Talk, Talk; We're Losing the War!
Germany's supreme optimist and Goebbels' prize pupil turned up in a prison camp where an Aussie guard. The Nazi was invited to listen to radio news reports, the Australian News and Information Bureau says. The news the Nazi heard was strictly wonderful. This was his report to his fellow prisoners: "In 1940 we overwhelmed and defeated the British, but most of them got away through Dunkerque. The Fuehrer has allowed them to land in France again. This time they shall not escape."

Shoe Stamps Good Indefinitely
Removal of time limitations that restrict the use of special shoe stamps is announced by OPA. The new provisions apply to all special shoe stamps, except those issued to Mexican border residents, which must still be used by consumers within 30 days. Previously, some special shoe stamps, such as those issued as extra rations, had to be used within time limits. The provisions affect only special shoe stamps and in no way involve the validity of regular war ration shoe stamps either for consumer or trade use.

Agricultural Policy
USDA says: Our dominant aims with respect to agricultural policy after the war should be, according to Secretary Wickard, full production at maximum efficiency, equal living standards for farm and city families, equal protection for all types of farmers, soil conservation and improvement, conservation and improvement of forest resources, encouragement of the family sized farm, retirement of sub-marginal land and reclamation and cultivation of potentially good farm land and improvements in the marketing of farm products.

UNRATED FOODS

Several processed food items will be removed from rationing Sept. 17, James F. Byrnes, director of War Mobilization, announced Wednesday.

Byrnes announced the "unrationing" of the following:

Fruit spreads: all varieties of jams, jellies and fruit butters. (Fruit butters were removed from rationing effective Sept. 2, by the OPA, but the other spreads still require blue points).

Canned vegetables: asparagus, fresh lima beans, corn, peas, pumpkin or squash, mixed vegetables.

Related products (canned): baked beans, tomato sauce, tomato paste, tomato pulp or puree, soups, baby foods.

Marvin Jones, war food administrator who decides what items OPA is to ration, told Byrnes that available and prospective supplies justify removing the items from the ration list.

"The action now announced is in accord with the policy of government to lift wartime restrictions as quickly as possible," Byrnes said. "When the supply of other foods makes possible their removal from the ration list, they will be promptly removed."

Here are present point values of some of the items going off the ration list:

Asparagus, No. 2 can (18 oz.), 10; fresh lima beans, 25; peas, 5; pumpkin or squash, 15.

Baby foods cost one point for the commonly used small can. Baked beans cost 13 points for a No. 2 can, soups 3 points for a can of 10 to 14 ounces.

English Regiment's Colors in a U. S. Army Post Chapel Recalls Day When Briton and American Fought Side by Side to Win Historic Victory

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

RECENT press dispatches from the Italian front recorded the fact that the King's Royal Rifle corps was one of the units of the Seventh Armored Division, which had served so brilliantly under General Montgomery in his victory over Rommel in the North African campaign and which was now a part of General Alexander's British Eighth army. To most American readers this reference to the Royal Rifles had no special significance, although they might well have been as interested in its progress in the campaign against Kesselring's Germans as in the fortunes of any regiment in Gen. Mark Clark's American Fifth army.

For the fact is that the Royal Rifle corps is intimately associated with the history of this country. It is the lineal descendant of a regiment which helped gain one of the most brilliant victories ever won on the North American continent, thereby giving to American colonial history one of its greatest military heroes. Known originally as the 62nd Loyal American Provincials, the regiment was later christened the 60th Royal Americans and this was the name it bore when its leader, Col. Henry Bouquet, snatched victory from what seemed certain defeat at the Battle of Bushy Run, marched on to raise the siege of Fort Pitt and gave the deathblow to Pontiac's Conspiracy.

A New Era in Military Science.

One thing which distinguishes the Battle of Bushy Run from all other engagements in our history is that here Colonel Bouquet established an American tradition of tactical resiliency and readiness to adapt methods to new requirements which has culminated in the military innovations of World War II, such as the new techniques of jungle fighting against the Japs and of air combat against the German Luftwaffe. In a day when battles were fought strictly according to rule, Bouquet, a superb tactician, dared to disregard the rules and to "improvise" on the battlefield, thereby marking the beginning of a new era in military science.

Bouquet was a soldier of fortune, born in Switzerland in 1719. In 1754, at the outbreak of the war between France and Great Britain in America, he became lieutenant colonel of the newly organized 62nd Loyal American Provincials, which was to become the 60th Royal Americans three years later and eventually the King's Royal Rifle corps. He came to America in 1756, and served under General Forbes in the capture of Fort Duquesne, the French post at the Forks of the Ohio which was rebuilt and named Fort Pitt. Five years later, in May, 1763, the conspiracy of Pontiac, the great Ottawa chieftain, broke like a storm along the frontier. One after another the chain of British posts fell, either from treacherous attack or from assault by overwhelming forces of Indians. Only Detroit and Fort Pitt held out and if the latter post fell, Pontiac might well make good his threat to "drive the English into the sea."

In this crisis the Swiss adventurer was called upon to save the day—by marching to the relief of Fort Pitt. It is no overstatement to call his expedition a "forlorn hope," for when he arrived at Carlisle late in June, he found there neither adequate stores nor transport which he had ordered—only panic-stricken refugees from the west. He had a force of little more than 500 men, composed of a detachment of his own regiment, the 60th Royal Americans, and portions of two regiments, the 42nd Highlanders (the famous "Black Watch") and the 77th (Montgomery's) Highlanders, which had recently been invalidated home from the West Indies.

With this "army" Bouquet reached Fort Bedford, the first leg of his 200-mile journey, on July 23. There a force of experienced rangers joined him and they proved invaluable as an advance guard against ambush. By August 5 he was nearing his goal. About noon of that day, after a forced march of 17 miles through the hot forests, he reached a place called Edge Hill, 25 miles from Fort Pitt. Suddenly there were rifle shots ahead and screaming war-whoops. The Indians had attacked his advance guard.

The two light infantry companies of the "Black Watch" went to their support and scattered the Indians. But they came swarming back immediately and within a short time his little army was surrounded and fighting for their lives behind a hastily constructed defense on top of the hill. By nightfall Bouquet's losses, in killed and wounded, were more than 60 officers and men.

A Desperate Situation.

It was probably as desperate a situation as any military commander had ever faced. In the dark forest around him swarmed a force of savages three or four times the size of his. Flushed with their recent successes in capturing the British posts and remembering how they had overwhelmed Braddock, who had more than three times as many soldiers as did Bouquet, the Indians were confident of another great victory. Outside the little circle of piled-up supplies, which formed the walls of his "fort," lay the bodies of 25 soldiers, killed in the fighting that afternoon. Inside there was suffering from undressed wounds and heat and thirst. For there was little water to be had—except for a few precious mouthfuls, brought in the hats of some of the rangers who risked their lives to creep down to a spring nearby to get it.

The hot dawn of August 6, 1763, brought a renewal of the Indian attack. Slowly but surely their plunging fire cut down the number of defenders on the hill. At last, Bouquet, seeing that destruction of his command was inevitable if this unequal kind of fighting continued, resolved to attempt one risky maneuver and wager everything on one desperate chance. If he could get the enemy out into the open long enough to give his Highlanders an opportunity for a bayonet charge, one such decisive stroke might end the affair.

Explaining clearly to his men what he wanted them to do, so there would be no mistake and no confusion when the crisis came, Bouquet ordered the two companies of Highlanders to withdraw suddenly from the line, retreat rapidly across the hill until they reached a little ravine which ran along one side of the eminence. They were then to advance down this ravine and be ready to attack from it when necessary. Meanwhile the Royal Americans were to extend their line across the hill to replace the Highlanders.

As the killed Scotsmen withdrew, the Indians, seeing this maneuver and believing it to be the beginning of a retreat, came screeching out from their hiding places like a pack of famished wolves. Charging out into the open they struck the thin and weakened line of the Royal Americans which began to waver under the force of the savage onset. For a moment the issue hung in the balance with disaster just a hairsbreadth away. Then—the Royal Americans stiffened their resistance—just long enough. Out of the ravine came charging the Highlanders who poured a volley at point-blank range into the flank of the red mob.

The Finishing Touch.

Although greatly surprised, the Indians faced about and returned the fire. But before they could reload, the Highlanders were bearing down upon them with their bayoneted guns and the red men realized that they were trapped. Then Bouquet put the finishing touch upon his daring maneuver.

Once more taking a desperate chance, he again broke his line and threw two companies out of the circle on the other flank of the enemy. The flying Indians, retreating before the grim-faced Highlanders, ran squarely into the Royal Americans and withered away before the volley which swept their line. A few moments later the savages had fled, leaving Bouquet and his men in full possession of the field.

It had been a dearly bought victory. Fifty of his men had been killed, 60 wounded and five were missing, a total casualty list of 115, nearly a fourth of his entire force. But Bouquet had saved his army, Fort Pitt and Pennsylvania. It took him four long days to march the remaining 25 miles to Fort Pitt. But the Indians had had enough. They had suffered a loss of more than 60 killed and many more wounded. There was little opposition to his advance and when he reached that outpost and raised the siege, it sounded the death knell to the high hopes of the great Pontiac. Within a year the Ottawa's confederation of tribes had collapsed and the last threat to English occupation of North America was ended.

The next year Bouquet scored an equally brilliant success in an expedition into the heart of the Indian country beyond the Ohio. With two Pennsylvania battalions he cut a road into the wilderness of the Muskingum valley. There he summoned the Indians to a council to demand, not merely ask, that they cease their raids upon the English settlements. Moreover, he demanded and secured the release of more than 300 white captives who were restored to their families.

Bouquet's brilliant campaigning brought him the thanks of the King and the colonial assemblies of Virginia and Pennsylvania. He was promoted to brigadier-general but he did not live long to enjoy his honors. He died of the yellow fever at Fort St. George (Pensacola, Fla.) in 1766.

The great commander of the 60th Royal Americans might die, but the regiment lived on. After Bouquet's death, British troops in the South were commanded by Augustine Prevost, another Swiss adventurer who had become lieutenant colonel in command of the 60th in 1761. During the Revolution the regiment was in the expedition led by Prevost which marched north to the conquest of Georgia and the first battalion took part in the successful defense of Savannah in 1779, against a combined French and American force.

In the Revolution.

Parts of the regiment fought with Lord Rawdon at Hobkirk's Hill and were with Lord Cornwallis at the Battle of Guilford Court House. It was also with that luckless commander when he laid down his arms and surrendered to Washington at Yorktown in 1781. But whatever enmities, growing out of the Revolution, there may have been between Briton and American they have long since been forgotten.

Today there hangs in the Chapel of Saint Cornelius the Centurion on Governors Island, New York, the colors of the 60th Royal Americans (pictured above). They were presented to the chapel in 1921 by Field Marshal Lord Grenfell on behalf of the officers and men of the King's Royal Rifle Corps, lineal descendant of the 60th Royal Americans. At that time they were the symbol of a tradition shared by the British army and the American army—the tradition of Britons and Americans fighting and dying side by side while fighting a savage foe in the forests of western Pennsylvania one hot August day back in 1763. Today those colors are a symbol of the same tradition—the tradition of Britons and Americans fighting and dying side by side in Tunisia, in Italy and in France.

'The American Revolution Might Have Ended Differently If ...'

"Bouquet was the most brilliant leader of light infantry that the French and Indian War produced. Had he survived until the Revolution, Bouquet would—is the reasonable surmise—against his erstwhile fellow-officers and friends in the colonies have pitched his battalions with the ruthless efficiency of the professional soldier." — E. Douglas Branch in a talk before WESTERNERS in Chicago, July, 1944.

"It seems a heartless thing to say, but the bullet that struck down Wolfe on the Plains of Abraham, and the fever that carried Bouquet away at Pensacola, did good service to the country destined to become the United States of America; for they were such accomplished soldiers, men of such talent and genius, that had they been in command of the British forces in the War of the Revolution, that struggle might have been shorter and its results possibly vastly different: They were both young enough men when they died to have been available for service in 1775. "We do not find such another Indian fighter as this gallant Swiss in the colonial records, and it is noteworthy that the same sort of troops as were found entirely inadequate to the situation when led by Braddock, proved themselves heroes indeed when under the command of a greater and abler man." — Cyrus Townsend Brady in "Border Fights and Fighters."

Wartime Protein Substitutes Tested

Corn Gluten Mash With Linseed Meal Effective

Using not more than four pounds of the usual protein feeds in 100 of chick starter, compared with 12 to 16 or more before the war, University of Wisconsin specialists have devised rations giving results comparable to those of prewar times.

The basic wartime ration, which worked tolerably well, proved somewhat deficient in vitamins. It included: ground yellow corn, 45 lbs.; wheat bran, 15 lbs.; wheat middlings, 15 lbs.; alfalfa leaf meal, 5 lbs.; meat scrap, 4 lbs.; soybean oilmeal, 16 lbs.; limestone grit, 1.5 lbs.; granite grit, 1.5 lbs.; iodized salt, 0.5 lb.; sardine oil, 0.5 lb.; and manganese sulfate, 0.8 lb.

When the protein feeds were three pounds of a special fish meal, with vitamin content preserved, and 16 of soybean oilmeal, the results were as good as with prewar protein combinations.

The basic ration was improved by using, instead of sardine oil, from 1 to 2 per cent commercial vitamin D powder of a kind which contains whey solubles and fish liver solids, and which therefore carries B vitamins as well as vitamin D.

Due to soybean oilmeal, it was found that part of the soybean oilmeal can be satisfactorily replaced by corn gluten meal and linseed meal, although a chick ration should not contain more than 5 per cent linseed meal.

One of the best protein feed combinations employing "substitutes for the substitute" proved to be meat scrap, 4; soybean oilmeal, 6; linseed meal, 5; corn gluten meal, 5. Although a chick starter carrying 20 parts of protein feed in 100 is satisfactory where pullets are to be raised for layers, there is an advantage in using more protein where fast growth is highly important. In producing broilers it is well to use 4 parts of meat scrap and 20 of soybean oilmeal, instead of 4 and 16.

Agriculture In the News

Bees' Importance

More than 10,000 years ago man was using beeswax in mummification and the coffins in which the embalmed bodies were placed were made airtight by means of beeswax.

Before the war the main use for beeswax was in cosmetics—lipsticks, cold cream and rouge. Now its number one use is for water-proofing and protecting shells, belts, coils and machinery, as well as airplanes.

Today as 10,000 years ago the bee serves another very essential use, the pollinating of flowers to aid in the increased production of fruit and many forage crops. While always recognized, the value of honey as a sugar substitute, has increased materially during the war.

Beeswax has played another important part in commerce, it has been employed in the making of artificial flowers and other articles of art. Its present war uses, however, have discouraged further development along this line.

Hog Cholera Danger

With the large number of pigs now on farms increasing the opportunity for hog cholera and other infections to spread, farmers in the important pork-producing middle-western states are immunizing their animals against cholera at an earlier age than in the past, according to U. S. department of agriculture reports. A small proportion are reported to have received treatment before weaning, but veterinarians recommend about two weeks after weaning for the best and longest lasting results. Immunization of pigs at about ten weeks is expected to result in smaller losses from hog cholera, as well as less danger of checking growth by means of the treatment when they are older, and especially while being fattened for market.

Laying hens now average 142 eggs annually, or twice as many as they laid 20 years ago.

Coccidiosis in Lambs

Coccidiosis in lambs may be successfully prevented by the addition of ground crude sulphur to their feed in proportions ranging from 0.1 to 1.5 per cent of the ration, the U. S. department of agriculture has determined by experiments in cooperation with large feeding establishments. Coccidiosis is a parasitic condition that often has serious if not fatal consequences. It is commonly acquired from infected pastures or feedlots.

It's Quite Simple to Expand That Old Wash Stand to Fit Large Space

By Ruth Wyeth Spears

IT IS easy enough to make a small serving table out of an old wash stand but, when there is a large wall space crying for an imposing piece of furniture and nothing but a small wash stand on hand, the problem is something else again. Here you see the solution achieved with odds and ends of lumber, a pair of wooden boxes, a little paint and some plain gingham with the old wash stand at the center of it all.

The lower sketch shows how the carpenter work was done. Note the piece across the bottom of the stand to cover the irregular line, also the hinged arms so that the skirt may open out.

Grandpappy Had a Good Reason for Just Standing

Grandpappy Morgan, a hillbilly of the Ozarks, had wandered off into the woods and failed to return for supper, so young Tolliver was sent to look for him. After some time, he found him standing in the bushes, several miles from home. "Getting dark, Grandpappy," the young chap ventured.

"Yep."
"Supper time, Grandpappy."
"Yep."
"Ain't you hungry?"
"Yep."
"Well, air ye comin' home?"
"Nope."
"Why ain't ye?"
"Standin' in a b'ar trap!"

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Normally there are 20 per cent more tire failures during the summer months than others. Tests have shown that at a temperature of 90 degrees tires wear out twice as fast as at 60 degrees and that at 100 degrees they wear out five times as fast as at 40 degrees.

Even with production being restored at Far East rubber plantations and our synthetic plants working at peak, authorities believe there will be a tight rubber situation for some time following the end of the war.

WOMEN IN SACKCLOTH

One of the toughest problems today's farm women face is finding moderate-priced dresses in suitable patterns and sizes. A group of Wisconsin farm women tackled the problem and came up with a solution.

Old feed bags and discarded curtains were dug out of storage bins and closets, thoroughly cleaned, dyed, embroidered and fashioned into dresses. Result was a fashion show at Lancaster.

Mrs. Jennie Caley, Hurricane, Wis., had two prize outfits. She displayed dresses made in two-piece style. One was dyed a soft brown, the other blue. Both resembled high-grade linen. They were made of 100-pound feed bags. Only expense was the cost of thread and dye.

MARITAL STRATEGY

Urging many more counseling centers and courses in marriage relationships, the Federal Council of Churches says returning soldiers will often find marriage comparable to war in that "it requires sound strategy, effective tactics and coordination of effort" to attain success.

"Families which have religious faith and a vital church life have a higher average of marital happiness," the Council's commission on marriage and home, said. In its message entitled "Marriage Happiness after Wartime Separation," the commission says many more churches and other organizations are needed to adequately aid these young married couples.

The clergyman in a wayside church was about to start a sermon when four British soldiers entered.

They were late, and very conscious of it. Two of them found seats; the others, a sergeant and a private, walked up the center aisle.

At that moment the preacher announced his text: "Paul I know, and Cephus I know, but who are these?"

The sergeant paused in his stride, then sang out: "Glad to have the pleasure your reverence. This is Jock McTavish from Glasgow, and I'm Willie Hope from Belfast."

An old Southern negress who had been visiting her Washington daughter, was left at the Union Station awaiting her train. Having lived in a small community all her life, she was filled with wonder and amazement when two nuns came in and sat beside her. As curiosity got the better of her, she asked a porter: "Who's dose two ladies over dar, dress' in black?"

"Dey's nuns."
 "Nuns? What's nuns?"
 "Why, nuns is very religious ladies dat lives by demselves whar dere ain't no men."
 "Lawdy, dey sho' does go into mighty deep mournin' about it."

A colored woman was standing on the street watching a circus parade.

One of the pickaninies looked up and said: "Mammy, yo' mouf's open."
 To which she replied sternly: "Yas, I know it. I done lef' it open mahself."

ESSENTIAL to the life and growth of America

Its vital root-system reaching deep into the earth, a great tree receives the nourishment essential to maintain life and sturdy growth.

So too does the American way of life depend upon the huge network of railroads which developed the resources of the nation, moving on through great agricultural and industrial areas, carrying the essentials of America's life and growth.

Of this network, 8,000 miles are the ROCK ISLAND LINES. Here are 8,000 miles of well-kept steel highways which draw from the resources of 14 middle-western states. ROCK ISLAND helped to bring growth and success to that vital area, at the same time serving the entire nation through interchange of traffic to all points.

Essential in the early building of our nation—vital today in moving steady streams of war supplies—ROCK ISLAND LINES will have a big job to do in the future, too.

When America's chief concern is the building of the peace, ROCK ISLAND'S responsibility will be the moving of the essentials to another period of American prosperity.

As yesterday—and today—so tomorrow ROCK ISLAND'S sole purpose is to provide the finest in transportation.

REASON FOR THANKS

Tommy—And teacher asked me all about my family and if I had any brothers and sisters.

Mother—That's nice of her. What did she say when you told her you were an only child?

Tommy—Oh, she sort of sighed and said, "Thank goodness!"

I love smooth words, like gold-enameled fish

Which circle slowly with a silken swish,

And tender ones, like downy-feathered birds!

Words shy and dappled, deep-eyed deer in herds.

Maybe That Too
"No, Elmer, I can't marry you. The man whom I'm going to marry must be upright and square."
"You want a piano, not a husband."

Going Strong
"And how are you getting on at school, Jimmy?"
"Oh, fine! I'm learning words of four cylinders now."

By All Means
"My dear, I never imagined you would marry the man you did," said Gladys.
"Neither did I," replied her friend. "I disliked his ways, but I adored his means."

In the Race
Three young men were boasting of their height.
"Look at me," said Tom. "I'm six feet two and a half in my stocking feet."
"All right," put in Dick. "I'm six feet five and three-quarters with my hat on."
"And I can beat the lot of you," added Harry. "I'm seven feet eight—with my umbrella up."

In Old England
A country doctor on his rounds narrowly escaped running over a Home Guard writing in apparent agony in the middle of the road. Stopping his car he got out, bent over the man, and asked, "What's the matter? Where's the pain?"
"There isn't any pain," the man replied. "This road is supposed to be a deep river, and I can only swim on my back."

Ah, Me
"Stop pushing me up the stairs, mister."
"I'm not pushing—I'm sighing."

Gems of Thought
BOOKS are true levelers. They give to all who faithfully use them the society, the spiritual presence, of the best and greatest of our race.—W. E. Channing.

To know what you prefer, instead of saying Amen to what the world tells you you ought to prefer, is to have kept your soul alive.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Learn patience . . .
Though the night be drear and lone,
To the darkest sorrow there comes a mornin'.
A right to every wrong.
Let not the sun go down upon your wrath.

AROUND THE HOUSE

A half-teaspoon of oil of pepper-mint added to the filling for chocolate pie gives a new and different flavor.

Common sandpaper is good to use in cleaning suede purses, shoes or jackets. It removes the dirt and freshens the fabric.

When dyeing wearing apparel it is a good idea to run a few lengths of thread through an inside seam. When finished, these threads will furnish an exact match if repairs are needed.

Cut off just enough of the corner of the soap box to allow a thin stream of soap to pass through. The larger the opening, the more likely it is that more soap will pour out than is needed.

The Printing Press
Voice of All Progress and World Thought

Much hath printing wrought for thy well-being and for all mankind. To movable types thou art debtor for thy knowledge, thy liberty, and thy prosperity or thy hope of prosperity. The foremost human benefactor is Johann Gutenberg. Five centuries ago his printing types first pierced that darkness of superstition and dense ignorance which prevailed through the many cycles of centuries. Those types of Gutenberg are now as ever the pillars of fire leading us toward a universal civilization that is sure to come when mental and moral darkness shall be no more.—Courtesy American Type Founders Sales Corporation, Elizabeth, New Jersey.

HAND IN HAND

GOES A FOURTH--

School days again remind us that readin', ritin', 'rithmetic could hardly get across so well without another "R" necessary to modern education—Reddy Kilowatt.

From the moment their electric clock gets the youngsters up, Reddy is busy all day for them. The breakfast-table toaster, the corner traffic light, often even the school bell itself, depend on modern electric service. You can think of many more ways Reddy helps.

Lighting is the most important. All study needs it, in school or out. With the coming of shorter days, children will spend more time indoors, more time studying after dark. Here's where Reddy can do his best for students. Good home lighting is inexpensive. It takes little time or effort. It will pay dividends in easier seeing.

Make sure your light is right! Sight is priceless—light is cheap.

PARENTS—Most electrical dealers now have light bulbs in all common home sizes. Fill your empty sockets and follow these few simple rules to secure more light from your bulbs.

Wipe all light bulbs frequently. Keep reflector bowls and shades clean. Dust and dirt rob you of light!

Use the RIGHT SIZE bulb in each lamp or fixture.

A white-lined shade will reflect more light for use. A dark lining absorbs it.

Move lamps closer to points of use, so they shed light directly on the work.
