Merchants and Others Sponsor Patriotic Adv.

Merchants and others are sponsoring a campaign of page advertisements in The News, fostering a patriotic campaign among our own people. The campaign is being backed by men in thousands of small business in America as a nation-wide effort to teach the value of patriotism and our democratic form of government. It has been claimed that patriotism has had a low ebb in this country since the Civil War. It is not until recently, but now we are coming to realize that we are something here that is worth fighting for. With our lives if necessary, we can present this patriotic message as a part of our community teaching paralleling the work that will be done in the system along the same line. We will pay the readers of this paper to study the messages as they come each month, and reflect the blessings that are ours through our own government. News editor made every effort to get every business man in town, and any were overlooked they may have names added to future editions on the same basis as others, contacting the News office.

CLUB ACHIEVEMENT DAY

Mrs. Julia E. Kelley, home demonstration agent; Lewis, Rose Mary Hamilton, Fern Lewis, and Minnie Belle of Pampa; Mrs. F. C. Mrs. Luther Petty, Mrs. Kate Petty Smith, Mrs. John B. Mrs. Buster Stokes, Mrs. Rich, J. D. Roth, Mrs. N. A. Mrs. A. W. Brewer, Mrs. Leo Bennie Mae Ruff, Mary Lou Helen Henderson, Mrs. O. B. Mrs. J. H. Wade, Mrs. McMullen, Loretta Henderson, Mrs. Petty, Mrs. H. L. Dorsey, sponsor; Mrs. Elton Johnston, sponsor; Nora Isabel Petty, and Edna Mae Lively, Betty Ruth, Zora Isabel Petty and Mae Wade.

The regular monthly meeting of the chamber of commerce will be held at the city hall Monday evening beginning at 8 o'clock, and according to President D. A. Davis the program will be in the nature of a public forum. Any subject desired may be brought up for discussion by anyone present.

Food Fashions Discussion at Cooking School

Fashions in foods: a comprehensive array of new foods for your table, is coming to McLean for the benefit of every woman in the community. Mrs. Arvola D. French, well known culinary artist and designer, will conduct this fashion show in foods when the Happy Kitchen Cooking School gets underway here soon.

According to reliable food experts, the series of entertaining and informative demonstrations will contain many new streamlined recipes to add zest and pick-up to your future meals.

"Since you would not think of going through every season wearing the same style clothing, why not add a change of styling to your meals?" says Mrs. French. "It will add to the family's enjoyment and women will quit saying it's the same old thing." These recipes will be but a part of the presentation of the Happy Kitchen Cooking School. There will be tips on budgeting the food situation in your home to get the maximum results with the minimum expenditure. There will be practical solutions of appetizing ways to use left overs. There will be helpful suggestions to give the women a better insight into home management. And stress will be placed upon new party foods to serve your guests when entertaining.

Mrs. French will be open to your questions, so that your particular household problem can be solved on the spot. And to all this program of fashions in foods, every woman present will have the opportunity of securing gifts and food products. So plan now to attend every session of the Happy Kitchen Cooking School. It will be the most practical and entertaining time ever spent by any woman in this community. The date of the Happy Kitchen Cooking School is Sept. 26, 27, 28.

Rose Reelected Sheriff Saturday, Second Primary

Cal Rose was reelected sheriff in Saturday's run-off primary by a 57 vote margin over G. H. Kyle, according to unofficial returns.

Miss Miriam Wilson was reelected district clerk. Rose and Wilson were the only county candidates to face the second primary, which recorded the largest vote ever polled in this county, some 5,700 voters expressing a choice.

In the state races, Grady Hazelwood, Amarillo attorney, won over Max Boyer of Perryton for state senate; Alexander won for chief justice, and Culberson for railroad commissioner.

Eugene Worley, young Shamrock lawyer, running on a "poor boy" platform, and backed by a well defined "youth movement," won over H. D. Wells, veteran newspaperman, for the congressional post held by Marvin Jones. Mr. Worley won 22 counties of the 28, the same number that Mr. Wells won in the first primary when he led his opponent by about 6,000 votes.

Mr. Worley is about the same age and is in the same profession as Mr. Jones was when he was elected to the place 24 years ago.

The sheriff's race, senatorial and congressional campaigns waxed warm before the second primary, with motorcades and speeches from all corners, which perhaps accounts for the large vote cast over the entire district.

Following is the way voters made their choice at McLean and in Gray county, the first number being the McLean vote:

Worley 371, 3491; Wells 229, 2081. Culberson 301, 3187; Brooks 271, 2201. Latimore 270, 2290; Alexander 250, 2605. Hazelwood 280, 2392; Boyer 306, 3142. Wilson 352, 2890; Gatlin 329, 2557. Rose 248, 2817; Kyle 353, 2760.

CLUBS HAVE PICNIC

On Tuesday of this week, the Wayside Home Demonstration Club entertained the Eastside Club with a picnic at Lake McClellan.

Those attending from Eastside Club were: Mesdames H. M. Roth, Floyd Lively, C. A. Myatt, H. L. Dorsey, Buster Stokes, W. R. Stokes, Luther Petty, T. H. Hardin, Jess Ledbetter, F. E. Hambright, Elton Johnston, Olen Davis, and Miss Hettie Burr.

LAKE CELEBRATION

Lake McClellan will be the mecca for many on Labor Day when all kinds of recreation will be offered. See announcement by Bert A. Howell, concessionaire, in our advertising columns.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

By Roger Shaw

British Abandon Colony of Somaliland; Nazis Continue Air Raids on England; Trouble Looms Between Greece, Italy; House Approves Mobilization of Guard

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.

Released by Western Newspaper Union

GREECE: And Italy

Germany grabbed Czechoslovakia, Austria, Denmark, Norway, Luxembourg, Belgium, Holland and parts of Poland and France. Russia grabbed Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, and parts of Poland, Finland, and Rumania. Italy grabbed Ethiopia, pounced on republican Spain, and swallowed Albania.

Italy was on the move again. This time against Greece. Poor Greece had done nothing but shiver since the war began. Its dictator,

PRESIDENT METAXAS

Neither pro-British nor pro-German.

General Metaxas, was neither British, nor pro-German. He was just plain pro-Metaxas. But Albania and Greece have a common borderline. There was an insignificant incident over the Greek handling of an Albanian bandit; Albania always is bandit-infested. The "kept" Italian press went into a roar, and demanded satisfaction. Just as reds said the Finns threatened Russia, so the Fascists said the ferocious, insidious Greeks were threatening the modern Roman empire of Signor Mussolini.

COLONIES: First Loss

Britain lost the first of her colonial possessions in the current war to Italy as two divisions of Mussolini's crack troops (about 20,000 men) succeeded in driving out 1,200 Tommies from Berbera, capital of British Somaliland. Loss of the African colony itself wasn't worrying Great Britain a great deal for Somaliland has never added materially to the wealth of the empire.

But what did concern the British high command was that with this loss of territory Italy had gained ground in her attempt to wrest control of the Suez canal and thus sever British empire communications.

For the British there was only one ray of light in their abandonment of Somaliland: as in the retreat at Dunkirk, the troops left the battlefield fighting a furious rear guard action, destroying everything that could not be saved and forcing Italy to pay as dear a price as possible for her victory.

II GERMAN WAR: Aviation

The aerial warfare over England continued with a bang. The German flying losses were considerably heavier than the British, for a reason. The Germans were taking the offensive, and had to encounter anti-aircraft fire, as well as the defending British planes. But the German air supremacy was something like 3 to 1, and Air Marshal Goering was reckoning on a certain given expenditure of men and machines to achieve certain given results.

The German pilots were very young, some of them 15 or 18 years old, actually. They dive-bombed and fought like madmen, fanatical, furious. The royal air force pilots were a different type—older, more experienced, many of them soldiers of fortune, or old-time professionals. A high percentage were Irish, Canadian, or American—types that make better flyers than the native English, said the military men.

The Germans had two disadvantages. The "British" regulars were far better, man for man, than the German kids. And the British planes were far better, ship for ship, than the German crates. The German aircraft were slapped together by mass production, and at any given time, about 60 per cent of them were in the repair shop. The British machines only 25 per cent.

Pilots can only fly two days per week, and keep in decent shape. Hence, you need three pilots per plane. The Germans have this ratio; the British do not. The German losses were exceedingly heavy, but that was exactly what Goering expected and arranged for, and his idea was to gradually exterminate the royal air force by a steady policy of military attrition. Whether any country could actually be subjugated from the air, remained to be seen. Goering thought so; Churchill did not.

WILLKIE: Talkie-Talkie

A challenge to President Roosevelt to meet him in a series of platform debates on the issues of the 1940 campaign, highlighted the acceptance speech of Republican presidential candidate, Wendell Willkie, as he addressed an Elwood, Indiana, crowd of between 150,000 and 200,000 persons.

The G. O. P. standard bearer endorsed "selective military service" (conscription) and came out for material aid to Great Britain in that country's struggle against Nazi Germany. Willkie charged that the present administration had failed in its program of economic rehabilitation and has been courting war by dabbling in foreign politics.

Even his sternest critics were forced to admit, however, that was none of the "appeaser" in the man behind such words as these: "We must not shirk the necessity of preparing our sons to take care of themselves in case the defense of America leads to war" . . . and again . . . "We must face a brutal, perhaps a terrible, fact. Our way of life is in competition with Hitler's way of life. I promise to outdistance Hitler in any contest he chooses, in 1940 or after. And I promise that when we beat him, we shall beat him on our own terms, in our own American way."

Republicans hailed the speech as a masterpiece and saw in it the beginning of a campaign that would definitely result in victory for their candidate. Democrats saw in the speech an endorsement of many of the reforms the New Deal has been advocating and thought Mr. Willkie wanted only a change in personnel—not policy—to carry such reforms.

At any rate it marked the real beginning of what looks like the hardest fought presidential contest thus far in the Twentieth century.

DEFENSE: First Round

When it came to mobilizing the National Guard for a year of training, the house followed the example of the senate. The house finally voted for the call, by a landslide of 342 to 33. The senate vote was 71 to 7. There are 360,000 National Guardsmen. They are to get the works for 12 months, and can be sent anywhere in the Western hemisphere, or the Philippine islands—which is a long way away from the Western hemisphere. Youngsters under 18 were to be discharged from the guard at once, and married guardsmen were permitted to resign within three weeks.

Mr. Roosevelt, who had a goodly share of the American press against him in his campaign for a third term, had none the less won the first round in his campaign for a general mobilization. His program called for no less than $10,000,000,000. The second round was the much-contested Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill, which would call up 12,000,000 men, between the ages of 21 and 31. They, too, would get a year's training, if the bill went through. It was opposed by a complete cross-section, ranging from experienced military critics and regular officers to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and many patriotic isolationists. Apparently to speed things up, War Secretary Stimson had said England might not last a month. Naval Secretary Knox said England might not hold out for 60 days.

Chrysler

Meanwhile, the Chrysler corporation got $53,500,000 to erect a mass-production tank factory and pay for mass-production tanks. The plant was to be set up in the Detroit area and was to start production within 13 months. The tanks produced will be "medium" 25-tonners. About 5,000 men will be employed. Some observers thought the proposed plant was too near the Canadian border, unless the Canadian border was to be obliterated.

BLESSINGS: Of Warfare

One English farmer blessed the good old war, and especially the Blitzkrieg features. This agriculturist had two chickens killed by a German aerial bomb. But he had a romantic and patriotic neighbor. She wanted those chickens to have them stuffed as war souvenirs. She paid the farmer 10 pounds for one of them, and 5 pounds for the other. This totaled just $60.30 in American money. The pound is now worth about $4.02 in your Uncle Sam's maxima.

THE LEAGUE: What's Left

The League of Nations was bundled out of Geneva some time back, and went to France. From there, it moved on to Portugal, where it thought of staying. But the Spaniards and Germans may yet invade Portugal. So the ghost went west, just like in the movie. The economic and financial sections of the league secretariat pounced on Princeton university, which was always strongly anti-league in feeling, even though Woodrow Wilson was a former Princetonian president. But the latest was this: The excellent international labor office of the league selected McGill university at Montreal, Canada, for its hideaway. The Yankee John Winant, formerly the able and progressive governor of New Hampshire, is director of the labor office. He thanked McGill by wire.

LUXEMBURG: No More

Luxemburg is known to Americans by the melodious strains of the waltzing "Count of Luxemburg." It was a tiny grand duchy, wedged between Germany and France and Belgium. It got invaded in 1914, and again in 1940. Neither time did it fight. It is rich in iron, and in iron works. The Luxembourgish royal family, cousins of the so-so Hapsburgs, fled to this country not long ago.

Before the last war, Luxemburg was independent, but in customs union with Germany. After 1918, it went into customs union with Belgium, instead. Now, it has been re-annexed to Germany, along with the little Belgian districts of Eupen and Malmédy, which the Belgians had grabbed from Germany in 1919. Neighboring Alsace-Lorraine, German from 1870 to 1918, has also been re-incorporated in the German reich. Meanwhile, America is filled with swarms of royal Luxembourgish children. Mr. Roosevelt has sent the U. S. S. Trenton after them.

NIGHT CLUBS: In n. y.

Big news from the modern Babylon. All the New York nightclub people were to be fingerprinted, and high time, too. This included the capitalists, their sub-profiteers, the glamour girls, comedians, doormen, waiters, hatches, kewpie dolls and cigars and cigarettes.

The reason for this drastic step seemed to be that nightclubs and robberies were (said the police) closely connected. They "printed" the ritziest in the game, as well as the more sordid types. Some of the nightclubbers liked the idea, but others raised a big yowl.

NAMES . . . in the news

NELSON ROCKEFELLER

¶ Nelson Rockefeller, son of John D. Jr., got a government job at $1 per year. Mr. Roosevelt appointed him "co-ordinator of commercial and cultural relations among the American republics for the Council of National Defense." In addition, the young man will be "chairman of the inter-departmental committee on inter-American affairs." Young Rockefeller is interested in a hotel at Caracas, Venezuela.

¶ Air Marshal Goering got himself the very newest of new uniforms. It is different from all else: a silver gray ensemble. His baton is extra-size, with a big apple at the tip.

¶ Bruce Lockhart, the smart rascal who wrote the smart "British Agent," was appointed British ambassador to Czechoslovakia—that is, Czechoslovakia-in-England. Prince Roger Starbuckberg, who used to be one of Hitler's hearties, once owned 30 castles in Austria. He fled to France, then to England, and joined the French army-in-England.

Power for America's Defense Preparedness

Wilson dam, one of the great hydro-electric power producers of the Tennessee valley, is an important part of the 10 that can produce 1,700,000 horsepower of electricity for America's defense. As the lakes above TVA dams are completed, speedboat racing has become a fad. Seven regattas have already been held this summer. Pretty Pat Poore, shown, will be "Miss TVA" in Chattanooga's Labor day celebration. Two hundred cities in the seven states of the valley area will unite for the four-day program.

Where Great Britain Was Last Invaded

Here at Hastings and St. Leonards, in Sussex, England, is where William the Conqueror landed almost 900 years ago in a successful conquest—a conquest that Chancellor Hitler of Germany hopes to repeat. The mecca of British sea lovers again shudders under another attack from the east, as the biggest aerial battle of all time are launched against the British isles. Each day hordes of German airplanes darken the sky.

Testing Law Curbing Use of Flag

Principals in court battle to decide whether the American flag may be legally painted upon a commercial truck. Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Long are shown being served with a warrant after Long (at left) drove the truck up to a Baltimore police station to invite the test.

Air 'Scarf'

Australian air force officer wears a scarf of bullets around his neck before going aloft at Sydney.

New 'Loan' Policy for American Art

Inaugurating a new lending policy which will make its collection of oil paintings available to other institutions in the United States, the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York city will begin taking applications for loans on September 1. Typical of the modern American collection is the painting by Joe Jones entitled "Threshing," reproduced above.

McNary Accepts

Charles L. McNary, Republican vice presidential candidate to Harold E. Stassen, on August 28, was named as the acceptor of the Oregon State grounds.

WOMEN HEAR TALK ON RACE SUICIDE

Following is text of an address by C. B. Batsan, at the McLean Club Tuesday:

In choosing a subject for today's talk I assure you that the one chosen was not selected with any ulterior motive for material profit to the speaker or his fellow Lion and speaker, Dr. Finley. It is a subject that all of you have given some thought to individually, but as a group of Lions, it seems to me we have given it no thought; if we are doing nothing about it, as I announced last week, it is a regrettable and deplorable condition and situation, and its pernicious influence on the future of McLean, state, nation, and posterity, is more destructive than even the great-published and dreaded "Fifth Column." I am speaking of debit balance on the ledger of vital statistics as related to births. Excluding number in our club that are related to the bachelor status (where laterality existed it would be difficult and compromising to prove) average child per family is less than one and one-half, which explains, if passed on from parent to child, would soon result in obliteration of all families represented.

From times of antiquity, on through the times, and even up to our nineteenth century, it has been the history that this social condition has always been a forerunner of the downfall of great nations, among the densely ignorant ages of primeval times, the virgins of productive marriages were not, or penalized if the reverse was true, allowing the man the right of auctioning off his wife on slave block, or burying her alive, she failed him. Two examples are mentioned in the Bible. One where the people of Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed for their pernicious control, and the other where the man had to work seven years for his first wife, then seven more years for the one he wanted and she was barren, but it is recorded he raised a large family.

The rise and fall of ancient Rome run a close parallel to the rise and fall of the birth rate of the ruling class, and certainly the integration and fall of France is a glaring example of race suicide. Here the old Mother Goose tale of "The old lady that lived in a shoe, had so many children she did not know what to do," has a modern edition. "The modern lady lives in a shoe, has no children because she knows what to do. Thus the fate of France was sealed and its final doom was inevitable and unavoidable for the past years. This was clearly evident in formulating the Versailles treaty of 1918, where steps were taken to secure more colonies, thus giving more man power to compensate for the dwindling home supply.

In the 160 years of our own great country, there has been since its inception the most phenomenal growth in history ever recorded. We have dropped the world in industrial production, material wealth, and riches, and the luxuries of life. In this period of relatively few years of unparalleled growth, the pioneer family has been the exception, and not the rule. This continued up until recent decades, but today it is a rarity, especially in our club, for a member has more children in his family than in his father's family. It is to be a great American custom of "passing the buck." That is what we are doing, and passing it to the foreign-born, the negro, and our own "problem child," government ward, that is, the relief. Is it any wonder today we have had such mushroom growth of the communist, the nazis, and the other things, where formerly they were not, or were in such insignificant number that they could be completely ignored?

Why is it that we have such families today? Of course, in many percent of cases, physical causes prohibit, and that is the excuse that any of us could give. The usual excuse given is "they are one of finance." This is not true, as about nine out of ten of us are in better financial circumstances than our fathers at the same age in life. In the basic cause of the problem, the factor of immaturity is predominant. We are reluctant to sacrifice our own material life and finance. We are content to let the shallow pleasure of life pass us by. Some of you has said that the two most beautiful things on earth are a mother's love and a baby's smile. The great painting, "Madonna," has immortalized this idea down through the ages, the greatest of all artists realizing that this portrait of a humble mother and her baby would live forever. We may have seen the great engineering feats of man, as the ancient pyramids, or the present day Empire State building of New York, and marveled at their ingenuity; we may have seen Niagara Falls, the highest peaks of the Rockies, a rainbow in all its brilliance, or the firmaments at night in blazing glory, but if we have never seen the tender pride of a young mother as she administers loving care to her own pink cheeked and laughing baby, we are passing through life without seeing the real beauty.

"As children grow older, they are continually a source of pleasure, as well as when in infancy. Of course in sickness, we may have many a heartache and their childlike thoughtlessness and youthful behavior may cause care and worry. It is really in our older years, in the coming of the fall and winter of our life, that our children can fill up so many empty spaces of our thoughts and time."

CORRESPONDENCE

In the Personals column of its advertising section, the Chicago Tribune ran the following notice: "Gladys: Conscriptio passes—you lose me for a yr. prot. to your Senator now, Fred."

Next day appeared this answer: "Fred: 'Are you man or mouse? A country worth living in is worth fighting for. Don't be a panty waist, Gladys.'"

The Tribune professed itself unable to understand why the discussion was not carried on in Gladys's parlor.

Mother—Why did you let him kiss you?

Daughter—Well, he was so nice about it. He asked very politely.

Mother—The idea. Haven't I always tried to teach you to say no?

Daughter—That's what I did say. He asked me if I'd be very angry if he kissed me.

A lion escaped from a circus and ran wild through the countryside. Immediately a party was formed to hunt for the ferocious beast.

Before starting the sheriff took the members of the party into a saloon.

"Have a drink, boys, before we go on the hunt."

All accepted except Herman Schultbunder.

"Come on, take a whisky, Herman," cried the sheriff.

"Not me," answered Herman; "it gives me too much courage."

For many months the canny Scottish wooer had come courting a village lass without committing himself. Then he felt the time had come for him to begin to speak. Producing a well-thumbed notebook, he said:

"Maggie, I've been weighing up your good points, and I've counted up to ten. When I get to the dozen, I'll have something to say to ye."

"Well, I wish ye luck, Jock," the maiden coolly responded, with a jerk of her head. "An' I've been reckoning up your bad points, an' I've reached nineteen. When I gets to twenty, I'm mairrying Ferguson, the plumber."

God Bless America

AND HE HAS blessed our country . . . but His benediction imposes upon each and every one of us the sacred duty of defending every priceless heritage that we have been granted. With so great a portion of humanity inured to calamity and injustice, let each American silently consecrate himself and his conscience to the preservation of every American ideal . . . ideals that are more precious today than ever before.

Yes, we still can have faith in man's higher destiny even though nations, once the homes of great cultures, crash back into abject slavery. There can still be hope though elsewhere fearful death-dealing machines are thrust into the hands of children, though churches are barricaded, books destroyed, though millions of families are scattered to the four winds.

These things have not happened here and with His continued aid and guidance, we will see that they shall not happen here.

Among His many graces showered on us is the charter of American liberty. We are proud to be part of that first line of defense of American liberties . . . to always stand militantly at the side of every true American against the inroads of doctrines seeking to destroy freedom of speech, freedom of peaceful assembly, freedom of religious worship and freedom of the press.

DIAGNOSIS OF LOVE

Types of love:
Self-love—not the best variety, but better than nothing if it's all you can get.

Brotherly-love—also known as fraternal or lodge-brother love, international understanding, etc. Not much good in a pinch, but it has given the world some of the most flowery rhetorical passages on record.

Root-of-all-evil love—vulgarily known as the love of money. You don't see much of it any more, on account of you don't see much money any more.

Love of publicity—practically obsolete. Especially distasteful to politicians, actors, luncheon club officers, doctors, lawyers, club women, circus press-agents, and newspaper columnists.

Love of nature—frequently confused with love of the outdoors, which isn't the same thing at all. If it's the real McCoy, love of nature has got to include love of tornadoes, blizzards, dust storms, flood, fire, famine, death by starvation, epidemics, epizootics, all kinds of insects, including gnats, mosquitoes, flu germs and termites; rats, lice, hookworm, grasshopper plagues, spinach, and the green scum on pools of stagnant water.

Love of a man for his dog—the kind of affection a man's wife wishes he would bestow upon her once in a while.

Puppy love—seems to thrive best on giggles, minor neckings, interminable telephone conversations about nothing, and use of the old man's car.

Mad love—the kind that deludes its victims into believing that two can live as cheaply as one.

Love of strong drink—the kind that makes the world go round.

Blind love—the kind that can't see the consequences for the cupids.—Hemet (Calif.) News.

Sambo—Rastus, was yo' eber disappointed in love?

Rastus—Sho', two and a half times.

Sambo—How was dat?

Rastus—Well, yo' see, Ah was twice married an' once rejected.

Mrs. Cutting—And another thing; women's minds are clearer than men's.

Cutting—Oh yeah? Then it must be because they change them so often.

There is a great deal of unmapped country within us, which would have to be taken into account in an explanation of our gusts and storms.—George Elliot.

The army has a new rifle which is so rapid fire, they say, it shoots eight times before you realize that you didn't know it was loaded.—Republic, Junction City, Kan.

"Five more billions are being spent," says a headline. If Hitler does not hurry up and take us we may not be worth taking.—Herald, Okaloosa, Iowa.

True courage is cool and calm. The bravest men have the least bullying insolence, and in the time of danger are found the most serene and free.—Shaftesbury.

CLUB GIRL PROUD OF WORK

Ruby Lee Ray, bedroom demonstrator of Webb 4-H Club, is very proud of an improved bedroom which she displayed to friends and fellow club members recently.

The paint on the walls was dark and was peeling off. In order to make it smooth, Ruby Lee, with the assistance of her mother, brushed the walls, pasted some left-over wall paper over this, and then painted. A built-in radio table to conserve space was made from scrap lumber. She used two discarded dresser drawers to make a book shelf, and for a dressing table, she put shelves in apple boxes, fixed a top, hung a mirror, and covered it with unbleached domestic trimmed in a soft blue, which was a piece of the domestic she had dyed. Her stool for the dresser also serves as a shoe container and she uses a padded box for a storage trunk and also a radio stool. Her curtains and her bed spread are of unbleached domestic, trimmed in the blue.

Ruby Lee has spent $2.42 on her bedroom, put out a lot of work and energy, and has a bright and cheery, well arranged room of which any girl would be proud.

Emory Lamar, old-time lecturer and debater, who lives on Rt. 2, Pampa, was a pleasant caller at the News office one day last week. Mr. Lamar is a close reader and student of world affairs and can give a good account of himself on most any debatable question.

Miss Marie Jones has returned from a visit with relatives in Kansas.

Advertising Purges Itself

Down through the history of the United States, only a few advertising rouges have thrived, and those only for short periods.

There was a time, 100 years ago, when capable physicians were rare in this country. People dosed themselves, both with dreadful concoctions made from their gardens, and with patent medicines from the store. Then arose a swarm of nostrums for the "cure" of every disease. These nostrums slew their thousands. Many of them existed for no other purpose than, as has been said, "to make ailing women happily drunk at home."

But the advertising of such pain-killers and fool-killers was thrown out by most newspapers and magazines at least 25 years ago. As good doctors became more common, the thirst for patent medicine abated. In their wake came some cosmeticians who preyed on women's vanity, wily scoundrels who offered perpetual youth in the form of lotions and creams.

But the success of any article sold in package depends, of course, on repeat orders. Few if any lasting fortunes have been made by lying proprietors of cosmetics. Women buy once. When they notice no results, except perhaps a rash or eruption, they do not buy again. Most of the permanently advertised beauty preparations are made of ingredients which any dermatologist will tell you are good for the skin. And reputable department stores and drug stores, in recognition of their responsibilities to their customers, will handle no beauty preparation to which women in the mass are allergic at all.

What is true of cosmetics and other packaged goods is also true of everything you see consistently advertised. An advertisement is the worst possible piece in which to try to deceive. Deception doesn't work and doesn't pay.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK—More varied in this country than in England are repercussions to the things John Cudahy, United States ambassador to Belgium, is quoted as having said in an interview in England that aid would be required next winter to save 8,000,000 Belgians from famine. His defense of King Leopold III, is regarded as, to say the least, undiplomatic. Whether Secretary of State Cordell Hull will take cognizance of a further statement begging the correct behavior of German troops in Belgium—criticized in England as wholly out of order—remains to be seen.

Son of an Irish immigrant who went to Milwaukee and made an immense fortune as a meat packer, Cudahy's diplomatic career began in 1923 with his selection by President Roosevelt as ambassador to Poland. In May, 1927, he became minister to the Irish Free State and was appointed to the post at Brussels in 1929, succeeding Joseph E. Davies when the latter was assigned as a special assistant to the secretary of state.

Cudahy was the first to advise President Roosevelt—via telephone—of the German invasion of Belgium where he remained at his post of duty, narrowly escaping death or injury from bombs, until he, together with all other foreign representatives were requested to leave the country. Later, in Germany, he spent two hours with Leopold of Belgium in the castle assigned to the monarch by the German army and obtained from him a personal letter, presumably divulging the inside story of Belgian capitulation, for Mr. Roosevelt.

The ambassador is a Harvard man, class of 1910, holding degrees of bachelor of law, Wisconsin, 1913, and doctor of laws, Carroll university. Admitted to the Wisconsin bar in 1913, he practiced until 1917 when he became a captain in the United States army. Later he ranched in New Mexico, and from 1923 until 1933, when appointed to Poland, he engaged in real estate.

ONE of the outspoken critics in congress of most, if not all, of President Roosevelt's policies, Sen. Rush D. Holt (Dem., W. Va.) finds the current debate in the senate over the selective service and national guard bills peculiarly his.

Punctuated by daily clashes between him and Sen. Shermaninton of Indiana, the colloquies of the two lawmakers have not been regarded by their colleagues as enhancing the dignity of the senate. At all events, Holt's reputation as a senator, who has spoken more empty seats than any other member of the upper house, past or present, has not been maintained in recent sessions, nor do legislative correspondents note the days the smiles of amused tolerance which used to mark his judicious oratory.

With the exception of Henry Clay, the youngest man ever elected to the United States senate, Holt landed in office in 1935 without benefit of the Democratic machine of his state, though wearing the Democratic label. When he defeated Sen. Henry O. Hatfield, a Republican warhorse, for the senatorial toga, he was 29 years old, too young to assume his seat. The voters of his state knew this, but it made no difference. They just cast their ballots for him anyway. He had to wait six months before the legal office-taking age arrived.

Having been at one time an athletic director, at St. Patrick's school in West Virginia, the instincts of this flushed, excited stripling were all for the old college try from the minute he was sworn in, a manifestation of youthful ebullience violating an unwritten senate rule calling for silence on the part of a new member.

One of the first things he did was to visit the White House to make clear that he was in line with New Deal policies, but later it was made equally clear he was a hold-out so far as machine politics, state or national, were concerned. As for the New Deal, he fought the court reorganization bill. He repeatedly censured the WPA of political implementation. He opposed the cash and carry neutrality plan. When his present term in the senate ends he will not return, having been defeated in the primary election in his state last May.

New Autumn Suit Silhouette Registers Rigorous Changes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

BEST dressed women have long since proved through experience the wisdom of investing in a new suit at the very start-off of the autumn season. In a smart suit and a goodly supply of eye-catching accessories you have an investment that will yield a hundred per cent to the good right through until fur coat time and then likely as not you will be wearing your suit under your coat on many a wintry day.

The call for a new suit (with accent on new) becomes positively imperative this particular fall because lines have undergone such drastic change they make a last-year model look hopelessly passe. The new silhouette somehow contrives to give the impression of being narrow and straight though as a matter of fact it does not at all times entirely eliminate pleats and other devices that insure free and easy movement. As to jackets, they are slimmed and lengthened to give the new long-torso look.

Just now the world of fashion is all agog concerning the handsome, neat and trim black silk suits made either of faille or bengaline or smart moire. The charming suit centered in the picture is tailored of black moire. The skirt is interesting because it is skillfully manipulated to preserve the coveted slender line so indicative of the new trend, at the same time that unpressed pleats are introduced. Also the long-torso contour, which is a major fashion law this season, is interpreted in the smartly tailored jacket. The fastenings of gold buttons are especially significant, in that they confirm the report that gold jewelry and gadgets are to return this fall and winter. There's important news too, in the hat this fashionably attired young lady is wearing in that it is one of the dramatic profile shapes that's the latest, according to expert millinery advice.

The suit to the left flashes important highlights in more ways than one. To begin with, the material of which it is made is a finely ribbed woolen and all the fashion notes will tell you that ribbed weaves abound in the fabric realm this fall. Again this model gives accent to the longer jacket vogue. The slenderizing narrow skirt is also made a feature in this instance. It is one of the very new side drape types. And now for the most telling fashion stroke of all which this mode registers—jet buttons fasten it!

The new tweeds for fall are gorgeous. The challenge is going to be whether to buy an all black suit such as the new style program proclaims for fall or to go in for colorful tweed with all your might. The ideal course of action is to acquire both. Black for the more formal, dignified moments, and a carefree, vividly colorful plaid contrasting a monotone skirt for nonchalant going about. Make it an all-plaid suit for that matter for the suit of plaid looms up on fashion's horizon in no uncertain way. The practical thing to do is to buy a plaid suit, also a monotone skirt that picks up one of the colors in the plaid. This will give you welcome changes that tune to time and event. For the model pictured a vivid plaid is selected for the long-torso jacket, the same topping a narrow skirt done in monotone.

Long Gloves

In this picture below-the-elbow sleeves and long gloves meet in just the right spot to look fashion-correct. These American-made slippers of velvety soft mocha make a dramatic contrast to the natural Russian lynx jacket. While the gloves' extra length and their exquisite finish give them an extravagant air, the fact that they are American made means long wear and washability, thus keeping them in the practical class.

Ladylike Fashions Keynote for Fall

The new autumn style program places the emphasis on dignity and conservatism in dress. The majority of frocks arriving are simply fashioned carrying their style message through an entirely new silhouette that narrows skirts into easy natural lines, modifies shoulders in bodice, blouse and jackets, lengthens sleeves to below elbow or to wrist.

The early call is for blacks and browns and rich greens in suit or ensembles. Hats are not freakish and they are styled to fit snugly and they are tuned to the type of hairdress you adopt.

Materials say quality at a glance. The dresses in the new collections are designed along simple wearable lines, glorified with fetching details that bespeak their newness.

And when all is said and done, you are going to be charmed with the new order of things in that good taste is evidenced all the way through heightened with dramatic touches of color in jewelry and gloves and other accessories that add fascination to the entire scheme of costume design for the coming months.

Jersey for Dress The Coming Season

When you dress up this coming season, you will probably put on jersey, but you may not recognize it as such, it will be so changed. Afternoon dresses are being made of uncut velvet jersey and dinner gowns of ribbed crepe jersey. Evening gowns will be shown in thin chiffon gauze jersey and a two-faced iridescent jersey, each side a different color, while shiny white velvet jersey will be seen in wedding gowns.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

PRaising GOD FOR HIS BLESSINGS

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 103:1-5, 10-18.
GOLDEN TEXT—Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits.—Psalm 103:2.

We live in difficult and confusing days with much on every hand to discourage us. We look about us in vain for any encouraging sign. The result is that unless we exercise care the temptation will overtake us who are Christians to fall into the bitter, complaining attitude of the world, forgetting the benefits which God has bestowed upon us, forgetting His mercy and grace, and, in this hour of trial, telling the world by our life, if not by our lips, that we have lost our faith in God.

It is easy to praise God when all goes well, when we see His blessing upon us; but the Christian should recognize that praise is a vital part of his daily fellowship with God, an expression of his appreciation of all that God is and does for him. Psalm 103 has in all generations been a favorite of Christian people when passing through deep waters and fiery trials.

I. Praise for Personal Blessings (vv. 1-5).

Our relationship to God is a personal one, and His blessings are personal. Praise also is a personal soul exercise to which we need often to stir ourselves. We need to call on "all that is within" us to bless and praise the Lord.

"Forget not"—how prone we are to do that very thing. We remember the things we ought to forget and forget the things we ought to remember. We have become so accustomed to the many blessings of God that we accept them as a matter of course.

Note that the chief of all blessings is the forgiveness of sin (v. 3). The spiritual is far more important than the physical, but that too is included. Only God can heal our diseases, whether by means or by direct intervention. He also meets with true satisfaction every right and normal desire of man, whether it be physical, social, mental or spiritual. That calls for praise from the depths of our beings.

II. Praise for Forgiveness of Sin (vv. 10-14).

We may "put on a front" when we deal with our fellow men, but there is no use in thus trying to fool God. He knows us for what we are—"frail children of dust, and feeble as frail." We are not able to meet our own little problems; how can we do anything with the sin question?

The mercy of God, high as the heavens, is revealed nowhere in such overflowing measure as in His dealing with the sins of "them that fear him" (v. 13). For them He has the pity of a father, but He has more, for He has the authority and power to cast our sins as far from us as the east is from the west, and how far that is no one knows.

Observe that His mercy is only for "them that fear Him." "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble" (James 4:6, I Pet. 5:6, 7). Whosoever will may come and receive of Him abundant pardon. Why not come now?

III. Praise for Everlasting Loving-kindness (vv. 15-18).

Man and everything that man makes or does is transient, and will one day pass away. What a fool that man is who lives only for the things of this world which are destined to wither like the grass! How tragic to come into eternity and to face God empty handed and condemned for one's own selfishness and folly, when He is willing to show unto us that "loving-kindness" which is not only for this life, but also for the life that is to come.

As we praise God for this great and blessed gift, shall we not be moved to go out and seek to win others to Him?

In closing this brief study of the One Hundred Third Psalm may we again suggest that in these bitter days which so sorely try the hearts of men, we lift our souls up to a high spiritual plane by praising God. When Hardley Page was making a flight through the Orient a large rat was attracted by the smell of food and entered into the airplane. Later, when Mr. Page was in mid-air over a mountainous country where he could not land, he suddenly heard the sound of gnawing behind him. He knew that the rat might so damage his plane as to cause disaster. Then he remembered that a rat is not made for high altitudes. So he began to soar. Soon the gnawing ceased and hours later when his machine landed he found the rat lying dead beneath the engine. It is a blessed truth that Satan cannot endure the high altitudes of praise. He quickly departs from the soul whom he finds rejoicing in this high and lofty spiritual atmosphere. "Try praise," for "praise changes things."

WELLS THANKS VOTERS

Deskins Wells expresses his thanks to the people of Gray county for their help in the congressional race.

"I wish to take this means of thanking my friends who stood by me so loyally during the congressional campaign. Due to the fact that I have spent all the money I had saved and still have bills to pay, it will be impossible for me to even write you a personal letter at the present time. I take this means of thanking you, and I want each and every one of you to know that even in defeat, it warms my heart to think of your consideration and your steadfast friendship. To those of you who voted for me, whom I had never met personally, I also extend my thanks for your confidence in me and your confidence in those who do know me. I will always be grateful to you."

"You look so solemn. Know why I adore you? You're the most honest and sincere person I've ever known. There's not an ounce of guilt in you, Lynn."

Lynn gave a little gasp: "Oh, Wild, I love you so! Will you always remember that, no matter what happens?"

He took her into his arms then promising: "I'll always remember that, my sweet! That's all I want to know."

But he came back again to that difficult subject:

"What about Rene?"

Lynn, desperate, turned in his arms.

"He's going to Rome to study, Wild. Marty says he's going to win the Foundation Prize. Give me just a little time, darling. Just a little time!"

"I won't rush you, Lynn." He held her close. "We've our whole lives together. But when I see this damned apartment it drives me crazy. We should be off for all the marvelous places of the world, Rene. Not wasting our time here."

He took her hand and kissed each finger-tip. "We can visit Rene in Rome—there's nothing we can't do."

Lynn was desperate. Rene must find some way to straighten this thing out! She could not say baldly: "I'm Rene's wife!" The words would stick in her throat. She thought of showing him the marriage license, but only thought.

Later, he said: "I'm going to give you your ring for Christmas, Lynn, an emerald. I know just what it should be," he said looking at her ringless hands which seemed made for fine jewels. "We're going to be so happy, Lynn!"

beating madly. It was not fair of Rene!

The party broke up early. It was somehow impossible to continue a gay evening in the presence of that somber girl in the pale gold frame. Wild and Lynn were among the first to go.

"May I drop in and call on you some day soon?" Wild asked. "I want to talk to you about that other picture of Lynn."

Rene nodded: "Any time."

Lynn's eyes were pleading, Rene's commanding, as she said good-night to him.

That next week, on an afternoon before Wild was to meet Lynn, he went to Rene's studio. Rene was working, but he stopped when Wild came.

"Where's the picture?"

"Gone. Went off yesterday. We'll soon know the worst."

Wild stared at the wall where it had hung the previous Saturday night.

"I can still see it, Rene. It's an unpleasant picture! But a great one."

"You're wrong about it being unpleasant. You're reading things into it."

Wild thought a little. "Did you ever see Lynn like that?"

"I've seen her unhappy and troubled, if that's what you mean. I've though he were accustomed to such honors every day.

"My God, man, aren't you glad?"

"Yes, I suppose I am." He began painting again at Lynn's diaphanous green frock.

Rene finally sent Marty on, for he said he wanted to finish that March cover that day. But when Marty had gone Rene seemed to have no heart for his paint brushes. He threw them down, went over to the couch and threw himself upon it.

"Well, this is the end, Lynn."

"End, Rene?" Lynn turned toward him mystified. "It is the beginning, the beginning of really great things for you!"

"Great pictures, maybe. I don't know." He sat up and faced Lynn.

"You are glad I'm going. I know you are!"

"Rene, I'm glad for you, delighted, happy... everything! It means your whole career."

"I'll miss you, Lynn."

"I'll miss you, Rene."

"No, you won't. You'll feel free." He got up and went over to his desk and began hunting through one of the drawers. He took out a pile of crumpled bills.

"Here it is. I've got it together. You can go to Rene and get a divorce when I'm gone. I promised you I'd help you."

Lynn stood looking at the bills on the table. Tears were running down her cheeks now.

"It's no use, Rene. I can't do that now. It's too late."

"Too late for a lot of things!" Rene cursed himself for the fool he was. If he'd only realized before how much he loved her. He could have tried to win her. She depended on him, turned to him.

Lynn picked up the money and went over and put it back into Rene's desk. "You've been a real friend, Rene."

"Without you, Lynn, I couldn't have worked as I have. I don't know what I can do when I go on alone."

"I know! You will be a great artist, Rene!"

To Lynn, Rene was a beloved brother, a friend with a God-given talent.

"Nothing can stop you now. Nothing!"

"What about you when I am gone?"

Lynn choked back her sobs. "I'll be all right. I know what you are thinking, Rene. I'll tell him. Right after Christmas, I'll tell him. I can't spoil things for him, now."

Rene watched her face carefully: "You're sure you love him?"

"I'll always love him, Rene, no matter what happens."

Then the newspaper men came. Wild heard the news, read it in the morning paper at breakfast, and came to see Rene as soon as possible.

"No, I lost my model."

"She's staying with me, boys," Wild interrupted with a laugh. "Tell them, Lynn, now's as good a time as any."

"No, please!" Lynn turned frantically to Rene, beseeching him. But it was too late. That added a nice touch to the romantic story of Rene Bouchier's rise.

So, across the pages of the afternoon newspapers were spread pictures of Lynn and Wild, and Rene's triumph was secondary to the announcement of the engagement of the city's most eligible bachelor, the inveterate "woman hater."

Christmas Eve was a happy time for Lynn. Rene, Lynn and Wild all had supper at the studio and Lynn cooked it herself.

Later, when she came into her room and snapped on the light, she gave a gasp of astonishment. A little tree stood on the table. Around it were many packages, all shapes and sizes. She rushed to the lovely little tree and touched its silvered leaves tenderly. How like Wild! Then she began to open packages. There were bottles of perfume, a jeweled compact, boxes of hose and handkerchiefs. There was a big, handkerchief purple box of orchids, a box of candy. It was overwhelming.

Wild came in the morning, just as she was making a pot of coffee. When he came in the door, bringing in the breath of the fresh winter day, he swept her into his arms.

"Merry Christmas! You don't look very festive!" He held her close, looking down into her face.

"Like the tree?" Then still holding her, he pulled her down into his arms. Then he slipped onto her slender finger the gorgeous emerald.

"Emeralds suit you, Lynn. You're like them, cool and blazing and clean!"

"I can't take it, Wild!"

"Nonsense! It's your engagement ring! It's the first thing I've ever given you!" He held her close in his arms, kissed the tip of her ear. "I want to do everything in the world for you, Lynn! You were made to have beautiful things!" He kissed her again before she could protest any more.

"We're going to be so happy!"

"Then the coffee pot boiled over and Lynn had to rescue it from a little electric plate."

Wild walked over to get refreshments with Lynn and Marty.

known her better than you have, through a lot of trouble."

"She's always seemed so young to me."

"She is, but we've seen some bad times together. I remember her face through a haze when I was so sick last Spring. I suppose a lot of that went into the painting. There wasn't always enough to eat."

Wild put that idea from him as unbearable. He resented Rene knowing Lynn as he did not. Later he spoke of that other portrait.

"I want to buy it. That's the way I like to think of her, moon-swept. It's a good canvas. I want it to show our grandchildren. I like it."

Rene laughed shortly: "Then, it will be your wedding present, Wild." The idea seemed to amuse him.

"I won't let you do that."

"You can't help yourself. I'd like to think you owned it. I have a fondness for it myself. If I'm going away, Lord knows when I'll be back. Take it; it's yours."

Later when Wild told Lynn about their first wedding gift she was furious. Her anger amazed Wild.

"We can do things for Rene, and we will," he said placatingly. "It would have hurt him if I hadn't taken it, Lynn."

But her fury left her spent and terrified. How could Rene! He had done it deliberately. And Lynn, with a heaving sigh, knew that later Wild would hate that picture.

Christmas was only two weeks away now. Wild had made great plans and Lynn planned to put up a tall Christmas tree in Rene's studio. They were to have a Christmas Eve party for a few of the artists in Rene's building, and Wild had promised to come for a little while.

Rene hated the fuss of Christmas, and he found it all shallow and boring, he said. But it was Rene who helped Lynn out with a suggestion for Rene's Christmas gift for Wild. "Why not gather up some of my sketches of you and have a portfolio of them fixed for Wild?"

"Won't you take them with you, the best ones, I mean, when you go?"

"No," Rene's voice was sharp, and he picked up his brushes and went to work again. When he left he wanted to take nothing which would remind him of Lynn.

CHAPTER XXIII

Three days before Christmas an announcement of the Guggenheim Award was made. It was Marty Award who came pounding into Rene's studio breathless one morning as Spring and Lynn were at work on a Spring cover picture.

"You've won! You did it! Marty pumped Rene's hand, kissed Lynn and danced her about the place and Rene went back to his easel as

Character at Stake

An employee has something at stake beside his salary. He has character. There are manhood and womanhood involved, compared with which salary is nothing. The way one does his work enters into the very fiber of his character. It is a matter of conscience, and no one can afford to sell himself because his salary is meager.—O. S. Marden.

 Mrs. Maxwell led the closing prayer.

THE WOMEN KNOW

A recent survey by Prof. Frank Hutchinson of Rutgers University showed that nine out of ten housewives considered newspaper advertising more helpful to them than other forms.
 About 93 to 94% of the housewives found newspaper advertising valuable in shopping, and 81 to 83% were aided by the newspaper ads in "keeping up" with the correct styles.—Wisconsin Press.

CLUB GIRL ENJOYS WORK

"I certainly enjoy 4-H Club work," said Eulamae Lively of the Southeast 4-H Club of McLean, as she told of her many accomplishments and showed samples of her work at the achievement event held Thursday in the home of Bennie Mae Wade.

Eulamae, age 10, and her sister, Eulema, who is 12, have worked together in improving their bedroom. A closet has been added, along with a dressing table and new curtains. The head of the bed was cut off and made the foot, and now the girls say they feel as if they had a new bed. A pound of scraps has been saved with which the girls plan to make a rug for their bedroom.

The girls also work outside the house. Eulamae has a frame garden of five varieties from which she has canned vegetables for winter use, and has also served 30 servings of green stuff to her family. Eulema has 11 varieties planted in her home garden and from it the girls have canned cucumbers, potatoes, tomatoes, corn, peas and beans. Plums and jelly have also been canned for the family food supply by the girls. They sold vegetables in order to pay for their bedroom improvements.

Eulema, interested in sewing, has made several dresses and skirts for both herself and her sister, besides making their 4-H uniforms.

POULTRY RAISING PAYS

Elsie Mae Holloway, Back 4-H poultry demonstrator, had her first experience with raising poultry this year and finds it to be quite enjoyable as well as a paying proposition.

She has learned that chickens must be fed regularly; that it takes grain, milk, mash and green stuff as well as plenty of fresh water to keep them growing and in good health; that cleanliness and proper sanitation must be seen to at all times, with emphasis on a general cleaning once a week.

Elsie Mae has helped with the family diet by supplying the family with 45 cockerels. She has sold 17, has eight cockerels left, which the family plans to eat, and 66 pullets for layers for 1941.

She had 196 white Minorcas which cost $12.50. From her sales and the number eaten, she has made enough to pay for the cost of the chickens, her equipment, feed, and to buy feed to continue feeding the chickens a balanced diet the rest of the year.

POOR CANDIDATES

Politics leads us to queer conclusions. The favorite political cry of 1940 was being poor. The more the candidate would holler about being poor and needing the public job, the surer his chances were of election. Being poor is no disgrace, but it is certainly no virtue. Being well off, or even rich, is no crime, if the wealth was honestly secured—as most wealth is created. Electing a poor man to public office does not insure that he will be efficient, or even honest, any more than electing a wealthy man insures that he will practice greed and graft. There is no substitute for character, whether it be as a private citizen or an office holder.—Canyon News.

First Fisherman—They say a fish never stops growing.
 Second Fisherman—Well, it hasn't anything on a fish story, has it?

Deads—How many daughters have you at home?
 Palmetto—I have three daughters, but they are very seldom at home.

Nothing stands still in nature but Death.—Emerson.

WORLEY MAKES STATEMENT

Eugene Worley, successful candidate for congress, has issued the following statement to the voters of the 15th district:

"To say that I am grateful to the people of Gray county for their loyal support would be putting it mildly. I shall devote my full time from now until Congress convenes in thoroughly familiarizing myself with all pending legislation. I also plan a trip over the entire district before January and will appreciate the people calling my attention to any local problems which they might have. In short, I hope to be of any possible service to the people of this district and want, more than anything, their full and complete cooperation, because the hardest part of being a congressman is yet to come.

"Our mutual friend, Marvin Jones, has offered his complete cooperation, and my other friends in Congress, with whom I served in the legislature, have pledged their assistance in any way possible.

"With the help of all the people, together with the Divine guidance all of us constantly require, I will do my utmost for all the people and all the people alike."

We condemn and investigate "un-American activities," and very properly so. But let citizens realize that there is nothing more un-American than failure to vote.—Free Press, Braddock, Pa.

The man who does not work for the love of work but only for money is not likely to make money nor to find much fun in life.—Charles M. Schwab.

Down in their hearts, wise men know this truth: the only way to help yourself is to help others.—Elbert Hubbard.

There is no virtue so truly great and godlike as justice.—Addison.

Debunking False Prophets

The country's self-appointed reformers have been telling us that advertising raises the cost of living. Let's see. Let's take an example that everybody is familiar with.

Cast your mind back to what you knew or what your parents knew of the automobile of the first few years of this century. Then a big, heavy, unreliable gas eater could be bought, without top, windshield, horn or spare tire, for from two to six thousand dollars. Few people bought this expensive luxury.

But automobile makers saw a vision, a nation on wheels. They advertised persistently. More people bought. As production went up, the cost to make each car came down. Part of the saving was put into improvement. Part went into continued advertising. Part went to the public in lower prices. Again more people bought these better cars for less money.

And so it went, year after year. Continued advertising, production and value up, cost and price down, until today you buy an infinitely better, more efficient car, complete, for less than half of the lowest price of a few years ago.

The same is true of the refrigerator, vacuum cleaner, washing machine, oil burner, radio, electric light bulb; of packaged foods, clothes, and many another product that will come to your mind as you think this over. Advertising has helped mass selling and made possible mass production, which cuts the cost and brings the price within the reach of the average family.
