DIST. GOV. OF LIONS SPEAKS AT MEET HERE

W. L. Dugger Of San Antonio Delivers Inspiring Address

INSTALL OFFICERS

Nearly 40 Lions And Guests Present For Banquet Mon. Night

An inspirational address on the work of Lions Clubs throughout the world was given by W. L. Dugger of San Antonio, district governor of Lions Clubs in District A of Texas at the Ladies Night banquet and installation of officers held by the local club Monday night in the ballroom at the Hotel Ozona.

Mr. Dugger is one of the oldest Lions in Texas from the standpoint of membership in the club. He was a charter member of one of the three first clubs to be organized in Texas. He served as president of the Waco club and served five years as deputy district governor of Texas under the old organization when all this state was one district. He is vice president of the San Antonio club at present and has been prominent in the work in that city. He is vice president of the Continental National Life Insurance Company of San Antonio.

Governor Dugger made a special trip from San Antonio to meet with the Ozona Lions Club and to address members and their guests on the subject of Lionism. He outlined in a most convincing manner the accomplishments of Lionism throughout the world and pointed out the possibilities of a world-wide organization such as this service club. He stressed the policy of "unselfish service" and enumerated specific instances in which Lions Clubs have rendered "unselfish service" in a program of betterment of human kind.

Approximately 40 Lions and their guests were present for the banquet and program. A delicious banquet plate consisting of fried chicken and gravy, mashed potatoes, peas, combination salad, iced tea and cherry cobbler, was prepared by the hotel dining room staff under the direction of Manager G. D. Oldham, and many compliments on the food were heard from the visitors.

A splendid musical program for the evening was furnished by Mrs. F. T. McIntire and Mrs. M. M. Fulmer. Mrs. McIntire sang two beautiful numbers, "Danny Boy" and "Trees," with Mrs. Fulmer accompanying at the piano. Mrs. Fulmer also entertained with two piano numbers. Both of these numbers were greatly enjoyed by the audience.

Lion Dugger took charge of the installation of the new officers of the local club near the close of the evening. Instead of "swearing in" the new officers, the district governor "swore in" the membership, asking all members present who would pledge their support to the Ozona Lions Club and to the new officers for the coming year to stand and every Lion present stood up.

John L. Bishop, the new president of the organization, was unable to be present for the installation ceremonies but a message of greeting and encouragement from him was read to the assembly. In the absence of the president, Rev. J. H. Meredith, first vice president, took charge of the meeting after the installation and after making a splendid talk himself, called on each of the new officers for a brief talk.

The new official body of the Ozona Lions Club includes John L. Bishop, president; J. H. Meredith, vice president; Glenn Rutledge, secretary-treasurer; Ben Lemmons, tail twister; John Pettit, lion tamer; and W. R. Baggett, Hugh Chidress, Jr., O. W. Smith and Evert White, directors.

Miss Violet Hudgins of Dallas will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Massie West during the Rodeo.

RECORD CROWDS EXPECTED FOR SIXTH ANNUAL RODEO RACE MEET & STOCK SHOW

Advance crowds for the sixth annual Crockett County Rodeo, Race Meet, Stock Show and Sale in Ozona Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week were beginning to arrive Wednesday morning and hundreds more poured in Wednesday afternoon and night in order to be on time for the opening of the big event Thursday. Prominent sheep breeders from all over the country were here Wednesday for the annual Rambouillet sheep show which was held Wednesday morning.

With ideal weather prevailing, the rains stopping just in time to put the roads in good condition, with a minimum of dust on the roads and on local streets, fair officials and Ozona people are looking forward to one of the most enjoyable celebrations in the history of the city.

Loudspeakers To Be In Grandstand

Music, Announcements Go Into Stands By Electrical System

For the first time since the Crockett County Fair Association has been presenting its annual Rodeo, Race Meet and Stock Show, the results of the rodeo and racing events this year will be announced from the judges stand to the grandstand by means of electric loudspeakers.

The system was to have been installed Wednesday to be ready to be placed in operation on the opening day of the sixth annual event Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The loudspeaker system, in addition to being used to make announcements of the names of horses and riders, ropers and other rodeo and racing performers and the results of each event, will be used to provide music for the entertainment of the crowds during the afternoon performances. The apparatus is equipped to reproduce recorded music and there will be plenty of lively music for the entertainment of the grandstand crowds.

This system will take the place of the band which has heretofore furnished music for the occasion. With the loudspeaker system, the music will be automatically cut off while the judges are announcing results of the contests and everybody in the grandstand will be able to hear the results of each contest.

Giants Smear Sonora Broncs Two Straight, Score Yesterday 6-2

The Ozona Giants made it two in a row here yesterday afternoon when they defeated the Sonora Broncs by a score of 6 to 2.

Last Friday the Giants smearing the Broncs on the latter's own ground by a score of 8 to 5, the locals gathering in three home runs during the encounter. Hanna, big port sider, was responsible for the hurling end of the two successful duels. Giants who smashed out home-runs in the game at Sonora during the rodeo there last week were Rex Russell, Hanna and Frank James. Frank Russell and Conley Cox each turned in three-base wallops off Bud Smith's offerings.

McCurdy was on mound duty for the visitors here yesterday afternoon, allowing the Giants seven hits and striking out ten batters. Hanna, for the Giants, allowed the Sonora lads only four safeties and was credited with thirteen strike-outs.

The scoring came in the first frame for Ozona. Another was pushed over in the second, three in the third and one in the eighth. Sonora gathered one in the third and one in the fifth.

THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1931.

A STATESMANLIKE MOVE

In calling in the leaders of both the major political parties and getting their approval beforehand, President Hoover acted in a statesmanlike way in putting forward his approval for a one year suspension of payment of principal and interest on war debts.

It seems to be the belief of the men who know most about such things that this will bring about an immediate improvement in business conditions all over the world. President Hoover's justification is, of course, that it will benefit the United States of America. We are not in the business of doing things because they will benefit some other country unless we get a corresponding benefit. But when men like Owen D. Young, the famous Democrat whose name is attached to the Young plan for German reparations, such men of big affairs as Charles G. Dawes and Andrew Mellon on the Republican side, and statesmen on the order of Newton Baker and Carter Glass on the Democratic side, all agree that to ease up the economic pressure on Germany will result in improved business in America, we, naturally, have to agree with them. They know a great deal more about it than we do.

We do not understand that anyone expects an instantaneous return, or a return in a single year, to the high point of prosperity which we reached in 1928. But already the financial and business world is demonstrating its confidence that the upswing has begun, and the outlook for the coming year seems distinctly brighter than it did a month ago.

After all, it is only good business to give a debtor easy terms if he cannot meet the terms agreed on. That is true as between nations, as it is between individuals. Everybody who owes more money than he can immediately pay has found his creditors generally willing to take what he could give them, rather than to apply undue pressure. It is only fair to Germany to give that Republic the same kind of a chance to catch up that private business interests grant to their customers who may be in difficulties.

STICKING TO BUSINESS

One of the lessons which business men have learned as a result of the experience of the past two years is that no business will run itself. We think Henry Ford was about right when he said the other day that one of the principal causes of the business slump was that too many business men made speculating their business and left the management of their real businesses to their employees.

We have never seen a business yet that would run on for any considerable length of time without the personal attention of the man or men whose money is invested in it. The boss can take a vacation for a while, when things are running smoothly, and his business will go ahead on momentum till competition gets too strong, or collections begin to fall off. But whether it is a big automobile business like Henry Ford's, or an ordinary country store, the only person who can make the decisions which have to be made in a crisis is the boss himself. If he leaves that function to others he is heading for trouble.

We know of many business men who thought that because they had got a business well established and earning a good income they could treat it as a gold mine, continuing to take money out without putting any effort or thought in. We know a man who tried to run a newspaper that way once. He is not in the newspaper business any more.

The only people who have any right to speculate, as we see it, are the ones upon whose intelligence and business experience nobody is dependent. A man who hasn't anything to lose can afford to take a chance. The man who has retired from business and is living on the income of his invested capital can do as he pleases with it. But the man who is responsible for running a business upon which the prosperity of his community depends has no more right to divert his energies into speculative channels than has the head of a bank to use the depositor's money to gamble with.

W. R. Phillips and his two sons Dean and Carlton, are building a garage of concrete bricks of their own making. When the garage is finished they plan to live in it while they are tearing down their present home and building another, also of concrete bricks.

The I. E. Cross home here is being renovated.

TIGER EYE

By D. M. Dower

Her face was streaked with dust and what looked suspiciously like tears, and her hair had been clawed by the willows until it lay on her shoulders like a streak of sunshine. She sat on her black horse and watched the kid, and under her direct gaze he felt his ears and his face burn like fire. The kid did not look up, but he knew the exact instant when she turned her head to look at the newly branded calf which now wore a blackened and smarting window-sash brand where yesterday had been a tan-colored Reverse E. She reined her horse over to the corral and stood in the stirrups to look over the fence and inspect the milling herd.

"Well, they're all here, I guess," she remarked to the kid who, ten feet away, was kneeling beside the calf wrestler and was yanking the last knot tight. "You made quite a haul, didn't you, Bob?"

"Might be bettah," the kid owned, with a covert glance from under his hat brim. "One got plumb away."

"Well, I told you we ought to work together. But you kept on trying to pick a fight with me, you know. Looks like you got all you wanted of fighting here." She glanced around at the sullen captives. "I hope you're ready to admit now that the Poole outfit are a bunch of cow thieves."

"Shoah am," said the kid, his lips ready to smile the instant he forgot himself and let them go.

"What you going to do now?"

"Reckon I'll go aftah my hawse"

She followed him, riding in silence while the kid went mincing along on his high heels, his spurs gouging up the loose soil at every step.

"There's something I've been wanting to say," she went on hurriedly, "only you just won't give me a chance."

"Peahs like I nevah do act the way I feel," said the kid. "Always did want to show yo'all I was a friend."

"I know that. I just want to say that I made an awful fool of myself that night when Babe began to shoot off his mouth about the both of you being Poole killers," she confessed, with a kind of shy defiance. "But it seems to me I had some excuse, with father killed just the day before. And I hadn't any sleep, remember, trying to get to Cold Spring and warn you the neighbors were sending men over to kill you and Babe. And getting trapped that way—and then when Babe said you shot my brother for five hundred dollars, why—I just simply blew up for a minute."

"Shucks! I nevah did think a word moah about it," the kid declared earnestly, looking her straight in the eyes.

"Well, I just want you to know I'm sorry."

"Yo'all needn't be."

"I am just the same. You ought to know I never did class you with the Poole. It's just this ornery temper of mine—"

"Shucks! If yo' call that a tempah, yo'all oughta see mine!" The kid gathered up the reins, mounted and swung alongside her.

"You? Why, Bob Reeves! You know very well I'm the meanest thing on earth! After all you've done, to —to do what I did and —and talk the way I've talked to you, it makes me so ashamed—"

"Aw, hush! When yo'all talk that-a-way, yoh make me feel like batting my haid against a rock! Yo'all don't know how I felt this last month, thinking I had nothing but hate from yo'all—"

"Hate!" cried Nellie Murray, as one who stands aghast before so harsh a word. "Why, if you only knew—"

And then she stopped and began to blush furiously, so that the crimson flood rushed up to the band of yellow hair on her temples.

The kid reached out and gathered Nellie Murray into his arms. The kid sat on the ground with his back against a tree and drew his mouth organ across his smiling lips while he tapped the time with his foot. Played the kid, over and over again, while his prisoners sat and listened, and wondered what kind of a man was Tiger Eye Reeves, who could shoot a man in cold blood, capture three others who had thought they were well able to take care of themselves, and then sit all the afternoon playing that darned mouth organ like he hadn't a care in the world.

The kid didn't know or care what they thought about him. The kid was living in a world of his own, where a girl with yellow hair loved him enough to marry him and settle down. Gone into Badger now after help and the sheriff, to come and take this bunch with the evidence of the cattle right there behind them in the corral. Gone to bring a doctor out to fix up Babe's hands. But she'd be back, all right. And when she got here, the kid would take her over to the ranch and they'd tell her mother there was going to be a man in the family that shoah would be right on the job.

He played "Listen to the Mocking Bird," with more warbles and trills and low happy notes than he ever dreamed of putting into the song. The rather bare and desolate ranch where Nellie lived he made a paradise in his dreams. Honeysuckle oughta grow up here all right. He'd send down to his mother and have her get him a pair of mocking birds. Take her and her mother back down to Texas, only Pap's old enemies would want to go on with the feud and he'd have to kill somebody. Reckon the killing was about over, up here.

The afternoon waned and the Poole men began to swear at the chill and the cramp in their limbs, but the kid never even heard them he was so busy making plans for the future. Darkness came. He sat there very still, trying to realize the amazing truth that Nellie Murray was going to marry him. She loved him. She said she did.

He was still sitting there, two hours later, when Nellie came with the doctor and the sheriff and half a dozen men, who worried the kid with questions and talk. But that ended, and he was riding away with Nellie, hitting straight for the valley and the ranch his dreams had glorified.

Grayburg Must Pay Royalty On Seepage Oil In Pecos River

The Grayburg Oil Company and the Grayburg Pipe Line Company, both of San Antonio, must pay the state $26,430 and Pleas L. Childress of Ozona and associates an equal sum in royalty on seepage oil recovered from the bed of the Pecos River. Judgment to this effect has been rendered by Judge J. D. Moore in 98th district court at Austin. The state's proceeds will go into the school funds.

The Grayburg companies contended that they owed no royalty on 261,420 barrels of oil because the oil seeped out of the ground and came to the surface on their lease without drilling. The oil never had appeared on the surface of the ground until it appeared on the riverbed lease.

The Grayburg companies took the oil from a 280-acre lease in the Pecos riverbed adjacent to the Yates oil field. The state contended that the oil was "produced" within the meaning of the lease and that royalty was owed. The case was filed by Robert Lee Bobbitt, attorney general, in 1930.

Attorneys, oil men and geologists said the case probably was the first of its kind in the country. P. L. Childress and others, holding an overriding royalty interest, were given judgment for a sum equal to that recovered by the state. The Childress interests originally filed their suit in Pecos County, but consolidated it with the state's suit and both were tried here.

The judgment rendered was on the posted pipeline price for oil. The defendants contended they were entitled to deduct the cost of gathering the oil and transporting it to their nearest sale point. The court denied this claim.

ROWENA RIDES THE RUMBLE

COPYRIGHT 1931 BY THE AUTHOR

by ETHEL HUESTON

The whole trouble lay with Peter. Peter Blande. He was the fly in the ointment, the blot on the escutcheon, the carbon knock in the motor. Things just couldn't possibly have worked out more to Rowena's fancy, except for the persistent presence of Peter. And there was absolutely no hope of getting rid of him—he was too deeply mixed up in everything.

To tell the truth, it was Peter's project in the first place. Rowena herself only got into it at the last minute in answer to an advertisement in the morning paper. It was Peter who put the ad in.

Peter was a commercial artist, one of those thrice unfortunates with a soul for art, a talent for paint and a need for more ready money. He spent his days painting trees, rocks and running brooks, dotted here and there with pretty girls, Algonquin anglers and Broadway golfers, as a background for the Rackruff Roadster, 1931 model, comprising fully half the picture.

It was Peter who conceived the exquisite idea of a Rackruff motor tour across country with the well-known artist, Peter Blande, at the wheel. He figured—and converted Mr. Rack, President, and Mr. Ruff, Secretary and Treasurer, to his figures—that it would be the pinnacle of publicity to conduct such a tour, with pauses at all points of prime interest for him to paint a picture of the Rackruff roadster poised on the brink of a precipice, pulling its way pluckily out of a volcano, skidding securely off a racing glacier, or defying the sands of the desert.

Peter said—and Messrs. Rack and Ruff agreed with him—it would be good business to take a copy-writer along in the car to feature the high lights of the trip and apply the proper adjectives both to landscape and motor, in this way insuring a maximum of newspaper publicity that would establish the new roadster once and for all in the motor mind of America.

So Peter advertised for a copy-writer. "Wanted," read the advertisement in the morning papers. "A pretty woman who can write. One who has had some experience and met with reasonable success. Must be free to leave the city. Expenses paid and moderate salary. Must be good-looking. Apply Rackruff Salesroom today."

Rowena Rostand was one of many women who read the advertisement over her breakfast that morning. It wasn't much of a breakfast in Rowena's case, for she was extremely hard up. She had given up a newspaper position in Ohio in order to be in New York.

It was at eight-thirty that she saw the advertisement. By nine o'clock she was ready to set out for the Rackruff salesroom. Surveying herself in the mirror she was obliged to admit fairly that in spite of the little thinning of her face, in spite of the dark circles with which anxiety had shadowed her eyes, she was still undeniably good looking.

Her black and white ensemble was freshly sponged and pressed—Rowena herself had seen to that—her ruffled white blouse was smart in spite of the worn spots here and there. Her black and white shoes were spotless, the fingers of her gloves neatly mended. The collar of her silk coat shone from countless pressings.

"Pick out the best-looking one," Mr. Rack began when the secretary announced the applicants were outside.

"Don't you think," interposed Peter neatly, in his mild, ingratiating drawl, "that you had better look them over yourself? After all, nobody can visualize a lovely face and figure behind the wheel of a Rackruff roadster as you can, you know."

Mr. Rack thought that was a particularly good idea. He called in Mr. Ruff to assist, allowing Peter also to sit by, and had the secretary usher them in, one at a time. And he and Mr. Ruff frowned over them, and asked about their literary efforts, and noticed their eyes and ankles and complexions, jotting down indecipherable comments on their memorandum pads.

The secretary, having some notion of dramatic sequence, saved Rowena for the last. Rowena was so lovely that at first they would not believe she was a writer at all, and she had to show them a copy of her book and some of her signed stories in magazines. Rowena's hair was a curious chameleon shimmer of gold and bronze and brown. Her eyes were limpid pools of light that swam now blue, now green, and in gentle moments softened to hazel.

"I'm Rowena Rostand," she said, looking at them straightforwardly. "I am twenty-five years old. I have had one book published and it was so good that practically nobody read it. I worked on a newspaper for three years and I've had eleven stories published in first-class magazines. And you may not think I'm so very good-looking, but lots of people do." Rackruff Motors, Inc., in the persons of Messrs. Rack and Ruff, thought so, too. Even Peter nodded his approval.

And so Rackruff Motors, Inc., bound itself by written agreement to finance a motor tour for a party consisting solely of a beautiful young writer twenty-five years old and a commercial artist of thirty years and the opposite sex.

MAIN STREET Looks at BROADWAY

By OBSERVER

Wonderful Shops

No other city in the world, unless it may be Paris and London, can compare with New York for its shops. One can find tricky little clocks right from the Swiss Alps, dried olives from Greece, which natives of that country swear are infinitely better than the best California queen olives, Armenian pastries and confections, shawls from Persia, and in fact almost everything the world has to offer in the way of novelties and luxuries.

Turning the old proverb around a woman and her money are soon parted—if she goes shopping in New York.

New York Bargains

A half-page advertisement in the New York Sun the other night offered for sale a necklace at half-price. The advertiser, a famous jewelry house, said they were willing to take $46,000 for it. They also offered a few diamond trifles around $10,000 or so.

There are lots of real bargains here if one can afford them.

Theatre Bargains

One good tip for visitors is about Joe Leblang's theatre ticket office, back of Gray's drug store at Forty-third Street and Broadway. If you get there half an hour before the theatres open you can always pick up cheap theatre tickets, usually at half price. Maybe they will not be for the show you have set your heart on seeing that night, but they will be for some show just about as good.

Recently we acquired for $1.50 a pair of tickets for a first-class attraction that had been running here for months. It just happened to be one night that the house had failed to sell out and rather than let $100 worth of seats go unsold, the theatre rushed over a block of seats to Leblang's and they were sold over the counter. Joe Leblang, who founded this business, died the other day, leaving a million.

Novel Ticket Selling

Whenever a pair of tickets comes in that way to Gray's store, a man on a stool back of the counter calls out what he has and the waiting crowd surges forward and the first one to get to him buys the tickets and darts out for the show.

As far as we have ever seen, this town is the only one in the world that has an establishment like Gray's.

Where Chorines Buy

Dresses that sold at the height of the winter social season for $300 and even more, can be bought for less than $50 very often. And they have wonderful material in them. Hats are also something that can be bought for little money, provided one knows where to hunt.

One of the favorite districts for bargains is in mid-town, right off the theatrical part of town. Chorus girls and actresses with thrifty dispositions do all their buying in little shops where marvelous deals can be made and where bargaining in good old French way still exists as part of the business. Loaded with $25 or $30 in currency, with luck, a well-dressed woman can return home even better dressed and with bargains that she will brag about for months.

Furs

One of the lines in which the greatest apparent bargains can be obtained is in furs. For $50 one can buy a Hudson seal coat that looks wonderful—in the window. Fur scarfs for $15 are plentiful and other furs are accordingly priced.

Nearly every shop girl in New York has her furs, all bought and paid for on infinitely small wages. That they have to skip on their food to pay for the finery goes without saying, but they get them and look really smart in them, unless they happen to brush close to a woman who is expensively gowned. Then the contrast may be noted.

In the deals it is a case of caveat emptor. Let the buyer beware—that she knows what materials and styles really are.

Horses Expensive

If someone led a Percheron weighing 3,000 pounds down Broadway he would probably cause more excitement than if he towed a live dinosaur down the car tracks. The only horses seen in the city are the chunky truck horses and the fine saddlers one sees along the numerous bridle paths in city parks.

A good saddle horse can cost anything up to $1,500 without being a blue ribbon winner or the possessor of a long pedigree. The same horse would have cost General Grant about $150 while President Roosevelt could have mounted his Rough Riders, and probably did, for about $100 each. In the last few years something has happened, either money is freer or the few who want horses are wealthier than the buyers of other days.

To get a well-matched team that can do a mile in five minutes costs nearly as much as a Rolls-Royce—and they cost considerably more to keep and the depreciation is much heavier. Good horses are a profitable thing for any farmer to breed and raise.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Clayton and Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Clayton of Ft. Stockton were in San Angelo Tuesday to be with Joe Clayton who was operated on for appendicitis. He is recovering and they returned Wednesday to attend the Rodeo.

Baseball Games Are Called Off

The game with Sonora was arranged for Wednesday afternoon before the opening of the rodeo Thursday, but the two games with the Fort Worth team were cancelled.

In return for the courtesy of the baseball club in cancelling its games, officials of the fair association are working out a plan by which they hope to make extensive improvements at the baseball park here known as Powell Field. Included in the plan is provision for a honeysuckle or hedge fence around the lot, the planting of trees, a grandstand and other improvements to make this one of the most complete as well as the most beautiful athletic fields in this section.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Pace of Tahoka, arrived Tuesday afternoon to visit Mrs. Pace's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Baggett.

Mrs. B. B. Ingham, Mrs. Alvin Harrell and Miss Jessie Ingham went to Abilene Friday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Bill Littleton. Miss Ingham went on to Ft. Worth to spend the summer with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Elam Dudley.

Assn. Fails To Secure Carnival

be found. Most of the carnival companies have felt the heavy hand of the depression, according to President Joe Pierce, and have gone out of the business or have their equipment so heavily involved that they can not move it.

Absence of the carnival, however, is not expected to dampen the ardor of crowds here for the celebration and the association officials believe that there will be plenty of entertainment in spite of the fact that the carnival will not be in operation. Stock sales in the morning, rodeo events in the afternoon and the big dance at night are expected to prove enough entertainment for everybody.

Since business conditions are now on the upgrade, officials feel confident that a first class carnival company will be available for the show here in 1932.
