BORAH, GOOD AMERICAN GROW YOUR OWN FUR COATS EINSTEIN'S DISCOVERY PUBLISHERS, CHEER UP

Senator Borah, good American, fears that if we build cruisers without making arrangements satisfactory to Britain we shall have a "shipbuilding race with England." If necessary, why not have it?

But Britain couldn't afford it and knows well that we shall never attack Britain unless we are first attacked.

The British, while they could, dominated the seas, and were proud of it. Whoever didn't like it could lump it. That condition existed from the day when Nelson at Trafalgar wiped out Napoleon's chances of British conquest up to 1924.

It is Uncle Sam's turn now.

Airplanes, submarines, fast cruisers, will answer any question from any other nation, and this country should have the answer ready.

Grow your own fur coats at home. Mr. Vernon Bailey of the Agricultural Department tells you that muskrats, supposed to need big swamps, can be raised like rabbits or guinea pigs, in small pens. They need only enough water to keep comfortably wet and cool in summer. This will interest California rabbit raisers, among others.

The world of science, including Bertrand Russell, called the greatest living mathematician, is interested in Professor Einstein's announcement that electro-magnetism and gravity are practically the same. This discovery, says the learned Dr. Pupin, of Columbia University, places Einstein beside Galileo and Newton.

All interested in physics await a demonstration that there is only one kind of force in the universe; that light, heat, motion, electro-magnetism, gravity are all the same. Einstein seems to confirm part of Herbert Spencer's definition of evolution which describes the "retained emotion" as undergoing a transformation from "an indefinite, coherent heterogeneity."

More interesting to practical publishers of newspapers is the fact that the big Woolworth concern plans an enormous advertising campaign amounting to $3,000,000 the first year. Abandoning the theory that selecting the right location makes advertising unnecessary, proves the wisdom of Woolworth's president, Mr. H. T. Parson.

Get the best position for your store, by all means. But get also the best "position," and the best copy for your advertising in a news paper.

Have what the people want, then let the people know you have it. That's the secret of success.

Work fearlessly for the right and you will be honored, and appreciated AFTER YOU DIE.

Mrs. Pankhurst thought women should vote. Since they created the men for wars, they should have something to say about war. Everybody agrees with Mrs. Pankhurst now, and Mr. Baldwin, who opposed her, will unveil her monument.

When she was alive, demanding justice for women, they put her in jail. She starved herself until she was released, justice not liking the idea of disposing of her corpse, and that is what it should have had to do.

GREATEST FAIR IS PLANNED FOR JULY 3, 4 & 5

Assn. In Meeting Makes Tentative Plans For 1929 Rodeo

IMPROVE DEPTS.

Stock Show And Sale To Be Greatest Ever, Officers Say

Tentative plans for the greatest Rodeo, Race Meet and Stock Show to be staged in Ozona next July 3, 4 and 5, were made at a meeting of directors of the Crockett County Fair Association held Tuesday night at the Livestock Exchange building.

The meeting was called by Joe Pierce, Jr., president of the association.

Chairmen of the various departments of the fair were present and outlined their needs in their respective departments.

Promises that this year's stock show will far outstrip any previous effort were given by Vic Pierce, chairman of the sheep department, and Joe T. Davidson, chairman of the cattle department. Mr. Davidson said that the cattle show this year would bring some of the best cattle in the state to the local show. Inquiries received by the sheep department so far indicate that both the show and sale will be a record breaker this year. Last year's sheep sales amounted to nearly $60,000, records show.

Approximately the same number of horse races will be run this year as last, according to Paul Perner, chairman of the racing department. Purses in the races will be made attractive again this year in an effort to attract the best horses in the state to the local show.

Several additional improvements at the fair grounds were discussed by the directors and it is expected that several projects will be carried out before the celebration this summer.

Charity Fund Is Raised By Lions

Deficit In Handling Recent Case Made Up By Subscriptions

A committee appointed by President M. M. Fulmer of the Ozona Lions Club, composed of E. B. Lumpkin, W. R. Baggett and W. E. White, raised a total of $75 to make up a deficit in the fund raised to take care of recent charity cases in Ozona.

This report was made to the club Monday by Secretary Lumpkin. The total amount of the deficit was around $72. The balance of the fund raised has been placed to the credit of the general charity fund of the club.

A variety of circumstances contributed to a slump in attendance at the Monday luncheon of the club. The attendance was the smallest since the holiday on November 11. On account of the small attendance the regular program of the club was dispensed with and the program committee held over until next week.

Senior BYPU Enjoys Valentine Social At Home Of Rev. Fulmer

In one of the best planned parties of the year the Senior BYPU got all the fun out of Valentine Friday evening at the home of Rev. M. M. Fulmer. From the first to the last everybody had a good time. The Valentine motif was carried throughout the party, even to the refreshments, which consisted of ice cream hearts and heart cakes. Miss Ethel Kaderli and Miss Rose Burton was the committee in charge of arrangements and games and as one has said, "When they engineer a party everybody has a good time." For purposes of competition, the party was divided into two sides, the "Sweethearts" and the "Hardhearts", captained by Billy Taylor and Carl Pettit, respectively. The "Sweethearts" carried off the honors. The outstanding event of the evening was the dressing of the brides, "Misses" Lumpkin and Geo. Atkins, "Miss" Lumpkin was arranged to carry of all honors.

Those present for the occasion were Misses Ethel Kaderli, Rose Burton, Leta and Gladine Powell, Mildred and Dorothy Miller, Edna Phillips, Ethel Word, Alma Johnson, Mary Helen Couch, Lulu Mae Evans, and Mrs. M. M. Fulmer and Messrs. E. B. Lumpkin, Royce Smith, George Atkins, Billy Taylor, Carl Pettit, Harry Matthews, and Rev. M. M. Fulmer.—Baptist Bulletin.

CHURCH OF CHRIST HAVING FINE REVIVAL

The people of the Church of Christ are rejoicing over the wonderful success of their revival. To date there has been fifteen additions from all sources. They have had baptismal services almost every evening. Rev. Horace W. Busby, evangelist, said that the audience last Sunday afternoon was the largest that he had had in all his services. Mr. Taylor appreciates the co-operation of the singers. And several have complimented the splendid singing.

Visitors from Del Rio, Fort Stockton, San Angelo, Sonora and other points have helped by their presence. They have announced services until next Sunday evening, rain or shine. The revival will close Sunday evening then Mr. Busby and Mr. Taylor will go to Fort Worth, Texas for their next engagement.

WARNING!

Speeding along the streets of Ozona must be stopped. Speeders endanger the lives of people on the streets and especially school children about the high school grounds. Persons who persist in this practice will be arrested and fined.

W. S. Willis, Sheriff.

Save your best wool clips for the wool show at the Crockett County Rodeo, Race Meet and Stock Show in July is the advice of officials of the fair association. An attempt will be made to fill every case at the show this year, according to Vic Pierce, chairman of the sheep department.

Mrs. Claude Hudspeth and Mrs. Harry Perner were here from El Paso Sunday on their way to Comstock and Del Rio.

Heads of Power Co. Spend Night Here On Way To Del Rio

A group of six power company officials, three of them from northern states, stopped at the Hotel Ozona Thursday night on their tour of the territory served by the West Texas Utilities Company and other branches of power interests which they represent.

In the party were J. F. Landley of Abilene, W. H. Cooney and H. M. Towne of Pittsfield, Mass., A. E. Allen and Tom L. Miller of Dallas and W. Lewis of Schneetady, N. Y.

The power company officials had visited the oil field sections and principal cities and towns in West Del Rio for a few days on the border Texas and were on their way to Del Rio and a trip across into Mexico.

A. C. Hoover Buys Upton Co. Ranch

Five Sections Purchased From Half At $8.50 An Acre

Two ranch deals involving approximately $50,000 were announced in San Angelo Friday by the Mann Commission Company through whom the deals were made.

Arthur Hoover, Crockett County rancher, was reported to have purchased the five-section ranch of Henry M. Half, of Mineral Wells, in Upton County, at $8.50 an acre. Mr. Half was in San Angelo Friday closing the deal.

The 3,200-acre ranch adjoins a 20,000-acre place which Mr. Hoover purchased a short time ago through the Mann Commission Company. The ranch property is near Rankin.

T. G. Cheaney, who recently sold his Schleicher County ranch to Jack Wardlaw of Sonora, through the San Angelo commission firm, Friday purchased a two-section ranch in Uvalde County, at $17 an acre, through the Mann Commission Company, it was reported.—S. A. Times.

HALL BROS. TO ESTABLISH MEDICATED SALT PLANT

Hall Bros. Grain Company of San Angelo announce the installation of a modern medicated salt plant in San Angelo. The new plant, which will be devoted to the manufacture of all kinds of medicated salt for livestock, will be in operation about April 1. With a medicated salt plant in operation in San Angelo, it is pointed out, Hall Bros. will be able to serve the ranchmen of West Texas in a still broader capacity and to save the livestock men considerable money on their salt purchases. Hall Bros. have branch warehouses and sales offices in Barnhart and Sterling City.

Sheep-Goat Raisers Discuss Tariffs At Uvalde Meet Thurs.

There is little danger of lowering the tariff on ranch products, C. C. Belcher, of Del Rio told the executive committee of the Sheep & Goat Raisers' Association in its meeting at Uvalde Thursday, he reported by T. A. Kincaid, president of the association.

Dates of the annual convention, to be held at Del Rio this year, were set for July 31 and Aug. 1 and 2 at the executive meeting, he said. The next meeting of the executive committee is to be held at Eldorado May 9, at which plans for the annual convention will be made.

Impromptu Auto Race Is Staged

Studebaker Special Beats Buick Stock 2 Mile Spurt

A proposed race between a Silver Anniversary Buick and a Studebaker President 8, both stock cars, from Ozona to San Angelo against time, failing to materialize when Studebaker drivers refused to make the race, an impromptu two-mile spurt was arranged between a Studebaker special and a Buick stock car on the highway at Emerald, east of Ozona Tuesday afternoon.

The Studebaker driven by Ab Jenkins, special representative of the Studebaker factory, the same car and driver making a record drive of 30,000 miles in less than 27,000 minutes at the Atlantic City speedway, beat the Buick stock car, driven by Lee Wilson, Ozona Buick dealer, by 4 4-5 seconds on the two mile run. The Studebaker's time was 1:27 3-5 and the Buick's time was 1:32 2-5.

The race from Ozona to San Angelo, for a purse of $500, was arranged by telephone between Mr. Wilson and a Mr. Davidson, another representative of the Studebaker factory, Tuesday morning. Mr. Wilson specified that only a strictly stock car, one taken out of the show room of the Studebaker agency in San Angelo, was to be run. The Studebaker men brought two cars, the special car that has been driven in the speed tests, and a stock car of the same model. Jenkins and Davidson refused to run the stock car in the two-mile race and refused to make the run to San Angelo in either car. The two mile race, was staged for the amusement of a big crowd who followed the cars to the point where the race was to take place.

The stock Studebaker was timed on the same two mile run, after the other two cars had run, Mr. Wilson said, and its time was 1:35, nearly three seconds longer than the Buick's time.

CROCKETT CO. MAN ATTACKED BY BIG EAGLE

Giant Bird Beaten Off Paul Perner By Joe Pierce

WING SPREAD 10 FT.

Wet Wings Prevented Flying; Specimen Brought Here

To be attacked by a giant eagle, the largest bird ever seen in this unique experience of Paul Perner, section of West Texas, was the experience of Paul Perner, Crockett County ranchman, near Ozona Tuesday.

With one of the eagle's huge claws grasping his hat and the other his shirt front, Mr. Perner probably owes his escape from injury to the quick thinking and action of Joe Pierce, Jr., his companion. Seizing a Soto stalk, Mr. Pierce beat the ferocious bird off his companion and then killed it with the same instrument.

Mr. Pierce and Mr. Perner had gone to the big header tank south of Ozona to catch some fish. At the tank they saw this giant eagle. The eagle had evidently discovered the fish in the tank and was trying to catch some for himself. When the two men arrived, the bird attempted to fly away but he evidently soaked his wings in the fishing expedition and couldn't lift his huge body off the ground enough to make a take-off.

Mr. Perner, seeing the bird's plight, started to run him down and the bird turned on him. Before Mr. Pierce had beaten off the bird, Mr. Perner's shirt front was torn by the big claws and his hat was crumpled.

Mr. Perner says the next big eagle that has trouble in taking off need expect no assistance from him.

The big eagle's wings measured 10 1/2 feet from tip to tip, declared by old timers here to be the largest eagle ever seen in this section. The big claw which was planted in Mr. Perner's shirt front measured 8 inches between the longest points of the claws. The big bird was placed on display at the Grimmer Motor Company.

Mr. Perner says the next big eagle that has trouble in taking off need expect no assistance from him.

W. T. C. C. Manager Visits In Ozona

Homer D. Wade Compliments City; On Way To El Paso

Homer D. Wade, manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, with headquarters in Stamford, and Charles Miller, publicity manager for the regional organization, spent Thursday night at the Hotel Ozona on their way to El Paso.

Mr. Wade was on his way to El Paso to complete arrangements for the annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce to be held in that city on May 12, 13 and 14.

"Ozona is the only town of any size in my territory that I had never visited before, and I was agreeably surprised when I arrived," Mr. Wade declared. "It is a splendid little city, and one can look at the beautiful homes and business building and know what kind of people live here. I am frank to say it is one of the most beautiful little towns I have ever visited."

Mr. Wade and Mr. Miller drove here from Austin where Mr. Wade had been attending sessions of the Texas Legislature in the interest of legislation sponsored by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

N. W. Graham and Dr. J. A. Fussell were in Austin on business the first of the week.

No Man can end by being superior who will not begin with being inferior. —Sydney Smith.

The progress of Ozona depends largely on community spirit. The same is true of any other community. Look about you for the most progressive, forward looking town you know and you will find a town with a well developed sense of community co-operation, of community spirit or whatever name you might have for it.

Community spirit means lending a hand when community projects are under way. Community spirit means putting the community forward at every opportunity. Community spirit means living at home, buying at home, keeping home dollars at home.

For some it is difficult to see clearly the idea of community building when there is opportunity to make a penny. But taking the practice of buying away from home, a little concentrated figuring will clarify the situation somewhat. As a matter of fact, it is more expensive to buy away from home at lower prices. In the first place, there is the transportation.

It costs to drive an automobile, ride a bus or train. Then, every penny that is spent elsewhere that Ozona merchants might have had, just takes that much from the total wealth and money circulation in Ozona. The more business the merchants of Ozona do the narrower they can make their margin of profit. If the merchants of Ozona got all the business of Ozona people to which they are entitled, it is our guess that the price of living would drop 15 to 20 per cent in Ozona.

Kitchen Art

No, we are not referring to the culinary art. "Kitchen Art" is just what we mean—and there is such a thing.

At least so thinks the Art Alliance of America, which has announced a competition for designs to glorify that ancient and honorable institution internationally known as the kitchen sink.

This movement deserves the support of everyone.

Now we know the secret behind the domestic unrest of recent years. The ugly sinks are responsible. The cast iron sink has kept more women out of their homes than the movies, jazz music and automobiles all rolled into one, according to some experts.

The white enamelled sink of modern days is just as bad. It's too clean to make dirty—and so many housewives have preferred not to use it, just to look at it.

The ideal would be a kitchen sink both artistic and adapted to many uses. Not too ugly to look at, not too pretty to use.

May we suggest a kitchen sink with the faucets fashioned on a sort of fountain-of-youth plan, with little cupids chasing themselves over the exterior?

No doubt young wives and daughters would be attracted to it irresistibly. All hail the future saviour of the American home who will design the best kitchen sink!

A man who detected a piece of bark in a sausage visited the butcher shop to find what had become of the rest of the dog.

The butcher was so affected that he could only give a part of the tale.

FUEL SYSTEM

THE practical value of Ford simplicity of design is especially apparent in the fuel system.

The gasoline tank is built integral with cowl and is unusually sturdy because it is made of heavy sheet steel,terne plated to prevent rust or corrosion. An additional factor of strength is the fact that it is composed of only two pieces, instead of three or four, and is electrically welded—not soldered.

Because of the location of the tank, the entire flow of gasoline is an even, natural flow—following the natural law of gravity. This is the simplest and most direct way of supplying gasoline to the carburetor without variations in pressure. The gasoline feed pipe of the new Ford is only 18 inches long and is easily accessible all the way.

The gasoline passes from the tank to the carburetor through a filter or sediment bulb mounted on the steel dash which separates the gasoline tank from the engine.

The carburetor is especially designed and has been built to deliver many thousands of miles of good service. Since all adjustments are fixed except the needle valve, there is practically nothing to get out of order.

The choke rod on the dash acts as a primer and also as a regulator of your gasoline mixture. The new hot-spot manifold insures complete vaporization of the gasoline before it enters the combustion chamber of the engine.

As a matter of fact, the fuel system of the new Ford is so simple in design and so carefully made that it requires very little service attention.

The filter or sediment bulb should be cleaned at regular intervals and the carburetor screen removed and washed in gasoline. Occasionally the drain plug at the bottom of the carburetor should be removed and the carburetor drained for a few seconds.

Have your Ford dealer look after these little details for you when you have the car oiled and greased. A periodic checking-up costs little, but it has a great deal to do with long life and continuously good performance.

THE LAST OF THE DUANES

by Zane Grey
Illustrated by Vernie C. Christy

Duane had been three months out of the Nueces country. At El Paso he bought the finest horse he could find, and, armed and otherwise outfitted to suit him, he had taken to unknown trails.

Leisurely he rode from town to town, village to village, ranch to ranch, fitting his talk and occupation to the impression he wanted to make upon the different people (Continued on Page 6)

WHAT HAPPENED BEFORE

Buck Duane, quick on the draw, kills Cal Bain in self-defense and becomes an outlaw. After adventures on the road he goes to Bland Camp. There he wounds a man named Bosomer and becomes a bosom friend of another named Euechre. He meets Mrs. Bland and also Jennie, held prisoner by Bland, whom he rescues after a series of intrigues in which he is forced to deceive Mrs. Bland.

This leads to Duane's killing of Bland, the outlaw leader, and rushing off with Jennie, who is later lost. Duane roams the roads for years as an outlaw, finally going to meet Capt. MacNelly of the Rangers, who had asked to see him. MacNelly is kind to him, and offers him a pardon if he will accept an offer to become a Ranger and go after Cheseldine's gang. MacNelly has become interested in Duane after a Miss Lee had spoken in his behalf. Duane promises MacNelly to do him any service. Meanwhile MacNelly gives Duane much welcome news.

Duane goes to visit the Miss Lee who had intervened for him with MacNelly, and finds her to be none other but Jennie. They talk and tell each other of their love, and when Duane tells Jennie he is commissioned to capture Cheseldine she breaks down and begs him to break his word to MacNelly.

NINTH INSTALLMENT

Duane stared at her, amazed. He hardly knew what to say. He felt how little he understood women. His heart began to pound, and thrills ran over him. The sweetness of this woman—that she would go back to outlawry with him—appealed with strange power. "That course wouldn't be dishonorable," she continued. "No. But it's impossible. I'd die before I'd drag you into that life. You ought to remember an outlaw's days."

"I do. I'd rather have them again than lose you. Besides, we could hide in some canyon, some valley—and be happy."

Jennie came closer to him then, so close that she almost touched him. Something about her presence, the look of her eyes, of the heave of her breast, made that sweet, vague emotion grow.

"Duane, do you love me?" she asked. "Jennie, you're going to make it harder for me!" he burst out in despair.

"Tell me," she insisted. "Love you? I love you as no man ever loved a woman. Think of my lonely, wretched life; What have I known of women—of the sweetness of one? And now it bursts on me, Jennie, don't ask me that. I'm afraid of myself. I can't understand."

She came only closer, until now she touched him, her slender form reaching to his shoulders, and she leaned upon him with her face upturned. He felt her hands on his, and they were soft, clinging, strong like steel under velvet. He felt the rise and fall—the warmth of her breast.

A tremor ran over him. He tried to draw back, and if he succeeded a little her form swayed with him, pressing closer. She did not speak. She held her face up, and he was compelled to look. It was wonderful now—white, yet glowing, with the red lips parted, the dark eyes alluring. But that was not all. There was passion, unquenchable spirit, woman's resolve deep and mighty as life.

"I love you, Duane," she said. "I could suffer anything for you. I'm not selfish in this. It's for you. I know what your life has been. I can't let you go back to it. Listen—you don't know me. You think you're with the old Jennie. But I'm different. I've suffered and I've learned in these years. I believe I'm right in asking you to give up this ranger service. Will you?"

"Jennie, I can't. How could you ask it?"

"How could you go if you love me?"

"If you were a man you'd understand."

"But I'm a woman. You don't understand that!" she cried passionately. "Can you expect a man who lives like a hunted wolf to understand the finer feelings of a woman? I am outside, Jennie—the outcast—the outlaw. And even so, I've kept myself different from the others. But heaven knows—perhaps I'm coarse, hard, inhuman."

"Hush!" She put a hand over his lips. "I didn't mean to hurt you. I meant—Oh, Duane, I'm here ready for your arms—a starved woman—and you don't know it."

Duane became suddenly weak, and when he did take her into his arms he scarcely had strength to lift her to a seat beside him. She seemed more than dead weight. Her calmness had fled. She was throbbing, palpitating, quivering, with hot, wet cheeks and arms that clung to him like vines. She lifted her mouth to him, whispering: "Kiss me!"

Duane bent down, and her arms went around his neck and drew him close. With his lips on hers, he seemed to float away. That kiss closed his eyes, and he could not lift his head. He sat motionless, holding her blind and helpless, wrapped in a sweet, dark glory.

She kissed him—one long endless kiss—or else a thousand times. Her lips, her wet cheeks, her hair, the softness, the fragrance of her, the tender, moving clasp of her arms, the swell of her breast—all these enclosed him, bound him. She whispered and murmured broken and incoherent words—words that did not need to be understood, so full were they of sweetness and meaning and love.

He rose and let Jennie sit back against the cushions. Her fingers clung weakly to him. Her eyes hurt him. While he fumbled in his pocket for papers, to fetch forth the Governor's pardon, Jennie watched him; and when he laid the paper in her hands she let it drop. "Give that to mother," he said huskily. "Tell her—maybe I'll come back—there's a chance."

"Don't go! Don't go!" she cried. "I must. Dear, good-by. Remember I loved you! Jennie, let me go!"

She fell upon her knees with outstretched arms.

"Duane! Duane!" she wailed. "Like a murderer he backed away. "Jennie—dearest, I believe—I'll come back!" he whispered.

These last words were falsehood.

He reached the door, gave her one last piercing glance—to fix forever in memory that white face with its dark, staring, tragic eyes. "Duane!"

He fled with that moan like thunder, death, hell, in his ears.

About Your Health

Things You Should Know

by John Joseph Galen, M.D.

Chapped Hands

The "little things" do count, don't they? Of course they do; uncomfortable, unsightly—everybody dislikes to have a pair of hands dry, cracked, maybe bleeding. The sense of touch becomes impaired; putting chapped hands into the pocket, or rubbing them against the bed-clothes; even drawing on gloves,—produces a nasty, creepy feeling all over—but you know the symptoms, so why enumerate them?

Chapped hands may be prevented. How? First, by not exposing them to quick and extreme changes of temperature, dry or wet. If you are accustomed to indoor warmth, do not go out for a long jaunt in winter barehanded. Do not, after having the hands immersed in warm water, suddenly plunge them into very cold water, especially after having used strong soaps. In fact, no sensitive skin should be punished with some of the dirt radiators advertised to extensively; if your skin is naturally sensitive, never permit an irritant to be applied.

If you "feed your furnace" wear gloves while shoveling the coal—some gases are very irritating. If you acquired a case of chapped hands, set about to cure them. Your skin is of animal substance; animal substances are acceptable to it. Avoid vaseline, except as a possible protective. A simple soothing antiseptic rubbed into lanolin is good for the skin as an ointment. Cracks and fissures in the hands need to be filled with a soothing "cream" or "jelly." No soap, or a very mild one, and even that not too often. A few drops of almond oil, a few drops of carbolic acid, in an ounce of rose-water ointment, is good for the most delicate skin. And, keep your general health good.

"Last Of The Duane's"

He was in turn a cowboy, a rancher, a cattleman, a stock buyer, a boomer, a landhunter; and long before he reached the wild and inhospitable Ord he had acted the part of an outlaw drifting into new territory.

He passed on slowly because he wanted to learn the lay of the country, the location of villages and ranches, the work, habit, gossip, pleasures, and fears of the people with whom he came in contact. The one object most important to him—outlaws—he never mentioned; but, by talking all around it, sifting the old ranch and cattle story, he acquired a knowledge calculated to aid him much in his deep-laid plot. In this game time was of no moment; if necessary he would take years to accomplish his task.

The stupendous and perilous nature of it showed in the sly, wary preparation. When he heard Fletcher's name and faced Knell he knew he had reached the place he had sought—Ord was a hamlet on the fringe of the grazing country, of doubtful honesty, from which surely winding trails led down into the free and never disturbed paradise of outlaws—the Big Bend.

He saw a bright light before he made out the dark outline of the cabin. Then he heard voices, a merry whistle, a coarse song, and the clink of iron cooking utensils. He smelled fragrant wood-smoke. He saw moving dark figures cross the light. Evidently there was a wide door, or else the fire was out in the open.

The one quality that stood out above all others in the make-up of Abraham Lincoln was character.

His character was such that long before coming to fame he was known to his friends at "Honest Abe."

His career is an undying inspiration.

Reduction In ELECTRIC RATE

Lower rates for electricity for domestic and commercial purposes have been made voluntarily by the West Texas Utilities Company. The cost per kilowatt-hour has been reduced and the number of kilowatt-hours in each block before the next lower rate applies has been lessened. Based on the number of rooms in residences the new rate gives the small householder the same advantages of a lowering scale, as consumption increases, that larger users enjoy. The new rate enables consumers to make economical use of the many convenient and labor saving electric appliances.

THE NEW RATE FOR RESIDENCES

15 CENTS net per kilowatt-hour for the first four kilowatt-hours used per room per month.

9 CENTS net per kilowatt-hour for the next four kilowatt-hours used per room per month.

6 CENTS net per kilowatt-hour for all energy used in excess of the above amount. Minimum monthly bill $1.50 per meter.

DETERMINATION OF NUMBER OF ROOMS

The room count is based upon the ordinary real estate rating, and in making the count, alcoves, unfurnished attics, bathrooms, cellars, hallways, laundries, closets, pantries, open porches, garages, barns, and outbuildings will not be included. Premises with less than three rooms, real estate rating, will be classed as 3-room premises; those with more than seven rooms will be rated as 7-room premises. THE NUMBER OF OUTLETS AND APPLIANCES USED DO NOT AFFECT THE RATE.

Table Showing The New Net Rate And Number Of Kilowatt-Hours In Each Step

Size of Residence	FIRST STEP	SECOND STEP	THIRD STEP	6c
3 Rooms or less	15 cents per kilowatt-hour For First	9 cents per kilowatt-hour For Next	The NEW SIX CENT rate
4 Rooms	12 kilowatt-hours	12 kilowatt-hours	For All Kilowatt-Hours used each month over total of first and second steps, per kilowatt-hour.
5 Rooms	16 kilowatt-hours	16 kilowatt-hours
6 Rooms	20 kilowatt-hours	20 kilowatt-hours
7 Rooms or more	24 kilowatt-hours	28 kilowatt-hours

You will note how few kilowatt-hours per month need be used before you reach the new low SIX CENT price.

COMMERCIAL RATE

15 CENTS net per kilowatt-hour for the first 30 hours of maximum demand.

10 CENTS net per kilowatt-hour for the next 60 hours use of maximum demand.

5 CENTS net per kilowatt-hour for all energy used in excess of the above amounts.

The new rate makes liberal use of electricity for all purposes in commercial establishments inexpensive. Minimum monthly bill $1.50 per meter.

Further explanation of the rates will be given gladly upon request.

These rates effective in Ozona on the first day of February.

"Last Of The Duanes"

Fortune favored him. There was bushes, an old shed, a wood pile, all the cover he needed at that corner.

Before he peered between the rough corner of wall and the bush growing close to it Duane paused a moment. This excitement was different from that he had always felt when pusted. It had no bitterness, no pain, no dread. There was as much danger here, perhaps more, yet it was not the same. Then he looked.

He saw a bright fire, a red faced man bending over it whistling while he handled a steaming pot. Over him was a roofed shed built against the wall with two open sides and two supporting posts. Duane's second glance, not so blinded by the sudden bright light, made out other men, three in the shadows, two in the flare, but with back to him.

"It's a smoother trail by long odds, but ain't so short as this one right over the mountain," one outlaw was saying.

"What's eatin' you, Pan Handle?" ejaculated another. "Blossom an' me rode from Faraway Springs, where Poggin is with some of the gang."

"Excuse me, Phil. Shore I didn't see you come in, an' Boldt never said nothin'."

"It took you a long time to get here, but I guess that's just as well," spoke up a smooth, suave voice with a ring in it.

Cheseldine's voice! Here they were—Cheseldine—Phil Knell—Blossom Kane—Pan Handle Smith—Boldt—how well Duane remembered the names!—all here, the big men of Cheseldine's game, except the biggest—Poggin.

Duane had holed them, and his sensations of the moment deadened sight and sound of what was before him. He sank down controlled himself, silenced a mounting exultation, then, from a less strained position, he peered forth again.

The outlaws were waiting for supper. Their conversation might have been that of cowboys in camp, ranchers at a roundup. Duane listened with eager ears, waiting for the business talk that he felt would come. All the time he watched with the eyes of a wolf up on its quarry.

Blossom Kane was the lean-limbed messenger who had so angered Fletcher. Boldt was a giant in stature, dark, bearded, silent. Pan Handle Smith was the red faced cook, merry, profane, a short bow legged man resembling many rustlers Duane had known, particularly Luke Stevens.

And Knell, who set there, tall, slim, like a boy in build, like a boy in years, with his pale, smooth, expressionless face and his cold gray eyes.

And Cheseldine, who leaned against the wall, handsome, with his pointed face and beard, like an aristocrat, resembled many a rich Louisiana planter Duane had met. The sixth man sat so much in the shadow that he could not be plainly discerned, and though addressed, his name was not mentioned.

Pan Handle Smith carried pots and pans into the cabin, and cheerfully called out: "If you gents air hungry fer grub don't look fer me to feed you with a spoon."

The outlaws piled inside, made a great bustle and clatter as they sat to their meal. Like hungry men they talked little.

Duane waited there a while, then guardedly got up and crept round to the other side of the cabin. After he became used to the dark again he ventured to steal along the wall to the crack, and peeped in. The outlaws were in the first room and could not be seen.

For Duane the twenty-fifth of October seemed a whole lifetime in coming. When that day dawned he left a lonely camp in the brush and rode into Bradford.

He went to the old inn-keeper, with whom he had made acquaintance, and leaving his horse in the stable set off in search of Buell.

Inquiry discovered the night operator at his boarding-house asleep. Duane had him awakened. Buell came in heavy-eyed, but curious, half-expectant.

"Buell, I'm sorry to disturb you," said Duane, "but my business is urgent. You can aid me. I'm going to arrest a man here to-day, a prominent citizen. Now it's likely some of his friends—somebody, at any rate—will shove a gun in your face, or the day operator's, and make you send telegrams along the line."

Dr. Frank Crane Says

This newspaper will for some weeks continue to publish the work of the late Dr. Frank Crane. Dr. Crane recently passed away at Nice, France. Before leaving for Europe he had prepared a number of articles in advance.

THEORY PAYS

A very common notion is that theory has not much to do with practice.

We dismiss a proposition with a wave of the hand when we characterize it as nothing but theory, or as impractical idealism.

We praise the inventor who devises some useful application of knowledge, but have a tendency to overlook the discoverer who finds out the knowledge that the inventor applied.

As a matter of fact, all our great inventions rest upon great discoveries made by painstaking theorists who love knowledge for itself alone.

Wireless telegraphy, the telephone, aeroplanes, radium, antiseptics, antitoxins, spectrum analysis and X-rays were all discovered in the course of purely scientific and theoretical investigation.

Lord Kelvin said that no great law in natural philosophy had ever been discovered as a result of practical experiment, and that "the instances are innumerable of investigations apparently quite useless which led to the most valuable results."

For eighteen centuries many great minds gave their lives to studying conic sections. This work was far from useless, for the laws of projectiles, the building of great bridges, the curves of ships and the rules of navigation depend upon conic sections.

Wireless telegraphy goes back to the studies of Lagrange in purely abstract mathematics, and to Professor William Thomson, who laid the foundation of electric oscillations.

The man of deeds, the practical man would be saved many a foolish experiment and would be kept back from many a useless trial if he knew the background of thought that should underlie his actions.

Mrs. Leta Hawkins and baby and Mrs. Evert White returned Tuesday from Waco.
