly one of the planes with the latter company two and a half years before going to the present one.

Before coming to Mexico as an air pilot in 1921, Glass was engaged in commercial flying in Little Rock, Ark., for some time. He received his training at March Field, Riverside, Calif.

Ill health forces the Tampico pilot to leave the company. Some time ago he and Mrs. Glass went to the States on a long vacation but the visit failed to rid him of his ailment. He decided this week to go back to Houston and organize his own aviation company there.

Glass has been in the air approximately for 4,000 hours, most of which time has been in Mexico. During his experiences with airplanes he has had few accidents, and no serious ones.

Deliberate, cool, and never loquacious, Glass has won for himself the confidence of his passengers while the thought of flying in an airplane still holds its fears for some persons, there are few who know Glass and his record who do not have the utmost faith in his ability to safely conduct them to their destination.

Glass is the type of aviator who knows the new science of aviation most seriously, and he has done a great deal toward making Tampico a city in Mexico where a great deal of flying is being done with remarkably few accidents.

Ed Snyder, next high in point of seniority, will be made chief pilot when Glass leaves. Other pilots of the company are Robinson and Hoffman. Until the photographic season starts, the company will use only the three aviators. At the beginning of the season, it expects to add another to its flying personnel. In addition to the pilots, Junior Hugo is employed as the repair mechanic.

Painting at regular intervals is the cheapest way to keep buildings and implements in good condition. Building materials widely used today, such as yellow pine, cast iron and the more common steels, deteriorate rapidly on exposure, and frequent painting. Even sheet metal that has been tinned or galvanized, to prevent rusting, usually should be painted because of imperfections in the coating.

The dry cow about to freshen should be fed a laxative ration, bran and linseed-oil meal being desirable in the grain ration, and corn silage and legume hay roughages. The ration should contain too much roughage feeds at this time.

I AM THE COUNTRY WEEKLY

"I am the Country Weekly. I am the friend of the family, the bringer of tidings from other friends; I speak to the home in the evening light of summer's vineclad porch or the glow of winter's lamp. I help to make this evening hour; I record the great and the small, the varied acts of the days and weeks that go to make up life. I am for and of the home; I follow those who leave humble beginnings, whether they go to greatness or to the gutter, I take to them the thrill of old days with wholesome messages. I speak the language of the common man; my words are fitted to his understanding. My congregation is larger than that of any church in town; my readers are more than those in the school. Young and old alike find in me stimulation, instruction, entertainment, inspiration, solace, comfort. I am the chronicler of birth and love and death—the three great facts of existence. I bring together buyer and seller to the benefit of both; I am part of the market place of the world. Into the home I carry word of the goods which feed and clothe and shelter and which minister to comfort, ease, health and happiness. I am the work of the week, the history of the year, the record of my community in the archives of the state and nation. I am the exponent of the lives of my readers. I am the Country Weekly."—Prof. Bristow Adams, of Cornell University.

THE USUAL STALL

It was speeders' day in police court. The first offender vowed he was traveling only fifteen miles an hour when apprehended. Next a notorious fast driver told the judge he was going only ten miles.

"And how fast were you going?" asked the judge of Tom O'Brien, third in line.

"May it please the court," said Tom with a straight face, "an' I wuz backin' up, yer honor."—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

BREVITY

A cub reporter, frequently reprimanded for prolixity and warned to be brief, turned in the following:

"A very shocking affair occurred last night. Sir Edward Hopeless, a guest at Lady Panmore's ball, complained of feeling ill, took a highball, his hat, his coat, his departure, no notice of friends, a taxi, a pistol from his pocket, and finally his life. Nice chap. Regrets and all that."

The world may owe us a living, but it has to be collected.

A man who calls himself conservative may be only a coward.

Many a public speaker who pauses for reply would be greatly embarrassed if he received it.

Maybe the reason there is always room at the top is because the elevator does not run that high.

According to the State Meteorologist, July weather was .2 degree cooler average than the normal temperature of the month. Most of us will find this statement hard to believe until July is farther in the past.

Many people remark upon the good crop prospects for this community since the rains. It is a fact that crops can look in bad shape in the Panhandle and a good rain change the complexion of things overnight. There is now no cause for alarm in the McLean section over crop prospects.

Building activity in McLean continues unabated, as a glance over town will show. Another noticeable thing is the fact that much better residences are being built than a few years ago. It bids fair for the future of the town when permanent residences of the better class are erected.

The "Bootlegger of Synthetic News" does not get into the columns of this paper. Our readers may rest assured that no disguised advertising will be palmed off on them for news. It is no trouble for intelligent readers to tell the difference in legitimate news and the stuff the "press agent" furnishes under a release date, and it is useless for such fellows to try to get into our columns.

A YOUNG BOY'S ESSAY ON BOBBED HAIR

Women usther have long hair and one who didn't wuz a skarecrow. Then a lot bobbed theirs, and one who didn't wuz old-fashioned.

When they all got their hair bobbed, some said they wuz goin' to let theirs grow so's they'd be diffrunt. The others said they'd let theirs grow too, so's they'd be the same.

Once people boasted that their hair wuz down to their skirt hem. Now when it gets that long, it's just startin' to grow.

It's hot now, so the barbers started cuttin' again.

Women ain't got no minds of their own, and hair keeps coming and going on their heads.

Samson found long hair was no good for men, and men wuz wise enough to wear theirs short ever since.

Why don't women wear theirs half length until they decide what they want?

Your Home Should Come First

ROLLING THE ECONOMY ROAD

You can't bounce a snowball. You should stay single. And a tire won't dance up and down on a nail or a broken bottle. The man who stretches his car knows a thing or two when it comes to rolling up mileage. He knows that:

Cutting of tires is most rapid when roads are wet. Try cutting a piece of rubber with a dry knife. Wet both and try again. Cracked stone, sharp curbs, worn edges of street car rails, edges of concrete paving, do enough mischief when dry, but when everything is wet they cut several times as deeply. Similarly those bent wheels that some thoughtless citizen throw out into the street will penetrate a wet tire more easily and deeply. If a cut goes through to the cotton fabric or cords, it is best to have it repaired, or dirt and moisture will work in. Light and heat cause rapid deterioration. Spare tires carried should always have opaque covers. Extra pumps and tubes are best stored in a dark, cool cellar or closet. When a car must be parked in the street for several hours a canvas piece of burlap thrown over each wheel will do its bit to lengthen the tire's useful life.

Don't rim-cut that "down" tire by pumping it to a "free air" station; someone might suspect you were lax in the hand pump.

Don't run over all the ash piles, broken bottles, nail boards and other rubbish you can find; even a glass appearing paper bag may be a brick in it.

Don't park in that puddle of oil; it eats rubber.

Don't use the curb as a brake; it may break a casing.

Load friction is responsible for tire wear than any other one. Of course we must expect wear if we are to use our cars at all, but a great deal of it may now be avoided by a little thought, care and patience. A severe application of the brakes easily take off more rubber than would wear off in a thousand miles of normal running. Likewise the engine and dropping in the clutch suddenly to spin the wheels for a "smart" start wastes a lot of rubber left on the pavement.

THE REPORTER'S JOB

It is said that a reporter, like a policeman, is never off duty if an emergency arises. True. But no matter where a newspaper person may be, there is always something to do. Social affairs may be just a good time for the other guests, but for the pencil pusher it means work. Tramping up and down the street may be a good old time for folks who stop and visit to while away a bit of time, but for the paper folk it is work—just as much work as for the clerk behind the counter to measure goods or weigh up spuds. That it takes work to gather up the bits that go to make a newspaper is not realized by most of the people who scan the printed page. We were once told by an old editor that the only way to get out of the grind was to chum off with one's self away from anything that might suggest shop. But we have never gotten far beyond our own shop door without finding work to be done. And we caught ourselves only a short time ago hunting for our pencil to report a certain happening in our old home town. Then we remembered that for once we had nothing to do—no story to write.—Higgins News.

WHAT IS NEWS?

Many years ago a famous editor defined news as follows: If a dog bites a man, that is not news. But if a man bites a dog, that is news.

A lot of printing ink has gone to waste since then, but the definition still holds good. However, the big job is to make the newspapers appreciate it. They seem to have the opposite idea. For instance: If President Coolidge buys a two pants suit, that's not news. But if he dons cowboy chaps, that's a riot.

If Charles M. Schwab is charged with war-time profiteering, that's not news. But if he says the country is prosperous, that's at least a column.

If one group of farmers say they are broke, that's not news. But if swivel-chair experts say the income of another group has increased, that calls for editorials. If a man is a credit to his community, that's not news. But if he strays from the beaten path—lol! that means black headlines.

If the cost of living has remained up in the air for 10 years, that isn't news. But let a man sit on a flagpole for 10 days—that's a front page article.

John D. Rockefeller gives $1,000,000 to a hospital, that isn't news. But if he gives a dime to a child, that's charity.

If a filling station holds up motorists, that isn't worth mentioning. But if a filling station is held up, then the police are jacked up.

If the wets and dries stopped scrapping, that wouldn't be news. But if one hands out statistics assailing the other, it's a fake.

If a widow bares an injustice, that isn't news. But if a bathing beauty bares more, it makes a dandy picture for the "roties."

If a Senator rants about something, that isn't news. But if a paper prints it, that isn't news either.

If a dentist says salt and water is best for the teeth, that isn't news. But if a toothpaste company advertises that its product is better yet, that's news to the dentists.

And if diplomats say they are striving for peace, that's news to everybody!—Pathfinder.

Dog days, from July to Labor Day, are so called because that's the period when the dog star, Sirius, rises above the horizon at the same time as the sun, according to astronomers. But a stenographer the other day was perhaps more accurate when she told us the time means "when everybody dogs it."

Any time a friend or neighbor outstrips us making money we can assume a moral superiority, say "money is not the most important thing in the world," and hint that he is losing his soul through worship of the dollar. The Prince, a Formal Figurehead by Day, Roams Nightly as Haroun Al Raschid.

THE Prince of Wales as the Prince of Wales and the Prince of Wales as Haroun Al Raschid have of recent months been busy visiting the poor districts of east and north London. And there is as much difference between the two men as there is between day and night. Also in the character of their reception.

Haroun, historical Caliph of Bagdad, by day went through his capital city with pomp. By night, as a private citizen, he roamed its meaner streets to see how the poor lived and to learn what his people were thinking.

It's pretty much the same way with the heir to the British throne. By day he goes down to the east end for a set program at a set hour to listen to set speeches and to deliver a set speech in return.

Recognized at Once

By night, accompanied only by one of his equerries and by some social worker, he roams into tenements, settlements, little workmen's clubs and even "pubs." Of course, he's recognized at once, but there has been no preparation for him and his visit is not expected.

By day, when he is to open a new settlement house, some mean street in one of the meanest sections of the giant city suddenly blossoms out with flags. No matter how poor the house, its inmates gallantly display the Union Jack.

By night, when the modern Haroun appears suddenly in some mean street there is no flag-waving. By day, when he visits Stepney, the splendid band of the Guards regiment is there to receive him. A red carpet is spread to be trodden on by the royal feet, a frock-coated committee gives him welcome and a borough mayor with his golden chains of office around his neck tells him how glad he is to see him. By night there is no music and no red carpet and no reception committee.

By day the street where he is to appear is carefully policed—not for his protection, for he is universally popular and doesn't need it—but to protect the crowd from the automobiles.

By night he pushes through the ordinary crowds in the narrow streets just like any other pedestrian.

By day he reads his set speech from his typewritten notes. His light baritone voice shows the young man who has become used to public speaking. But at times he is hesitant and stumbles for a word.

The Prince of Wales is pictured here on one of his nightly excursions among the poorer folk of London. The Prince had just emerged from an open car in a driving rain to attend the opening of a boys' clubhouse.

By night there are no speeches at all. By day he still shows all his old boyish nervousness and self-consciousness. His face flushes. His hand futters to his tie. By night he is utterly at ease among the humblest of his future subjects.

Asks About Landlords

By day, after the ceremonies are over, he makes a careful inspection of the new settlement house. By night, he roams where he lists. He knocks at a tenement door and visits with the good man and his wife. One of his first questions is if the head of the house is an ex-soldier. If the answer is "yes," he at once asks where the man served. They reminisce about that section of the line. The Prince has probably visited it when the man was a soldier there. He inquires how the householder is getting along.

He wants to know what the landlord does for him. He inquires about the comforts provided for the tenants.

If he goes into a club and a sing-song is in progress, he sits down and joins in. If there is a dance, he picks one of the prettiest girls and throws a wicked Charleston. If there is a "pub," he samples the beer.

Not After Popularity

The object? It's not popularity seeking. He's got that. The Prince makes these night trips to focus attention upon the need of reforms in the poor quarters of town. He wants to spur landlords on to giving their tenants a better deal.

He wants to encourage those who are raising money for workmen's clubs and hotels for poor boys and girls. As one of the settlement workers said:

"The Prince by his visits directs public attention to conditions in the mean streets. He wants to help make London a happier and better place for the poor to live in."

The Newspaper Must Prosper

A town is judged by the appearance of its newspaper, and the paper to be what it ought to be must prosper to the extent that it does not have to run bills or present a slovenly appearance. In other words, a newspaper must have the same opportunity to make money that every other business is entitled to; and this can be true if merchants will see that all orders for printing are given to the home newspaper.

Advertising and printing is the stock in trade for the newspaper, and every time you patronize your home newspaper you are helping your community prosper.

The McLean News has always striven to be just a little in the lead of the town and will always do so. When a semi-weekly or daily edition is needed, The News is prepared to keep step with community development.

Co-operation is an overworked word, but it is only with close co-operation with the home paper that communities grow and prosper.

GIVE A SIGNAL

Did you ever drive down the street in your car and almost believe you knew what was happening, the fellow in the car just in front had made a sudden turn and a wreck seemed unavoidable, and somehow you prevented it with a quick turn? Every day it happens thousands of times. This one thing itself causes many of the deadly accidents—just failure to give the proper hand signal when making a turn.

Hold out your hand! Keep in mind that there are other motorists who may not know just exactly what you contemplate doing.

When turning to the left, the driver should hold out his left hand, pointing downward at a 45 degree angle; when stopping he should hold his left hand straight out, parallel with his shoulder; when turning to the right, he should hold out his left hand pointing upward at a 45 degree angle.

Do not wait until you are ready to make a change in your course and then shove out your hand about one-half of a second and then pull it back. The motorist behind you may not have his eyes focused right at you and your car and you should be fair enough to give at least a warning of one-half minute by giving the signal 75 feet ahead of the turn.

Remember the other fellow and help him save your fenders and perhaps your life by holding out your hand!—Floyd County Hesperian.

PARKS AND PLAY GROUNDS

When towns begin to talk about parks and play grounds keep your eyes open and watch the progress those towns make. The town that is dead never cares whether it has a park or not. It does not care whether it improves or not. It is dead and does not mind one bit if its funeral is held in the middle of Main street on a day when other places are rushed with business. It is a hard task to bring a dead town to life. New blood in its veins is the only hope.—Higgins News.

WEDDING BELLS

Hazel's awful pretty,
Gladys sure can dance,
But guess I'll go with Mabel—
Seen her patchin' pants.

All across her face,

Mendin' frills and lace!

Eber pulls her eyebrows,
Wears her arched,
But still I dream of Mabel
Makin' apple pie!

Alie sports a Lincoln,
Pendin' daddy's rocks;
But I believe I'll marry Mabel—
Caught her darnin' socks!

NOVEL KISSING DOLL

A doll that can really kiss, make the necessary noise and everything, has been patented by James A. Bolton of Sayville, N. Y. This is made possible by a rubber bulb inside the doll's chest which is connected with its mouth by a rubber tube. The body of the doll is made of flexible material so that when it is pressed, part of the air in the tube is squeezed out. When the pressure is released a partial vacuum is created in this bulb which causes air to rush in through the tube. If the mouth of the doll is pressed to the cheek of a child just before releasing the pressure on the bulb, the air rushing into the opening between the doll's lips will produce a sound similar to that of a real kiss. This simulation of a kiss, says the inventor, is particularly pleasing to the fancy of a child, and the doll thus constructed provides an attractive plaything.

HOT DOG, SAFETY FIRST!

Be sure your hot dog is actually hot. Hot dogs are made up of many pieces of raw pork which may contain the cysts of worms known as tapeworms and trichinae. These cysts are taken into the body they may breed in the intestines and cause serious trouble. The only safe pork in summer is well cooked pork, as the cooking destroys the embryo worms.

Slice your doggies through the middle and cook them thoroughly on both sides.

THE TURNIP

Monuments and statutes have been erected to about every conceivable thing, but the latest is the desire to erect one to the lowly turnip.

"It has saved so many lives, promoted health growth of so many children, that it would not be inappropriate to erect a monument or memorial as a recognition of the turnip's great merits and to commemorate its great service," says Dr. McCord, public health expert.

Maybe it has saved many lives and made people healthy, but to erect a monument to the turnip either covered with butter or creamed, it seems such a waste of effort to think of a memorial for it. If they must erect a monument to some vegetable, why not the potato, without which no meal is complete?—Sayre (Okla.) Journal

"Just Travelin'"—or Going Somewhere?

One may travel twenty-five thousand miles and stay in his own home county, or, with the same mileage, he may go around the world—depending upon whether he is "just traveling" or "going somewhere."

Financially, too, men may travel in circles or go somewhere.

It will depend largely upon his objective and his bank.

The Latest in Burglar Alarms

Let a burglar set foot in this yard and a din is set up that is like a boiler factory and tin pan orchestra combined. The burglar alarm system was set against the ravages of a burglar by S. A. Ellis, 52-year-old Los Angeles resident, who is here conversing with neighbors. Cactus tin cans, old signs and a string of junk is scattered about the yard, each article attached to a string which raises a deafening racket.

"BOSSY" AND "BIDDY" HEAD FARM CASH PARADE

"If he's got milk splashed on his boots, make the loan." That was one form of country banking "investigation" as to the ability of a farmer to come through on a loan not so many years ago in a certain community in the Northwest. In other words, the banker knew his farmer was "insured" against crop failure and would have a steady cash income despite the whims of weather in the way of frosts, winds, floods, drought and hail. A herd of dairy cows spreads the risk over seven years instead of gambling a year's work and cash outlay on one season's crops. For that reason, it is not surprising to find dairy and poultry products leading the cash income of the U. S. farmer last year with $3,764,000,000, more than two and a half times the income from grains and nearly three times the income from cotton.

Not only have both dairying and poultry raising had a big expansion since the war because of increased production to meet the increased demand from consumers, but producers have been able to put this form of farming on a better business basis from the start and increase income from unit of stock than is the case with other crops. The Cow Testing Associations have provided an avenue for weeding out losers and breeding up production from the highest producers. In poultry, the trap nest does the same thing so that intelligent management can work towards a continual increase per unit. Also, the testing association shows the way to better feeding, higher quality product and cost cutting by the introduction of the silo and ensilage cutter, individual drinking cups, feed and litter carriers, swinging stanchions, cement floors and mangers, milking machines, efficient cream separators, feed grinders, pumps and water systems, etc.

Salt and sweet, judiciously used, is a good combination of flavors. Sweet potatoes go well with ham, tongue and other smoked meats. Many sweet pickles are brined before they are made into pickles. Jelly and spiced preserves are good with ham or cooked beef. Some people like both sugar and salt on a cantaloupe. Serve saltine crackers with a fruit salad.

Windfall and imperfect apples can be made into apple sauce and canned for winter use. Do not add any more water than is necessary to keep the apples from burning. Sweeten to taste, pack hot, and process in the water bath for 5 minutes.

State highway departments last year surfaced a total of more than 13,600 miles of earth roads. In addition, they rebuilt 5,828 miles of old surfaces, 163,059 miles of the 287,928 miles of Federal aid State roads are now surfaced.

"THE SINK IN THE SUNLIGHT"

The
Acid-resisting under-the-window sink

Created by "Standard" for the American housewife with her love of Cleanliness and Cheerfulness

How pleasant to look from your window as you work at this glistening white sink! The 8-inch back, an exclusive "Standard" design, fits snugly under the window.
Another great improvement you will welcome is the acid-resisting enamel. It has a glass-like smoothness. No fruit or vegetable acid can leave a stain. Minerals in the water do not affect it. Vinegar cannot eat into it. Time should take no toll of its snowy whiteness.
The smallest pitcher fits easily under the swinging spout because the sink compartment is eight inches deep—on extra two inches. The eight-inch front gives the whole sink a more pleasing appearance. The sanitary attached garbage container with its aluminum receptacle has a folding bucket so it can be pushed back under the sink.
Only "Standard" makes the under-the-window sink—the "sunlight sink." Come in to see it in three styles and seven sizes or write for illustrated booklet. Be sure to specify acid-resisting enamel, as many other "Standard" models are also made in regular enamel. The trademark "Standard" A-R identifying acid-resisting enamel is impressed in every "Three Eights" sink.

A beautifully designed, smart with platinum-like finish of Chromium. Under the most severe climatic conditions it will not tarnish or corrode. With careful use it will always keep its bright beauty.
