LIONS HOLD REGULAR MEET

Jack Cooper, national secretary for the Highway 66 Association, was speaker for the regular meeting of the McLean Lions Club, held Tuesday at noon in the Methodist Church.

Cooper, whose home is in Clinton, Okla., spoke to the Lions concerning the potentials of the highway that will in the future be one of the most highly-travelled thoroughfares in the United States. He explained how much of the funds of the association was used and pointed out many of the benefits derived from being located on the highway. Cooper reported that through the forthcoming years, the tourist business would increase and become more of a major factor in the support and growth of cities located along the popular route.

Tuesday's meeting of the Lions was also designated as "Farmer Day" and most of the members had a farmer as guest. One of the funds of the association was a ladies night banquet, scheduled to be held September 16.

Baptist Revival Dates Are Set

Final plans for the fall revival at the First Baptist Church have been completed, according to the pastor, Rev. Jesse Leonard.

The date for the meeting is Sept. 28 through Oct. 5.

Rev. Thurman Upham, pastor of the Central Baptist Church of Pampa, will be the evangelist. Weldon W. Lewis of Calvary Baptist Church, Borger, will serve as music director.

Rice is used more extensively than any other food.

Game With Irishmen Set To Begin At 8

McLean's fighting Tigers will swing into action tomorrow night at 8 p. m. as they travel to Shamrock to engage the Irishmen in the opening tussle of the 1958 season.

The Tigers will field a squad of 32 men for the opening game, one of the most promising units McLean has had for the past several seasons.

Having engaged in two scrimmages with Erick, Okla., there last Thursday night and here on Saturday night, the Tigers demonstrated their offensive potential by outscoring the Oklahomans on both occasions. Although light in weight and short on depth on several positions, Coach Jack Riley's team will lean on the experience of several returning veterans for its initial thrust into the new season.

Defensively, the probable starters will be Woods and Don Cash, ends; Hupp and McCurley, tackles; Wiggins, middle guard; Billy Crockett, O. K. Lee or Joe Smith, inside linebackers; Worsham and Jim Watson, outside linebackers, and Rice and David Crockett at safeties.

The average weight for the Tiger line will be 154 pounds per man, with backfield averaging 170 pounds per man.

Following tomorrow night's game the Tigers will return to the home field on September 12 to host Wheeler.

A complete roster of the Tiger squad is as follows:

Editorial

THE RIGHT TO KNOW

The Internal Revenue Service ruling that electric utility companies cannot regard the cost of institutional advertising, which presents their side of the public-vs-private power controversy, as a legitimate business expense in making out their income tax return, has stirred up a hornet's nest of editorial comment in newspapers and magazines throughout the country. So has proposed legislation by which Congress would implement and support this ruling. And the overwhelming mass of the editorial comment says, in effect, that the ruling is indefensible, amounts to an attack on freedom of speech, and violates the most basic Constitutional principles.

The comment, moreover, generally stresses the fact that the issue goes far beyond anyone's belief or disbelief in either public or private power. What is at stake is the right to freely express one's opinions—and, most important of all, the public's right to know. These rights, obviously, will be woefully weakened and emasculated if the exercise of them is to result in a heavy tax penalty.

The Saturday Evening Post ran a long editorial opposing the ruling, in which it said it expected to arouse the ire of public-power advocates. It then added: "But the principle involved requires a frank statement of what such rulings can mean to freedom, not merely for publicity advertising, or even advertising in general, but for freedom to express any views which tax bureaucrats—perhaps stimulated by political demagogues—decide to penalize."

In other words, if such rulings can be made to stick the freedom of speech of any individual, any group, and any organization can be effectively muzzled. And those in the driver's seat will thus make sure that only their side of controversial issues can be freely and widely argued.

WHAT'S GOOD FOR YOUR DOCTOR . . .

There are 206,000 doctors and 430,000 nurses in the United States. These 636,000 persons are key figures in maintaining our health.

They are interested not only in curing us when disease strikes, but in preventing disease before it strikes. When science develops a new preventive against a disease, they are anxious to make full use of it. That is why once-dreaded afflictions like smallpox and typhoid have been virtually wiped out of the country.

Today our doctors are trying to wipe out another terrifying disease—paralytic polio. Only a few years ago polio epidemics swept this nation like a plague, crippling tens of thousands, reducing them to helplessness for life.

But the Salk vaccine, developed on March of Dimes research funds, has cut the polio toll down to 5,894 cases in 1957, an 85% drop from the 1950-54 average.

Because the medical profession has vaccinated 65 million Americans with the Salk vaccine, polio no longer makes newspaper headlines. But for the 46 million persons under 40 years old who have failed to get their vaccinations, polio is still a serious threat.

That is why the American Medical Association, the American Nurses' Association and the American Hospital Association have all urged their members to get vaccinated themselves and to encourage their patients to do likewise.

Your doctor knows what he is talking about. It polio vaccine is good for him, it's good for you. An ounce of prevention now may save you from a lifetime of crippling.

JOHNSON LAUDED FOR WORK IN CONGRESSIONAL SESSION

By JAMES RESTON

Washington, Aug.—When the leaders of Washington, Republican and Democratic, executive and legislative, start yodeling in unison about the virtues of a single Senator, it is fair to conclude that the Senator (a) has just died, or (b) retired from the Senate, or (c) won a very special place for himself in the Capital. This is now happening in the case of Senator Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas. The Democratic majority leader has not died or retired; he is merely coming to the end of another Congressional session in which he has managed to win approval for a lot of controversial legislation without making anybody angry.

Other Senate leaders with large majorities and powerful Presidents have pushed through more legislation, but it has seldom, if ever, happened that so much controversial legislation has gone through a divided government with so few cuts and bruises.

In Trouble At First

When the second session of the Eighty-fourth Congress started last January, the Administration's foreign economic program was in serious trouble. Mr. Johnson himself feared that the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act and the foreign aid appropriations would be cut to pieces. Both have come out, not precisely as the Administration wanted them, but solidly intact.

Much the same was true of the Pentagon reform bill, but it too, has survived the interparty and interservice rivalries. Of all the really major objectives, only the labor bill is still in trouble, and House speaker Sam Rayburn, who taught Johnson much of his parliamentary skill, may save that at the last minute.

All this, of course, is not Senator Johnson's doing alone. He has developed a strange but genuine partnership with the Senate Republican leader, William F. Knowland of California. He worked closely with Mr. Rayburn and the House Republican leader, Joseph Martin.

On the tariff, he had intelligent support from C. Douglas Dillon, Under Secretary for Economic Affairs, who is one of the few good things that has happened to the State Department recently, and on Pentagon reorganization, he established a firm and even affectionate alliance with Neil H. McElroy, Secretary of Defense.

Nevertheless, everybody from President Eisenhower to Senator Everett Dirksen agrees that Senator Johnson is primarily responsible for the record and nobody quite knows how it was done.

Even Under Secretary Dillon, who followed the tariff bill for the State Department, cannot explain even yet how Senator Johnson disentangled the bill from a number of complicated personal and parliamentary difficulties.

It is impossible to have a conversation with Senator Johnson on the subject. Nobody has a conversation with the Texan. He does all the talking all the time and his talk is as detailed and complicated as his tactics.

As a strategist, he is the best quarterback to come out of Texas since Singin' Sammy Baugh. He seldom originates legislation himself, but he can take complex human beings and ideas and select or invent ways and means of winning consent for effective compromise legislation.

His assumption is that the Senate is not a seminar in theoretical political ideology but a workshop for passing laws, and while this emphasis on parliamentary skill has earned him the reputation of a political mechanic, it is probably significant that even the theorists in this city are beginning to join in his praise.

Next to his gift for dealing with complicated details and cantankerous human beings, vitality is his great strength. This is one of the odd paradoxes in a very complex man. He has had a severe heart attack and yet burns up more energy than a tank.

Washington is very conscious of this quality at the moment. The heart of the trouble in the Executive Branch of the Government is the lack of sustained energy at the center. It is not that there are no ideas or programs but that there is very little driving force in the White House to carry things through.

Senator Johnson, like President Eisenhower, has political power. But in addition, he allies immense energy to skill and ideas. The ideas may come from other men, but he will work eighteen hours a day putting the thing over and because he has both political power and physical energy, he achieves objectives other men cannot reach.

He has his weaknesses, like other mortals. The major defect in Governor Johnson is that everybody is working on a few trees at a time, and few manage to see the whole forest. Senator Johnson does not escape this episodic and narrowing aspect of the Congress, yet even here, his record is better this session than last.

Mrs. Detton's Recipe for APPLE STRUDEL

Beat one egg in cup. Fill cup with lukewarm water. Add 2 cups of flour (a good pint). Add a pinch of salt and mix well. Beat and knead (by picking up dough and throwing or hitting it on table) until white blisters appear. Divide into 4 parts and cover each. Let stand 2 hours. Roll and pull tissue-paper thin. Spread with sliced apples, sugar, cinnamon, butter and sour cream. Roll up—place in greased pan. Bake in moderate oven for one hour, basting with hot milk. Apple strudel may be frozen unbaked. After removing from freezer, bake, basting with hot milk. Bake slightly longer than one hour.

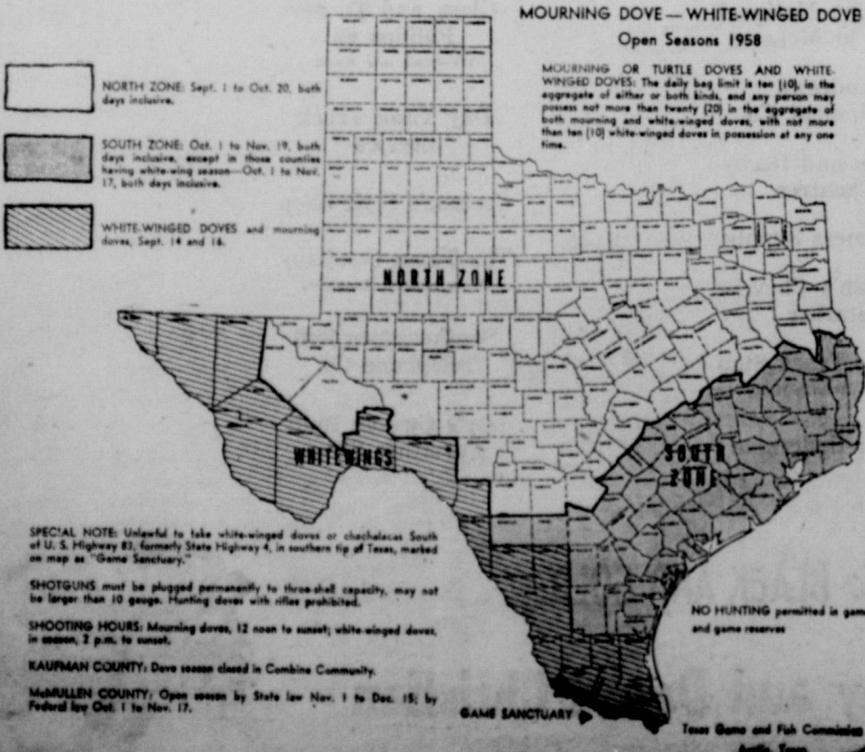

From an old Austrian Recipe

Ever look into the bright, expectant faces of hungry children eagerly awaiting a freshly-baked cookie? Or see the downcast, disappointed look that only kids can show when the cookie supply is "all out?" Mrs. Detton knows that look—that's one reason she's so pleased with her electric home freezer. She bakes large supplies of cookies, in advance—then freezes 'em. The happy faces of her grandchildren stay happy because Grandmother Detton just never runs out. She's always good for a fresh cookie, thanks to her electric home freezer—the first upright model in the Panhandle of Texas.

ATTEND CHURCH EACH SUNDAY

A GREAT NEED OF TODAY

By Eddie Tarbet, Minister
Kellerville Church of Christ

Possibly one of the greatest needs of the members of the church today is for them to be of the same mind (Phil. 4:2). The members of Corinth were also told to be joined together in the same mind and the same judgment (1 Cor. 1:10). Jesus was clear in His statement that all be one who believe on Him through the words of the apostles (Jn. 17:20, 21). And the church actually had such unity in the beginning (Acts 4:32). So it is possible for such to be now since it happened in the past.

I believe all will agree that the best and only way to sure of unity is to stay with the word of God and let it be the guide and the end of all matters spiritually. But when people begin to use a great deal of human reasoning and logic and feature their ideas about the different subjects they certainly will be lacking in being of the same mind. While great minds are and can be of much value to the Lord yet it is often true that those are the ones who often seem to be wise above that which is written, and division is the result.

We are a people that generally believe the plan of salvation to be plain and simple for the whole world or every creature, so why confuse most of the creatures with such human reasoning rather than take the simple statements of the Bible and rest with that? Certain things were given so that we might come to the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the son of God (Eph. 4:11-13). May the Lord hasten the day when we get back to the simplicity of the gospel and let the matters that are not clearly revealed alone and keep busy with what we know to be plain, simple, safe and certain. Let us not be having minds corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ (2 Cor. 11:3).

Bible Comment:

Parents Should Never Show Favoritism

Probably the most brilliant short story ever written is the story of Joseph—10 chapters in the book of Genesis.

It is another episode in the life of Jacob. Here we find an old man, repentant of his sins and his trickeries, but having visited upon him in his own large family the sins and deceptions of his own earlier life.

Joseph, the youngest of his 12 children, was Jacob's favorite. Jacob made this feeling all too apparent. It aroused jealousy in Joseph's brethren, resentment against the special favor that his father showed him.

Joseph seems to have been unconscious of their hatred. When Jacob sent him to see how his brothers were faring as they tended to their flocks, he went with no apprehension of danger. The brothers plotted to kill him.

It isn't necessary to go into the details of the story here—how they threw him into a pit and then sold him to the Ishmaelites, killed a goat and dipped Joseph's coat of many colors into its bright blood so they might go back and tell Jacob he had been killed by a wild beast.

The brothers little realized the tragedy they were storing up for themselves or the part they were going to play later when famine came upon the land. Then the brother they sold into slavery would have their very lives and destinies in his hand.

The story shows the foolishness of parents showing special favor to any child, a tragic mistake that allows discord and strife to develop within the family.

Mrs. Lamb Hostess to Pioneer Study Club

The Pioneer Study Club met Thursday, August 28, in the home of Wanda Lamb for the annual breakfast with Vera Back and Betty Bunch as co-hostesses. Eighteen members and four guests were served from tables decorated with pictures of Monaco royalty in keeping with the program given by Vera Back.

The guests were welcomed by Dorothy and Ruth Pagan dressed in uniforms representing palace guards and were presented with created invitations to attend Monte Carlo. As the guests registered at a table decorated with flowers and mounted with a beautiful print of Monaco, they drank toasts from crystal cordials. The entertaining rooms were decorated with summer flowers and other symbols representing Monaco.

The menu consisted of orange slices, glazed grapes, scrambled eggs, bacon, bite-size biscuits, jelly, butter, French pastry and coffee.

In keeping the theme for the year, "Romance is a Place to Go," Mrs. Back took the group to Monaco with an interesting history of the royal family and Monte Carlo and a beautiful description of the principality.

Following the program President Erna Hester conducted the business meeting. Vice President Loretta Brown announced the next meeting would be a family picnic September 13 at the City Park.

INSTANT TONIC

Back in the old days a thing called a "tonic cup" was a favorite remedy for almost anything that ailed you. Cheap, too. You took a cup made of bitter wood... added hot water... let it steep. Then, when bitter, you drank it. Simple? Yes. Too bad it didn't do any good. Nowadays science gives us more reliable medications. Even so, some people still take "home remedies" when their illnesses require more effective medication. Play safe. When you or a member of your family is ill, seek professional care. See your physician for diagnosing and prescribing... call us for prescription service.

Color-Schemed Heating Units Are Blessing

BY EDNA MILES

We've come a long way since the Franklin stove era in home heating. But we still have a long way to go.

Each year those in the heating and cooling industry come closer to pleasing both the man and the woman of the house. For a housewife, this means installations that make good room decoration and furniture arrangement possible. And for a husband, it means units that eliminate cold and hot zones in each room and do this at a minimum cost.

A new unit for heating and cooling goes right into a wall and is intended for individual room or zone use. This means a home doesn't need extra space for a centralized heating unit.

Basically a heating pump, it juts only 3½ inches into a room and the covering panel is painted or papered to harmonize with the room's interior.

An interesting feature is that such a unit fills heating and cooling needs for homes where the family decides to enclose a porch or add a room.

Neat installation makes good room decoration and furniture arrangement possible for the astute housewife.

PANHANDLE OUTDOOR LIFE

By STARKEY WHITEHORN

Late last spring I made a short safari around in Hutchinson County, talked to a few ranchers and surmised that there wouldn't be any wild grapes in this part of the state. The reasoning was well founded as far as it went, only it didn't go far enough. Practically all of the wild grapevines were consumed back to the vines, that is, the ones that I observed, hence the prediction.

Last week it was learned that there are wild grapes galore in some of the easternmost parts of the Panhandle at this time. In fact, a critical friend of mine, Morris Bankhead, of Amarillo, and I were picking up some scrap lumber on the old Studer Ranch and found about a gallon of grapes underneath the pile where pack rats had packed them. Morris said, as he pointed his finger, "I guess these are mulberries, since there are no grapes in the Panhandle." Well, there are a few grapes in certain parts of the country, to say the least.

Predicting game trends is one of the most simple things, but to accurately predict game trends and game populations is a horse of another color. For months I have said that the turkey population this fall appears good to excellent. As long as there is no one to contradict a prediction, all is well, but last week after casually listening to a few game specialists talk shop I began to wonder.

Jack Woodford, Game Warden from Miami, together with Wildlife Biologist A. S. Jackson, Game Warden Captain Jim Maggard and Hemphill County rancher Bruce Graham all agreed that the turkey population was diminishing at a fast clip. One of these outdoorsmen related about seeing a turkey hen in the spring that roosted in a certain dead cottonwood tree with ten young turkeys about the size of adult quail. Next time the hen was observed she had only seven young with her at roost. A few weeks later there were only four and the last time she was observed at roost on the same dead cottonwood tree she roosting alone.

This was the gist of conversation and the general idea about general turkey population situation. Nevertheless, there can still be seen 25 or more young turkey solts with a few hens, but at the same time on certain other parts of the same ranches there will be seen groups of hens from three to seven that are referred to as "dry hens."

Last year, after all was figured out, there was scarcely more than one young turkey pelt to each adult hen. At this rate the turkey population will soon cease to be.

To solve or remedy any problem there first must be determined the cause. Some of the wildlife technicians, if not all, generally agreed that the current loss to the population of this most sought after game bird was due to the predations of the bobcats in the turkey range. "They have been living high on the hog," said A. S. Jackson.

Captain Jim Maggard said that it is the habit of bobcats to wait near a trail of feeding or watering turkeys and catch them in the high weeds that abound in the low places, especially this year.

Another of the foursome related that since fur-bearing animals have been so much at large, so undisturbed for so many years, they have simply had a heyday. This was when scores of expert trappers spent the trapping season on a trap-line right here in the Panhandle. Coyote pelts have brought as much as five dollars when five dollars would buy five hundred pounds of pinto beans.

Nowadays five hundred pounds of beans will cost fifty dollars. Right now a prime coyote pelt probably wouldn't bring over fifty cent on the open market. Coons, bobcats and coyotes are ungoverned, that is, they have been to a degree. There has been coyote control in the Panhandle and possibly too much, since the bobcat has taken over so.

can we expect a heavy crop of deer, turkeys, quail or any other game crop. It looks to me like the cat and the canary when it comes to bobcats and turkeys. Tall weeds for the turkeys to walk through to water are a set-up for the hungry awaiting cats.

No state or federal agency can answer the needs of each particular ranch. It is up to each game manager to size up the situation and to take the necessary measures to alleviate the problem.

Siam is known as the Land of the White Elephant.

By Vera Sanford
 A word of warning to the many thousands of care-free, sport-loving Texans who take firearms along on their week-end or week-long outings.

Guns are dangerous. They need to be treated with respect. From Henry P. Davis come several thoughts on firearms safety which we'd like to pass on to you. He is public relations man for Remington Arms Co. and he knows whereof he speaks. Davis warns that while a .22 caliber rifle is a source of much pleasure around any camp or on any fishing trip or outing, double safety precautions should be taken to see that it is properly used. He says further:

Generally there are children in camp. Their elders should make sure that the rifle and its ammunition are kept in a safe place, away from the curious hands of the youngsters.

As a double precaution never keep guns and ammunition together until you are ready for target practice.

Teach the children to shoot. That's highly important.

But, before you start the lessons, be certain that you have a large "back-stop" against which you can shoot in perfect safety. Preferably find a small bluff or bank against which you can place your target.

Whatever the back-stop—be sure the bullets cannot ricochet from it.

Be extremely careful in your shooting when you take a rifle out on the water.

Never, ever, shoot a rifle at the surface of the water. The bullet may glance and injure someone as far away as several hundred yards.

Regardless of the safety factor it's best to do your shooting on solid ground—as a moving boat does not make for accuracy.

Davis points out that vacationists can have lots of fun and improve their marksmanship too, with a hand-trap, a carton of clay targets, a couple of boxes of shells and their favorite field gun.

With this outfit every type of game shot can be simulated.

Here again, be sure of your background. There may be another picnicking party on the other side of the hill.

No matter what the type of gun, always bear in mind the "Ten Commandments of Safety." They are simple, easy to remember, and straight to the point: Here they are:

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun. This is the cardinal rule of gun safety.

2. Carry only empty guns, taken down or with the action open, into your automobile, camp or home.

3. Always be sure that the barrel and action are clear of obstructions.

4. Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle, even if you stumble.

5. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger.

6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot.

7. Never leave your gun unattended unless you unload it first.

8. Never climb a tree or fence with a loaded gun.

9. Never shoot at a flat, hard surface or the surface of water.

10. Do not mix gunpowder and alcohol.

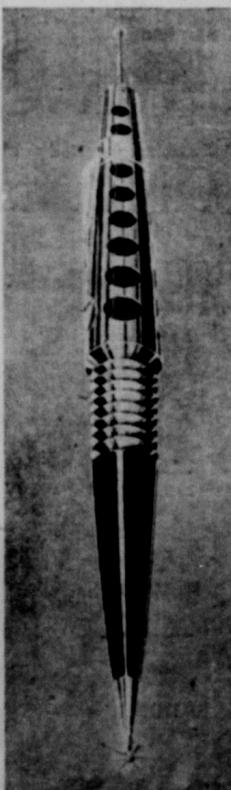

License Time Here Again

It's time to get those new hunting and fishing licenses, if you haven't already done so. You can buy them at any county clerk's office, sporting goods store, some drug stores—almost any place that has anything to do with outdoors merchandise.

New fishing licenses are available at the same price as last year. Universal, resident licenses are $2.15. This gives you the right to fish on inland waters or on the Gulf.

Resident hunting licenses are $3.15. Special permits for antelope hunts, $5.

Hundreds of licenses are misplaced or lost each year. When you buy yours, record the number where you can find it in case it's needed. You can replace a lost license for 50c, providing you can furnish the number of your original license.

SPACE WRITER — Not yet operational, pen pictured above is designed to use the sun's energy as "ink." Circular, light-sensitive "windows" at top would receive the sunlight and convert it into electrical energy. The electricity would heat a stylus at tip of pen, which would burn your message into the paper, much as do the stylus of the woodcraft and leathercraft sets of today.

GESUNDHEIT—Mrs. Theresa Forchione, one of 38 volunteers testing an "immune milk" for its hay fever-preventing powers, toasts the experiment in company of Dr. Herman Bundesen, president, Chicago Board of Health. Cows that give the milk have had a pollen solution injected into their udders in an effort to produce the antisneeze beverage.

God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.—(Psalm 46, 1.)
 There are times when even the most aggressive, forceful, self-assured among us must know, in their secret hearts, that their human strength is not enough—that God alone can help them in their trouble. Those who humbly, truly, live within Him "will not fear, though the earth be removed."

Sure sign of fall: city produce men setting up their vegetable stands along the roads just out of town.

We don't care what they do with fashions just so long as the gals who wear 'em don't go out of style.

If you'd like expert advice on how to handle your children, most any single person will be glad to oblige you.
