HOSPITAL ADDITION PROPOSED IN CITY

COMMISSION DECIDES TO STUDY PLAN

The construction of a 16-room air-conditioned addition to the McLean Hospital and Clinic has been proposed to the city commission.

Alderman Ruel Smith presented a drawing of the proposed addition at a recent meeting of the commission.

Cost of the project, not including furniture, was estimated at under $42,000.

As presented to the commission, the new building would be constructed just north of the present hospital and clinic. It would be built of brick, matching the present building.

112 Feet Long

The addition would be 112 feet long and 30 feet wide and contain 15 private rooms, a kitchen and eight restrooms. A parking area was also proposed.

Smith said he felt a hospital is needed in McLean, and he believes the proposed addition would be a economical solution.

The $42,000 estimated cost includes air-conditioning and central-heating units.

The commission decided to study the proposal and check into the possibility of the city receiving federal financial assistance under the Hill-Burton hospital improvement program.

31 Stop Signs

Aldermen also approved a recommendation from the commission's traffic study committee to erect 31 stop signs at various intersections in the city.

Aldermen Smith and Boyd Meador, members of the committee, presented their proposal following a study of traffic conditions.

The possibility of making the intersection near the new Post Office a four-way stop was discussed, but it was decided to make Commerce a through street at this time and erect stop signs only on Second Street.

Seal Coating to Start

Stop signs are to be erected at every intersection on Main Street. City Manager B. J. McCartney announced that seal-coating of several city streets is expected to start next week.

The project will be part of the city street improvement program.

McCartney also said that tables and benches in City Park have been repainted and repaired for use this summer.

Loss Will Be Heavy

Lumber Firm Is Damaged by Fire

Crockett Lumber and Builders Supply was heavily damaged Tuesday night in the first business building fire in McLean in almost a year.

Emory Crockett, owner of the firm, said this morning that the amount of the loss hadn't been determined, but it will run into several thousand dollars.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, apparently started in a storage area of the building, according to Fire Chief Boyd Meador.

Volunteer firemen brought the fire under control within an hour after arriving on the scene.

Crockett said he believed the building and contents would be a near total loss, but indicated he intended to make repairs as soon as possible.

Until repairs can be made, Crockett said the business would be operated from a building immediately west of the damaged structure.

Starts Near Floor

Meador, who had high praise for local firemen, said charred lumber indicated the fire started near the floor just inside the partition separating the front of the building from the storage room.

The last serious business fire in McLean before Tuesday night occurred in the Terry's Electric building in May, 1960.

Local firemen also were called out Monday to extinguish a grass fire about one mile southeast of the Warren Petroleum Corp. plant near Kellerville.

Fire damage was limited to a small area, and little damage occurred.

40 Years Ago

Some parties from Enid, Okla., arrived here Monday afternoon in an airplane, and remained with us until Thursday morning, when they arose and flew east.

They came here for the purpose of picking up a few dollars by taking passengers up at $10 per flight, but most everybody thought too much of ten dollar bills and their necks to indulge. Only three of our more reckless and prosperous people took rides.

Perry Everett made a trip to Shamrock in the machine Tuesday to attend the convention of the Wheeler County Odd Fellows Association, and Bob Turner and Roy Robinson took flights over the city.

A box supper has been announced for Friday night, to be held at the Mission Theatre, for the purpose of defraying expenses of high school students to the state interscholastic meet at Austin next month.

Remember the time, Friday night, and the place, Mission Theatre, and by all means, if you are a lady, don't neglect to bring a box full of something that will tempt the appetite of mortal man. And if you are a weaver of trousers, don't forget to come and bring a pocket full of money, so that you may get into the bidding when the auction takes place, and force him who would eat with his best girl to pay for the privilege.

Being stubborn is unlikely to get us much farther than it does the mule. This contrary nature and uncooperative disposition has won for him the slogan "Contrary as a mule." It will do the same thing for us as human beings.

We meet some folks who are an dogmatic about what they believe that even the good benefits of their beliefs are not attractive to us. For example, if they believe very strongly that we should love one another, but will fight you tooth and nail in order to prove it, then we are bewildered.

If while someone is attempting to convince us of the importance of a God-like life, we see a perfect demonstration of the temper of Satan, then we will never be favorably impressed. This will so often happen if we step on his religious toes even to the slightest little degree.

It is possible to lean forward so far trying to be agreeable that we will fall for anything. But it is perhaps even worse to take a stand so stubbornly straight that we will bend over backwards.

We need to stand very firmly by the true and proven facts, but we need to always have a compromising spirit on the matter of opinions, especially when they are our own. Someone has said that it is possible to be so right that we are wrong. It almost seems to be that way when we see a person that on every issue takes the stubborn and uncompromising stand. When one never takes time to look at the matter from the other fellow's viewpoint.

Mrs. Frank Rodgers and daughter, Chris, and Nancy Hess were in Pampa Saturday.

DO YOU KNOW

... American agriculture buys more petroleum products than any other single industry? Today there are more than 12 million trucks, cars and tractors on American farms and ranches. These farmers, ranchers and dairymen buy the equivalent of 15 billion gallons of crude petroleum each year—more than any other single industry—to keep this machinery running. Agriculture maintains its potent and vigorous role in the economy of our nation.

Texas is a great state for hunters seeking lesser scaup and for fishermen angling for channel bass, spotted weakfish and cobia.

If you're an outdoorsman and these names don't ring a familiar bell don't be alarmed. They are not new species introduced to the state. They are species that have been here for a long, long time. You know them well—but by other names.

Actually you know them by their sectional names rather than their common proper names.

The lesser scaup is the bluebill; the channel bass is the redfish; the spotted weakfish is the speckled trout; and the cobia is the ling.

For many, many years, there has been considerable confusion over the common names of fish, birds and animals. With Texas' population growing, that confusion has spread into the Lone Star state because many of the folks now residing here came from other sections of the nation.

All fish, birds and animals have scientific names. But few people can pronounce these Latin names, much less remember them.

Scientific names are chosen according to the international rules of scientific nomenclature and a scientific name can be applied to only one fish, bird or animal.

In a scientific name, the first name is the genus and the second name is the species. At times there will be a third name which indicates a sub-species.

We won't go into the scientific names applied to our wildlife, but let's consider the proper common names—and sectional names or nicknames—applied to some of our birds and fish.

Let's first consider some of the freshwater fish common to the state. Listed below are the proper common names of fish, followed by the sectional names or nicknames:

Largemouth Bass—Black bass, bigmouth, bronzbass, southern trout, green trout and linesides.

White Bass—Sand bass, silver bass, striped bass, striper, sandy and barfish.

Bluegill—Blue bream, bluemouth, sunfish, bream, copperhead bream and dollardie.

White Crappie—This fish has more sectional names than any other fish. Just a few include: bride perch, bachelor, campbellite, papermouth, sac-a-laitte, lampighter chinquapin perch and goggle eye.

Saltwater fish common to Texas have their share of nicknames. Here are a few:

Channel Bass—Redfish, red drum, bronzbass, and spottail.

Spotted Weakfish—Speckled trout, speck, spotted squeteague, saltwater trout and yellowmouth trout.

Cobia—Ling, lemonfish, sergeant fish, lingcod and buoytender.

In 1960, the farmer received only 39 cents out of each dollar consumers spent for food in the United States. The remaining 61 cents went for marketing charges. This compares, says the USDA, with 51 cents in 1947 and 32 cents in the depression years of 1932-33. Though farmers got lower prices for their produce in 1960, consumers paid more for the food.

TELEPHONE TALK

by Joe McDonald, Manager

I guess there is a first time for everything. And, as far as I know, this is a "first" for Telephone Talk. I am writing this column while lying flat on my back (well practically flat on my back) in the hospital. I had an appendectomy, which of course is a fancy name for taking out someone's appendix. But the doctor says I'll be on the mend soon and back to work.

One of the things that I have learned to appreciate while I've been in the hospital is the telephone. Luckily, I have one by my bedside and I've been able to keep in touch with my office as well as my home. It makes me realize that extension telephones are mighty handy items. They are there when you need to make a quick business call—and they're mighty comforting when you're lonesome and want to call a friend. So, while I can't recommend a trip to the hospital with a bedside phone—I do recommend that you have telephones where you need them.

SPRING PHONE FAIR

Well, by now most of us in McLean don't need the weather man to tell us spring is here. There are signs of it everywhere. Have you noticed the kids lately . . . skipping rope, swinging bats, and chasing pop flies?

The grown-ups, too, are busy around the house. Painting and rearranging rooms, even adding on to the house itself to make it more comfortable for the family.

We're busy at the telephone company, too, getting ready for spring with an event called Spring Phone Fair. It is to be our way of reminding you about the many new telephone services we have to help you make your home more convenient and attractive.

For instance, how about a new phone in color for a bedroom? Or a wall phone for the kitchen, playroom or work area? Perhaps you'd like the smart Princess Phone for your living room . . . so little, so lovely and it lights. Or maybe you'd prefer the soft musical tones of the bell chimes. These are just a few of the new telephone items that we're offering during our Spring Phone Fair. If you want more information about any of these items just call the business office or ask your local telephone service man about them.

FREE PROGRAMS FOR YOUR GROUP

Since some McLean civic, church and local groups are planning spring programs, this seems a good time to remind you of our standing offer to provide entertaining and informative telephone programs for your organization.

A booklet describing the variety of programs available—films, talks, lecture-demonstrations, and telephone tours is yours for the asking. Just call the telephone business office.

Call by number. It's twice as fast.

GENS. LEE AND GRANT JOIN THEIR RESPECTIVE ARMIES

By LON K. SAVAGE

Five of the greatest military figures of the Civil War joined their respective armies 100 years ago this week. For the South, the gains were in Robert E. Lee, Joseph E. Johnston and Thomas J. Jackson (who was not yet known as "Stonewall"). For the North, it was Ulysses S. Grant and George B. McClellan.

The war had been a tremendous blow to Lee. Only weeks earlier he had written, "I cannot anticipate a greater calamity for the country than the dissolution of the Union." But during the week after Fort Sumter, he had followed his native state of Virginia and, on April 20, had resigned from the federal army.

He went immediately to Richmond, arriving the night of April 22, and that very night agreed to take over command of all Virginia forces.

Lee Commissioned

The next morning, 100 years ago this week, he was escorted before the Virginia convention where he was formally commissioned a major general, the highest rank then offered. A week earlier, in a conference at Washington, he had turned down command of the Union army.

While Lee was being ceremoniously installed into the Virginia army at Richmond, a stooped, plain little man was making a far less auspicious beginning in the Union army. Ulysses S. Grant, who was to accept Lee's surrender near Appomattox Courthouse four years hence, was drilling a company of soldiers at Galena, Ill.

Grant had been having hard times. Although a West Point graduate, he had been forced to resign from the army in 1854 or face charges of drinking. Since then he had tried farming, selling real estate and finally, clerking in his father's leather store at Galena.

Immediately after Sumter, Grant began training the men around Galena for war, and his life took on new meaning. After a week, he took them off to Springfield where, on April 28, he accepted an insignificant post with the adjutant general's office of the state of Illinois.

On the day that Lee appeared before the Virginia convention, Joseph E. Johnston, acting against his wife's wishes, walked into the secretary of war's office in Washington and resigned as quartermaster general of the United States army. He then crossed over to his native Virginia and headed for Richmond, where, like his West Point classmate, Lee, he was to become a major general.

Jackson in Richmond

Still on that day, a serious-faced man in his 30s, Col. Thomas J. Jackson, busied himself about Richmond, where he had just arrived. Jackson, a professor at Virginia Military Institute, had brought the VMI cadet corps to Richmond two days earlier to join in the war effort.

Within the week, he was assigned to command the Virginia volunteers at Harpers Ferry, and he set out for his new post April 26 with a happy heart, writing his wife that he had "the post which I prefer above all others."

And again on that memorable day, a young man in Cleveland, Ohio, suddenly became, like Lee, a major general. George B. McClellan, 34, assumed command of Ohio volunteers.

McClellan had shown himself already a brilliant author of military books and, in civilian life, had risen to a $10,000 a year job as a top official of the Ohio & Mississippi Railroad.

This advancement was relatively slow when compared to the meteoric rise he was to experience in the Union army within the next seven months.

Next week: Two more states join the Confederacy.

Tuesday of last week, we were down on Monday. We found heavy infestations of aphids on alfalfa on the Leroy Williams farm and green bugs were about to carry the wheat farmers off.

We sent a plane down on Tuesday that sprayed a few small plots. Some of the wheat in this area has heavy infestation of green bugs, which I would recommend spraying if your wheat has good prospects otherwise.

The aerial applicators use Parathion. For ground rigs you can use 1½ pints of Malathion and get good results.

On Tuesday of last week we attended the annual stockholders meeting of the Canadian Valley Production Credit Association and ran into a number of McLean residents at this meeting.

Reagan Brown, rural sociologist at Texas A and M College, was the speaker. He must have done a wonderful job, since everyone who attended was highly complimentary of his talk.

On Wednesday I was asked to talk to a group of chemical dealers at a meeting being held in Amarillo. I spoke on bindweed control with some of the newer chemicals.

These dealers came from all over the Panhandle area.

Thursday, Roland Dauer, Pampa farmer, and I attended an excellent meeting at the Southern Great Plains Field Station, Bushland. The meeting was sponsored by the Texas Weed Control Association and was devoted to modern techniques in the control of noxious weeds.

Thursday night we attended a meeting in the Grandview community, where I presented Reagan Brown. He talked on rural neighborhood improvement work.

On Friday I introduced Reagan as the speaker at the Pampa Kiwanis Club. Friday night we held our first feed grains program meeting in the basement of the Methodist Church in McLean.

If I wasn't having a lot of fun mixed into all this activity it would be hard to live with. If you enjoy it, there isn't as much work as it appears.

FEED GRAIN PROGRAM

Now that we have had our meeting on the feed grain program in the McLean area, I would be very happy to assist anyone in figuring their payments on diverted acres, or answer any questions.
