Chief Operator For Airline Got Start Here

Today Harry Payne Miller is chief operator for American Airlines, a very busy man who handled 2,485 contracts with airline flagships in June and supervised 27,000 reservation messages. Just nine years ago he was getting his start with American Airlines as an operator at Big Spring. He came here after getting his AB degree from Baylor University and doing radio work aboard tankers plying between South America and Europe, and as a research worker for two years in Venezuela.

After getting his elementary experience at Big Spring, he was transferred to other points and wound up at Phoenix where a transport's flat tire played an important part in his life. The flat caused Catherine Costello, stewardess, to be held to Phoenix for four hours and Miller invited her to lunch. Six months later they were married.

An enthusiastic radio operator, H. P., as he is known, found his hobby a handy thing when his baby was born. Mrs. Miller went to Oklahoma City before the event and they kept in touch with each other by short wave, and when the zero hour arrived Miller was glued to his head phones awaiting word.

A licensed operator since 1916, Miller now has a set which cost over $1,200 and carries 500 watts power. He contacted friends all over the world before the war placed limitations on "ham" operators. He and Mrs. Miller reside in the valley near North Hollywood, Calif.

Horse And Mules Learn About Planes

SEATTLE, July 29 (AP)—Mules and packhorses in the Cascades Grizzly Creek country can spot planes with the best air raid wardens.

Downtown Stroller

Downtown doing a little shopping were two recent brides, Mrs. BILLY SHAW and Mrs. CHESTER WILEY. Both are looking mighty happy these days...

An early morning stroller, in the direction of work, was Mrs. VIRGINIA WEAR who holds down a position at the city hall. She's the lady that murmurs "City Hall" when you dial number 7...

About the only time that folks feel good this summer is when they read dispatches from Moscow. It gives you such an awful lift to read their reports of the war. Too bad some of the disgruntled Germans can't read them too...

Brooks Move Into "Make Or Break" Series With Cards

By The Associated Press

Bufs' Pollet Credited With Seventeenth Win

By The Associated Press

Careening along in juggernaut style, the Houston Buffs, Texas league leaders, trounced their hosts, the Oklahoma City Indians, 4-0, last night to sweep a three-game series.

Despite three-hit hurling by Bill Scott, the San Antonio Missions dropped a 3-2 decision to the Oilers at Tulsa.

Lookin 'em Over

WITH JACK DOUGLAS

A group of Big Spring baseball enthusiasts met Monday morning at the chamber of commerce office to outline a plan whereby the Bombers may bolster their finances.

It was tentatively decided to set aside the Big Spring-Clovis game here August 7 as Bomber Appreciation Night.

So far as Murphy knows, remainder of the spring training hopes will be on deck this fall.

Although it will be a month or so before the Big Spring high school fall season is given its official inauguration, Steer Coach Pat Murphy is being beset by player-loss possibilities.

Wiley, Rowe and Smith are to appear before all local service clubs and present their plan to members, Tuesday, Rotary club was on the books to hear the plan; Wednesday, the men will talk to the Lions; Thursday, to Kiwanis club, and Friday, to American Business Club.

Freezer Locker Plant Stock Sale Pushed

Directors of the Howard County Food cooperative have to complete by August 15 sale of enough common stock to assure construction of a freezer locker plant in Big Spring.

O. Y. Miller, who was employed by the cooperative to solicit memberships, plans to make a final call on prospective members within the next few days.

Big Springers Tangle With Clovis Tonight

AMARILLO, July 29.—Big Spring's league future appeared rosy today, as the Bombers moved on Clovis after their 15 to 1 triumph over the Amarillo Gold Sox last night.

Clovis has a name for being unpredictable, but it is a club that has not been too tough for the Bombers thus far in the season.

Although it will be a month or so before the Big Spring high school fall season is given its official inauguration, Steer Coach Pat Murphy is being beset by player-loss possibilities.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

NEW YORK, July 29—Tip: Connie Mack, who came up with one of the year's prize rookies in third baseman Pete Suder, really will make their eyes pop with the youngster he brings up from the farm in 1942.

Editorial -- A Parable On How Watchfulness Pays

We heard a good parable the other day and can't refrain from passing it on.

It was told by O. P. (Pop) Griffin, Howard county agricultural agent, who usually knows what he is talking about.

"If you had $100 in cash lying out in a field, and for some reason you couldn't bring it to the bank or even take it into the house, what would you do?" he asked.

"Why you'd sit out there all night with a loaded shotgun across your knees, watching that money!"

"And if nobody came along to try to steal the money, you wouldn't feel like your time had been wasted. You'd just say you were lucky and sit out there and watch that money until you were able to move it in."

"Well, a lot of these farmers have just as great a wealth lying out in their fields, and the danger of it being stolen is just as great.

"A cotton crop that is likely to be worth $100 per acre is on many farms. Nothing may bother it. And again something -- most likely boll worms -- may try to steal it. If you watch it close enough and find those leaf worm moths making a raid, that $100 an acre can be saved.

"And if you watch it close and the worms don't come, well, you won't have lost much time and you'll be safe. Thirty minutes every afternoon inspecting the cotton may be worth thousands of dollars to cotton growers, just like 24-hour vigilance with a shotgun would be worth a lot to the man with a pile of greenbacks lying out in the field."

MADE UP TO KILL

by Kelley Roos

Chapter Nine
Tangled Clues

"You a detective? It's ridiculous, Troy," I said.

"Why?"

"Just deciding to be a detective doesn't make you one. I suppose if you picked up a saxophone you could play it."

"I couldn't if I didn't pick it up. Anyway, I can play a sax, I used to before I met you."

"You talk like a detective, and that's something a good detective never does."

"Why are you sore at me?"

"I'm not. I'm just nervous. Poor little Carol and -- well, maybe I'm being self-centered, but Carol and I are roommates, we drink out of the same bathroom glass."

"You know my interest in this isn't purely financial even if it does mean that we can get married if I succeed. I don't want anything to happen to Carol. Or to you either, except momentarily."

"I know, Jeff. I hope you can do something."

"I've done something already."

"What?"

"I had ideas about all this before I talked to Bowers. I -- look, has Carol said anything to you about it?"

"Just that her voice did go, and it did come back and she was calling Tommy Nelson when we came in and found her."

"Yeah, I checked on that. Phoebe says that the phone rang about eight-thirty and that someone asked to speak to Tom Nelson and then, a second later, hung up. She knows it was Carol."

"Well, that fixes that. Now what do you know?"

"Not much. But there are a lot of things I'm going to find out. Like who in hell is this Lee Gray?"

"You have a neat little task there. What else?"

"Why is the great Greeley Morris so bored by this whole business? And why did he know that Lee Gray was a woman?"

"I shook my head. 'I don't think there's anything there. He's bored because that's the kind of a person he is, and he called Lee Gray 'her' because that was the first sex that flashed into his head.'

"He doesn't impress me as ever saying the first thing that flashes into his head. He says the best thing."

"He's a rat."

"I like him."

"All right, you like him. What else?"

"I want to know why Alice McDonald made such a hurried exit last night as soon as she found out that Carol wasn't going to play."

"You mean as soon as she found out that she was going to play Carol's part?"

"My way is more significant. But all right. Another thing, where is Eve North today?"

"I think I know, Jeff."

"If you do you can be my assistant. Where?"

"In her apartment," I said smugly. "I could have told Peterson if we hadn't been in Clint's office when he asked. I couldn't say it in front of Clint. But where would you be if you were Eve North this morning after you had opened your papers and saw that every critic in town had roasted you unmercifully? You'd be locked in your apartment with orders to your maid that you were at home to no one. And that," I said conclusively, "is where Eve North is."

"Where is Eve?"

"Except she isn't."

"Huh?"

"I've been to her place. The Alexandria. It's an apartment hotel. The man at the desk said she was out."

"Of course she'd leave orders that --"

"Wait! I wrote her a note and when the guy put it in her box I could see that there was a telegram there."

"Well, Moinseur Poirot?"

Washington Daybook -- G-Men Learn Much About How Spy Ring Operates

Second of three articles on the spy ring just broken by the F.B.I.

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The four steps of espionage, from inception of a spy ring to its full function as a unit are: (1) the recruiting of agents; (2) the accumulation of information; (3) the dispatch and delivery of that information and (4) the payment of agents.

There are only three other activities of a "fifth column" under any circumstances -- sabotage, propaganda and the closely related activity of preparation for occupation. With these we need not be concerned here. But let's take the points of espionage and see how they fit into the picture presented by the indictment in New York of the "greatest spy ring" in U. S. history.

As far back as 1938, say Hoover, Kennedy, according to the indictment, the recruiting of agents had started for this ring. The methods of "recruiting" are both subtle and brutal. Don't think for a minute that spies are just moved in from outside. That would be crude because they could be easily spotted, and ineffective, because newcomers would not have access to information or the freedom to move about in restricted members of the industry in which they are employed, or the community in which they settle.

Friendship A Factor

The bases of recruiting agents are friendship or at least acquaintance with an individual who has been mixed up in this sort of thing before. According to Hoover, Frederick Joubert Duquesne might have been such a person. Hoover identified him as a "professional spy" who was mixed up in World War espionage.

Persons of known sympathy to a certain cause (but who have not openly indulged in activities against the nation in which they live) also are ripe for approach, especially if they are psychologically and economically adaptable. This includes the foreign-born misfits who move on the fringe of the underworld -- but do not have criminal records.

Then there is blackmail of one form or another, including that particularly vicious one of threatening a person with harm to relatives left behind in their native land.

The State Department's recent tightening of immigration to exclude all emigrants who have close kin still in the war zones shows just how certain the government is that this last method has been or is being used.

Close To Defense Jobs

As for the information accumulated in the present case already in actual and potential illustrations. One of the men indicted was an employe of the firm that manufactures the Norden bombsight. Another worked for the Sperry Gyroscope Co., which turns out a number of vital defense instruments. A third was a tool and die maker. Another worked for a Bendix, N. J., aviation instrument firm. One had contact with an Akron, Ohio, steel products company, handling big defense contracts. Yet another was a former executive abroad of Ford Motor Co., one of the great assembly line manufacturing companies. Others were pier and dock workers, skilled in a knowledge of cargo loadings. There was one who was a shipping clerk, with access to sailing schedules.

So what? You can be certain that there was enough tangible evidence that our defense production secrets (including defense bombsight), production schedules, new machine tools and assembly line methods; shipping dates, routes and cargoes, were being filched for a grand jury to return indictments. So you can be sure, too, that enough of the evidence was provable to make nearly one fourth of those arrested in the ring plead guilty.

Texarkana Arms Plant To Cost $35,000,000

AKRON, O., July 28 (AP)—The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., through a newly-organized defense subsidiary, will operate a $35,000,000 ordnance plant on a 24,300-acre tract near Texarkana, Tex.

President John L. Collyer of Goodrich announced today that 8,000 construction workers would start building the plant immediately. The Goodrich subsidiary, the Lone Star Defense Corp., will draw on Goodrich personnel to supervise operations.

The giant plant will load bombs and shells, Collyer said. Construction contracts have been awarded Winston Bros. Co. of Minneapolis, C. F. Haglin Sons Co. of Minneapolis, the Missouri Valley Bridge and Iron Works of Leavenworth, Kan., and the Sollitt Construction Co. of South Bend, Ind.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds -- Filling Station With Personality Passes From Hollywood Scene

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—A gracious note has passed from the local commerce scene, perhaps never to return. The world moves on, tempo fugit, and John Miljan likes the movies.

There are filling stations, as you know, and filling stations. This was something extra-special in the line, out there on Sunset near the ocean. It wasn't the physical trappings of the place, which are still there, and it wasn't so much the smiling service idea ("Massage while you wait, sir") which is pretty common everywhere. It was just that this station believed in that little personal touch which (I think I'm quoting somebody's ad) means so much.

John Miljan, working in the movies again on "An Obliging Young Lady," was a little sad about it. He reminisced:

"We had a great following out there. Nine men to service the cars, and whenever I could I'd go out and stick around to say 'hello.' The picture people in the neighborhood knew it was one station where they could always talk pictures. We used to sell gas regularly to Joan Crawford, Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, most of the people around that way...."

"And the dog food department. Bill Wellman was always running out, so we stocked up, and pretty soon a lot of folks were depending on us to feed their dogs and cats. We carried birdseed, too...."

"And then there was the pet exchange. That just happened. One day a lady brought in a hurt squirrel that had fallen from a tree. She had it in a box and had fed it, and didn't know what to do with it so we took it in. I've still got that one, at home. But the other animals were just swapped around. One time we had a burro—Jack Holt took it—and a dog, a fox, a pheasant, chickens and ducks all at once.

"Somehow or other we got to be a sort of bureau of general information. When people wanted something and couldn't find it, they'd call. There was one man who wanted a flagpole, and he phoned in: 'I've got to find a flagpole, and I've looked all over town, he said. So we asked what kind he wanted, steel or wood, and we found it for him.

"Another customer called up and said he was having trouble locating something he needed, at his price, and could we help? What was it? 'Alfalfa,' he said. Alfalfa, at a gas station servicing horseless carriages! But we found it for him."

"This sort of thing just couldn't last, of course. Miljan's partner heard the call of the Marines, and the actor, with movie work picking up, answered that call. A commercial chain has the old trading post and gossip center now, and you can't get dog food or birdseed or flagpoles or alfalfa there any more -- just gas and oil and the usual things. If Jack Holt drove up and asked the smiling-service lads if they had any burros around today, the smiles would probably freeze -- politely, of course.

You can't blame Miljan for being a little sad. I am, too.

Man About Manhattan -- Building A Better Tango Wins This Man Start To Fortune

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—To a good many citizens hereabouts, the most important purveyor of South American rhythms in this section is Adolfo Roquellas, known more familiarly to the public as Pancho. Pancho, who seemed for awhile to have been born almost 15 years too soon, rattled his maracas virtually unheeded through the latter years of Prohibition (they were playing jazz then and singing "I'm looking at the world through rose-colored glasses" -- remember?) and on through the latter years of the Thirties until, eventually, national thought and the South American way finally pulled abreast of him.

He never played Latin music exclusively, and for this reason he was always able—even if behind a polite grimace—to oblige with a little of "Button Up Your Overcoat" when he would rather have been playing something rhythmic and swivel-hipped about a sloe-eyed Peruvian bella.

I suppose you can get an argument when you claim anything in first, but if any other maestro on the current scene has had more to do with the slow but steady wave of Latin appreciation, in popular music in this country, I would like to know his name.

Pancho is thin and slight with features that even might be called delicate. He was kicked bodily out of his house in Buenos Aires by an irate father who could not share his heir's enthusiasm for life in the dance casinos of Los Estados Unidos.

There are those who claim that you can do all right by yourself if you can build a better mousetrap, and in a sense, this is of a mind, his fiddle is active. He plays "Liebestraum" more satisfactorily to me than any other orchestra. When Veloz and Yolanda gave their great dance concert at Carnegie Hall, it was Pancho who played.

Staggering under this hail of folding money, Pancho hurried to New York and organized his own orchestra and soon thereafter was encoined in the Embassy club, famed during Prohibition, and for a while later, as a place where people loved to spend money.

That was a long time ago, and Pancho made the days hum by ripping off scores of rhumbas, waltzes, tangos and other rhythmic lullabies. When his is of a mind, his fiddle is active. He plays "Liebestraum" more satisfactorily to me than any other orchestra. When Veloz and Yolanda gave their great dance concert at Carnegie Hall, it was Pancho who played.

This, in part, is why I say "Pancho" to people who ask for a preference in South American music, and it is the reason, too, on warm summer nights, that I sometimes ride out to Ben Marden's Riviera, where Pancho is playing through the summer, and sit through an evening of his rhythms.

he was too docile for that, but it was a kind of ill-concealed disdain. The man mumbled said gruffly, "You understand that?"

Nick shifted his feet to the radiator and tilted back his chair. With his pipe between his teeth he looked hard at the men. "No one in and no one out."

I felt Peterson's eyes following us as we walked across the stage. Jeff was encoined in our dressing room, lounging contentedly in one chair, his feet stretched out on another. He looked lazy and ineffectual and very, very comforting.

I hung my coat on a hook and stuck my limp hat over it. "Jeff, have you see her? Eve, I mean?"

"She hasn't come in yet."

"Then you don't know anything more?"

He looked at me with indignation. "Plenty more. We've discovered some very interesting facts about the mysterious Miss Lee Gray."

Carol's eyes jumped to his face and she watched him breathlessly. "Do you know who she is?"

Much Feed May Go Into Trench Silos

One of the best feed crops in several years will be harvested in Howard county this year, giving rise to considerable discussion among farmers of the trench silo method of storing feed.

Trench silos have become increasingly popular in West Texas during the past three or four years, and it is expected that more will be filled this year than ever before.

Experience of farmers and ranchers has been that the silos represent the most practical way of storing feed yet found. Silage is a good substitute for green pasture, none of the feed is lost, and it may be kept indefinitely. Cost of constructing a trench silo is seldom more than the labor required.

Although use of trench silos has been generally successful and popular in this section, some mistakes have been made and bad luck has followed. Of these, the most common has been in the slant given side walls. Experts advise that the walls should slope rapidly from top to bottom.

Thus the silage will form a wedge shape mass and if it settles unduly, will merely pack itself tightly into the bottom of the trench. When side walls are too straight up and down, the silage fails to settle in wedge fashion and often cracks open, exposing much of the silage to air and causing spoilage.

Just the other day we were wondering what had become of Thompson R. Richardson, who was engineer in charge for the National Parks Service when Scenic Mountain was improved by CCC boys. Yesterday Mrs. Ray Lawrence had a card from Mrs. Richardson saying that Thompson had succumbed suddenly to an heart attack on March 10 in Vincennes, Ind., where he was engaged as resident engineer by the war department on the Vevort levee project. He was buried at Denison, Tex., where Mrs. Richardson is staying now at 1015 W. Gandy street.

Fifty per cent of all the persons killed in bicycle accidents are children between the ages of five and 14, Paul W. Kearney, noted safety expert says in an article in the current issue of the Rotarian magazine. Over 1,000 youngsters have been killed and $1,000 injured in the past three years in such accidents. It's not always the child's fault, he observes, and suggests that cities give a closer study of the problem from an education, enforcement and engineering standpoint.

A meeting of farmers on the big draw which runs near R-Bar has been re-set for 8:30 p. m. Thursday at the R-Bar school.

The session, planned for last week, was rained out just as farmers were gathering to talk over the possibility of a concerted soil conservation service.

The party is being convoked at the suggestion of J. A. Bishop and others who were named as a committee to contact farmers in that region for conservation applications. Small units on the watershed have been developed in cooperation with the SCS and it is planned to devise some means whereby the entire area can be worked as a joint conservation effort.

Markets At A Glance

NEW YORK, July 26 (AP)—The stock market was beset with profit cashing troubles today and, while an assortment of favorites overrode barriers, many leaders stumbled into losing territory.

The list tilted forward at the start but was forced to call a halt when offerings began to appear. From then on the direction was cloudy and irregular trends prevailed at the close.

Frequent fast periods were interspersed with slowdowns but transfers for the full proceedings were in the neighborhood of 1,000,000 shares.

Drilling May Continue On Wild Air Well

Decision on whether to resume drilling operations on the wildest oil test, Wilbanks Bros., at No. 1 Cor. Hoyt Brown, six miles west of Colorado City, remained to be made Tuesday after the rampaging well had been brought under control.

Heaviest portion of the air flow, which spouted a column of dust and then salt water for four days, ceased Sunday at 2 a. m. Monday H. L. Patton, Houston wild well expert, shut off the remaining air with rotary mud.

With all air now shut off, there was a possibility that drilling could be resumed. Contract depth on the test is 3,000 feet.

Operators said that the heavy air flow stopped suddenly Sunday morning after rumblings. The dry air which had flown for several months continued from between 10 and 12 inch strings.

Curiously, there remained practically no water in the hole and Patton had little trouble in pumping in mud after connecting the strings by a hood. As mud was forced back around the strings, the smaller air flow was stopped.

Anti-Intervention Bloc Plans Strategy

Death Breaks Pact Between Mother And Local Man

Death has broken a pact of 30 years standing.

W. L. McCollister has returned from Dallas where he was called due to illness and death of his mother, Mrs. T. M. McCollister, 75, on July 22.

For 30 years he and his mother had faithfully exchanged letters once a week, and he always carried her latest letter in his shirt pocket next to his heart. In those 30 years they never missed exchanging letters each week unless they were together.

She died in a Dallas hospital following an illness of two weeks. She and her husband had retired from a grocery business several months ago and she was apparently in the best of health. Mrs. McCollister was buried in Restland cemetery at Dallas. Besides W. L. McCollister, other survivors were the husband, and two other sons, John C. and Ira L. McCollister, Dallas.
