

This Week

MAN'S ACHIEVEMENT.
LIGHTNING BODS WORK.
THE BABY'S EARS.

The American Legion in Paris last week adopted the report of its National Defense Committee, demanding establishment of a national air force as a separate department, with an "Air Force Secretary" in the Cabinet. Common sense.

The man that had employed a coachman got a chauffeur when the automobile came in. Intelligent nations will add to their Secretary of War and Secretary of the Navy a SECRETARY OF THE AIR, now that flying machines have come.

The National Machine Tool Builders' Exposition in Cleveland, recently was a concentrated demonstration of industrial genius and of the tools that have built prosperity and civilization.

Man differs from all other animals in that he is a tool-using creature.

Animals work with their bodies, the beaver with teeth and broad tail, the woodpecker with his beak, the mud wasp with her sting, putting stung caterpillars in cold storage for her unborn children.

Man with his brain, creates tools OUTSIDE of his body, then harnesses the ox, horse, elephant, Niagara Falls, and the lightning to work those tools.

Cleveland's exhibition contained 300 carloads of machinery sent from eighty cities by 180 companies. There were machines that will turn thirteen-inch guns, others measure a light wave, a million waves or so to the inch.

Lightning struck a barn in Virginia, killed four persons, and two mules, paralyzed a dog and stunned two men. Modern lightning rods properly installed would have prevented that disaster.

Modern protection against lightning is included in the recent White House alteration. All around the balustrade above the White House roof, sharp, short, copper points stand at close intervals, connected by a copper cable, the whole system being connected with the earth, also by copper conductors, buried deep enough in the ground to reach perpetual moisture.

Such lightning rods give real protection. Insurance companies recognize that in lower rates for factories thus protected. Old-fashioned, badly installed, cheap lightning rod construction is worthless or even dangerous.

Mrs. Smith had a baby in a Cleveland hospital. She and her husband said it was a boy, when they gave her a girl baby to nurse. The father says: "They can keep that girl, so far as I am concerned, unless they prove it is mine." Something of a prejudice against girl babies in that, perhaps.

One proof offered is that the girl baby's ears are exactly like those of the mother. That is most important. Human ears and the "Darwinian tubercle" that sometimes goes with them are often inherited from generation to generation, and prove heredity at a glance.

Anyhow, ANY girl baby will repay richly any one that takes care of her.

Young William B. Leeds, son of the "Tin Plate King," started his flier three motor engine flying machine for Chicago last week with six passengers and a relief pilot, he, Leeds, running the machine. They were to stop at Cleveland, then on to Chicago. Young men with money can promote flying in this day as W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr. and other young men with money promoted motoring twenty-five years ago.

In Little Rollo's day a good boy would stoop to pick up a pin. The rich, observant banker would notice him, employ him, marry him to his daughter, leave him his fortune. Economy was the watchword.

Modern James McStowe, of Canton, Ohio, says it's an exploded watchword. In Chicago he picked up a dime from the floor and as he stooped some one stole his pocket-book with $800. His motto reads: "Look after your $800, and the dimes will look after themselves."

Hospital Romance Ends In Wedding

Chas. E. Davidson, Jr., Weds Former Nurse In Temple Hospital

A romance which had its inception a year ago when Chas. E. Davidson, Jr., of Ozona was a patient at the Scott and White sanitarium in Temple culminated in his marriage Tuesday morning to Miss Edna Barron, his nurse, whose personal charms and tender care won his heart while he was recovering from an operation in the fall of 1926.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride's uncle, E. H. Williams, publisher of the Temple Telegram, one of the largest Central Texas dailies. Miss Barron had made her home with her uncle while she was completing her training as a nurse. The ceremony was performed at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning in the presence of members of the family and a few friends.

Judge and Mrs. Davidson, Miss Dixie Davidson, Charlie's twin sister, and Mrs. Joe T. Davidson left for Temple Sunday to attend the wedding. Miss Floy Friend, who is a student in the University of Texas, went over from Austin for the wedding.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left for Tulsa, Okla., to visit her mother and other relatives. After a wedding tour the couple will return to the new home recently completed on the Davidson ranch about two miles east of the Judge Davidson ranch home.

Baptists To Have Sunrise Service On Thanksgiving Morn

In place of the usual type of Thanksgiving Service there will be held a sunrise Thanksgiving Service at the Baptist Church, Thanksgiving morning. While the Baptists are sponsoring the service, the whole town is cordially invited to attend and take part. The service will be a real one of thanks giving, according to Rev. M. M. Fulmer. "We have so much to be thankful for this year and we ought to lift up our hearts to God in this, the best time of the day, and begin the great day right," Rev. Fulmer declared. "It has been said that most folks on Thanksgiving do everything else but thank God. Whatever may be your plans for the day do not forget to join in a service of thankfulness. The service will begin promptly at 7:30 and will continue one hour."

Crockett County Rancher Kills Big Black Bear On Mitchell's Ranch

A big black bear, believed to have been a native of the mountainous regions just across the Rio Grande in old Mexico, fell a victim to gringo guns Monday when he attempted to wax fat on a luscious diet of fresh mutton on the ranges of Crockett County ranchers.

The bear was killed by Collins Coates on the Mitchell ranch after a cowboy bear hunt in which about ten men and several dogs participated in an effort to run down the marauding alien.

The head and hide were brought to Ozona Monday by Mr. Coates and exhibited on the streets before being sent to a taxidermist to be made into a rug. The fur was long, fine and a shiny black, and the head, though not large, was well shaped. The estimated weight of the animal was around 200 pounds.

Mr. Coates sighted the bear Sunday. The animal had apparently just killed a sheep and was eating it when Mr. Coates saw him. Neighboring ranchmen were notified and a drive was organized Monday to comb the territory in an effort to locate the killer.

As the cordon of cowboy hunters closed in around the spot where the bear was believed to be hiding, the dogs beat through the brush until the animal was finally routed. As the bear gained the center of the ring he was subjected to a bombardment from 30-30 rifles. Four bullets passed through his abdomen before the bear was finally dropped by Mr. Coates' gun.

Members of the hunting party believe that another bear besides the one killed was sighted during the hunt and ranchers in that territory will be on the look-out for it.

West Texas ranchmen have long ago erased the bear from the list of the stockman's pest, but in recent months counties along the border have been troubled somewhat with these animals. It is believed that they cross into this country from Mexico as food becomes scarce in that region.

Gold Hoof Taps Ozona Coffers

Clink Of Gold Accompanies March Of Flocks In Co.

The clatter of the gold hoof, the sheep, on the ranges of West Texas, is causing the bankers to clink more ready cash than they have had in their vaults in many a day. It has been a golden year for the sheep man and the winter is scheduled to be easy on the flocks as there is now plenty of weeds and grass in practically every part of the section. The Ozona National Bank at its last call had $931,277 cash on hand and deposits of $1,177,094.99. Not only is there more money in the county than there was at the beginning of the year, but the sheep are better than they were twelve months ago, due to the gradual improvement in the quality of the famous Crockett county herds.

Crockett County bought a large number of fine registered bucks this year, both at the local fair and at the official sale of the Sheep and Goat Raisers Association of Texas. The heavy shearers, with good bodies, and few wrinkles, the ideal fine wool and mutton type that the feeders sought so keenly this year, are the type that have been used to breed up the standards of the flocks. During the breeding season, in progress now, the very finest bucks in the world are in use. When better sheep are produced you can look to Crockett county to be the head of the procession.

But Crockett has not only bought a large number of bucks, it has sold a large number as well. The bucks from the registered herds in the county going all over the sheep country, and used in building up flocks wherever they go. Crockett county has few losses from any cause this year. It has few wolves and bobcats, no stomach worms, and, due to the splendid protection offered by the hills, there are few deaths at lambing time. The range is good now, with the exception of about 150 sections. Ranch leases are bringing on the average of from fifty to seventy-five cents with the bulk at about sixty cents. No leases are obtainable.

There is little, if any, business done with the Federal Reserve bank in the matter of handling loans on livestock, according to Scott Peters of the Ozona National and the same report is obtained at other banks in the section.

There are not more than 150 flocks of sheep in Crockett County and the residents here say they don't know of a single farmer, although more and more a feed patch is found with the ranches. There used to be a farm right here at town but it is not used any more

Watson Urged To Remain At Post

Petition Asks Commissioner To Reconsider Resignation

A petition urging Ralph Watson, county commissioner of Precinct 4, to continue his post as commissioner at least until the expiration of his present term, was being circulated in Ozona the first of the week by John W. Bailey and was signed by several hundred citizens.

Circulation of the petition followed announcement to the effect that Mr. Watson had tendered his resignation to County Judge Chas. E. Davidson, giving as his reason that his private business is demanding all of his attention.

Judge Davidson, however, declined to accept Mr. Watson's resignation immediately and urged that he reconsider. Recognizing the signal service that he has rendered and the personal sacrifices that he has made in the interest of the county, the citizenship of Ozona was unanimous in signing the petition asking that he continue to serve until the expiration of his present term.

A hunting party composed of Otho Drake, local commercial manager for the West Texas Utilities Co., George Murphy, district superintendent for this group, and Taylor Rowe of the San Angelo office, left Ozona Tuesday to be ready to take a head on the bucks early Wednesday morning.

Convicted Negro Breaks Jail Here

J. R. Haywood Under 2 Year Sentence, Tears Through Ceiling

While eight prisoners were tying up the jailer and making their get-away from the Tom Green County jail at San Angelo last night, J. R. Haywood, negro, under a two-year sentence to the state penitentiary for burglary, assessed by a Crockett County jury at the last term of court, staged a one man jail delivery from the Crockett County jail.

Haywood tore his way to freedom through the ceiling of the jail. The ceiling is constructed of sheet iron, with iron bars bolted in for strength. Using his hands and some kind of instrument of the nature of which officers did not know, the negro tore the sheet iron aside, pried the bars loose and kicked his way to freedom through a skylight in the roof of the jail.

The convicted negro made his escape late Wednesday afternoon and Sheriff Augustine and his deputies immediately started search in Ozona and nearby territory but no trace of the escaped prisoner had been found Thursday morning.

Bob Buckley, under a 7 1/2 year sentence to the penitentiary for robbery, declined the negro's invitation to escape and remained in his cell despite the fact that a yawning hole in the ceiling left nothing in the way of freedom. Buckley has been in the local jail more than a year awaiting the outcome of an appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeals.

Eight Prisoners Break Jail At San Angelo

Eight prisoners broke jail at San Angelo Wednesday night after tying Jailer Frank Wyatt and taking his keys away from him, according to word received here early Thursday morning, and are believed to be headed this way. Local officers were notified of the jail delivery and were on the look-out for the escaped prisoners.

Officers in all communities out of San Angelo were watching the road last night and Ozona people returning from Angelo reported having been stopped several times by officers. The prisoners are thought to be headed for Mexico.

MRS. F. F. FRIEND NAMED 2ND VICE PRES. OF T.F.W.C.

Ozona Woman Honored With High Post By State Body

MRS. POTTER PRES. Bowie Woman, Who Was Here For Dist. Meet Is Successful

Mrs. Frank Friend of Ozona was elected second vice-president of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs at the closing session of the thirtieth annual state convention at El Paso Friday afternoon. Mrs. Friend was honored with this high post in the state organization by an overwhelming vote of the 322 accredited delegates attending the convention.

Mrs. Friend was opposed for the second vice-presidency by Mrs. B. Youngblood of College Station, one of the most prominent club women in the state, but won easily in the balloting of the delegates.

Mrs. W. R. Potter of Bowie, Texas, was elected president of the Texas Federation in one of the most heated political battles in the history of the organization. Mrs. Potter secured a majority over two opponents, Mrs. B. L. Stephens of Anson and Mrs. M. H. Hagaman of Ranger. Mrs. Potter received 182 votes while Mrs. Stephens received 89 and Mrs. Hagaman 51.

Both Mrs. Potter and Mrs. Hagaman were among the visitors attending the Sixth District convention held here in May.

Mrs. Frank Tompkins of Corpus Christi was elected first vice-president with 184 votes, over Mrs. C. D. Kelly of Groesbeck, who received 132. Mrs. Fred Fleming of Corsicana was elected recording secretary without opposition as was Miss Ollie Bird of Denison, treasurer.

Mrs. Maggie Barry, College Station, was elected Texas director to the general federation with 189 votes over Mrs. J. U. Fields, retiring president, 129.

Mrs. A. C. Hoover was the official delegate representing the Ozona Woman's Club. Mrs. Friend was also in attendance at the convention. Mrs. Hoover returned from El Paso Saturday and at the next meeting of the local club will make her report on the convention.

Baptists Off For State Convention At Wichita Falls

Rev. M. M. Fulmer, pastor of the Ozona Baptist Church, and Mrs. Fulmer and H. O. Word left Sunday for Wichita Falls to attend the State Baptist Convention to be in session there four days, beginning Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Hoover had also planned to attend the convention but were unable to make the trip on account of business that demanded Mr. Hoover's attention here. Mr. Hoover and Rev. Fulmer were the official delegates from the local church to the convention, but in Mr. Hoover's absence, it is likely that Mr. Word will act.

There will be approximately 4,000 messengers and visitors from churches all over the state attending the convention, Rev. Fulmer declared. Pat. M. Neff, former governor of Texas, is president of the association. Reports of work done in the churches over the state will be heard and plans for the coming year's work outlined.

THE OZONA STOCKMAN

Published Every Thursday Morning at Ozona, Texas, County Seat of Crockett County by

W. EVART WHITE EDITOR and PUBLISHER
Entered at the Post Office at Ozona, Texas, as Second Class Mail Matter, under Act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

Ozona, Texas, Thursday, November 17, 1927.

Wednesday morning marked the beginning of open season on deer, turkey and fellow hunting companions. Front pages of the newspapers for the next few weeks will probably be adorned with the usual headlines "Hunter Mistaken For Deer, Leaves Wife and Five Children's Week-End Casualties Among Hunters," "Deer Season Opens; Seven Killed (All Hunters)," "Pulls Gun After Him Under Fence, May Not Live," etc.

"Stunty how a contact between gun and hands will send a paralyzing shock to the brain of some people. You've seen the fellow who just had to shoot whether he has anything to shoot at or not, and you've seen the fellow who charges at his prey, cocks his gun, and after he shoots, ejects shell and then comes back to the car and puts his gun in cocked and loaded. He's the kind of fellow you can always trust—to shoot you. And he's the kind of fellow who makes you believe in life insurance.

The fellow who "isn't afraid of guns" can throw more misery into a hunting party than a blistered heel on a long hike. He demonstrates the fact that he isn't afraid of guns by peeping down the business end of the barrel. Unfortunately, the gun seems never to go off at this psychological moment. And then he gives you a thrill and to show you that HE isn't afraid of the gun by pointing it at you. Here, however, if the gun will shoot at all, it is most likely to go off. He's the fellow to whom a straight-jacket and a padded cell would be most becoming.

Every hunter who goes out after game is intent upon one thing—getting the game. But if he is so intent, and his nerves in such a strain that every time a bush moves or anything else moves, for that matter, he pulls down on it, he is a menace to his hunting companions. The only way one would feel safe while hunting with him would be to be dressed in bullet-proof jacket, pants and helmet or on stilts seven feet high where one would be clear of the bushes. But even in the latter arrangement one might be mistaken for a bird—personally, we choose to stay at home until that fellow gets back and returns the gun he borrowed.

W. M. Massie of Fort Worth, president of the Texas Bankers Association, has suggested that member banks all over the state contribute to a fund to pay a reward of $8,000 for every bank robber killed in the act of robbing a bank. Mr. Massie's proposal would not make the reward available for the capture of a bank robber alive, nor would it be payable for his capture or slaying after the act had been committed.

This is a cold-blooded proposition to curb the activities of cold-blooded murderers and robbers. Every bank robber who goes into a bank with drawn revolver, has that revolver drawn for two purposes, one to frighten the bank employees and customers into submission and the other to kill if the first purpose does not work. In other words, he is a murderer whether or not he kills anybody, and as Mr. Massie pointed out, "the only safe bank robber is the dead one."

Robbery with fire-arms is a capital offense in Texas, but unless a robber actually wounds or kills somebody in the act of robbery it is seldom that the death penalty is imposed. As a matter of fact, every time a robber points a gun at his victim and demands his valuables, he deserves to pay the death penalty. He is a murderer at heart and a murderer for gain deserves no mercy.

The provision of the proposed reward for dead bank robbers that the robber must be killed in the act is probably for a double purpose, one to be certain that only those actually guilty are killed and another to encourage bank employees, who usually have arms handy, to take a chance by shooting it out with the robber. Usually the fellow behind the cage is not any more nervous than the robber, unless the latter is a hardened follower of the trade, and he has about a fifty-fifty chance with the robber. But a fifty-fifty chance with death is still not high enough.

odds with most of us, but an $8,000 reward might help to put up a little more snap into the trigger finger.

Dr. Frank Crane Says

Don't Worry About Our Sport Urge

Many say that the country has gone "football crazy."

They point out the fact that Rome's downfall was preceded by the gift to the people of games and bread.

The parallel between the bloody amusements of ancient times, however, and the football of today is not very close.

Football is a clean sport and the more energy people put out in sport of this strenuous kind the less energy they will be disposed to spend in war.

Football calls for the last ounce of physical strength, together with intellectual alertness.

Last year there was an attendance of 79,500 at the game between Stanford and Southern California. Fifty-five thousand saw the Harvard play, 70,000 watched Ohio State and about 75,000 seats were sold for the U. S. C.-Notre Dame game in Los Angeles. Many applicants were rejected for lack of space.

The attendance of large groups at football games is a good omen and those who gather from this that the country is going to the dogs are mistaken.

One difference noted between other countries on the one hand and England and the United States on the other is that England's people play. Sport is an institution and to be a good sport is a synonym of having a good disposition.

The children of France and Italy and Germany need to be taught more how to play, for play is the natural outlet of youthful exuberance and the more a nation plays intelligently the better off it is.

One of the excellent efforts of the Y. M. C. A. and similar organizations abroad has been to organize the boys and girls into play groups. Play of children abroad seems to take a more destructive tendency. A movement has made considerable headway in the United States to have teachers upon the play grounds and to instruct the children in healthy sports as well as the three R's.

Altogether, play is a good thing, and should be encouraged.

The more the principles of fair play are introduced into business the better off for business, and the more business becomes a sport the more it will attract followers.

TOE SHOT OFF

Charlie Owens, clerk at the Ozona Mercantile, suffered the loss of the little toe on his right foot Monday when a small gauge shotgun was accidentally discharged while he was hunting. Mr. Owens was climbing up a steep bank and in pulling the gun up after him it was discharged, the load tearing through his boot and taking off the little toe.

Fred Cox, manager of the Robert Massie Company in San Angelo and formerly of Ozona, was taken to a Dallas Sanitarium Wednesday night in a critical condition, according to word received here by friends. Mr. Cox is suffering from ulcer of the stomach, San Angelo physicians declared.

Lonely Bachelor, Wants to Know

Dear Miss Flo:
 I am thirty-five years old—a lonely bachelor—not by choice—but because I have never met a girl who would marry me. I have known many attractive girls—and have been in love at least three times—but as my love has never been reciprocated I am beginning to despair of ever having a wife and home. I meet many girls and they see into like me. Why can't I inspire the love of one? I am not bad-looking, of average intelligence, good position, and quite comfortable financially. Please tell me where the trouble is. I know any number of men, with much less to offer, with whom the girls fall in love for no good reason at all.

 C. W.
 Over and over again the question is asked—"What is the secret of the attraction that some people have and others have not. How can I make myself popular with the opposite sex? Most frequently the question is asked by girls—for admittedly, it is harder for a woman to catch a husband than for a man to get a wife.
 However, times have changed somewhat, and not infrequently the proud mole admits that he is faced, to a certain extent, with the same problem, and seeks aid in obtaining the favor of the fair sex. And all that has been said to girls asking the question holds true about the men. Popularity isn't a matter of good looks, money, position, or brilliancy—it's a matter of charm and personality. It is quite possible that no girl has ever fallen in love with you, C. W., because you have never made an effort to make any of them love you.

Men, I fear, have come upon sorry days. Just being a male no longer counts with girls. Before women were in a position to buy their own little luxuries and provide their own amusement, any man was fair prey. One who escaped to the ripe age of thirty-five was, to say the least, an artful dodger.

But nowadays girls have many other interests—they spend less of their time thinking of subtle means of attracting men—therefore men have to give more time to attracting women.

And girls today are a little more calculating—they look the male over a little more carefully. They do not have to marry, and they won't marry, unless the man pleases them greatly.

That doesn't mean, of course, that girls are hard-boiled about men. It simply means that their economic position spares them the necessity of laying themselves on the bargain shelf. They have to be won, in other words.

Not with great money expenditure, by any means. But with kindness, sincere appreciation of their worth, with sympathy, understanding, and other well-known approaches to the feminine heart—never forgetting that despite their emancipation, women are just as susceptible as ever to flattery, thoughtful gifts of books, flowers, etc., and other little attentions.

There are numerous ways in which a man can make a woman love him—some women like to be rushed off their feet—others prefer patient siege. Some women look upon marriage as a business proposition—other women fall only for the romantic wooing. Study your girl. Catalog her. Find out to what type she belongs and adapt your tactics to the situation. And remember, you must give the girl something she doesn't get from anybody else. Sentiment and romance, if men only knew it, is the music to play if they want to charm a girl away from her other interests.

INTRODUCTION

Archibald Bennett, wealthy bachelor, travels constantly in the interest of his health. He meets Isabel Perry, who recommends a life of crime, adventure, romance and excitement as a cure for his nerves. Archie goes to Bailey Harbor to investigate a house for his sister, while there he has a pistol duel with an intruder and the intruder is wounded. To evade publicity he flees across country on foot—now read on:

The first glimmer of dawn was breaking over a gray world, when a whistle, a long pipe and then a short quick one, in the roadside a little way ahead of him brought Archie to a halt. He drew the gun from his pocket and stood perfectly still. In a few seconds the whistle was repeated and Archie grown suddenly bold, checked an impulse to fly and imitated it.

A man rose from behind a stone wall on the right and walked toward him.

"That you, Hoky?" he called sharply, peering through the mist. Seeing that he was not Hoky but a stranger with a pistol, he sprang forward and wrenched the gun from Archie's hand.

"Stop squealing! Bad enough to fool me with that whistle without pulling a gun. Now you get right over there by the fence where I'm pointing and we'll consider matters a little."

"I was just walking to Portsmouth," began Archie in a blithe tone he hoped would prove convincing. His captor laughed ironically.

"Now you listen to me! You've been up to something, so don't tell me that you're taking a little before breakfast stroll to Portsmouth to work up an appetite. In the first place, have you seen a man about your size along the road anywhere?"

"Not a soul!" declared Archie solemnly.

"Mighty queer Hoky doesn't turn up! I warned the beggar against these sea-side villas; they are all outfitted with fancy burglar alarms that make a deuce of a row when you step on the wire. It rings a gong loud enough to wake the dead and then some chap jumps out of bed and turns on all the lights in the house and very likely opens up with a gun before you can say Jerusalem. But Hoky thought he knew better."

Archie clutched at the stone fence against which his captor had pushed him and his breath came in long gasps.

"You mean," he faltered, "that you fear your friend was shot?"

"That, my dear sir, is exactly what troubles me!"

Archie's tongue clung to the roof of his mouth as he tried to murmur his sympathy for the stranger's sorrow. The thought that he was probably talking to the accomplice of the man he had shot was terrifying; the stranger seemed enormously fond of Hoky and if he knew that he had within his grasp the person who was responsible for Hoky's failure to return from his visit to Bailey Harbor he would very likely make haste to avenge his friend's death. It seemed to Archie that the gods were playing strange tricks with him indeed. The man's speech was not the argot he had assumed from his reading of crook stories to be the common utterance of the underworld. There was something attractive in the fellow. He carried himself jauntily, and his clean-shaven, rounded face and fine gray eyes would not have suggested his connection with burglary. He was an engaging sort of person and Archie decided suddenly that the man might be of service to him. He was in pressing need of clothes but he was in no condition to return to Portsmouth and redeem his suitcase; an impression that was confirmed by his captor unexpectedly.

"You will pardon my candor, but you certainly look like the devil. Let me introduce myself to you as the Governor. Among the powers that prey that is my proud cognomen, not to say alias. Now please be frank, what mischief brings you here at this hour?"

Archie gave serious thought to his answer. If he could convince this person that he was a crook he would be less likely to suspect that he had been the instrument of Hoky's undoing.

"I've got to make a getaway and be in a hurry about it," declared Archie in a confidential air.

"A little trouble of some sort, eh? It rather occurred to me that you were not promenading for mere pleasure," replied the Governor. "A fashionable defaulter, perhaps? No? Then let it go at murder, though I confess you don't look as though you would have a stomach for homicide."

"I came damned near getting pinched!" asserted Archie stoutly. "The cops back there in that town gave me a hard run for it. I was just crawling through the window of a drug store when here comes a chap tiptoeing through the alley, and I bolted for the tall timber as hard as I could spring. The fire bell rang, and the whole town woke up. There'll be a whole army of them looking for me; and if your friend Hoky's been killed they'll be keen to pinch me as another member of the gang."

The Governor listened patiently. "An amateur, I take it?" he remarked.

"Hell, no," grumbled Archie scornfully. "But I always play the same game; I never had any use for pals. They get in the way."

"Wrong, my boy, wrong! A good partner like me is essential. As for myself I rarely venture to expose myself in these little affairs; but I advise and counsel the brethren. You haven't the judgement of a month-old infant. A stormy night always makes honest householders wakeful. Your attempt, but not for discretion. You should always ask me about such things."

"I'm sorry," replied Archie meekly, "that I didn't run into you sooner."

"The loss is mine!" cried the Governor heartily. "But let us be practical. We must make a long jump, son, for the coast will ring with this, particularly if Hoky is lying cold at the undertaker's."

He walked off briskly with Archie close beside him.

"When Hoky persisted in his ill-chosen enterprise I lifted a little roadster that I've tucked away down here in a peaceful lane. Thought I'd be all ready to give the old boy a long pull for freedom when he came back, but—!"

Sure enough the roadster was there, and the Governor became suddenly a man of action. Kneeling down he detached a New York license tag from the machine, drew from his pocket a Maine tag and attached it, humming meanwhile.

"The rural police haven't learned this simple device," he explained, as he sent the discarded tag skimming into a corn field. He jumped in and bade Archie take the seat beside him. The car was soon humming merrily over the rough road that wound through a pine wood. They followed a grassy trail that ended abruptly at an abandoned lumber shack.

"We'll shoot the car around behind that pyramid of sawdust and walk a bit to stretch our legs," the Governor informed Archie. There was no trace of a path where he struck off into the woods, but he strode along with the easy confidence of one who is sure of his destination. They brought up presently beside a brook and in a moment more reached a log hut planted on the edge of the high bank.

"What do you think of that, Sir Archibald?" inquired the Governor carelessly. Then as Archie paused, he added, "Oh, your name, perfectly easy! Archibald Bennett was neatly sewed in your coat pocket by your tailor as I observed when I rubbed my hands over you to see if you carried a badge."

"I got these duds out of a suitcase I sneaked—and that's no name of mine," Archie explained hurriedly, still anxious to convince the Governor that he was a thief. "Very careless of you not to rip out the label. Men have been hanged on slighter evidence. But Archibald is not a name to sneeze at, and I rather like Archie, so Archie I shall continue to call you. Now, we'll see what we can do to shake up a breakfast."

He drew out a key and opened the door of the hut.

"Not a bad place, Archie. I stumbled upon it quite by accident and use it occasionally." He opened a cupboard revealing a quantity of provisions, and they prepared their breakfast.

CHAPTER IV.

"My friend," said the Governor soberly as they rose from the table "we have dipped our hands in the same dish, and broken bread together. I don't mind saying that you're a likable chap. I'll be a good pal to you and I ask you to be straight with me. Are we friends or—?"

He put out his hand and Archie grasped it.

The Store For Everybody

"All right, Archie—for such you shall be to the end of the chapter, whether you lied about it or not. And now let's deal with practical affairs. I'm going to spend the afternoon on that stolen machine. I'll paint 'er white to symbolize our purity. There's an assortment of clothes the boys have left from time to time. You can pick 'em over while I'm working on the car."

In doffing the clothing he had acquired honestly and substituting stolen raiment, it was almost as though Archie were changing his character as well. He wondered what Isabel would say if she knew that he had already slipped the leash that bound him to convention and performed even more reckless deeds than she had prescribed for him.

"Well, I must say you're a credit to our gent's clothing department!" remarked the Governor upon his return. "What do you make of this? Found it in the car."

He extended a crumpled telegram which read:

Bailey Harbor Me.,
June 11, 1917.

Putney Congdon,
Thackeray Club, N. Y.

I am offering the house for rent. Shall take every precaution to protect my children from your brutality.

A. B. C.

Archie felt the hut whirling around him. What he held was beyond question the reply of Mrs. Congdon to her husband's telegram that had been left lying on the dinner table. And if Congdon had left New York for Bailey Harbor immediately to put into effect his threat to abduct his child, it might have been Congdon he had shot—not Hoky.

The Governor's ceaseless flow of talk fortunately diverted his thoughts to more cheerful channels, and he obeyed with alacrity a hint that he prepare luncheon. After this had been consumed the Governor suggested a chess game, produced a set of ivory chessmen from a cupboard, and soon proved himself a skillful player.

At the end of two hours the Governor declared that they must take a nap before setting out and turned into one of the berths. He was soon snoring. Archie kicked about restlessly for a time, but finally slept—only to wander through a wild phantasmagoria of crime. "To gain or lose it all," he was stammering as he opened his eyes. But it was not Isabel he was addressing, but his confederate, the Governor, blandly smiling.

"The boy quotes poetry!" exclaimed the Governor. "Archie, you've come in answer to my prayers! Together we shall drink of the fount of Castalia. We shall chum with Apollo and the Muses Nine! But the gods call us elsewhere! We'll snatch a bite and be off! And we've got a job waiting for us. One of the brotherhood has commissioned me to dig up some boodle he's planted in New Hampshire. You may recall the incident. Red Leary a rare boy, held up an express messenger and sauntered off with fifty thousand dollars in new bank notes fresh from the Treasury. Do you follow me?"

"He hid it somewhere and wants your help in recovering it?"

"Right the first time! That cash is tucked away in the cellar of a church and by this time tomorrow night we'll have it, all ready for old Red and check the item from our tablets."

"But the numbers of those notes are in every bank in the country; the police are only waiting for the bills to get into circulation to pounce on the thief."

"I am more and more delighted with you, my son! That point had given me no little worry. But some thing will turn up; there will be a way out of the difficulty. Chuck your old duds into the creek and close the windows. We'll hit the long trail!"

Out of the woods and once more on a smooth highway, the stolen car sped like a frightened rabbit through the night. The Governor drove with the assurance of a man who knows what he's about. Occasionally the Governor lifted his voice in songs of unimpeachable literary and musical quality that rang sonorously above the hum of the engine.

They struck a stretch of road under repair and slowing down the Governor remarked carelessly as he picked his way through a line of red lanterns:

"Speaking of women, my dear Archie, do you share the joy of the lyric poets in the species? It occurs to me that you have probably had many affairs. I'm thirty-four but I've loved only one woman. And strange as it may seem, she's a bishop's daughter."

This confidence made it incumbent upon Archie to make some sort of reply. The Governor would probably be disappointed in him if he confessed the meagerness of his experiences.

"Well, I'm in the same boat," he answered glibly. "There's only one girl for me!" This reference to Isabel Perry, remote and guarded as it was, he defended only on the ground that it was necessary in some way to meet the Governor half-way in his confidences. And it was no lie that he sincerely believed that he loved her. No other girl had ever roused him so much, or given him so good a reason for standing off and taking a look at himself. He wondered what she would say if she could see him with a criminal beside him, joyriding in a stolen car.

His thoughts of her had led him far afield when the Governor remarked ruminatively:

"Do you manage to see her? That's the devil of it in my case! The lady's forbidden to recognize me in any way and her father is a tart old party and keeps sharp watch of her. I can't see her and the regular mails are closed to us.

Nevertheless, we have an arrangement by which if she ever needs me or thinks I can serve her in any way she's to leave a note in a certain place. It's her own idea and very pretty."

As dawn broke the whistle and rumble of a train caused the Governor to stop the car and dive into his pockets for time tables of which he carried a large supply. He scanned one and hummed his satisfaction.

"We'll get rid of this machine right now as there's a station over there a little way where we can pick up a local right into Portsmouth." He stopped, opened a gate and ran the car through a barnyard and into an empty shed.

"Now for a brisk walk!" They crossed the railroad and were soon buying tickets from a sleepy station-master. They alighted at Portsmouth without mishap, and Archie wired his sister that the Congdon house would not do. Then he redeemed his suitcase in the check room and joined the Governor.

They drove to the hotel, where they commanded the best service of the inn. The Governor registered elaborately as Reginald Herbert Saulsbury and wrote Archie down as Ashton Comly, indicating the residence of both as New York

At the breakfast table, the Governor scanned a local paper and with a chirrup passed it to Archie pointing to a double column headline which read, "A Carnival of Burglary in Maine." Archie's eyes fell upon the bizarre photograph of a dead man with which the page was illustrated, and he choked on a fragment of grapefruit as he read the inscription: "Dead Thief, Identity Unknown."

"That's poor old Hoky all right," murmured the Governor, buttering a piece of toast reflectively. "As you seem to be entranced with the literary style of our Bailey Harbor correspondent, I shall take the liberty of helping you to a fried egg."

However, Archie's appetite was pretty effectually spoiled by this paragraph:

An odd circumstance, more or less remotely connected with the killing of the burglar in the fashionable colony, still remains to be explained. Officer Yerkes shortly before two o'clock, the hour at which the thief was shot in Mr. Cummings' home saw a man hurrying through Water Street. He bore the appearance of a gentleman, and the officer did not accost him, thinking him a yachtman from one of the boats in the harbor who had been visiting friends ashore. The man walked oddly, pausing now and then as though in pain and was carrying his right hand upon his left shoulder. This morning drops of blood were found on the boardwalk crossed by the stranger, and it is believed that this was another of the burglar gang who was wounded in a struggle somewhere in the interior and was seeking the help of his confederate, presumably the man shot in the Cummings house.

As the paper fell from Archie's hand the Governor took it up.

"You seem agitated, Archie! You must learn to conceal your feelings!" He read the paragraph and glanced quickly at Archie.

"Your work, possibly?" murmured the Governor. "Compose yourself. I'm afraid you lied to me about the drug store. No!" he held up his hand warningly—"tell me nothing! But if we've got murder behind us we shall certainly be most circumspect in our movements. You interest me more and more, Archie. I congratulate you on your splendid nerve."
