PORTUGAL
Travellers returning from the little-known country of Portugal report that it is the most honest country in the world. In the hotels the key to the room is hung on a hook outside of your door and nobody ever steals anything. You can leave your suitcase, your camera or your overcoat on a railroad train or a station platform or in a parked car in the street, and nobody bothers them. The people are polite and hospitable as well as honest. If a sudden shower comes up, house doors open and the occupants ask passersby to step in for shelter until the rain stops.

That sounds like an earthly paradise. It would be perhaps, if Portugal had a stable government. In the last twenty-six years there have been twenty-six revolutions. Under the present President, General Carmona, the little nation is getting along nicely.

POPULATION
Early reports from the Census office indicate that the decline in the birthrate in the past ten years is greater than ever. It begins to look as if, in another ten years we will have come to an annual increase of only 500,000 or less than one half of one per cent in population. And that will have a tremendous economic significance.

Cities will not grow so fast. Fewer new schools will be needed. Real estate values will not increase so rapidly. Fewer homes will be built. The proportion of elderly people to young will be larger, and old age pensions and retirements will become matters of prime importance.

Those are not considerations for the distant future. They are based upon facts which are here, now, and may affect economic conditions very soon.

SKYSCRAPERS
New York's newest skyscraper, to occupy an entire city block on the East River waterfront at the foot of Wall Street, will be 105 stories high. There is no economic limit to height except the congestion of traffic which comes from crowding so many people into a small area.

Cincinnati has a new solution for the skyscraper problem. A new building going up there will be 46 stories high and will be a combination of office buildings, hotel and parking garage, with two large department stores and numerous specialty shops on the lower floors.

SMITHSONIAN
More than 100 years ago James Smithson, a wealthy Englishman who was the illegitimate son of a British nobleman, left his entire fortune to the United States of America to found "an institution for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men." Congress appropriated $6,500,000 to add to the enlargement of the Smithsonian Institution and its National Museum.

Smithson's bequest and the purpose to which it has been put have been worth uncountable millions to America. Research in pure science conducted by the men in charge of the institution has done more toward the development of our national resources than any other one cause, so those familiar with the matter say. It is the center to which everybody who wants to know anything about American soils, rocks, fishes, plants, trees, insects or animals goes for precise information. It is also the greatest source of information on applied science in the form of in-

Kincaid Again Heads Sheepmen

Ozona Man Elected For Seventh Time; Baggett Re-Elected

By Sam Ashburn
BRADY, Aug. 1.—San Angelo was chosen as the 1931 meeting place of the Texas Sheep & Goat Raisers Association. T. A. Kincaid of Ozona was named president of the organization for the seventh time, other officers were re-elected and resolutions adopted at the business meeting of the fifteenth annual gathering here tonight.

The proposal of separating the annual meeting and the ram sale has been taken under consideration by a committee of nine appointed tonight. The action was taken following the suggestion by Doss H. Berry, manager of the San Angelo Board of City Development, who also requested that the ram sale be located permanently in his city.

The plan of a national advertising campaign calling for the annual expenditure of $500,000 for five years was endorsed as probably the most effective method to combat the present under-consumption situation. A committee of seven was appointed to arrange plans for raising Texas' $72,000 share of the national plan. One member of the committee will go to the annual meeting of the National Wool Growers' Association in Salt Lake City, August 23, to further the plan there.

New Board Members Named
Other officers re-elected tonight include Roger Gillis of Del Rio as first vice president, and V. A. Brown as second vice president. Judge James Cornell of San Angelo continues as association attorney and Bright Baggett was reappointed secretary. The new members of the board are Tom Henderson of Eldorado, Will Whitehead of Del Rio and George Fletcher of Mills County. Walter Spears and Charlie Miller were reappointed as inspectors for the association.

The committee which will consider the resolution on separation of the sale and meeting, perhaps permanently locating the sale is composed of Abe Mayer, E. K. Fawcett, Vic Pierce, D. T. Jones, J. T. Baker, Fred Earwood, T. L. Drisdale, James Brooks and Bob Martin.

The committee on the advertising campaign fund and plan includes Sol Mayer, Bob Martin, T. L. Drisdale, J. T. Baker, Ed. Mayer, Vic Pierce and H. W. Rieck. One of them will go to Salt Lake City next month.

Kincaid Action Endorsed
Other resolutions, drawn by the committee headed by Judge Cornell, included the endorsement of the action by President Kincaid in his effort to take from the tariff bill the provision allowing free of duty entry of stock brought back into the United States from Mexico under certain conditions. A rising vote showed the membership's feelings toward their president's actions.

Lions Buy Piano For Use In Club Weekly Programs
A brand new Werner piano, originally priced at around $425, was purchased for less than half price at a sale of bankrupt stock in San Angelo last Saturday by a committee representing the Ozona Lions Club.

The committee, which was appointed by the president at the meeting Monday of last week, hung up a record for prompt accomplishment of its purpose. The piano was purchased Saturday, delivered Monday morning and ready for use at the meeting of the club at noon Monday. The purchase was made by L. L. Bewley, with M. M. Fulmer the other member of the committee.

Mrs. H. H. Carden of Belton returned Friday with her mother, Mrs. Ralph Watson, for a visit with her parents. Mrs. Watson has been visiting her in Belton.

Boy Scouts To Place Big Sign Of Rocks On Hill Near Town

A huge sign, made entirely of rocks, in letters 25 feet square, will soon be in place on the hill just south of Ozona to announce to the tourist and visitor that this is "Ozona."

This big sign will be built by Ozona Boy Scouts under the leadership of Leonard Hensley, scoutmaster, and A. W. Jones, committee chairman. Plans for the work were laid at a meeting of Scouts held on the site Tuesday night when the big letters were blocked off and outlined and everything placed in readiness for starting the work. The boys and leaders carried lunches to the hillside and enjoyed a number of games while the planning was under way.

Rocks will be gathered by the Scouts from the nearby hills and put in place to make the giant letters. After the rocks are in place they will be given a coat of white paint and it is believed that the sign will be visible for several miles. Under the word "Ozona" will be the Boy Scout initials "B. S. A." in smaller letters.

The Ozona Scout troop, consisting of sixteen members, is divided into two patrols and these patrols will be pitted against each other in making the sign. The boys will combine forces in laying rocks for the center "O" in the word and then each patrol will be assigned two letters on each side of the central one. The patrol completing its assigned two letters first will be declared the prize winner. The prize to be awarded the winning patrol has not yet been decided upon.

It is estimated that a month or two will be required to complete the sign. A big picnic jubilee and dedication ceremonies will be held when the sign is completed with San Angelo Scout officials in attendance.

Mayme Kirkpatrick Among 32 Graduates San Marcos Academy

SAN MARCOS, Tex., Aug. 6.—Commencement week will begin at San Marcos Academy on August 10. The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered on that date, at the eleven o'clock service of the First Baptist Church, by Reverend E. S. Hutcherson of Cameron. The culmination of the affairs will be August 15, when Dr. J. C. McElhannon will address the thirty-two graduates, on the Academy campus at 8 o'clock. Dr. McElhannon dean of Sam Houston State Teachers College at Huntsville, was formerly dean of San Marcos Academy.

Among the thirty-two graduates is Mayme Kirkpatrick, daughter of Mrs. Myrtle Mitchell of Ozona. Mayme has been in the Academy for several years, and it is with regret that the school sees her leave.

C. B. Hudspeth Backs Sterling

DEL RIO, Aug. 4.—Claude B. Hudspeth, retiring member of congress from the 16th congressional district, has issued an unqualified indorsement of the candidacy of R. S. Sterling for governor, according to a statement made in Houston by William Strauss, campaign manager for Mr. Sterling.

The announcement came after a conference with W. M. Abbey of Del Rio, a staunch Sterling supporter and a close friend of Mr. Hudspeth. In a long distance telephone conversation from Hot Springs, Ark., to Houston, Congressman Hudspeth said:

"While Mr. Sterling beat one of the best friends I have, James Young, I feel that every man and woman in Texas, interested in good clean, honest government, should unitedly support Mr. Sterling for governor."

Mrs. Ben Lemmons left Saturday for a visit in St. Louis and Chicago. She will join Mr. Lemmons in Chicago to do their fall buying for the Lemmons Dry Goods Co.

Sheepmen Back President Kincaid

Stand On Tariff Question Is Endorsed By Assn. At Brady

BRADY, Aug. 2.—The membership of the Sheep and Goat Raisers Association of Texas rendered a decision in favor of T. A. Kincaid in the controversy between Mr. Kincaid and C. B. Hudspeth congressman, a matter that has appeared in the columns of the press of the southwest in recent weeks.

The decision was given by a rising vote here the closing night of the convention as the convention endorsed by acclamation the action of Mr. Kincaid in seeking the withdrawal from the tariff bill of the provision which permits the free of duty entry of livestock from Mexico after they have been taken to that country for temporary grazing or after they have strayed across the border. A short time ago the press of the southwest published a letter written by Mr. Hudspeth to Mr. Kincaid.

Something was said by Mr. Hudspeth about Mr. Kincaid trying the business of being a congressman. The Sheep and Goat Raisers Association took up the cue and suggested that if Mr. Kincaid offered for office they would give him support.

Other resolutions endorsed the Southern Tariff Association, recommended the abrogation of the Packers Consent Decree, and asked continued support of the predatory animal control work. Several other resolutions were passed. The resolution endorsing Mr. Kincaid's stand is given below:

WHEREAS, we have upon many occasions endorsed the official acts of Hon. C. B. Hudspeth, as Congressman, in behalf of our industry; have held and do hold him in the highest esteem, are his personal and political friends; regret his retirement to private life, deeply regret that his retirement is due to failing health, and hope for him a complete recovery and return to perfect health; and

WHEREAS, Mr. T. A. Kincaid, our president, has endeared himself to us by his honest, constant persistent and energetic work in behalf of our industry, resulting in greatest good, and is held in as high esteem as any man in the association, or out of it, in public or private life; and

WHEREAS, there appears in the Hawley-Smoot Tariff Bill, (similar to provisions appearing in former tariff bills) a clause substantially as follows:

"Horses, mules, asses, cattle, sheep and other domestic animals, straying across the boundary line in to any foreign country, or driven across such boundary line by the owner for temporary pasturage purposes only together with their offspring, shall be dutiable unless brought back to the United States, within eight months in which case they shall be free of duty."

CARNIVAL TO BE STAGED BY LIONS FRIDAY

Date Changed From Saturday To Friday Evening For Event

BIG TIME PLANNED

Social Outing And Entertainment To Be Gala Affair

Hundreds of persons are expected to take part in the fun and frolic to be enjoyed next Friday night when the Ozona Lions Club will stage a carnival on the miniature golf course lot at the corner of Powell Avenue and the El Paso road beginning at 8 o'clock.

Change of date for the carnival from Saturday night to Friday night was decided upon the first of the week by committees in charge of arrangements. Conflict with business houses holding open later Saturday nights and other attractions on this night prompted the change of dates. It is believed by the committee that Friday night will be more convenient date for a larger number of people and will permit many who would leave the city over the weekend to attend the festival.

J. R. Kersey, manager of the Ozona Theatre, has volunteered to cancel his theater performance for Friday night. The picture "Mamba" scheduled for Thursday and Friday nights of this week is being run on Wednesday and Thursday nights instead, and there will be no picture show on Friday night.

Lions who will have charge of the various booths and shows will meet at the grounds Thursday evening to perfect plans, build booths and get everything in readiness for the evening of fun.

The attractions to be offered during the evening will consist of a number of carnival games, shows, doll stands and similar carnival attractions. The miniature golf course, which has been closed for several weeks, will be re-opened with permission of the West Texas Lumber Company and will be open for play during the evening.

Committees in charge of the carnival have announced that there will be no sells or gags perpetrated, that all of the games and shows will be "on the level" and worth the money.

"This is not a 'donation' affair," Hugh Childress, Jr., secretary of the club declared. "We are going to give the people something worth their money and they are going to have a lot of fun spending it."

Nothing on the grounds will cost over 15 cents, it has been announced. The purpose of the carnival is primarily to provide an evening of entertainment for the people of Ozona, an occasion for a social gathering in the outdoors with the carnival attractions for amusement. Receipts from the various booths and from the operation of the golf course will go into the Lions Club treasury to be used in community development projects.

One of the features of the evening's entertainment will be the selection of the most popular girl in Ozona. This selection will be made by votes cast by patrons of the carnival. Every purchase made during the evening will entitle the purchaser to one vote, the votes to be cast at the golf course office. The winner of this popularity contest will be awarded $5 cash by the Lions Club.

Another feature will be an auction sale of home-made cakes. Around ten home-made cakes have been donated for this sale and at intervals during the evening leather-lunged auctioneers will sell these cakes to highest bidders.

Mrs. and Mrs. T. A. Kincaid, Sr., T. A. Kincaid, Jr., and Miss Mary Kincaid returned Saturday from Brady where they had spent the last week at the Sheep and Goat Raisers Association convention.

THURSDAY, AUG. 7, 1930.

Lynch Davidson and the Fort Worth Star-Telegram were placed in an embarrassing situation as a result of the outcome of the primary election.

But both Mr. Davidson and the Star-Telegram made the mistake of centering their attack on the opposition on Mr. Sterling instead of on the Fergusons.

But Lynch Davidson is willing to take up the bludgeon for a united fight on the threatened blight of Fergusonism in Texas.

Speaking of Mr. Sterling's road bond plan and his explanations that such a plan must necessarily be approved by the people before it can be put into effect.

"Mr. Sterling has said that he would accept the verdict of the people on this question.

that the people have spoken definitely against the 'bond issue.' 'The Fergusons in the governor's chair are, of course, unthinkable,' Mr. Davidson says at another point in his statement.

The Star-Telegram, too, although bitterly opposed to Mr. Sterling in the first primary now admits that even to the publisher of that paper he is preferable to the Fergusons.

Although their stand must necessarily be lacking in enthusiasm by reason of their spirited fight on the Houston candidate in the first primary, the state should have more respect for the Star-Telegram for Lynch Davidson than for Clint Small, the defeated candidate and runner-up.

An aspirant for public office in Texas who does not openly oppose Fergusonism and all it stands for should be snowed under mercilessly and we predict that Mr. Small is due for disappointment when he next offers for office in Texas.

The Lions Club Carnival to be staged at the miniature golf course grounds in the south edge of town Friday night will be a social get-together event for Ozona as well as a lot of clean fun and entertainment for the evening.

We hasten to plead not guilty. Last week The Stockman carried a matrimonial ad that invited answers to this paper.

The Stockman is in receipt of a letter from Mrs. S. E. Couch from San Diego, California, asking that we send her Stockman to her there.

"We hear that the heat is terrible in Texas," Mrs. Couch writes. "We have had two warm days here, no more, I know you have dust if no rain, haven't you?"

There's No Holding You When It Gets Started By Albert T. Reid

Yet for all that give me Texas and Ozona where you get a cheery smile and a 'How do you do' once in a while.

All of which goes to prove a lot of the things we have been saying about Ozona.

Examine the statements sent you by the Ozona business firms and see where they are printed. Look for the imprint in tiny type on the face of the bill or invoice and see if the name of your local printing concern appears thereon.

"Soapy" Moody in his card of thanks to the voters of the state said: "My laundry wagon looked better to me Monday morning than the glimmering picture of the Governor's Mansion did to the minds of those poor candidates who got beat."

"STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN" That old familiar crossboard sign posted on the railroad right-of-way at every crossing was good enough in the horse and buggy days.

Now that same old road and crossing is a stretch of glassy, smooth highway. Your motor purrs quietly and you roll at a speed often in excess of the train itself.

The old "Stop, look and listen" crossboard is still there and is probably augmented by a more elaborate signalling device of one sort or another.

Many accidents occur at grade crossings where the railroad company has taken every precaution possible in the way of erecting standard signalling devices.

train hits an automobile, or just as often an automobile runs into the side of a passing train.

In this day of fast-moving traffic the best of warning devices upon the railroad right-of-way at a crossing too often come upon the driver as a surprise without giving him sufficient time to stop, or to look or listen.

A standardized warning of a size and character that must attract the attention of every driver, placed by state highway departments at a sufficient distance from grade crossings, could do much to lower the yearly death and accident toll.—Alpine Avalanche.

Of course, the talk was more for a political purpose than for anything else, when some candidate for governor took the opportunity to charge that Sam Harbin, secretary of the State Press Association, was trying to buy the press of the country by sending the various newspapers advertising booting the cause of Ross Sterling.

Miss Nobody from Nowhere

BY ELIZABETH JORDAN

"Thank you, Mr. Henderson. My name is Eric Hamilton, and I'm from Chicago, too. That ought to be a bond."

"Thanks. And now," Henderson added in a level tone, "I'd like to have you tell me what you meant by speaking of Miss Carrington as your wife."

Eric permitted himself a glance of surprise, while mentally he registered the name.

"I meant that the lady and I are married," he suavely informed the caller.

"Since when?"

"Oh, for some little time."

"The hotel people didn't seem to know anything about it. They called her Miss Parsons."

"One doesn't confide all one's affairs to the hotel people, you know," Hamilton mildly pointed out. "And I admit we're Newly Weds. Still," he added, "we meant to tell them tonight."

"They call Miss Carrington, 'Miss Berson' uptown and 'Miss Parsons' at this hotel. I can't understand," Henderson went on as Hamilton took this in silence, "why she changed her name after skipping out the way she did. But why the devil should she have two names?"

"Four," Hamilton corrected: "Carrington, Parsons, Berson and Hamilton. But Hamilton is the real one. Berson is the result of a blunder. Some one uptown twisted Parsons into Berson and the habit spread."

"Damn'd queer, I call it," Henderson muttered. "And cutting me dead when I finally found her," he ended. "That's beyond belief!"

As Hamilton made no comment on this outburst, Henderson added with an evident effort at self-control:

"Wasn't this marriage of yours rather sudden?"

"I suppose you might call it so," Eric conceded. "But we've known each other more than a fortnight, and lots of couples don't wait that long. Strangers in the same town get acquainted in a few weeks of vacation, you know, better than they ordinarily would in a year," he bromidically pointed out.

"Vacation!" Henderson broke out, so loudly that his companion had to remind him of the time and place by an apprehensive look around the room. It worked. Henderson lowered his voice.

"Do you realize, young man, that this bride of yours skipped out, without warning, a week before she was billed to make her first American appearance at the most important musical event of the year flood spferers? And that isn't all she's done," he ended with a groan.

"No," Hamilton slowly admitted. "I didn't realize that. What else has she done?"

Henderson sent him a sudden peering look from his near-sighted eyes, but he was too full of his own troubles to be analytical.

"She's wrecked half a dozen October concert engagements, that is what she has done," he bitterly announced, "including one with the Philadelphia Orchestra. And she has knocked on the head the prettiest autumn recital ever planned for an artiste. It was to come off early next month. That was bad enough; but of course we all made allowances for her because of the awful shock she'd had—"

"She hasn't said much about that shock," Eric confessed. "I wish you would tell me the whole story."

Henderson leaned nearer and peered into his face again, this time more closely.

"See here," he suddenly demanded. "Why should I talk over Miss Carrington's affairs with you? I don't know anything about you."

"We're fifty-fifty on that," Hamilton reminded him. "But I'm her husband."

"I've only your word for it."

"I can give you proof any time it's necessary. But first I want to know a whole lot more about you. Where do you come in on Eve's affairs?"

Henderson turned squarely and faced him. He seemed unable to speak.

"Do you mean to say," he inquired at last, "that my name does not mean anything more than a name to you and that Eve Carrington married you without telling you about me?"

"Not a thing. Not a word."

Henderson hunched forward, eyes on the rug at his feet.

"Well," he muttered, "that certainly ties up the package . . . with a string! I thought no musician could surprise me, for the Lord knows," emphasizing every word, "but this—" He straightened and met Hamilton's sympathetic eyes.

"You see," he added deliberately, "I happen to be Eve's father's life-long friend, and her guardian, and her manager, and—the man she was going to marry!"

Hamilton's breath caught under the blow, but he took it with outward calmness.

"Now that we understand each other, suppose you tell me about the shock she had before she left Chicago," he suggested. "She does not even mention it."

"That's easy, though I guess you've read most of the details. You know all about the drownings, of course."

"I don't even know what you mean."

Henderson took out his handkerchief, and wiped his moist face.

"It's very odd you don't know," he muttered. "Hasn't Eve told you anything at all?"

"I've admitted that she hasn't discussed the shock."

"I suppose that isn't strange, really. She was shot to pieces by it, poor girl."

Eric caught his arm.

"Mr. Henderson," he cried, "I wish you'd stop beating about the bush and tell me that whole story from start to finish."

"All right," Henderson agreed. He went on with increasing seriousness:

"I'll start at the beginning. Eve was pretty tired when she got back to America the first of July, after her European tour, and the year ahead of her here was going to be just as strenuous as the past year. She's a genius, you know—a wonder. Even now there isn't another American pianiste who can touch her. She'll head all the women players of the world in a few years more. You don't need to know any thing about music to realize she's a genius," Henderson was saying. "You have only to hear her play."

"I've never heard her play."

Hamilton spoke absently, irritated by the departure from the main theme. He immediately regretted his words, for Henderson was plainly amazed by them.

"What!" he gasped. "You've known Eve Carrington more than two weeks and haven't heard her play! Still," he now remembered,

"she had turned from her music completely during that last week in Chicago—"

"You were talking about the Heckner drownings," Eric reminded him.

Henderson shook his gray head. "It doesn't seem possible," he brought out. "I can't imagine Eve away from the piano that long, even in the nervous state she was in. But I suppose it's no more impossible than the rest of this business."

"Eve went to Mackinac early in August for a fortnight's rest. She was the guest of the Heckners, in their summer home out there. She's an intimate friend of Mrs. Heckner, who is devoted to her and was doing everything she could to make Eve's first American season a big success."

"Eve is strong for boating and every sort of outdoor sport," Henderson went on, having replaced the spectacles. "Learned 'em when she was a kid, and keeps herself fit that way. The Heckner children (there were four of them) were crazy about her, and spent most of their time at her heels. They were just learning to row and swim, but of course they were never allowed to go off by themselves. However, they knew where there was an old boat a mile or so up the beach, and they sneaked off alone one morning and got that boat into the water and pushed out in it. Their governess thought they had merely run away from her to play on the sand, but just the same, she chased along the beach, looking for them, and on the way another child met her and told her what the youngsters had done. They were pretty far out by that time."

"Yes. Go on."

"It was early and the shore was almost deserted; but Eve had happened along with two women she walked with every morning. She and her friends had been standing for a few minutes watching the rowboat and wondering why the devil it was acting so queer. Suddenly they saw it capsize . . . and at the same time the Heckner governess came running toward them, off her head with terror and shrieking that all the children had been in that boat."

Henderson stopped again.

"Eve took just time enough to kick off her shoes before she raced into the water and started for the kids. She realized that it was all up to her for most of the men were away that day, and the governess and the other two women couldn't swim a stroke. One of them had sense enough to rush back toward town for help, and the other raced around on the sand, yelling."

He stopped again, took the big cigar from his lips, and looked at it as if wondering how it got there.

"I knew those kids myself," he explained. "I'd been at Mackinac over the previous week-end and I Oh, well . . ." He restored the cigar to his mouth, puffed at it fiercely for a moment, and resumed:

"Eve's a good swimmer, but it was a hard pull, for the boat had upset almost a quarter of a mile from shore and her skirt was heavy and the lake was rough. All four youngsters were clinging to the boat when she got out to them, and when they saw her, the twin boys—ten, they were—began to laugh. They thought it was all over now but the fun of rescue. They told her to take the girls first, which of course she'd have done anyway, so she took the youngest, little Nancy Heckner, who is only seven, and brought her in all right. She hung Nancy to the women on shore, to be looked after, and she tore off her soaked skirt and went right out again for the next girl, Mary, who isn't quite nine. Mary was about ready to go under by this time, and the twins were trying their best to help her."

"There wasn't any smiling now, but the boys had bucked up when their sister was taken off their hands, and promised Eve they'd hold on till she got back. But Herman said good-by as she started off, and she didn't like that indication or the way he had looked. It rattled her and she had an awful time getting Mary to shore, for the kid was in a panic. The newspaper men did a lot of fancy writing on that second rescue. She got Mary to shore, though, and started back the third time. The women tried to hold her then, for they saw she was about all in, but she went. She went," he repeated, softly. "The twins sank before she reached them, so she started diving . . ."

"Go on!" Hamilton begged again and the big man obeyed after a glance at him. It was clear to each of them now that the other loved the girl they were discussing.

"The woman that ran back to town had found some men in a field," Henderson continued, "and they finally got a boat and reached Eve just in time to save her. It took almost an hour to bring her back to consciousness after they got her ashore. They brought back one of the twins, Herman, with her, but he was dead when they got him to the surface. Henry's body wasn't recovered till that afternoon. It was a ghastly business . . . but Eve saved the two little girls."

"By God! that was stunning!" Hamilton said on a choked breath.

"Of course it was stunning," Henderson agreed.

"She was just about off her head for ten days after the accident," he went on, "over the two boys she couldn't save. She had been awfully fond of those kids, and they had gone through the whole thing so well. She had expected to bring them both in together; they'd been so plucky she was sure she could manage it. . . . She said she kept hearing Herman's good-by to her. It was always in her ears. Oh, well . . ." he repeated, and stopped for a minute, staring before him as if following the scene he had described.

"We thought she'd come around in a few days," he resumed philosophically. "We called doctors and a nurse and kept her quiet . . . but she was terribly strung up. Could not forget the accident . . . could not stand music . . . could not see any one . . . could not eat . . . could

Honesty Issue Says Sterling

Run-Off Campaign Opened With Attack On Fergusonism

The issue of honesty and responsibility in government overshadows all other issues, and the threat of Fergusonism must be faced and defeated, Ross Sterling of Houston declared Friday in a statement opening the runoff campaign for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

"Every department of government which Jim Ferguson touched and he tried to touch nearly all of them during the administration, so-called, of his wife, he left soiled and discredited," Mr. Sterling said. "Jim Ferguson has not been converted from his old and devious ways."

In his reference to the Fergusonism, Mr. Sterling detailed some of the history of the Langhorn murder and assault cases, and revealed that a deed of trust is on record in Washington, transferring a valuable farm from the elder Langhorns to Jim Ferguson.

Mr. Sterling's statement in part follows:

To the People of Texas:
I made the best fight that I could in the campaign preceding the recent primary election. I am deeply grateful to those who supported me, and I shall always have a warm place in my heart for them. I have not the slightest ill will or resentment for those who supported other candidates, since they voted for the candidate of their choice.

The first primary has placed Mrs. Ferguson and myself in the runoff to be held on August 23. The friends of good government in Texas are now confronted with a choice between my nomination for governor and the return to power of James E. Ferguson, the impeached governor of Texas, not eligible to hold office himself, but who is running in his wife's name. I have made a clean campaign, discussing business, financial and economic problems, which will confront an honest and businesslike administration of the affairs of our state. The other candidates in the late primary, as well as their supporters, I am convinced, stand for an honest and efficient government, and they too are opposed to the return of "Fergusonism." And I invite the co-operation as well as the support of all right-thinking people who believe that "righteousness exalteth a nation."

Honesty Paramount
This issue overshadows all others now—honesty and responsibility in government. Without responsibility on the part of those who exercise the powers of an office, the people can have no assurance that their affairs will be administered with integrity. A return to the practices of Fergusonism is unthinkable. It never was intended by those who founded and framed our government that one person should hold the title to an office while another, claiming to act in his private capacity, dictates the official conduct. The spectacle of an ex-governor, impeached for high crimes and corruption in office, with his wife as governor in name only, while he in fact directs her official actions, is unheard of as far as I have ever known in the history of any free government, except once, and that was in our own great state, when Ferguson undertook to be governor of Texas in the name of his wife.

That disastrous and ridiculous experiment brought such discredit and humiliation upon our state and her people that at the first opportunity the good people of Texas repudiated that misfit at the ballot box by an overwhelming majority, resulting in the defeat and retirement of Mrs. Ferguson.

Contest of Memory

The candidacy of Jim Ferguson now in the name of his wife is a mere memory contest. Have we forgotten the innumerable instances, many of them nauseating, in which the powers of the governor's office were abused and misused, while the wife was shielded by the plea that she did not know what was going on, and the husband who laid before her the dotted line on which she was to sign, could not be held responsible by law? How many crimes have been committed in the name of "practicing law"? How long will the reputable lawyers of Texas tolerate such an outrage upon their profession, which has been adorned by such long list of high and honorable names?

Every department of the government which Jim Ferguson touched, and he tried to touch nearly all of them, during the administration, so-called, of his wife, he left soiled and discredited. I mention one in this connection—if his administration had lasted 90 days longer, it would have been virtually necessary to nail up the doors of the great highway department which he and his administrators of that office left in scandal and in bankruptcy. His highway commissioners, with whom he "sat in" constantly, had wasted millions of the people's money and at the same time had so neglected and butchered the maintenance of our highway system that the federal government in disgust had withheld all federal aid from Texas until that regime was moved out of the state capitol and out of the highway office.

Abuse Of Pardons

Through a policy under which it was deemed more important to grant favors to the elect than to pay labor for its service to the state of Texas, they left more than $6,000,000 of overdue indebtedness some of which was overdue for six months, with about $600,000 in the treasury to meet these liabilities.

The malodor of the abuse of the pardon power during the reign of James E. Ferguson still lingers when the subject is remembered, while favorites and political satellites made money "practicing law." The question now is, shall the people of Texas, by their ballots, restore to power such an unholy alliance and regime? We were once the subject of ridicule throughout the country, brought about by this maladministration. Will the people of Texas once more permit this man, through setting up his wife as governor of this state, to enjoy immunity from the law and from the righteous wrath of the people of this state, while he with one hand practices law and acts as an individual private citizen, and with the other hand he dominates and controls the official acts of the highest office within our gift?

Record Is Plain

We do not have to resort to speculation or conjecture to find out what Fergusonism means. It is spread on the records of our state. Elevated to the office of governor in his own name he was impeached for official misconduct before the senate of Texas, found guilty, removed from office, and barred forever after from holding any office of honor or trust in this state. He was found guilty of appropriating public money to his own individual benefit and profit in violation of law, of taking public money to pay his private debts and of receiving large sums in currency from sources which he refused to divulge. His wife then presented herself a candidate for governor, pleading that she desired the office only, and for one term only, in order that the family name might not go down to her posterity altogether dishonored and disgraced. Upon her election her husband took charge of the office, she became a mere rubber stamp, and though he owed no official responsibility to the people of Texas, and could not be made to answer to the laws of his state for the exercise of powers which he usurped, he made the name of the state of Texas a by-word throughout the world. The presence of an irresponsible power in the office of the governor of Texas was a blow at the very foundation of our democratic government. It would not be tolerated in any other case. Can one imagine a lawyer running his wife, wholly unfitted, for the office of judge, and when she was elevated to the bench sitting beside her to dictate her official decisions while taking fees from the parties under the pretext that he was a private practitioner of the law?

Langhorn Case

It affords me no pleasure to remember, even, the long list of official misdeeds committed by this unheard-of combination of husband and wife, sitting as governor. But there is one instance which we can not forget, even if we would. A man named Langhorn assaulted two young girls and murdered one of them. He was convicted and given the death penalty. Before sentence of law was pronounced against him by the court, Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, governor of Texas, commuted the death sentence to life imprisonment. Later on, a deed of trust was placed of record and is now of record in Washington county, from the elder Langhorn, to a large valuable tract of land in that county to a trustee for the benefit of Jim Ferguson and others. Ferguson explains this latter transaction by stating that it was an attorney's fee which he had earned in defending young Langhorn in a damage suit growing out of his assault on the two girls. Maybe so.

Jim Ferguson has not been converted from his old and devious ways; he is the same Jim Ferguson whom we used to know, except that he is worse, if possible. If he succeeds in this late effort again to put his wife into the office of governor, he doesn't even promise to change his methods, and the people of Texas may depend upon it that we will have the same regime that we once repented of.

To Free Felons

He now makes the statement that if his wife is elected, her first official act will be to open the doors of the penitentiary to 2000 convicts. Maybe so. But if I can judge of the future action of Jim Ferguson by his past conduct, those who receive pardons will be those who can hire lawyers and raise the necessary cash. And yet this is the man who boasted that he was the friend of the forgotten man in the penitentiary.

Time and space will not permit a further recital of the record of Fergusonism in Texas. I will go to the people and wage a fight for honest government. I am a native Texan and love her history and her soil. My forbears fought at San Jacinto. I hope for an honest and decent government, for honor at home and respect abroad.

If Jim Ferguson is elected governor of Texas through his wife, we will have a return of petty politics, of factionalism, bitterness, and none of the problems which now confront our great and growing state can possibly be settled by the legislature of Texas in peace and quiet. He is a firebrand, and is not overcareful what he sets afire.

not sleep. I made every allowance for her. What I can't forgive," he added heavily, "is her skipping out and leaving us in the lurch. I'd have bet a million she would never do that."

"Just how did she do it?" Henderson peered at his companion with a faintly sardonic grin and rose, shaking his broad shoulders as if to cast a weight from them.

"Here, hold on! You can't go yet. There's a lot I want to know," Hamilton urged.

"That goes for me, too. But it's simply amazing how little you know about your wife," Henderson muttered.

"We've certainly talked more about the future than about the past."

"I'll bet you have," Henderson took a turn around the room, plainly thinking things out. "Well, I'm the past, all right, and I'm the also ran, and I guess I'm the snows of yesteryear," he announced, returning to face his host. Then the faint grin left his lips and added with unexpected dignity: "I thought you took on this call because you knew there was an explanation coming to me. Now I'm beginning to realize that you don't know a thing about Eve. I can understand why she didn't tell you about the tragedy or even about her breakdown after it. But why didn't she tell you about me and about her musical career?"

"Sit down again and we'll try to figure it out. But . . . did I understand you to say that Eve promised to marry you?"

Henderson drew a chair forward and sat down facing him.

"That gave you a jolt, didn't it?—but it's true. Eve has been engaged to me for three years. You see, I sent her to Paris to study the piano when she was seventeen. Oh yes, I sent her," he added in response to the listener's involuntary movement. "I've made that girl. She's a genius, as I've said, but she takes things hard, as geniuses do."

"When Eve got back, this July, I expected her to marry me right away. In fact, I had made all the arrangements. But she begged off for a year—said she wanted to make her American debut first. She had earned a lot of money, and she wanted to repay more of the loan before she married. Of course I was disappointed. I didn't care anything about the loan, since she was to marry me, but I agreed to the delay. I always gave Eve her head. Had to, as a matter of fact."

He stopped and looked reproachfully at the dead cigar.

"I forgot to say that when Eve was at her lowest and couldn't see any one but the nurse and doctors," he went on as if it had reminded him of something, "we let Mrs. Heckner come in. We knew she'd talk about Eve's saving the two girls, and we thought she might brace Eve up. But instead of that the two women fell into each other's arms and cried themselves sick, and Eve's nurse had her hands full with the pair of them. After that Eve was worse than ever. The visit had stirred her all up again just at the crisis, when she most needed to be kept quiet."

"I suppose we blundered a good deal," he admitted. "We were all at sea. To have Eve down and out was such an unheard of thing. Then I suppose I was the next to blunder. For when I realized that Eve's concert season was probably ruined for her, I brought up the marriage question again. I urged her to marry me right off, and I told her I'd take her abroad for six months and let her rest while I looked over the European musical field for new artists. Perhaps that was another mistake."

"She went all over the lot," Henderson wearily admitted. "She actually seemed to think I was applying pressure—trying to take advantage of the situation. In fact, she accused me of it and talked about being in my power because of the loan. That wasn't a bit like her, but, as I've told you, she was just about off her head over those boys. She was hearing that laugh of trust when she first reached them, and seeing the look in their eyes when she swam off with Mary and left them. . . . If she fell asleep for a moment she was awakened by hearing Herman's good-by. . . ."

"I still thought she'd come round," he resumed with an unconscious sigh. "So did the doctors. We had half a dozen specialists in before we got through. They said she'd be all right. She's strong as a boy. She had never been sick in her life. But instead of letting us get her back into condition, she simply eluded the nurse one night and lit out.

"We gave out that she had gone away for a rest-cure and we canceled her engagements. Every one accepted the story without question, because of what she had been through."

"Even the Heckners think she's in some sanitarium and that we won't tell them where. Of course we engaged private detectives after the first day or so, and then I came on to New York, myself."

"What made you think she was in New York?"

"It was the obvious place she'd head for, and we were afraid her next step would be to sail for Europe. We had all the ships watched. We were honeycombing Chicago at the same time and following up alleged detective clues in half a dozen other cities. When I came to New York I was ready to cut my throat, for we weren't getting anywhere till we found you. At first that cheered me a lot, but I was beginning to get discouraged again. You've been watched wherever you went, those last days."

"How did you find her at Jake's?"

"Pure chance. I had dropped in to talk to a young fellow Jake has in his hand—another genius that I suppose will drive me crazy some day—and there I saw her, sitting at a table with a couple of men she wouldn't have wiped her shoes on a year ago. I never was so upset in my life. I thought one or the other of us was crazy, but I was careful not to frighten her. However, she chased right down here to you, just the same, and my man spotted her . . . and the rest was easy."

"Well," he said, rising heavily, "I guess I've found the last page of the score, all right, but I can't read it even yet. And I must say you haven't helped me much. Still, this seems to be one of the swift romances we read about, so I suppose it's all right."

Eric wrung his hand. He liked the man and trusted him, but he must move warily. When Henderson's big figure disappeared through the hotel's front door he went to the telephone and called up Doctor Carrick's office. The voice of the office nurse informed him that the doctor was at dinner.

"Fine," Eric said heartily. "Tell him to stop eating and come right down to see a patient at the Garland."

Then the bridegroom went up to his bride's rooms, feeling rather exhausted.

"It's all right," he reported in answer to the tense unspoken question with which she met him on the threshold. "The old man says he knows who you are, and I think he is genuine. Everything promises to be beautifully cleared up and there's nothing you have to fear. But we mustn't talk about it till I've seen Carrick. I want Carrick to decide how and when to tell you about yourself. Now, will you trust me . . . and him?"

"Of course. But . . . are you absolutely sure I have no reason to fear that man?"

"I'm certain of it, dear. He's really a very good sort. Now, remember how patient and stunning you have been so far, and sit tight just a little longer."

Doctor Carrick's card was brought in while he and Eve were having their coffee. Eric glanced at it, put it in his pocket, and rose.

"He has come," he explained, "and I'll see him first. If you will go on up to the sitting-room, we'll follow you in ten minutes or so."

He found Carrick pacing up and down the hotel hall and resolutely led him into the familiar writing-room. It was a time for word-saving and he made a brief but complete report of the facts of the case, with no side comments or surmises of his own. He had been impressed by the story of the rescue, and the report interested him.

His was the satisfaction of the physician who is shown to be correct in a difficult diagnosis about which inwardly he has had some doubts.

"It's just as I thought," he now reminded Hamilton. "There's no further need for secrecy, then, after we've certified all this."

"Why not?" "We know now who the patient is, and if Henderson is what he claims to be—"

"But there's another point," Hamilton interrupted. "Even if he is Henderson, by his own confession he's in love with Miss Carrington. He also admits that she hasn't any close friends in this country. If we confess that her marriage to me is a fake, and turn her over to him, how do we know she'd want to be turned over to him? There isn't much question that she ran away to get rid of him is there? If she had a family or an intimate circle of friends, our duty would be clear. As it is, I think we ought to do what we're always telling her to do—sit tight."

"I believe you're right," Carrick admitted. "It looks as if his proposal had been the last straw. We will stall him off for a few days, anyway. Meantime I'll do a little experimenting; but we won't make any explanations to Miss Carrington till we know all about Henderson and the Chicago end of the matter. That's the first step in any case, of course—to investigate Henderson's story."

To The Voters

Rotation in office is a Democratic principle well established in both state and national governments. Long tenure of office tends toward destruction of the principle of "government of the people, for the people and by the people"—tends to lessen the responsibility of officers.

It is upon this issue that I submit my candidacy for the office of TAX ASSESSOR of Crockett County in the run-off primary to be held in Crockett County on August 23.

My ability to serve the people of this county in the capacity of tax assessor has prompted my entry in the race to re-establish the Democratic principle enunciated above and I am giving the best of my ability in making the campaign as I will in performing the duties of the office if I am elected to serve.

My record as a citizen of Crockett County for 23 years is well known and I am willing to leave the issues involved to a decision of the voters on August 23.

tariff act, or modified, and WHEREAS, on June 18, 1930, Mr. Hudspeth addressed to Mr. Kincaid a letter, circulated and gave great publicity to it, which letter, together with resolutions, letters, telegrams, and other communications relating to the subject matter, may be found in the July, 1930, issue of the Sheep and Goat Raisers Magazine, beginning at page 376, to which reference is here made; Mr. Hudspeth therein sharply criticizing Mr. Kincaid, as an individual and as president of the association and

WHEREAS, we deeply deplore the situation, regret the existence of a controversy between them, because of our friendship for each our gratitude toward each, and the friendship of long standing between them but

WHEREAS, in view of the situation created, we deem it our duty to express, by resolution, our attitude toward the clause quoted our estimate of Mr. Kincaid, and our view regarding his acts brought in question, and to do so:

BE IT RESOLVED, by the Sheep and Goat Raisers Association of Texas, in annual convention assembled, at Brady, Texas, August 1, 1930:

That we are, as in the past we have been, strongly opposed to the clause quoted, believing it to be unfair, unjust, discriminatory, detrimental to the interests of our industry, even if not abused, but easily susceptible of great abuse and more dangerous and detrimental if abused; of such a nature that it can be taken advantage of only by a few who have large landed interests in Mexico, who ought, if they desire to raise livestock on the cheap lands of Mexico, with the aid of cheap labor there, to depend upon the markets of Mexico for the sale of their product.

That Mr. Kincaid has acted at all times in the best of good faith, prompted by a personal feeling, not ulterior motive, and that in all statements, spoken, written and printed, he has stated the truth as he believed and as we believe; that the views stated by Mr. Kincaid and the position taken by him were not personal to him, nor entertained by him only, but reflected the views of practically all the members of this organization; that they were similar to the views of cattlemen and livestock associations is shown by a reading of the magazine article above referred to.

That we urge our president, Mr. T. A. Kincaid, not to relax in his efforts to secure the elimination of the clause quoted, but to redouble his efforts in that direction; and we pledge him our undivided support in so doing. And for his efforts of the past, and those to be made, we heartily commend him.

While Mr. Kincaid may not choose to offer for public office, we know him; know that he possesses not only ability, but every qualification necessary to fill any office to which he may aspire credibly, with distinction to himself, satisfactorily to his constituency, and in a manner to result to their material benefit; and if in the course of events he should offer himself we assert that he has the character, acquaintance, standing and popularity to assure him success; and in that event we bespeak for him the whole-hearted and enthusiastic support of the ranchmen of West Texas, those who have known him longest and know him best, his neighbors and friends.

DINNER FOR BRIDE-ELECT

Mrs. J. M. Baggett and Miss Beulah Baggett honored Miss Kathryn Baggett with a noon-day dinner at their home Saturday. The table was beautifully decorated with baskets of bouncing buns and the place cards were baskets of candy to represent flowers. Miss Baggett was presented with a flower bowl and Miss Maggie Mae Kay, another bride-to-be, with a luncheon cloth and napkins. Miss Gracia Swanson gave a toast to Miss Baggett and Miss Hester Bunker one to Miss Kay.

A four-course dinner consisting of shrimp cocktail, tomato and cottage cheese salad, fried chicken, peas in pattie shells, scalloped asparagus, stuffed tomatoes, rolls, jelly, and pecan pie a la mode, was served to the following guests: Mesdames W. R. Baggett, M. E. Flowers, Early Baggett, Marshall Montgomery, Walter Augustine, Leta Hawkins, John Carry, Hugh Childress, Jr., and Misses Baggett, Kay, Bunger, Swanson, Lucile Ingham, Mary Childress, Mary Louise Hagelstein, Mary Augustine, Ethel Childress, Wanda Watson, Louise Mitchell, and Eleanor Ingham.

INSECTS

The other day at my farm home we started to replace a worn door sill. When we took the old board off we found that black ants had eaten away the heavy timber which forms the sill of the house itself, for a distance of several feet. We took out more than two quarts of ants and about a pint of ant eggs, and then had the expensive job of fitting a new timber in place.

The war between man and insects is relentless and unceasing. Along the country roads near my home I frequently meet this Summer the U. S. Department of Agriculture "bug men" who are spraying trees in the effort to get rid of the Japanese beetle, our newest insect pest. I found a great colony of ten moths in an old pasture beyond my woodlot. A new pest is beginning to eat up oak and maple trees up our way; another is destroying the willows along the brook and river.

Most of these pests, like the gypsy moth which is killing the New England elms, and the chestnut blight, which has destroyed every chestnut tree in the East, are imported. The Government maintains a plant quarantine, but every now and then some new pest slips across the border.

PRESSURE

Ice which will not melt at a temperature of 180 degrees is the latest scientific curiosity. It has been produced by Professor W. Bridgman of Harvard University. All that is necessary to keep ice from melting under a flame is to subject it to a pressure of 290,000 pounds to the square inch.

Professor Bridgman's experiments with high pressures have given many surprising results. Many familiar substances change their characters under pressure, much as human beings do. Thirty-nine different metals become better conductors of electricity. Some of the changes persist after the pressure is removed.

What is the good of such experiments? Science doesn't know nor care. Science is content to discover new facts, leaving it to inventors to apply them to human uses.

ONLY ONE ISSUE

The Texas gubernatorial race has again narrowed itself down to the one issue it presented early in spring when lines were being formed for the first primary battle. The issue is Fergusonism and voters should not be confused by the customary meaningless political verbiage that Jim Ferguson may be expected to put forth.

It is to be regretted that with scores of important problems confronting the state, the people are forced to disregard them all in order to save the state from shame and nation-wide ridicule, but there is little else to do.

Jim Ferguson, impeached governor who is barred by law from holding office, cannot be allowed to take charge of Texas affairs again in his wife's name.

Ross Sterling, successful business man, brilliant executive, faithful public servant, cannot be turned down in favor of the family that has proved unfaithful to trusts.

Don't allow yourself to be confused by road bonds or any other issue. Ross Sterling as governor cannot put any road plan in force without the sanction of the legislature and any bond plan in effect without the approval of the people. An intelligent campaign on the road question would be well worth while in Texas, but it is impossible with one candidate ready to misrepresent the issues and do anything to get the vote, as he has before.

Remember your decision lies between Jim Ferguson, who has publicly shamed Texas before, and Ross Sterling, who has as clean a record as any business man in the state. It's chaos against good government and it ought not to take long for the voter to make his decision.—S. A. Times.

The Value Of EXPERIENCE

In governmental positions as well as in the realm of business experience is a valuable asset. And if that governmental position is itself a business, then experience is all the more to be desired. The cumulative value to the people of years of service is hard to overestimate. Hence a qualified, experienced official should not be lightly laid aside.

I am making the run-off campaign for re-election as TAX ASSESSOR of this county on the record that I have made during the years that I have served you and presenting my claims for your support in this primary on the basis of my qualification and experience. So long as a public servant is true to the trust placed in him, gives the best that he has in serving the county, and has the experience and ability to continue to render satisfactory service, why not keep him in office?
