A PRESCRIPTION

The following daily routine will make you healthy and incidentally a little wealthier every day you use it:

TWIST the handle of the telephone briskly, lift the receiver and listen intently for a minute to see from what direction the wind is blowing. Repeat as often as necessary to get results and then gently, oh, very gently, breathe into the mouth-piece, "No. 3, Please,"

Immediately, or thirty minutes later, someone will bawl into your ear - "FLOWERS GROCERY!?" Then take a grip on yourself, and in a pleasant modulated voice ask for the vegetable lay out. In a minute you will hear that "this isn't vegetable day, but we have the following—" Revise your menu by mental gymnastics and order, "Oh, anything; the baby is crying again, and the wash pot is boiling over at the same time. Can I get this right away?"

If he is a good salesman, he will say, "Yes," and have a perfect alibi if it isn't there in 30 minutes.

Pretty soon Dinner is past, the dishes washed, the baby asleep, and you settle down to a LOVE STORY magazine, secure in the knowledge that there is plenty for supper.

Years later, it seems, you look up in that indolent, languid way women have when they read Love Stories, and find the Western sky shot with a myriad of color.

One by one they palled upon me. No manner of life, no change of scene, could cure me of my love I fell ill, and I knew that my heart was breaking. Not a word of pity to sweeten those weary days of exile; not a word of hope to repay me for all that I had risked to see her again. Soon I knew the reason-another love had stolen away her heart. There was an Englishman visiting her daily at Palermo; and she told me calmly one day that she loved him, and intended to become his wife. She forgot my long years of devoted service; she forgot her own unspoken, yet understood promise; she forgot all that I had suffered for her; she forgot that her words must sound to me as the death warrant of all joy and happiness in this world. And she forgot, too, that I was a Marioni! Was I wrong, I wonder, Margharita, that I quarreled with him!
