A phobia is an irrational fear of something. The dictionary lists many phobias that people suffer from, including "taphophobia" (fear of being buried alive) to "pedophobia" (a fear of children), but there is no listing for my phobia, which is a fear of flying!

The closest words I could find to describe my fear were "aerophobia" (fear of air), "acrophobia" (fear of heights), "kinesophobia" (fear of movement) or "autophobia" (fear of aloneness), but none of these really describes fear of flying. I am not afraid of any one of these things; it's just when they're combined into one situation that I panic.

We flew to Houston this weekend for the Texas Press Convention, and I managed to get on the plane in Amarillo with a minimum of fuss, thanks to some motion sickness pills, and because I was so weak from being sick for two days worrying about the flight.

However, it was on the return from Houston that my real mettle was tested. As my nephew Mike Haynes was driving Lisa and me to the airport, a radio announcer said that a tornado warning was being issued for the area close to the Hobby airport. A tornado had been spotted five miles from the air terminal.

Now, I get sick at the idea of getting on a plane, but getting on a plane when there are tornadoes dancing around the area is absolutely crazy.

However, I wanted to come home so badly, that I clambered on the airplane with 100 other crazy people and we headed toward Dallas and Amarillo. The flight was a little bumpy. Lisa pretended that she was sleeping so she couldn't see me if I threw up!

However, we made it home, we didn't crash and burn on the airplane, we didn't get murdered in Houston, and I didn't have hysterics and make a fool of myself on the airplane, so it was a successful trip.

It just dawned on me that the reason there is no word which means an "irrational fear" of flying is--because a fear of flying is perfectly, totally rational, and that anyone in his right mind should be afraid to fly!

One of the highlights of the convention at Houston was the final dinner where Governor Bill Clements was the guest speaker, and Earl Campbell was honored as "Texan of the Year." Clements was not too well received by the editors and reporters gathered for the convention. It seemed to me that the standing ovation he got when he came on the platform was given rather grudgingly, and several times in his speech, he had to stop and say "Did you understand that?" so that he could get some applause.

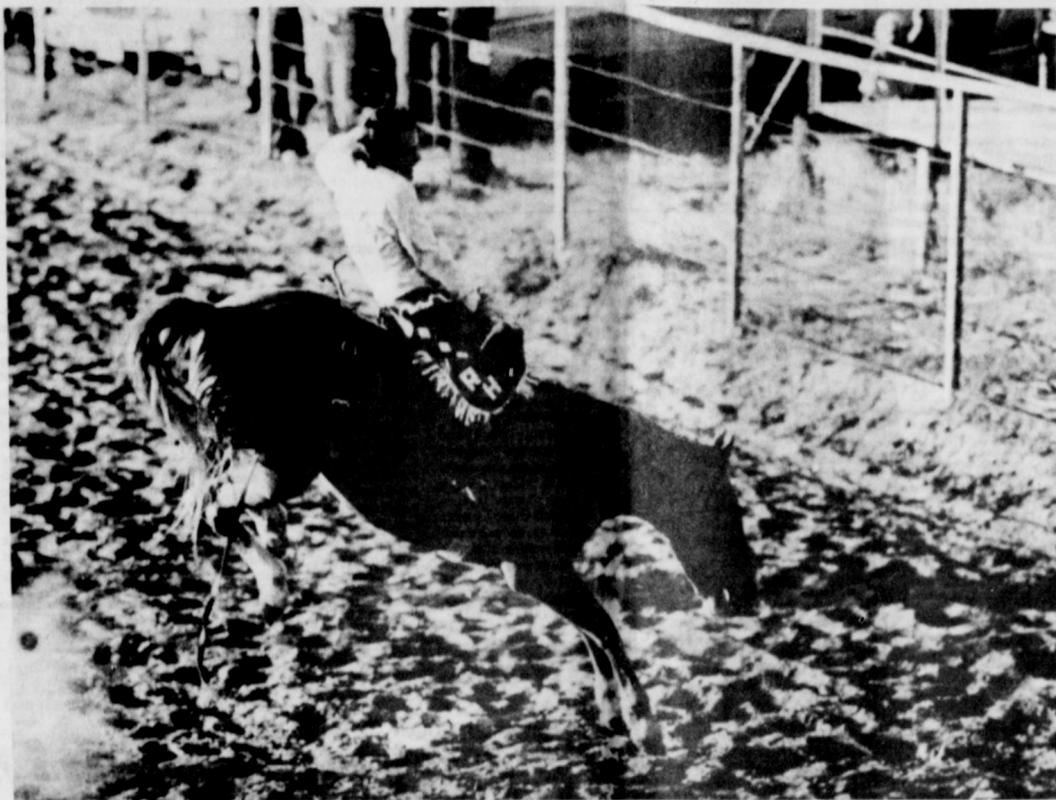

But you should have seen that crowd react when Earl Campbell was presented the award. He, too, got a standing ovation, but it was very spontaneous "jumping up" of everyone in the room. Campbell spoke to the crowd and was

Rodeo Is Big Success

Dry weather, advance promotion, and good planning helped insure a successful rodeo weekend for McLean last weekend during the annual performances of the 66 Rodeo and Roundup.

Rodeo activities began Friday afternoon with a cutting horse contest in the Felton Webb arena. Winner of the contest was Steve Brass of the Brass RO Ranch, second was Frank Bridwell, and third was Butch Turpen. Judge for that contest was Keith Slover of Paducah.

A ranch horse race Saturday afternoon featured 10 riders, with Cindy Sherrod, riding her own horse, winning the race. Second place went to Raymon Bencoma riding for the Brass RO ranch, and third place went to Jarrell Russell, riding his own horse. Other contestants were John Stokes, John Mangum, Delinda Howard (riding a Barlow horse), Kenny Hodges (riding a horse belonging to Jake Hess), Carl Henley, Dale Steel, and David Crockett. Picking judges were Bob Sherrod, Carrol Tolleson, Joe Magee, Jake Hess II, and starting judges were Thacker Haynes and David Tolleson. Starter was Cecil Gillispie.

At the rodeo performances, 260 contestants participated in the various events. Winners in the bareback competition were Ernie Messer, first place; B.J. Symons, second; and Randy Kohen, third.

Winning calf-ropers were Terry Phillips, first with a time of 8.78; Toy Clements, second with a time of 9.70; and Eddie Mardis, third with a time of 10.03.

In saddle bronc riding, John Craine won first with a score of 61 and Mike Esquibel and Ben Rongers tied for second with scores of 53.

In barrel racing competition, Kelly Kyle was first with a time of 17.21; Rickie Sue Lynch was second with 17.53; and Paula Rule was third with 17.58.

In bull riding, Richard Osborne was first with a score of 72; Tom Stout was second with a score of 62; and Danny Wagoner was third with a score of 60.

In the junior steer riding, Tres Hess won the prize money.

Winning team ropers were Jim South and Frank Bridwell, first place; Jim South and Charlie Walsler, second; and Frank Bridwell and Cliff Bradstreet, third.

Roping Club president Jake Hess said that the success of the Rodeo was due to the hard work of members of the Lions Club and the Roping Club and that he wanted to thank all the men who worked behind the chutes and helped in other ways at the rodeo.

Bureau Needs Census Takers

Census takers are urgently needed in this county to assist in completing follow-up operations for the 1980 Census.

Bill Soule, district office manager for the Census Bureau in this area, says that work is available immediately for all interested persons who qualify for the positions. Pay for the census takers averages $4.00 per hour and reimbursement for use of a personal car on the job. Census takers work a 40-hour week, including some evenings and Saturdays.

With school out, Soule says he is hoping school teachers, high school graduates and college students, along with others interested in temporary work, will begin to apply for these essential positions. Anyone over the age of 18 is eligible to be a census taker. Applicants must pass a written test on such basic skills as ability to follow printed instructions, do simple arithmetic and read maps.

To obtain more information and to arrange to take the qualifying test for a census job, interested applicants should call the District Census Office for this area as soon as possible. Calls may be made collect to (806) 335-1656 between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. on weekdays.

McLean News Wins State Community Service Award

The McLean News received a plaque as the second place winner in the Texas Press Association community service contest at the state TPA convention in Houston last weekend. The plaque was presented to publisher Linda Haynes at the annual TPA awards breakfast Saturday morning in the Emerald Room of the Shamrock Hilton Hotel. Weekly newspapers of all sizes, a total of 42 newspapers, entered the community service competition.

The winner of the weekly division was the Kingsville Record News. Third place went to Diboll Free Press and Honorable Mention went to the Ganado Tribune.

The McLean News entry was the special historical edition which the staff of The News prepared in June of 1979 to commemorate McLean's 70th birthday. The News was commended for "good research, news, editorials."

In the other contests at the state level, The McLean News competed in Division VI (for papers of 1,800 circulation or less). Thirty-four newspapers entered the Division VI category, with The Grapevine Sun winning the General Excellence Award and first place in appearance, column writing, news features, news photos, news writing, and sports coverage. Senator Ted Kennedy of Massachusetts received 25 percent or 38 delegates to Carter's 104. Ten delegates will attend August 11-13 national convention in New York City as uncommitted delegates.

The Democratic delegates heard speeches by former Texas Attorney General John Hill, former Senator Ralph Yarborough, and unsuccessful Railroad Commission candidate Jim Hightower.

Dallas, Ed Ball of Galveston, U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland of Houston; Juan Malonado of San Juan; Sylvia Rodriguez of San Antonio; Sue Pate of Beaumont; and Billie Carr of Houston. Four of the members are Carter supporters, and three Kennedy backers.

Accompanying the two McLean delegates to the convention was Thomas' wife Tina. The group returned to McLean Sunday night.

OPINIONS

VIEWS ARE WRITTEN BY LINDA HAYNES, UNLESS OTHERWISE NOTED - IF YOU HAVE AN OPINION ON ANY CURRENT SUBJECT WE WELCOME YOUR SIGNED LETTERS.

Congratulations, McLean!

McLean can work together and accomplish some good things! Despite our reputation as a town that "can't get along", the citizens of McLean sometimes pull together and promote some outstanding projects.

The McLean Rodeo, horse race, cutting horse contest, and parade is a good example of what can be done when several people offer to volunteer their time and work together.

The leaders of the various sponsoring organizations were certainly responsible for getting the project going, but it took many, many people to make the rodeo a success.

The rest of us should give a big thank you to those who worked so hard, and earned our town some good publicity and helped provide some good, wholesome entertainment for many people.

A BIG THANK YOU TO THE PEOPLE WHO: sold tickets at the gates, worked behind the chutes in the arena, cared for the stock, worked in the concession stand, cleaned the rodeo area, organized the parade, rode in the parade, organized the cutting horse contest, organized the horse race, worked as judges, timers, bookkeepers; kept up with all the entries and took all the money; supervised the parking spaces; made sandwiches for the concession stand; announced at the rodeo; gave the invocation each night; decorated their businesses for the rodeo. And a special thank you should go to each and every member of the Roping Club which assumes the big responsibility of getting the rodeo organized in the first place.

CONGRATULATIONS ON A JOB WELL DONE!

President Submits Gasoline Ration Plan

The President today submitted to Congress a standby plan to ration gasoline that would enable drivers of the nation's 153 million motor vehicles to deal with a petroleum supply emergency, if one should occur.

The plan, submitted today at the request of Congress, is a standby plan only to be implemented in the event of a supply emergency, and there is no intention to implement such a plan at this time.

The Emergency Energy Conservation Act (EECA), passed by Congress in November 1979, requires that a gasoline rationing plan be developed and held in readiness. It stipulates that the plan could only be implemented if a 20 percent shortfall in petroleum supplies exists or is likely to exist for at least 30 days, unless the President seeks a waiver of such restrictions.

The plan presented by the Administration today conforms to guidelines established by Congress in EECA for determining the amount of gasoline allocated to the States and to various categories of gasoline consumers. The plan provides for a nationwide distribution system based on motor vehicle registrations. Vehicle registrations, rather than drivers licenses, were chosen as the basis for this system because they provide a more accurate and current reflection of gasoline consumption.

Under the plan, ration checks would be mailed to each motor vehicle registrant every three months. Vehicle owners would in turn exchange the checks for ration coupons at banks and other coupon distribution points, and present the coupons when gasoline is purchased. Persons desiring additional coupons could buy them from those who do not use all their allotment.

State Ration Reserves would be established to provide supplemental coupons to meet hardship cases within each State. Additional coupons would be provided for businesses and priority users, such as emergency services, public transportation, Department of Defense and agriculture.

Congress will have 30 days to review the plan. Unless Congress disapproves it by a joint resolution, the plan will be considered approved and remain in standby status until needed.

Approximately 12-15 months of pre-implementation work will be required so that coupon distribution can take place if necessary. Once this work is completed, a rationing plan can be put into operation at any time that the President determines a severe energy emergency exists under the terms of the EECA, and his decision to implement rationing is not disapproved by both Houses of Congress. From that point, it would take about 90 days before rationing would actually begin.

The 153 million motor vehicles operating currently in the United States is more than four times the number of vehicles in use during World War II when the United States last imposed gasoline rationing.

interrupted several times by applause.

Earl Campbell is a nice man, a fantastic hero, an outstanding athlete, but I thought it was just a little strange that the governor of Texas was sitting there while Texas of the Year went to a football player. It was also a little embarrassing when the speaker asked Campbell (but not the governor) to stay after the banquet for pictures!

When the meeting ended, Clements just sort of strolled away as the crowds gathered around the football player.

Now, I have never liked Bill Clements (and still don't) and I am a rabid fan of Earl Campbell, but I felt that our behavior might have been insulting to the governor.

It's also an interesting comment on our values when we give more honor to an athlete than we do to the elected leader of our state.

At any rate, I had the nerve to ask Earl Campbell for an autograph (for my little girl, of course), but I didn't ask Clements for his.

My husband was attending the state Democratic convention at San Antonio while I was in Houston, and we had fun comparing notes on the telephone each night about the speakers at the various places.

Republican Senator John Tower and Republican Governor Bill Clements spoke at our convention, and Tower particularly had some nasty cracks to make about President Carter.

The man who lost the governorship to Clements, Democrat John Hill spoke at the Democratic convention, and Sam said that he kept referring to Clements as "the temporary governor of Texas"!

After seeing Tower and Clements in person, though, I have arrived at an important conclusion: to succeed as a Republican on a state level in Texas a man must not be more than 5 feet, 6 inches in height! (Notice I said state level, Judge Kennedy, not county level!)

This was the first time in almost 20 years that I had to miss the annual rodeo in McLean. I understand it was a roaring success with good crowds for each performance and good weather for all the events.

If you have ever worked on the rodeo, you know how much hard work is done by a few people to make everything happen. I think the whole town owes a big thank you to Jake Hess II, president of the Roping Club; Gwen Henley, secretary of the Roping Club (who probably has the hardest, most irritating job!); Thacker Haynes, president of the Lions Club; Dale Glass, in charge of the concession stand; Johnnie Rex McClellan, in charge of the cutting horse contest; and George Terry, who was in charge of the parade. These are just a few of the people who devoted many, many hours to making the rodeo weekend a big success.

I would also like to thank JoAnn Durham, Joy Rhine, and Sally Haynes who spent many hours taking pictures of each of the rodeo events so that we could have them for the paper this week. I appreciate their hard work, and I think you can see from the pictures that they did a good job.

Tigers Win One, Lose Three

The McLean Tigers Babe Ruth baseball team completed four more games of their schedule since the last report to this paper.

A game played June 9th in McLean resulted in a score of 19 to 6 in favor of the Lefors team. McLean collected only three hits in the game, while the visitors were banging out 9.

Allison and West handled the pitching chores for the winners while Robert Swanner hurled for the Tigers. Twelve errors contributed to the local's downfall.

Tiger fortunes did not improve as they visited the Wheeler team June 13 and they fell to their hosts to the tune of 13 to 2. Wheeler collected only four hits, but errors and bases on balls gave them ample opportunities to score. Andy Eck was the hitting star for the Tigers as he collected a home run and a single in four times at bat.

A double-header played at Lefors June 20th resulted in a split of the games, as the Pirates won the first game 10 to 9, with each team getting only three hits. The Tigers salvaged the second game by the score of 15 to 4 as they got 8 hits to balance 6 errors. The Pirates made only three errors, but bases on balls by Pirate pitchers kept them in hot water the entire game. Seven Tigers hit safely in the contest although none had more than the one hit.

Smith was knocked unconscious in the incident and suffered head lacerations. He was transported to the McLean Hospital where he was treated and released.

Winners in the Rodeo parade last Saturday were the McLean High School band in division I, and the Brass RO Ranch in division II. Other winners in the parade were not available at press time. The winner of the window decorating contest was The Pot Pourri Gift Shop.

The heart of an energy efficient home. . . is the way people feel who live in it.

Some of the new homes built today will save more energy than others. Energy efficient homes (EEH) are built with tested and proven energy saving products and modern construction techniques.

Look for the Energy Efficient Home sign.

Energy Efficient Homes are different because each has extra insulation added throughout the walls, floor, and attic. They are built as structurally tight as possible to minimize air infiltration and leakage while maximizing energy savings.

Consider installing the energy saving heat pump for heating and cooling the home. The heat pump operates efficiently by delivering more heat in winter than energy used to produce it.

People who live in Energy Efficient Homes save a lot to be happy about. It's good to know there are some things you can depend on.

Tennis Elbow Is A Hazard

The weekend wonder who only plays occasionally and places an abnormal strain on muscles is a good candidate for tennis elbow although many activities that involve repeated, forceful gripping may cause it. These activities, ranging from repeated handshaking to assembly line work, make tennis elbow fairly common. In fact, studies estimate that only 5 percent of all tennis elbow victims actually play golf or tennis, although possibly as many as half of all tennis players suffer the problem sometime. Having forearm muscles in good shape is one of the best ways to prevent tennis elbow. Proper sports playing techniques also help keep forearm muscles from being strained too much.

Heat Stroke Is Major Risk

Heat stroke is a major risk to a child in a car, the Texas Medical Association says, although anything from fire to kidnapping can occur. Children never should be left in a car when an adult is running even a very short errand because the adult could be delayed long enough for problems to occur. One study showed that temperature inside a car rose to about 110 degrees Fahrenheit after only 15 minutes in the sun. The temperature outside was 83 degrees and the car windows were open about two inches. The temperature rose above 100 degrees with the front windows rolled halfway down, the study in a 1976 issue of Pediatrics magazine showed.

Gone Fishin

by Jeanette Fish

"What's for lunch?"—was once an important question. Women used to fry chicken, potatoes, MAKE GRAVY and take them to the plowman. This practice came to a screeching halt as more and more women left home to go to work. "Brown Bagging" became the new breed for noon eating. A new breed was born, one who said, "I married you better and worse buster, but not for lunch!"

Packing an interesting lunch is a talent akin to oil painting a bowl of apples. I got an early start, packing boring lunches to take to the cotton patch. Quiche Lorraine and Escargot taste about the same as a bologna sandwich when cotton and sand are being picked.

My husband worked at the Carbon Black plant in Lefors for ten years. I used to throw open a can of tuna, green beans, dump them in a bowl and throw in a fork. Out of a group of eight men with whom he worked, he said that his was consistently the worst lunch. He didn't say boring. He said worst. (A fork counts for something)

I used to drive from Lefors to Pampa to visit my mother (a nurse) about three times a week. For our lunch, she would hurl last night's leftovers into a big pot, add pork and beans, left over beets, carrots, (once a half bowl of jello)—cook, stir, and laughingly say—"Double, double, toil and trouble." There was usually quite a lot of this dish, left. On the third day she added two pounds of macaroni. On day four, mama said, "Well, I'll just take this up to Worley Hospital. Those girls will eat anything." Nurses have a rule for eating. If it is not coughing or wheezing, they eat it.

You could form a fairly accurate character assessment of someone, according to the kind of lunch they have. Other peoples lunches are like other peoples refrigerators—theirs is more interesting than yours.

In the 60's, several of us who had mundane jobs at Travelers Insurance in Los Angeles, actually stayed there months longer than we intended to because of this one lady who brought interesting lunches. She looked like she had stepped out of the 1940's with a page boy hairdo, rimless glasses, high heeled springloaders and long dresses.

We used to RUN to the concession truck, parked in the company lot, six floors down, to buy old sandwiches and warm cartons of milk, after which, we raced back to the fifth floor lunchroom, elbowing each other all the way, in a fight to the death to get a seat close to this lady, on account of her lunch.

She had a neat plaid lunch box which she opened with a tiny gold key. Inside was a matching plaid thermos, three little casseroles with glass lids—a main dish, salad and desert. Her thermos was filled with clear tea and tiny same shaped ice cubes. A slow eater, she caused us to be late to our desks day after day, resulting in desk pounding lectures from our supervisor, who was into her eighth year of menopause, with no relief in sight.

Inspired by the interesting lunch lady, we brought thermoses filled with tea. Our cubes melted and our tea was leafy. She was absent from work for one week with the flu. Devastated, we said, "Why her? Why not our supervisor?" She was eventually fired for being dull witted. (Lunch lady, not the supervisor) I quit shortly thereafter.

Years go by. Lunch goes on. Hundreds of people in McLean eat fascinating lunches. McLean Hospital is not in this group. We have a daily contest to see who brought the most interesting lunch. The front office girls are not even in the running. They send out for hamburgers and french fries. Their lunchroom smells marvelous but bought lunches do not count.

In our group, Virginia Dalton won the prize two days in a row with cured ham sandwiches, cobbler and homemade cake. The third day, she bought a hamburger, a boring lunch! Bertha Jones has not had an interesting lunch for two weeks and as far as I know Maggie Johnston has brought a cheese sandwich (same one?) for two years. I eat cold cereal. There is hope. Betty Skipper brought such an interesting lunch last week that I ate half of it.

When a man hasn't a good reason for doing a thing, he has a good reason for letting it alone.

Sir Walter Scott

this past week were son Johnny and grandson Kelly Vineyard of Lubbock. Over the weekend visitors were grandson Billy Vineyard and Carolyn Mether and brother Willis all of Glen Rose. They also visited their other two grandmothers in Amarillo and Bovina.

Coming Saturday from Houston were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harrison and family to spend some time here with Polly Harrison, his mother, and sisters Faye and Nancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Mays of Panhandle visited the W.H. Davis' over the week. Rossie Davis, who has been with his grandparents all week, returned home with them.

A trailer was moved in on the spot that the Bill Campbells' occupied for Mrs. Harper, our present teacher.

A representative from T.A.N.E. was supposed to have been at the First Baptist Church last Sunday, but he didn't show. We learned Monday that he had suffered a heart attack before he could leave his home in Dallas. We regret his indisposition, as we feel the work of these men is very necessary in today's drug and alcohol's wide-spread influence.

The R.L. Leeders had daughter Sharon and family of Clarendon visiting during the weekend.

The most delicious food in the summertime is a crisp, raw vegetable dish. A favorite around our house is sliced tomatoes, slices of unpeeled cucumbers, and sliced Bermuda onions covered by vinegar and oil. This concoction can be stored in a covered dish in the refrigerator and used for days.

I experimented last week with some raw vegetables and came up with a variation of that dish which I really liked. Try it.

MIXED VEGETABLES
1 cup raw broccoli, thinly sliced through flower and stem
1 cup raw cauliflower, divided into flowerets and then sliced through flower and stem
1/2 cup thinly sliced onion
Bottled Italian dressing
Slice all vegetables as described. Be sure all produce is very fresh. Combine vegetables salt with seasoned salt, and then pepper lightly. Place in large mason jar. Cover with bottled dressing. Adjust lid and store covered in refrigerator at least overnight before eating. Will keep for several days in the refrigerator.

Here is another dish that makes good summer eating, but is fancy enough for company.

CHEESE AND RICE CASEROLE
1/4 cup margarine
1 cup chopped onion
4 cups freshly cooked white rice
2 cups sour cream
1 cup cream-style cottage cheese
1 large bay leaf, crumbled
1/2 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
3 cans (4 oz. size) green chiles, drained and halved lengthwise, leaving seeds

2 cups grated sharp cheddar cheese
Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Lightly grease a two quart baking dish.
Saute onion in hot butter in large skillet. Cook until onion is golden. Remove from heat. Stir in hot rice, sour cream, cottage cheese, bay leaf, salt, and pepper; toss lightly to mix well. Layer half the rice mixture in bottom of baking dish; top with half of chiles; sprinkle with half of cheese. Repeat.
Bake uncovered 25 minutes or until bubbly.

Idealism increases in direct proportion to one's distance from the problem.

FDIC
American National Bank in McLean

Loose Marbles
by Lisa Patman

Sometimes I think we have become a nation of sheep. It all started with the line at the bank, progressed to the line at the supermarket, and continued to the ticket stand at the movie. We even stand in line waiting to get onto rides at amusement parks, therefore lining up to have fun, an action which to me proves beyond a doubt that we're all nuts.

Talk about conditioned response-Pavlov would have been thrilled to see how his theory has been proved. In an airport waiting room last weekend I watched as a flock of people, upon hearing a piped-in voice announce that their flight would leave in an hour, get up and, en masse, mosey over to the approximate boarding area in order to stand in line for an hour so they could all be herded into an airplane. It was as if they were afraid some stewardess would come out and mark their shoes with a piece of chalk to indicate when they had been ready to enter, and those without chalk marks would be left behind. A similar situation occurred when this same flock of people, having travelled a thousand miles in the aforementioned plane, hopped up at the sound of the piped-in voice of a stewardess and waited in the plane aisle for fifteen uncomfortable minutes and waited before the door was opened so they could disembark and actually sat in their seats, perhaps reading magazines, looking at the world through airplane windows, or some other more interesting activity like chewing pieces of gum to untop their ears.

While I hate all this "let's hurry up and stand in line, who cares what it's for". I often find myself responding with the same type of conditioning that Pavlov's pups perpetrated.

The other day I found myself lining up to follow the rest of the herd, receiving my feed ration from some people-herders who prodded me to other feeding stations until at last I found myself herded to a table where I discovered, much to my nausea, a plateful of gray food, none of which was distinguishable as anything I had ever eaten or would care to eat in the future.

I thought that was surely the last time I would fall for the "head 'em up, move 'em out" trick, but alas, I was faced with another line in order to catch a return plane home, where I found myself in line to pick up a sack of burgers which I took home, passed out to the family and then, you guessed it, lined up with them on the couch to watch television. All I needed was for something to go wrong with a tube in the set, reducing the picture to a single horizontal line. I think they would have had to get the strait jacket for me.

At times I have, when driven to a state verging on uncontrollable frenzy, relieved my frustration by bursting into song in a room crowded with staid and stuffy snobs, or singing and dancing familiar television commercials whenever I felt penned in by particularly boring situations. In the case of "line fever" I have long felt it important for all of us sheep to realize what we were letting ourselves become. Equally important is finding a way to rebel against this pathetic situation.

After much searching I arrived at what I considered a stunning attention-grabber. Stealthily I crept into a line waiting for the next air flight. Carefully I began wending my way through the crowd, loudly bleating "Baaaaah, Baaaaah, Baaaaah", trying my best to keep a perfectly straight face.

I should have known the reaction I would get. No one paid a bit of attention to what I was doing; they were all too intent on being sure they got chalk on their shoes.

THAT "BEAUTY IS IN THE EYE OF THE BEHOLDER" is something everyone accepts by now. What people in another part of the world consider "beautiful" is something we might consider quite ugly.

A rather extreme example of this is called "cicatization." It is a form of scar tattooing, and is still practiced by many primitive peoples. The skin is cut again and again in the same place so that when it finally heals, a raised scar remains. Tribesmen in Australia consider these scars very ornamental.

And among certain African tribes, cicatization is done on boys. Wood ashes are rubbed in the wounds on the face and body. This causes them to swell, and when they heal there is a purple color there. A man with a purple scar is considered far more attractive to the women than a man with just plain scars!
