The McLean News

Serving McLean and the Area Since 1903

VOLUME 77 McLEAN, GRAY COUNTY, TEXAS THURSDAY, APRIL 24, 1980 PRICE 20¢ NUMBER 17

When I sat down to think about this column for this edition, I found that I had only one thing on my mind, and try as hard as I could, I could think of nothing else to write about. I have quit smoking! After 23 years of being a one to two pack-a-day smoker, I have given up the smelly habit, and I am not screaming at my family or climbing the walls of the News office!

One of my friends told me that I had obviously quite at the right "time of the moon," and that could sure be correct. Whatever the reason for my lack of difficulty, I am grateful. I have rediscovered some of the joys of being a non-smoker. For a woman, I think the most exciting thing is to finally smell feminine, after years of smelling like one of the boys (though like most smokers, I certainly was not aware of the tobacco perfume I exuded most of the time).

My husband also tells me he is sleeping better now that I am not keeping him awake half the night with my cough.

I guess the main reason that I am writing about my fight with nicotine is that if I tell you that I have quit, then I'll be too embarrassed to go back to smoking.

Wish me luck!

Edwin Nall, a former school teacher who is now the owner of the Rogue Theater in Wheeler and a theater in Follett and one in Canadian, was in the News office a few weeks ago to discuss some advertising.

When I learned that he had opened the theater in Follett, I asked him why he didn't think about opening a theater in McLean.

He didn't make any promises, but he at least sounded interested in the idea. I don't know if you have been in the Rogue Theatre in Wheeler or not, but when I went I was impressed with how clean and well-kept the theater was.

Maybe if we gave Mr. Nall a little encouragement he might consider opening a theater in McLean.

If you kids want a project to help the town, and provide some entertainment for yourselves, why don't you organize a letter writing campaign and get your fellow students, parents, and others to write Mr. Nall encouraging him to think about opening a theater here.

If you write to him, just address the letter: Edwin Nall, Rogue Theatre, Wheeler, Texas 79096.

Some of you have complained that you have missed "Gone Fishin'" the last couple of weeks. Our Fishin' writer, who is also a registered nurse, has been spending more time than usual at the hospital...this time as a patient instead of a nurse. She is recovering from pneumonia and promises to have her column next week.

Observe Early Warning Signs Of Drug Abuse

An American tragedy which is occurring with more frequency is the death of a youngster because of drug overdose. Not only do many die, but an even greater number are condemned to the living death of the hopeless drug addict.

When the victim of drug abuse is a teenager or young adult, parents universally utter the anguished cry "What did we do wrong?"

Now researchers are trying to answer that question, and have studied some of the habits and problems that drug abusers have in common, according to a film called "Early Warning", distributed by the Amarillo Public Library.

According to the scientists in the film, some characteristics do not seem to be important in whether a child becomes an addict or not. Among those factors which are not important are divorced parents, race, social standing, or economic background.

Youngsters who become drug abusers do seem to have several things in common, however. According to the scientist, children who begin to drink alcohol before the age of 15 have a greater chance of becoming drug abusers. Another early warning sign for parents is to watch for the child who begins to smoke cigarettes before the age of 15. These youngsters are also more likely to become addicted to drugs.

One early warning sign which surprised me was children who drink coffee! The scientist explained that coffee contains caffeine which, while not very strong for adults, is a very strong drug for children, and that research had shown that youngsters who begin to drink coffee on a regular basis before the age of 15 are high-risk to become drug abusers.

According to the researchers who produced the film, if a parent finds that his child is drinking alcohol, smoking cigarettes, or drinking coffee, the parent should firmly tell the child that the habit must be broken, and get the child help if necessary to break the habit.

Two factors seem to be prevalent among youngsters who do not become drug abusers as adults and these are that the youngsters were given moderate discipline, and they were given religious training. The researchers noted that about 25 percent of drug abusers reported having extreme discipline while children, and 75 percent reported have no discipline.

According to the statistics presented, very few children who were taken to church and trained in their family religions become drug abusers in later life.

If you are a parent with young children, watch for the early warning signals of drug abuse: do not allow the child under 15 to smoke, drink coffee, or drink alcohol. Give your children loving, moderate discipline, and take your children to church.

If you do all these things, you are giving your child an excellent chance to grow up healthy, happy, and drug-free.

Going to a convention is one of the best ways I know to sharpen your skills in your profession and also to learn new ways to do your job better.

The Panhandle Press Association Convention in Amarillo last weekend was one of the most helpful meetings that I have attended in a long time. Not only did we enjoy all the formal meetings, which were extremely interesting, but we thoroughly enjoyed the informal visiting with other newspaper people.

The first speaker of the convention was Mike Cochran, an Associated Press reporter who had been covering the T. Cullen Davis trials for several years.

Friday afternoon, we heard a presentation by David Hall, the executive director of the Texas Rural Legal Aid group. If you will recall this is the group which has stirred so much controversy in Deaf Smith County.

Friday night at the banquet, I was really surprised when I recognized a familiar face among the singers who were entertaining us. Gene Gee, who taught science in McLean High School when I was teaching there, is the member of a group called "His Image" and they are truly outstanding musicians.

Of course the awards breakfast Saturday morning was the highlight of the trip for Lisa and me.

We were delighted last year when The McLean News won a first-place in photography, and we hoped to win this year for our special historical edition. You can imagine our disappointment when the winners in special editions were announced, and we were not included.

However, the speaker began calling the McLean News with regularity and we collected four awards!

Two comments were made (jokingly) by a couple of disgruntled male editors when the name The McLean News was called several times for awards. When I walked to the podium to receive the award for best editorial in the Panhandle, the presenter cracked "It just goes to show that no one can nag like a woman."

When it was announced that we had won the prestigious Community Service award, I was very surprised and very thrilled. As I returned to the table with the plaque clutched in my hand, an editor sitting nearby joked "I don't know why you women don't stay home in the kitchen where you belong!"

I felt that I had really been accepted, however, by my male counterparts when I was asked if I wanted to join a friendly post-convention card game that "some of the boys" were getting up. Although I had to decline the invitation, I think that did more to make me feel a part of the group than almost anything.

Letters To The Editor

The Alanreed News existed until about 1930. J.D. Reavis was my mother's cousin. They left here about 1929 and ran a newspaper at Texola, Okla. for several years and finally went farther east.

Last word of them they were around Vian and Poteau, Okla. As they would be an advanced age, I assume he is no longer living. He had a brother Everett, who was editor at Groom some time, who moved into Arizona as he had tuberculosis.

John (J.D.) sold the Alanreed Herald to C.C. Warford, a Baptist minister from some place in Oklahoma. Warford closed the paper here and was at Lefors several years and then went back to Stigler, Okla. where he lived to be 94 years of age.

Surprisingly, Alanreed did grow along about that time you were writing about. Not only did those business you mentioned exist, but there were two more cafes, a drug store, at least five service stations, two groceries. The bank closed in 1929 but the town did not start going down till much later. Foxworth-Galbraith put in a large lumber yard and oil activity was lively for awhile. The drug store continued until the death of W.J. Ball in the late Fifties. There were three churches, a cotton gin. The proprietor of Roselium Cafe is living in Panhandle and was a barber for years. S.T. Greenwood was in the grocery business till his death in 1968. His wife continued for a short time but health forced her to quit. Their children and numerous other names mentioned still come to Homecoming every year.

Death and destruction came to McLean and the Texas Panhandle Friday and early Saturday morning as deadly tornadoes dipped down out of the skies to claim lives and do millions of dollars of damage. There are no words to describe the shock and grief that fill the minds of the residents of this area at the loss of the Bill Simpsons and their daughter Patricia.

††† The report on Pamela Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Casper Smith was that she was able to come home Wednesday afternoon and was much improved, although she is not to have any visitors yet. Damage was received by several in this area, the Charles Williams, the Jess Finleys near Alanreed, David Crockett and many others received extensive damage by the storm.

McLean Lions Club members have been busy the past few weeks renovating the old golf course to make it again ready for use. Located northwest of town, the nine-hole course is complete except for the sand greens, which will be completed in the near future. Members have lined out and moved fairways, and have prepared the tee boxes. The new course should be in use in the next few weeks. Plans call for the replacing of the sand greens with grass greens in the next years. Because of the expense, probably a few grass greens will be added each year until the entire course is complete. All work on the course has been done by Lions members.

Cowboy Drive In Gets Publicity

McLean and the Cowboy Drive In got some free publicity this month when PICKUP AND VAN magazine published a picture taken in front of the McLean cafe recently. Apparently, the magazine was testing the American Motors 1980 Eagle on a cross country drive from Tijuana, Mexico, to St. John's, Newfoundland.

The test drivers stopped in McLean at the Cowboy Drive In and had their picture taken. The picture in the magazine reads "The Cowboy drive-in? Where else but McLean, Texas? Native Texan Brown (one of the drivers) was so delighted he danced a little jig when the crew stopped for a bite to eat."

announced this week. Misfortune came to one contestant in the rodeo when Leslie Darsey of near Alanreed suffered severe injuries Saturday night when the car in which he was riding overturned as he was nearing home. Darsey suffered three fractured vertebrae in his back, and a dislocated pelvis. His condition was described as still serious Wednesday.

Notes From Your County Agricultural Agent

by Joe Van Zandt

RABIES CASES UP SHARPLY LAST YEAR:

Rabies cases continue to increase at an alarming rate in Texas. Laboratory confirmed positive cases of rabies in Texas showed a 115 percent increase in 1979 over 1978.

The number of cases of rabid dogs took the biggest jump with an 811 percent increase. A total of 82 dogs were found rabid in 1979, compared to only 9 in 1978. More rabid skunks were confirmed than any other animal with 857 skunks reported rabid compared to 447 in 1978.

A large number of foxes, raccoons, horses, cattle, cats and bats also made the rabid list. Reports so far for 1980, indicate the incidence of rabies in wild animals, especially the skunk, are still high.

We recommend the following steps when animals are exposed to rabies:

- Dogs and cats bitten by a known rabid animal should be destroyed immediately. If the owner is unwilling to have this done, the unvaccinated animal should be vaccinated immediately with a modified live virus vaccine against rabies and placed in strict isolation for 6 months. If the animal has a record of current vaccination, it should be revaccinated immediately and restrained for at least 60 days.

- Livestock bitten by rabid animals should be destroyed immediately. If the owner is unwilling to have this done, the animal should be placed in quarantine for 6 months.

- Exposed livestock can be safely killed and its tissues eaten without risk of infection if the animal is slaughtered within three days after being bitten.
- Persons who slaughter and skin an exposed animal should wear gloves and perform their duties with care to prevent possible exposure from the wound area. Liberal portions of the tissues in the bite area should be discarded. The remaining muscle tissues of the animal are considered safe to eat.

Certain precautions should also be taken when seemingly healthy pets bite a person for no reason.

In this case, the animal should either be confined and observed by a veterinarian for ten days or killed immediately and examined by the fluorescent antibody technique. If the owner opts for observation and signs suggestive of rabies develop, the animal should be humanely killed immediately and its head submitted for rabies examination.

Signs of rabies in wild animals cannot be interpreted reliably. Therefore, and wild animal that bites or scratches a person should be killed at once and examined for evidence of rabies.

If the fluorescent microscopy examination for rabies is negative, the saliva contains no virus and then the bitten person need not be treated.

types to the modern hybrid teas, floribundas and miniatures.

Rose fanciers will find this book invaluable, as it not only tells you how to plant roses properly, but also lists roses which have proven superior over years of use. A list of the "All America" selections since 1946 is also included.

Rose care from the selection and planting to the picking are shown in this Better Homes and Gardens book, and pruning, fertilizing, bug, and fungus care, as well as arranging and preserving, are very adequately covered in the book.

An unusual section of the volume lists flowers which are excellent companions for roses which will graciously compliment the beauty of the rose in the garden.

Present day interest in miniature roses is currently being shown all over the country, and an interesting section is to be found on these lovely and petite beauties.

This book will prove of great use in the selection of roses for your need, as it lists all the hardest and most fragrant available today, and contains all the information necessary to make you a successful rose grower.

Better Homes and Gardens "Roses You Can Grow" is now available at Lovett Memorial Library.

Any other club or organization interested in sending program leaders is invited to do so. The training is free and everyone is invited to attend.

CLEAR UP "FOG" BETWEEN SLIDING DOOR PANES:

Do-it-yourselfers can remedy "fog" between the two panes of double-glazed sliding glass doors. Usually, dead air space between the two panes of glass serves to insulate the glass area and the home against heat loss and heat gain. However, prefabricated double-glazed doors are subject to condensation between the two panes of glass. The most common type of double-glazed door is two panes of glass separated by a hollow aluminum mullion. Usually the mullion is filled with a desiccant, such as silica-gel granules so air between the panes is continuously dried.

Problems with condensation generally occur after long-time use of the unit. Breaking of the seal causes the desiccant to be water-logged and condensation forms between the panes of glass. Do-it-yourselfers can correct the problem for the cost of a tube of sealant and about two hours of actual labor.

Solving the problem involves taking the unit apart, drying out the silica granules and putting the unit back together with new sealant. To disassemble the unit, follow these steps:
First, remove screen and then the sliding section of the door by turning screws to relieve tension on rollers. Pry the door up and, with a helper, lift the heavy panel out. Place on a flat surface resting the unit on the metal edges rather than the glass. Remove metal edging from the sides, top and bottom by tapping gently with a mallet and wood block. Carefully remove the rubber or vinyl gasket and save for reuse. To cut through the old sealant, run a razor-type knife around the perimeter between the top glass and the mullion. Then, lift off the top glass.

To dry out desiccant, cut loose the mullion containing the desiccant, remove end caps, and pour silica into a baking dish. Avoid contact with silica gel. To drive off moisture and to restore moisture-absorbing properties, heat the granules in a 400 degree F. oven for at least three hours.

To reassemble the unit, place a thin bead of clear sealant around inside edge of the bottom sheet of glass, and position the mullion onto the sealant. Press down lightly. Run another bead of sealant on the top side of the mullion and lower the top sheet of glass onto it. To reset the vinyl gasket, run a medium bead of clear sealant around the edges of the slides and top of the glass. Positioning the gasket so the splice is at the top, press the gasket into the still-wet sealant. Finally, replace metal edges of the door and set it back into the frame.

EXCHANGE STUDENTS

Would your family be willing to welcome an international high school student into your home during the coming school year?
By sharing daily life with a student from another country, the members of your family will learn about a different culture, while deepening their appreciation of our country by introducing America to someone new.

The main requirement for becoming a host family is a willingness to accept a young person from another country into the everyday life of your family, so the student and family members can share an enriching experience. The host family provides meals and shelter, as well as companionship and love.

Youth for Understanding, a non-profit international student exchange organization, is now seeking Texas host families for incoming students from 25 countries. Each year, host families throughout this area open their home and hearts to international students, aged 14 through 18, who will be spending a year as "ambassadors of friendship". Students will arrive in late summer.

Youth for Understanding promotes world citizenship and understanding through teenage student exchange opportunities. International students week to live the "ordinary" life of an American high school student by living with a host family. For further information on becoming a host family, contact: Lois Perna, 3563 Colgate, Irving, Texas 75062, telephone 214-256-1105.

Loose Marbles

by Lisa Patman

The other day, after reading the last few columns I had written, in which I poked and prodded a little at the government, my husband took me aside, sat me down, and quite solemnly said, "Lisa, you really should be more careful about what you write. Try to remember that the government doesn't have a sense of humor. They are going to come get you one of these days."

Of course he meant well, but he was wrong. What the government not have a sense of humor? The government which sends Yankee lawyers down South to help us with our illegal alien problems, and puts good 'ol Southern boys up in Yankee territory to explain desegregation to them--not have a sense of humor, surely you jest.

This fun-loving crew is the one who, after discovering you were overpaid 57 cents on your income tax refund (yes, Virginia there are income tax refunds occasionally), will write you a delightful letter not only demanding the 57 cents back, but charging you interest for the time that 57 cents has been in your possession. If that isn't a knee-slapper, then I don't know what is.

One of their cleverest jokes of the year came this month when they required, almost simultaneously, your income tax and your census form--a kind of "your money and your life" pun.

This is the very same bunch of comedians who made Medicare and Medicaid such a fun-filled, red-taped game that you might as well start filling in the forms on your 21st birthday in order to be eligible by the time you reach retirement age. Isn't that a scream?

If all of this doesn't convince you that the good old United States of America isn't run by a bunch of cackling practical jokers, here's the last bit of proof I have. If this doesn't get you nothing will.

The most hilarious thing ha ha ha that hee hee hee I have seen this tee hee hee year is the fact that ho ho ho at this moment the forerunners chuckle chuckle in the giggle giggle presidential race are Kennedy, Reagan, and Carter. Haw, haw, haw, haw, haw...pardon me, I think I'm getting the hiccupps. I just can't take too much comedy in one sitting.
