

Bids Open For New McLean Post Office

Postmaster Bill R. Reeves said this week that he has been advised by the office of Postmaster General E. Summerfield that the Post Office Department is now asking for bids to build and lease to the department a new post office for McLean. Advertising will be posted from April 11 to May 21.

"This proposed new building," Reeves said, "will provide expanded postal service for the McLean area."

Specifications call for a structure containing approximately 3,920 square feet with an outside loading platform and adequate space for parking and truck maneuvering.

The proposed building will be located at the corner of North Commerce and Second Streets.

Postmaster Reeves said the post office department will enter into a lease agreement with the successful bidder which will run for 10 years, with renewal options running up to 10 years.

Bids should be submitted, the postmaster advised, to Real Estate

Officer V. E. Bell, P. O. Box 1386, Lubbock. The real estate officer will supply information with regard to bidding forms, building specifications, lease provisions, etc.

The postmaster quoted Regional Director George A. Gray, of the post office department's Dallas region, as saying that "significant progress now is evident in the postal modernization program begun by Postmaster General Summerfield."

Under the post office department's unique commercial leasing program, the resources and investment funds of private enterprise are utilized to obtain needed postal buildings. More than 3,300 new structures have been erected during the past five years.

Moreover, due to congressional approval of the postal modernization program, construction during 1960 will be greatly accelerated with 1400 new facilities scheduled for completion and several hundred obsolete post offices modernized and expanded.

Meditation is the tongue of the soul and the language of our spirit; and our wandering thoughts in prayer are but the neglects of meditation and recessions from that duty, and according as we neglect meditation, so are our prayers imperfect, meditation being the seed of prayer and the intention of our spirit.—Jeremy Taylor

'New' Council Has First Meet

McLean's city council, with three new members, started a new term Tuesday night with a heavy agenda of business matters to be taken care of.

First in the meeting was the canvassing of votes of the past election and swearing in of the three new councilmen, including Joe Burroughs, Roy Barker and Creed Lamb.

In business, the council voted to have the water tank cleaned and painted, inside and out. A Dallas firm had low bid of $1,245 for the complete job, which will include any repairs necessary. The job is a periodic process in order to keep the tank in good condition.

Another matter concerned the medical bills accrued by factory workers as a result of the accident which occurred recently on Highway 66 west. The council voted to pay the full amount of all the medical bills, totaling $382.69.

A request was considered from the First Baptist Church to put a concrete walkway across a gas line as a part of the construction of the new auditorium. The request was denied due to existing regulatory laws which forbid any structure above any of the gas lines.

In the light of the new street marking, it was voted by the council to obtain bids for the drawing of a new city map, which will contain all the street names as well as changes which have occurred since the old map was made.

A resolution was passed numbering the two blocks in the northeast part of town which were consolidated last year for the housing project of Thorn & Myers. The south block will be 81 and the north block 82.

A unanimous vote approved the city donating a saddle for the 1960 rodeo and celebration here in June. This has been a standard procedure of the city for the past several years.

Submitted from Jim Boyd, McLean band director, was a request to the city for the purchase of new band uniforms. The depleted situation of uniforms was described in the request from Boyd. Councilmen decided to confer with school officials and trustees before making any definite decision. The request called for 75 new uniform units, at an approximate cost of $65.00 each, a total of $4,875.00.

In other action, the council voted to send three firemen to the state training course, which will be held in the near future.

In final action, the need for a janitor in the city hall was discussed. One proposal was to hire a person to sweep daily. Another proposal suggested that the night watchman take time from his duties each night to sweep the city hall. The latter proposal was accepted.

A modernization program is presently beginning at Warren Petroleum Company plant near McLean, of an approximate cost of $900,000, officials announced this week. The local plant will be completely modernized by installation of major pieces of new equipment, which will reduce operating costs and increase plant production.

At the conclusion of the modernization, the plant production will be increased by 15,000 gallons of light hydrocarbons daily.

Along with the McLean work, two other Warren plants are undergoing modernization. Approximately $500,000 is going into the Monument, N. M., plant and $500,000 into the Fostoria plant. Additional facilities are being installed at the Fostoria plant in Montgomery County, to process high pressure separator gas to increase production of deothenized gasoline 45,000 gallons daily.

"YE SHALL KNOW THE TRUTH"

"Jesus therefore said to those Jews that had believed him, if ye abide in my word, then are ye truly my disciples; and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." John 8:31-32

In this scripture there are several things suggested. First, in order to be the disciples of Jesus we must abide in His word. This does not mean to abide in what men have said about His word, but to abide in what Jesus says. Men make mistakes, but Jesus never did and what is said in the Bible is true. (2 Pet. 1:3; 2 Tim. 3:16-17) The Bible has stood the careful scrutiny of men for nearly two thousand years in its completeness, and shines brighter today than ever before as the truth of God which cannot be shaken.

Second, He suggests that it is possible for man to know or understand the truth. In John 17:17 He said, "Sanctify them in the truth: thy word is truth." This definitely identifies the truth as the word of God. Truth does not contradict itself. When we know or understand it we will understand it alike. The fault does not lie with God or His word, but with man. It is not only possible for us to understand it alike, but we are commanded to do so. (1 Cor. 1:10)

Third, the truth shall make us free. Error binds, but the truth frees us from all the ecclesiastical chains of darkness, creeds, disciplines, doctrines and prejudices of men. God knows what is best for man, and His word is perfectly adapted to the heart of man as He made it. When we will do His will we will fully understand that this is true. (John 7:17)

We should all be willing to sit at the feet of Jesus and imbibe only His sacred and divine truths, and march together in love and unity conquering the world for Him. John 17:20-21

IRS INFORMERS UN-AMERICAN

By John Harris in Amarillo News

Each year at this time Congress takes a look at a distasteful item on its legislative plate, wrinkles up its nose a little and swallows it whole.

The sour-tasting morsel is the Internal Revenue Service practice of paying informers for income tax information.

Epithets of "thoroughly repugnant" and "Gestapo tactic" have been hurled at the practice from time to time. Just as often someone submits a bill to abolish it.

This year the standard-bearer is Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, who says, "deliberate tax evasion cannot be countenanced, but reporting should be done out of civic duty and not for personal reward."

This reward is 10%, paid on request by the IRS, of tax money it collects on the basis of information supplied. A typical case is that of a disgruntled employee who spied on his boss' finances and discovered he was selling Uncle Sam $46,000 short.

He reported this to the local office of the IRS. The IRS investigated his report, recovered the $46,000 and sent the employee a check for $4,600. (The check is taxable.)

The IRS doesn't like to talk about the practice. It neither encourages it nor discourages it. Congressmen on taxation committees are reluctant to discuss it. Like other facts of life, it is regarded as permanent and necessary, but not a subject for discussion in polite company.

But since we're on the subject, it might be well to point out that this is not the time to jilt your fiance, divorce your wife, annoy your bookkeeper, or incur the wrath of your business associate.

Sadly, persons in these categories rank high among informers who have whispered to the IRS. Jealousy and revenge are major motives—other than cash rewards—causing the informer to act.

Occasionally patriotism crops up as a motive. And strangely a large number of informers never bother to apply for the reward. The reward is not automatic just because effective information is supplied; the informer must ask for it in writing.

"The practice brings us into contact with some of the most malicious, suspicious and obnoxious characters," an IRS official conceded, "and it often chases us up endless blind alleys."

But it also brings in the cash. The service estimates it recovers more than $10 million per year due to the informer system.

The IRS is more than a collection agency. It is also through its Intelligence Division—a police force. And like any other police force it feels it is only as good as its information.

Some of its men point out that the IRS informer system is no different from that of the FBI, the Bureau of Narcotics, the Customs and Immigration departments, and your local police force. All are heavily dependent on informers for prosecutions and recovery of illicit items. The Customs Bureau in particular has a highly-developed and specific system of payments for information leading to seizure of contraband.

But somehow in the public mind the idea of informing on a neighbor's tax delinquency is odious and contemptible.

"The very word 'informer' has a slimy connotation," said Rep. Wright, in announcing the introduction of his bill.

Luckily (for the nation's conscience, not tax delinquents), there are not too many people who make the furtive call to the IRS. Last check showed only 4157 claims filed by informers in fiscal 1959. With another 945 claims on hand from the previous year, the IRS discovered, after investigation, that only 708 of these could be approved.

It often happens that the IRS knows more about the tax delinquent than the informer; thus the informer gets nothing. But the 708 were paid $416,704. The amount of taxes, penalties and interest recovered by the government on their information was about 30 times this figure—some informers don't get the full 10% if their information was incomplete, etc.—or about $12,500,000.

The troubling question of whether to continue the practice is one Congress can answer by legislation. Lawmakers will have to weigh the value of the comparatively small tax sum collected against the moral value of creating stool pigeons.

WALTER ROGERS REPORTS

EASTER

Spring in all its glory is bursting forth in the Nation's Capital. The annual Cherry Blossom Festival is in full swing, although the cherry blossoms have not yet blossomed. However, nature will surely take care of this little matter before Easter. It seems each year that man and nature have difficulty in their timing. If the festival is set late, the blossoms bloom early; and if the festival is set early, the blossoms are late. In any event, it is always a festive occasion and one which is enjoyed by all.

But the big event this year, as it is every year in the lives of Christian people, is Easter Sunday. The world, like many of its inhabitants, is blossoming forth in a new spring wardrobe, and a beautiful one it is. I have always felt that it must have been around Easter that George Washington made his final decision to locate the Nation's Capital at the confluence of the Potomac and Anacostia Rivers. There has been a lot of water under the bridges of those rivers since that decision was made, and there have been many changes in the world; especially in those things of which man has had control. But there has been very little change in the natural beauty of the country.

The churches will be crowded to overflowing on Easter Sunday. It's too bad that the same cannot be said of every other Sunday in the year. One pastor here is reported to have preached his sermon on Easter Sunday by wishing all of those present a Merry Christmas. He explained as his reason for doing this that he would probably not see many of them again before that time. This is a thought which could well be pondered in the minds of many in this country, and there is no more appropriate time for such meditation than the Easter season. The many revelations of wrongdoing in several segments of our economy would indicate that the moral structure of our nation needs some repair work, if not a complete overhaul job. And the defects which need correction are not confined to local areas. They are statewide, in many instances, and nationwide. When favoritism from some regulatory agencies of the federal government can be purchased like potatoes in a grocery store, something is wrong. When violations of the criminal laws are winked at because someone has been paid off, something is wrong. When public property is misused to the profit of a few unscrupulous individuals, something is wrong. When young people and little children are used in the practice of fraud and cheating, something is wrong. When obscenity becomes an everyday occurrence, something is wrong. When people obtain government jobs through examinations taken by others, something is wrong.

Legislation can go a long way in setting up guide lines to help cure the ills reflected by the practices which have been revealed. However, legislation alone cannot cure these ills. They can only be cured by the searching re-appraisal of the individual moral code. It has been said many times that you cannot legislate morals. This is as true today as it was when it was first uttered. It is being proven at the present time by the difficulty which is being experienced in trying to write into law a "code of ethics" for the independent agencies of the federal government. It is another case of the trouble man will always have in trying to improve upon the Ten Commandments. A scoundrel, a mountebank, and a crook will always be just that, regardless of the law, until he changes his own moral code and decides to live by the teachings of Christ.

Many good people who are morally and basically sound have had occasion in the last few years to wink at practices which they knew in their own hearts were not in keeping with the teachings of Christianity. Yet, if a profit was involved, they were able to conjure up some good explanation or excuse for engaging in the practice or permitting it. Now is the time, during this Easter season, for the people in this country to take an inventory of their Christian principles and to restock their shelves with those which they find short.

BIG BROTHER, BIG DEBT
Many people complain about the federal government getting into everything, except their own pet project. Here is a part of a communication I received the other day: "I am against Uncle Sam playing big brother. But, no Texan, rural or urban, can fail to approve federal appropriations for the eradication of the screwworm."

Such an attitude on the part of the Russians makes a comparison with our own way of life inevitable. Let us see how the Soviets get their results. For one important thing, they go to school six days a week. Their government creates, as we said, special living conditions for those who excel in any field where the results can be a loudly-touted political boast. The whole stress is on mass production of talent.

It's not our way. It never was. Part of our Constitution opens up opportunity to the individual but does not ram it down his throat. There is more chance in our method, but the past proves it has served us well. We feel we do not need governmental assistance such as the Soviet provides, to guarantee team or personal successes. The danger in this practice is that it can lead to complacency. So far, our haphazard "individual" system has worked well; therefore we feel it will continue. Perhaps we are too optimistic.

Remember, this attitude of ours has a terrible historical parallel. Complacency was the curse that so frequently befell the great civilizations. Egypt of the Pharaohs, Greece, the Roman Empire, Spain of the Phillips, France of the Empire—all were complacent. And all paid the catastrophic price for their smugness.

Can we do anything to change complacency to competence? Yes. First, we can be aware of it. Then, everywhere, let's use our individual initiative while we still have it! We can be active in politics, in medicine, in business—in all those important areas so easily socialized by government. By retaining our duties and functions as men of democracy, we retain something greater—our individual identity! And, in turn, we help our nation to keep the strong shape of its heritage.

In America, ours is still the choice. So we must not surrender our individual initiative to the government or to any other agency. The rights and duties of personal initiative and personal responsibility still rest where they always did. Right on the individual. On YOU. And only your own competence can keep them there.

Such an attitude on the part of the Russians makes a comparison with our own way of life inevitable. Let us see how the Soviets get their results. For one important thing, they go to school six days a week. Their government creates, as we said, special living conditions for those who excel in any field where the results can be a loudly-touted political boast. The whole stress is on mass production of talent.

It's not our way. It never was. Part of our Constitution opens up opportunity to the individual but does not ram it down his throat. There is more chance in our method, but the past proves it has served us well. We feel we do not need governmental assistance such as the Soviet provides, to guarantee team or personal successes. The danger in this practice is that it can lead to complacency. So far, our haphazard "individual" system has worked well; therefore we feel it will continue. Perhaps we are too optimistic.

Comment from the Capital -

What'll We Do - Complacency Or Competence?

by Vant Neff

Recently, a team of Russian women beat a team of American women in a basketball game at New York's Madison Square Garden. America won the men's game. That's fine with us; they were good games, and someone had to win.

The point is, Russia won a game as American as the Indians. And they broadcast their triumph loudly and happily throughout the world. But here is the significance. Not that the Russians won an American game, but how.

Here is how. Athletics is not fun and games in the Soviet. It is grim government business. Anyone who shows aptitude and physical qualifications for track, soccer, basketball, hockey, skating or for practically any other sport, receives special treatment behind the Iron Curtain. Jobs, he is given preferred work. He undergoes intensive training. He gets special grooming and coaching, enabling him to rise to what we would call professional heights. Yet technically he maintains his amateur standing. When the individual, or the team, wins, the victory is exploited around the world with all the arrogant boastfulness attending a major military conquest.

The same boastful attitude prevails in the far more important area of scientific contribution. There is no doubt that "Sputnik" was a great achievement. But Sputnik's success prompted an outburst of Russian political braggadocio so swarmering as to cloud the fine accomplishment itself. It may be true that the Russians are ahead of us in space probing. It is possible that we lead them in other phases of rocketry and in certain scientific defense systems. The details of comparison we do not know. What we do know is the almost-hysterical emphasis with which every Russian advance is boomed across the world as proof of the superiority of Soviet "good life." This way of life "in the workers' paradise" is so productive, so forward-moving, we are told flatly, that Russia expects not only to exceed our growth but even economically to "bury" us!

Such an attitude on the part of the Russians makes a comparison with our own way of life inevitable. Let us see how the Soviets get their results. For one important thing, they go to school six days a week. Their government creates, as we said, special living conditions for those who excel in any field where the results can be a loudly-touted political boast. of Cabbages & Kings

by Bill Neal

For those of you who were also unable to attend the Panhandle Press Convention in Amarillo last week, my partner says that "Cabbages" came in for an award.

I must take this opportunity to express my appreciation to the judges—even if I can't say so much for their taste.

But then what is one opinion against so many? (This was a paid tongue-in-cheek remark.)

This is income tax day, and anybody who feels like writing a column ought to be examined by a specialized-medicine doctor.

I would like to add though, that I am certainly happy to have such a large part in helping so many people do so many things that I didn't want done in the first place.

On the other hand I would like to get some things done that aren't going to get done. Instead of buying Fidel Castro's high-priced sugar, I would like to give him a few double-edged razor blades to be used round and about the neck area, but not necessarily for shaving.

I really have never been able to determine just how it is that we're aiding Marshal Tito of Communist Yugoslavia, and after a little further reflection, I can't think of a thing I want to do for him that would cost more than several grains of powder and a lead.

It's not so much that I worry about what the bureaucrats will do with my money as I realize they know what's best for us little folks to do with our money; it's just that somehow or other my gross income this year lacked a few dollars totaling my income tax payment.

I'm trying to negotiate with the Internal Revenue a plan whereby next year they just take all my income and dole me back a meager allowance so I can get two or three square meals a month.

The only way I cheated starvation this year was by ordering "warm-ups" of expresso coffee over at Brown's Beatnik Palace and chewing on the grounds.

And while we're worrying about income tax, I want to repeat what I said last year about this time, to wit: "To err is human—but not permissible on your 1040 form," and/or "To err is human, but to get away with it is divine."

CHEVY! YOU CAN'T BUY ANY CAR FOR LESS ...UNLESS IT'S A LOT LESS CAR!

Anyone who's looked around knows the majority of Chevrolet models—6's and V8's together—list for less than comparable models of other low-priced cars. But the price tag alone is only one of a whole raft of reasons a Chevy does better by your dollars.

Nothing near Chevy's size and price can match the Full Coil cushioning of its ride, or the fine, finished workmanship of its Body by Fisher. That even applies to some cars that cost a lot more. You're up in the higher price brackets before you find a car that moves as quietly as a Chevrolet or offers the inner space that Chevrolet does.

Or look at the extras Chevy gives you—at no extra cost—that others in its class can't offer at any price. Shock-cushioned steering. Safety Glass in every window. Keyless locking of all doors. Crank-operated vent windows. Chevrolet offers the widest choice of power teams, too. Drive a Chevy just once. You'll have a tough time settling for anything less.

Social Security Disability Benefits

In order to receive social security disability benefits, only those are eligible who have a permanent disability which is so severe that it prevents doing any substantial gainful work.

Hal Geldon, district manager of the Amarillo social security office, emphasized, "The disability which the claimant has must be a condition which is expected to last indefinitely and one which will not likely improve with time or medical treatment."

Many people believe that the social security disability payment is a "stop-gap" income on which they can depend until they are well enough to return to work.

Geldon stressed that such a provision is not a part of the social security law.

"Rather," he said, "social security benefits are intended to provide some relief from loss of income due to a permanent disability."

How Valuable

IS LOCAL NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING TO LOCAL BUSINESS PEOPLE?

Here's what the American Bankers Magazine, a publication which represents a traditionally conservative profession, has to say:

"No business man or woman in any town should allow a newspaper to go to press without his or her name and business being mentioned somewhere in its columns.

"A stranger picking up a newspaper should be able to tell what business is represented in a town . . . it's the best possible town adviser. The man or woman who does not advertise does an injustice to himself or herself and definitely to the town."

It's CONSISTENT advertising that counts and the best advertising medium in this area is

Public Will See Controversial Space Film Which TV Networks Policy Banned

Despite the fact that it was denied time on the three major networks as a matter of company policy because the film was not produced by their own news department staffs, millions of American television viewers are going to be able to see one of the most controversial space films of our time — "The Race for Space."

"The Race for Space," gives the true facts, impartially and objectively about the race between the U.S.A. and Russia in missile development. Produced by David L. Wolper in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Defense, the U.S. Army, Navy, Air Force, National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Ministry of Culture of the U.S.S.R., it contains American and Soviet rocket and space films never before seen outside our Intelligence Service, including first views of the dog-carrying Sputnik II.

The film will reach home screens shortly through a triumph of enterprise involving tremendous effort and expense by the film's sponsor Shulton, Inc., makers of cosmetics. They have succeeded in putting together what has been described as a "fourth network"—an association of nearly 100 independent stations and network affiliates coast-to-coast who will air this film on prime night time.

By virtue of this unique hook-up and the tremendous interest and promotional effort which these broadcasting stations will exert, it is expected that the show will be viewed by a greater audience than originally contemplated through a network telecast.

Judging by the initial response from civic, educational and civil defense groups who have seen this film it will have the backing of public spirited groups all over the country.

General Holgar N. Toftoy, featured in the film and Chairman of the World Space Committee, says that every American should see this film. It has been made a regular part of the Curriculum at West Point. Response from the Press has been so tremendous that a newspaper article about it has been read into the Congressional Record. The film won the 1959 San Francisco International Film Festival Documentary Award, and was nominated by the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences for an Academy Award, the first TV film to be so honored.

The film shows the development of the giant V-2 under Hitler's direction, the capture of Werner von Braun and other German scientists, and the dramatic firings of Sputnik I and Sputnik II, including scenes showing Laika, the Space dog, being prepared for his flight.

The finale is the dramatic buildup and launching of our first successful earth satellite, Explorer I, a sequence which ends with the actual films of the tense and agonizing countdown in the blockhouse at Cape Canaveral.

There are also probing interviews with Mrs. Robert Goddard, widow of the great rocket pioneer, and General H. N. Toftoy, winner of the Distinguished Service Medal for his successful direction of the Army missile program.

PLOWIN' Out the CORNERS

by Uncle Zeb

There's a lot to hear if we listen, There's a lot to see if we look, There's a lot in life that comes gently—

The Creator has so richly blessed us with so many wonderful things for our enjoyment, most of which we miss and pass by quickly because of our busy topsy-turvy world. It does us so much good sometimes to take our time of quietness, whether it be by some creek, in the canyons, or just out walking. In this quiet time we can have a real blessing by adding up the things about us which pass so peacefully through our life.

Take the opening of the rose. No one can hear it, but what a work of God. The growing of the grass and the hiding of the birds. The shadow of the trees, and the stillness of the lake. In the smile there is no sound, but no one can measure its worth. The dawn comes quietly, and the darkness of night settles gently like a mantle.

The stars make no sound as they peep from behind the silent clouds but they can tell us so much.

A warm handclasp from a friend is not a noisy thing but in it we can see the joy of living. The deaf and mute mountains echo back of God's handiwork. The rainbow reminds us of His promise. A beautiful dream gives rise to new hope, while sleep prepares us for new experiences.

In visiting those who are handicapped and because of this spend hours in patient quietness we find that they have seen more of these quiet blessings than we who rush here and there. It proves that we should take time from our busy day to quietly think and most of all to be thankful for all the many quiet blessings.

A Corral Full Of Stories

By Joe Evans

Three hunters had been hunting for several days and had shot up all of their cartridges except one. They were really getting desperate so they held a conference and appointed one man who was the best shot of the three, and sent him out with his gun and this one cartridge to try and kill a deer. The other two fellows remained at camp. They were lying there on their cots in the tent hoping that their companion would get some fresh meat for the camp.

The hunter that left camp had gone about a half mile up the canyon when he met two grizzly bears. He threw his gun down and headed back for camp in a dead run with the bears right after him. He made a bee line for the tent where his two companions were. As he entered the tent he stepped to one side and the bears came in. He said to his friends, "You fellows skin these two, and I'll go back and see if I can find something else."

The outstanding cowboy that was noted for being the wildest, most wicked of them all was finally roped in and persuaded to join the Baptist church. Naturally he didn't change his way of living because he never was converted. They simply oversold him.

Some weeks after he joined the church, complaints began to come in about the way he was living, so the deacons and pastor called him in and notified him that the church was withdrawing from him.

The cowboy looked up one of his old time friends and said to him, "Bill, I'm in a hell of a shape. Some time ago I joined this Baptist church and now they have withdrawn from me and left the damn thing on my hands and I don't know what to do with it."

The Highest Point in Texas

Peter Clark McFarlane, a reporter from Colliers Magazine, was sent from New York all the way to the Davis Mountains to get a bear story. Arrangements were made for this hunt to take place on our ranch.

He was a big fellow, about 230 pounds, and pretty soft. He had lived in a good hotel, took baths every day and brushed his teeth after every meal. He shaved every morning and slept in a night shirt. This was all foreign to the cowboys, and was the kind of fellow most of us called a jelly bean.

On the day of the hunt we got up before dawn and were saddled and ready to go by daylight. It was exciting with all the dogs barking, horses pitching and horns blowing. We mounted Peter Clark on a big stout horse, one that could pack him all day. He thought we would just ride out of camp a couple of miles, tree a bear and then he could shoot it and write about that, gentlemen, but I do know I'm sitting on the sorest spot in Texas."

We rode for miles through the rough, brushy mountains, climbing hills, crossing canyons, and dodging limbs. It was so common to us that we never stopped to consider how our guest was taking the punishment. After we had ridden about 15 miles we were on the top of Mt. Livermore and Mr. Clark didn't have much to say so we began trying to entertain him and get him interested. One of the boys said to him, "Mr. McFarlane, do you realize you are sittin' on the highest point in Texas?" He says, "I don't know

THE RESURRECTION FAITH

By Kenneth McCall, Presbyterian pastor

"Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Matthew 28:20

The Christian faith has always been a resurrection faith. The whole of the New Testament is written from the conviction that Jesus of Nazareth, who preached among men, who healed the sick, who cared for the weak and sheltered the outcast, is the same Christ whom God raised from the dead. Paul states it clearly when he says that "if Christ has not been raised, then our preaching is in vain and your faith is in vain."

The concluding verse of the Gospel of Matthew demonstrates this point of view in the New Testament. "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." No such statement is possible except that Jesus was known unto men as the Risen Lord. The Lord whom we serve is a living Lord, who is with His people now and until the end of the world.

If you would know this living Lord, who has created you and seeks continually for your redemption, become a part of the Christian fellowship and find the fullness of life that God has for you.

Area Observations

HOMER STEEN in FLOYDADA HESPERIAN:

Majoring in Dogs. Since this has become such a doggy country it occurs to us that we might make more use of our canine population than we are now. Not only does the dog species grow in numbers but also, it seems, the animals must be getting smarter. Like, taking down a row of garbage cans and deftly turning them over one by one to check the contents. Pondering over the matter it has occurred to us that we could take some of our outstanding dogs and appoint them to something or other. Shame to let all that energy go to waste.

Not only in town, but in the country as well the dog population is mounting. Any lane one travels these days will have at least one dignified canine en route to see some of the neighbors or possibly attend one of the sessions at an intersection where humans whizz by in their automobiles. What the dogs say to each other as they lie in the tall grass looking out on the world, we wonder. Facing the warm sunshine that bathes their muzzles, their rears ensconced in a bed of protective cover, they appear to be talking over the whole range of community chit chat, and even philosophizing a bit.

MATADOR TRIBUNE: When a man passes his worries on to his friends he can never be sure they will receive proper care and nourishment. It is as if he left his children with a neighbor who has children of his own.

There are many corners behind which tragedy can wait until it is time to keep an appointment.

Each time I am tempted to point to an achievement, it becomes evident that the element of chance involved would make the claim appear ridiculous.

Being in a hurry is often an excuse for delaying too long in getting started.

KNOX COUNTY HERALD: Being short of things to worry about I have lately put in considerable time reading the pocket-size magazines and have come to the conclusion that sex and diet are the only things that are of importance to the public.

After having spent all my life up to now in ignorance that salt is playing havoc with most people, I have enjoyed eating popcorn, with plenty of butter and salt on it, and now I discover that butter is not good for me as it causes big gobs of fat to form in my blood stream, the salt clogs up my kidneys and makes me like a wet sponge.

And one should by all means pass up roughness like popcorn.

Bread is very fattening and one soggy cracker at a meal is all that one should take on.

Sweets bring on all kinds of kidney trouble and too much acid food causes ulcers and condiments are no good as food and if one uses them, holes are likely to get into your innards.

It seems that apple juice, cream of wheat and skimmed milk are the only foods that agree with us human beings and one should be very careful how much of these you should imbibe.

I've tried living on apple juice, cream of wheat and skimmed milk. They get mighty monotonous, and they are no good at all for flavor and if that is what it takes to live a long life, it may work but it sure won't be much fun.

THE HIGH POINT, N. C., ENTERPRISE: A newspaper in another state has found itself unwittingly involved in a racket by which an agency was clipping obituary reports, enclosing them in plastic and sending them to bereaved families with a charge for that un-ordered service. We hope no such practice is followed among our readers, and urge no one to pay for such clippings. This newspaper has no connection with such money-making attempts and seeks to discourage them.

And while we're on the subject, we must mention another cruel racket by which fictitious treasury agents, usually working in pairs, are fleecing Social Security beneficiaries out of badly-needed payments. Pathetically, those swindled, usually are ones least able to afford it. Chief victims have been confused oldsters, widows with children and disabled shut-ins. Those vultures usually arrive just after the check, claim overpayment was made and demand repayment. One frightened woman signed over her check to them as "part payment" and offered to mortgage her home to pay the rest.

At Lenoir one man operated a mail-order variation of the racket. Other cases have paid from $5 to $300 to fake "government" officials. Don't let such swindlers fatten on frightened folks with little income and fear its going to be taken away. Real government doesn't operate in such fashion. With Social Security payments on the rise there'll be easier pickings unless people guard themselves against those swindlers who prey on public misunderstanding of Social Security laws.

My partner is having hell with the census takers concerning his water closet. And how many occupants it generally has. And if it is a flush type and inside.

Now I've never known him to be such a modest soul before. I'm beginning to suspicion that boy has an outside privy inside of something.

Or maybe he's growing poppies in the bowl.

At any rate I'm for the census takers. When a man kicks up a fuss like that it's like refusing the lie detector test . . . you figure there's something he's trying to hide.

Joe Riordan of Lubbock who gets in more public relations per joke per minute for Southwestern Bell than any public relations man I know, went around introducing Cabbages at the press convention last week as the only columnist he knew with enough gall to champion the cause of the lowly pool hall.

What else, Joe? Those dern bowling alleys are so healthy they'll kill anybody.

Second childhood must be a wonderful thing.

Have you noticed Emory Crockett and Amos Page in their new "burr" haircuts? The latest from Paris, dahling.

Of course, Emory just got his hair cut that way to disguise his baldness.
