Court Revives Sewer Project

Commissioners To Call Engineer Back For Further Work

The Commissioners Court of Crockett County has decided to make another effort to bring about installation of a modern sewer system in Ozona. At the Court's concluding session early this week, the County Clerk was instructed to get in touch with J. S. Barlow, consulting engineer, who laid out plans for the Ozona system and who has been retained by the county to promote the local project, and invite him to come here for further consultation with the court.

Last summer, the court, assisted by the Lions Club and interested citizens, conducted a drive here for sewer connections and in a short time secured well over the minimum number of signatures to an agreement blanks, in which property owners agreed to connect up with the sewer system in the event one is installed here.

The list of signers to these agreements was placed in the hands of Mr. Barlow, who laid the matter before officials of the Southwest Sewer Company of Dallas. Officials of that company showed an interest in the project, but on account of the condition of the bond market at that time decided not to undertake the installation.

Mr. Barlow followed up the matter for several weeks but so far as local officials have learned is not succeeded in interesting a company in installing a system here. Unless something is done before summer, drastic measures will be necessary to preserve the health of the community in view of the condition existing in Johnson's Draw, where overflowing cess pools and septic tanks present a menace to the public health is declared.

Biographical Sketch Of Washington Given At Lions Club Meet

Lion Claude S. Denham, principal of the Ozona High School, gave an interesting biographical sketch of George Washington at the Washington's Birthday meeting of the Ozona Lions Club Monday noon at the Hotel Ozona. Mr. Denham was pinch-hitting for an absent member of the program committee, but his impromptu talk was one of the most interesting on the club's program in several weeks.

Tom Sawyer, manager of the popular Variety Store, entertained the Lions with several piano selections. Mr. Sawyer is an accomplished pianist and his talent was revealed to the club for the first time at the Monday luncheon. Reports of the committee seeking location for the club's proposed golf course were heard and a plan to change the club's meeting hour from noon to evening with a view to boosting attendance was discussed. Final action on this plan will be taken at next Monday's meeting of the organization.

Sun Shines Again After Nine Days Of Rain, Cloudy Weather

After nine days of hiding, during which more than two inches of rain soaked most of this section of West Texas, the sun dared to peep forth again in earnest Wednesday morning, giving Ozona residents an early taste of spring-like weather and promising the ranchman a good crop of weeds and grass with a few days of warm weather.

Starting fitfully a week ago last Sunday night, rains continued at intervals for nine days, falling slowly during that time and thoroughly soaking the ground. This being the first fall in more than a month, it was badly needed to insure early spring range.

Washington Portrait Presented To School By Ozona Natl. Bank

By Carolyn Montgomery
At the opening of the bicentennial memorial program to George Washington in the Ozona High School, Friday morning, the portrait of Washington by Gilbert Stuart was unveiled. Gene Williams read "The Birthday of Washington" as he presented the picture. This portrait was given to the High School by the Ozona National Bank. The artistic value and beauty of this masterpiece make it an invaluable asset to the appearance of the study hall. The entire student body and faculty voiced sincere gratitude to its donors.

Rain Halts Work On Athletic Field

Rains the past week have interfered with progress of the development of Powell Athletic Field, which is being done under an agreement between the local baseball club, the Crockett County Fair Association and the Commissioners Court, but work is scheduled to be resumed in the next few days.

The south fence had been completed before the rains set in and posts are on the ground for the completion of the fence around the entire area. As soon as the fence is completed, some 300 or more honeysuckle plants, to be secured from a West Texas nursery, will be set out around the west, north and east sides of the playing field, to be trained up on the heavy wire fence. This will provide an enclosed field and will add much to the appearance of that part of town.

Marvin Rape was ill the first of the week with the flu.

Pecos Mayor Out For State Senator From 29th District

K. M. Regan, mayor of Pecos, Texas, oil man, business man and land owner, recently announced himself as a candidate for state senator from this district, which embraces 27 counties in the extreme western end of the state. The district is the 29th senatorial division. Benjamin F. Berkeley of Alpine now holds the post sought by the Pecos man.

Mayor Regan has been a resident of Pecos for the last eight years, and during that time he has made a success in his business ventures in that section. His first venture into politics was six years ago when he entered the race for city councilman of his home town and was elected. He was promoted to the office of mayor after serving two terms as councilman. "He has served well in this capacity, giving the city a business-like administration during a period of general stress and turmoil," says the Pecos Enterprise of him in a recent article.

Last Spring he represented the West Texas Land Owners Association, of which he was president, at Austin during the agitation which preceded passage of the Land Validation Act, which was of such far reaching import to land owners of West Texas. It was on account of his service on behalf of that measure that the agitation for his election as State Senator arose. Mr. Regan will make announcement of his platform later, he says.

Large crowds are on hand for the revival services being conducted twice daily at the Ozona Church of Christ by Evangelist Horace W. Busby of Fort Worth. Song services are under the direction of Ross Hufstедler.

Beads And Brass Armlets Worn By Indians Are Discovered In Cave On Henderson Headquarters Ranch

One of the most interesting finds of Indian relics in this section in several years was that made by Max Eppler and a group of other employes of the Henderson headquarters ranch about 20 miles southwest of Ozona a few days ago.

While riding the ranch last Saturday, men employed there noticed a small cave under a cap rock. They investigated out of curiosity and after pulling several rocks loose, opened up a larger recess and near the outer edge picked up a brass ring about four inches in diameter. Exploring further, they picked up eight more of these rings, some of them notched and carved, evidently for decorative purposes, and some of them smooth. One of the rings was smaller and egg shaped, thought to be a bracelet worn by a child, possibly a nose ring worn by a ferocious warrior. The other rings are thought to be armlets worn by warriors.

After finding these relics, the men went back to the cave Sunday with Mr. Eppler and made further explorations. They discovered the place was littered with beads and shells. The larger of these they gathered up, rock and quartz beads, rudely formed and some commercial glass beads, which were secured by the Indians in trades from white men. The cave floor was covered with tiny beads like those used by the Indians in decorating their garments and equipment but these Mr. Eppler and companions did not attempt to gather up.

They did gather all the larger beads they could find and a number of large snail shells, each one with a hole through the edge, indicating that they had been a part of the string of beads, and one muscle shell, also punched. The collection of beads was enough to make a string more than eight feet long. A bone, thought to be the arm bone of a man, was also found in the cave.

The entire collection of beads, brass rings and bone were brought to Ozona and placed on display at the Jones Saddlery Company.

To add interest to the collection Mrs. A. W. Jones placed on temporary display another Indian relic, the history of which is known. It is an elaborately beaded arrow head pouch made by Sitting Bull and presented to Mrs. Jones' grandfather. Although showing the ravages of time, this pouch is still fairly well preserved and is a beautiful example of the handiwork of the American aborigines.

Bicentennial Anniversary Observed With School Program

By Dorothy Henderson

The celebration of the bicentennial anniversary of the birth of George Washington was held in the Ozona High School Friday, February 19. The following program was given by volunteer members of the Freshman class, under the direction of C. S. Denham:

Song—"America"—Audience.
Prayer—Rev. J. H. Meredith.
The Birthday of Washington—Gene Williams.
A Biography—Washington—Ernestine Watts.

First in War, First in Peace—Alberta Kay.
Essay—"History of the Flag"—Esther Kate Pierce.
Why Am I an American?—Willie V. Coose.
The Character of Washington—Vicky Pierce.

Washington's Birthday—Helen Adams.
George Washington's Tracks—Rev. J. H. Meredith.
Song—"Star Spangled Banner"—Audience.

Rev. J. H. Meredith contributed much to the memorial service by his discussion of "George Washington's Tracks."

During the past summer Rev. Meredith had occasion to visit the old George Washington landmarks and to observe the original homestead and other interesting scenes from the life of the great "Father of our country." He traced the itinerary of his trip and graphically described the old landmarks and relics. Besides these "tracks" he discussed Washington as a man and showed the influence that the life and example of Washington should have upon the citizens of today.

SENIOR B. Y. P. U. IN WASHINGTON SOCIAL

Commemorating the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington, the Senior B. Y. P. U. entertained with a Washington Social Monday night at the church. The Washington motif was carried throughout—hatchets for favors, historical games, and cherry pie for refreshments.

The hostess, Miss Maxine Murdock, was general director of the games and stunts. Something was done from the jump-go, from the puzzle treasure hunt to the refreshments. Those enjoying the occasion were: Misses Mildred North, Louise Crowder, Vera Mae Couch, Mattie D. Word, Gladys Thornberry, Maxine Murdock; Messrs. Ben and Troy Williams, J. W. Keeton, Massie Ray Smith, D. H. Gallencamp, Lee Patrick, Fletcher Freeman, H. O. Word, D. W. Jones and M. M. Fulmer.

ORGANIZATION OF ATHLETIC CLUB FORMED

Local Men Interested In Recreation Compose Membership

TO USE NEW GYM

Plan Awaits Approval Of School Board Before Adoption

Organization of the Ozona Athletic Club, a group of local men who are interested in athletics, was perfected this week with the drafting of by-laws of the organization and the election of officers and directors.

The club was organized with a view to making use of the new High School gymnasium, one of the finest in this section, and the plan is now before the school board for its approval before the organization definitely begins to function.

Paul Perner was chosen first president of the club, with Rex Russell as vice president and Lowell Littleton as secretary-treasurer. Members of the executive committee include Houston Smith, Wayne West, Pon Seahorn, Rob Miller, Joe Oberkamp, Joe North, Charles E. Davidson, Jr., J. H. McClure and Welton Bunker. The by-laws of the organization provide for the payment of nominal monthly dues, which will be used in paying for the lights, water and janitor service at the gym. The club plans to meet two nights a week, when it will have the privileges of the gymnasium and its equipment, subject, however, to change to suit the convenience of High School athletic teams should there be a game or practice scheduled for the night on which the club meets.

Fifty-four members are enrolled in the club, their names being listed on the by-laws. Members of the school faculty are accepted as honorary members of the organization.

RANCHMEN INVITED TO MEN'S BIBLE CLASS

The Stockman is in receipt of a communication from H. B. Cox of San Angelo inviting ranchmen and business men of Ozona to attend the Business Men's Bible Class at the Hilton Hotel Sunday morning, February 28. This class is composed of about 750 men, meeting every Sunday morning at the Hilton.

In connection with the San Angelo Fat Stock Show February 29, March 1 and 2, the class is having a "Ranchmen's Round-up" and invitations have been extended ranchmen who will be there for the stock show to visit the class on Sunday morning.

Lemmons Dry Goods Gives U. S. Flag To Ozona High School

The Lemmons Dry Goods Company last week presented to the High School a United States flag to be placed in the study hall. The flag, in size 5 x 9 feet, adds a great deal to the appearance of the study room. It occupies a position opposite a very attractive picture of George Washington. The presentation of this flag was most timely, for it was received just preceding the date of the Washington Bicentennial program which was presented before the high school group by the Freshman Class on February 19.

Just as the flag was presented with the good will and best wishes of Mr. and Mrs. Lemmons so it was received by the high school group with utmost appreciation.

Influenza, which has been prevalent here the last few weeks, is reported on the wane school authorities reporting increased attendance. The disease has been in mild form, it is reported.

UNCLE SAM IN BUSINESS

Because of the apathy of business men and others who should be alert to the menace of governmental interference with private enterprises, a small but aggressive minority in Congress is making progress in its attempt to socialize all American industries.

These advocates of government operation of business and industry have already placed severe burdens upon private enterprises through excessive regulation, as a first step toward their goal. In order to further harass these enterprises a multitude of government bureaus, commissions, boards and other agencies have been set up, with their army of political job holders to inspect, investigate and intimidate.

If these tactics shall succeed in destroying private business, the road to government operation and socialism will be open. This, of course, is the ultimate object of the whole scheme. And if it succeeds we shall all be slaves to an all-powerful political machine like that which is enslaving the people of Russia today.

Experience has demonstrated that governmental conduct of business is inefficient or wasteful, or both. Our experiment with government operation of the railroads during and after the war is an example. Our Post Office Department now shows a yearly deficit of $150,000,000. We have squandered $250,000,000 or more through the government's excursion into the cotton and wheat markets. We have wasted many millions in reclamation schemes for the purpose of bringing more land and cultivation to increase the agricultural surplus. We have borne enormous losses in the shipping business. And so on.

The tragic aspect of all this is that the consequences of these follies must be borne by the taxpayers, whose private businesses have been injured and in some cases virtually destroyed by the Federal government. Socialistic experiments in many of the individual states have had the same inevitable results.

It is time that every citizen who believes in the encouragement of private enterprise and individual effort should protest against the encroachments of government in business. The place to protest is at the ballot box. Delegate the socialistic politicians to private life and keep them there.—Marry B. Darnall, Herald, Florence, Alabama.

SNAKE BITES BOY, DIES WHILE VICTIM RECOVERS

BIG SPRING.—When a snake bites a boy and the boy dies it is a news item of more than casual interest. When, however, the snake is the one that suffers death as the result of the incident and the youth recovers sufficiently to play football, then it is—well, what is it?

This phenomenon occurred in the Big Spring High School. A 17-year-old student, Walter Bunker, was bitten by a three-foot rattlesnake while examining the reptile in chemistry class. He was rushed immediately to a physician and a serum administered. At first it was feared he might suffer from the poisonous wound, but an hour later he was playing football on the campus while the snake was discovered curled up in his box.

SCANDALS

By The Town Gossip

"SEES ALL—HEARS ALL"

Don't know whether it was the rain or the suggestion in this column last week that members of the "Agony Club" be given employment on the streets, but something broke up the meetin' this week. Club headquarters have been practically deserted all week.

Jim Smith says he hates that, too. He was president of the organization and feels responsible for it. He doesn't want a good club to die on his hands.

An Irishman stood in the railroad yards watching the trains go by. A freight passed with green lights displayed on the caboose. He asked a brakeman standing nearby what the green lights meant.

"That means," said the railroad man, "that that is the first section of a regular train. It means there is another one to follow."

That night the Irishman went home to find his wife had green ribbons tied on the baby's cradle—and forthwith ordered her to take them off.

A statistical shark figures that Americans drink 75,000 cups of coffee every second. And no telling how many saucers.

Old Gossip don't mind the rain. Likes it in fact. But, doggone, ain't it uncomfortable when the mud oozes up through the hole in your shoe and squashes up between your toes?

One of the missionaries ladies just before one of the recent rummage sales asked Jake Young what he did with his old clothes.

"Oh, I hang 'em up at night and the next morning, I take 'em down, brush 'em off and put 'em on again."

"He looks very familiar," said one Ozona flapper to another.

"He is," replied the other.

John Buchelle says he doesn't care who wins that Mexican lottery so long as it's his.

Local sets have a new name for it now. It's "chicken hootch"—you know, one drink and you lay.

WHEN THE PAPER DOESN'T COME

My father says the paper he reads ain't put up right.

He finds a lot of fault, he does, doesn't it all night.

He says there ain't a single thing in it worth while to read.

And that it doesn't print the kind of stuff the people need.

He tosses it aside and says it's strictly on the bum—

But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

He rents about the weddin's and he snorts like all got out.

He reads the social doin's with a most derivate shout.

He says they make the paper for the women folks alone.

He'll read about the parties and he'll fume and fret and groan;

He says of information it does not have a crumb—

But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

He's always first to grab it and he reads it plumb clean through.

He doesn't miss an item or a want ad—this is true.

He says they don't know what we want, the darn newspaper guys.

I'm going to take a day sometime an' go an' put 'em wise;

Sometimes it seems as though they must be blind and deaf and dumb;

But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

THE FORGOTTEN ANANIAS

Some years ago a chicken thief committed a series of robberies on big estates outside New York. He got away with some very fancy stock.

Finally, one of the gentleman farmers, whom we shall call Van Norton, hired a private detective and caught the miscreant.

Sitting in a New York club a few nights later, Van Norton received the congratulations of his neighbors. "You did a fine thing," they said. "Now we hope you'll send the rascal over the road for a good long stretch."

"What do you mean, send him over the road?" Van Norton asked. "Why, prosecute him. Send him to jail."

"Prosecute him? I don't intend to prosecute him."

They were incredulous. "Surely you're going to see that he is punished for all the loss and worry he has caused us."

"Just a minute," Van Norton responded quietly. "Suppose I do prosecute him. Suppose I get a conviction and a jail sentence. What will happen? Ten years from now my name will be mentioned in a gathering such as this, and somebody will say vaguely, 'Van Norton? Van Norton? Let's see. Wasn't he mixed up in some chicken stealing business a little while ago?'"

It is a curious fact of human nature that we forget the best in our fellow men, while a single stain of scandal clings to our

BANKS AND BANKERS

It looks to us as if a good deal of financial distress is due to the fact that a great many people who had no right to be in the banking business were permitted to call themselves bankers while the big money boom was on. It was brought out in the hearings at Washington on international banking that more than six hundred million dollars of bonds issued by different South American governments are in default. That means these governments haven't paid the interest when due and there is an excellent chance that people who bought these bonds will not get their money back.

These loans were made on the invitation of New York concerns which call themselves investment bankers. The bonds were sold at high prices to individuals and to small banks throughout the country. And these are far from being the only so-called investments on which the public and the small bankers have been stung.

Real bankers do not advise or encourage their customers to invest in doubtful securities, or buy them with their depositors' money. People are prone to think that bankers are speculators. That is very far from being the truth. The vast majority of bankers have a very deep sense of responsibility in the handling of other people's money. They regard themselves as trustees, and they naturally feel that they have to be much more cautious about making loans than if it was their own money they were lending. To be sure, even the most careful and honest bankers sometimes make mistakes, but we have observed that the banks which are in the soundest condition today are the ones which did not buy highly speculative securities while the boom was on, and who are not themselves in the business of selling bonds.

CHARLES BLACK ROPES LARGE EAGLE SATURDAY

Charles Black, ranchman south of here, roped a large eagle Saturday morning. The bird measured 7 feet from tip to tip. Mr. Black was riding through a herd of Spanish goats and noticed a disturbance among them. He saw the eagle alight in a tree and threw his rope about his wings.

Mr. Black said that the eagle had wet wings and had perhaps just feasted on a kid goat and did not care to exert himself any too much.

WHERE DOES YOUR MONEY GO?

Had you ever stopped to consider where the money you spend for every day expenses goes? When you spend it with your established home-town merchant it goes to maintain several local families who are your friends and neighbors—the merchant himself and his family, his employes and their families, those who serve these in other capacities. It goes for rent, lights, water, fuel, groceries, dry goods, household goods, gasoline, tires and auto accessories, for taxes, insurance, drugs, medical service etc. All of these who benefit—the landlord, druggist, grocer, auto dealer and so on are benefitted. They also are your neighbors and friends.

It's a cycle that has no ends. Everybody benefits. Your town benefits, you benefit.

But money that is sent out of town for something that can be bought at home, or money that is spent with the fly-by-night merchant or the street corner peddler is gone never to return and your community's wealth is reduced that much. Stay with the merchant who stayed with you.

PROGRESS

The Result of Co-operation and Fair Dealing

Community development depends upon co-operation and fair dealing, one with another. And community development will mean more civic improvement, finer schools, greater religious activity, higher morals and better business.

The business firms of your community are an important factor in determining the kind of town you have. If they are "run down at the heel" so is your town, the town in which you live, send your children to school, the community in which you make your living.

In order to keep up-to-date and attractive stocks housed in modern and attractive surroundings, your merchant must sell the merchandise he buys, at a fair profit, and collect the money for what he sells. The more he sells the narrower his margin of profit can be and consequently the lower his selling price can be made.

But in order to keep his business going, the merchant must collect promptly for what he sells. If he sells merchandise he must buy more to replace it, and what he buys he must pay for either cash on delivery or in fifteen or thirty days as agreed. If his sales represent only a transfer of merchandise from shelves to books, he must borrow money to buy more goods to replace what he has put out on credit—he must pay interest on his own money, money his customers owe him and which they are using without paying for the privilege.

If you want lower prices; if you want up-to-date stores; if you want larger stocks of choice merchandise from which to make your selection; if you want a progressive, prosperous and attractive community, co-operate with the business firms of your town. Make your purchases from them—pay them promptly as agreed.

If you buy on 30-day credit, your bill is NOT due for 30 days. But when the 30 days have past IT IS DUE and should be paid at once. You gave your word to pay for the merchandise and you owe a moral as well as a legal obligation. It is up to you to stand behind your word. Do you owe a PAST DUE ACCOUNT NOW? If so and you CAN pay it, why not make good on your word? If you CAN'T pay it, won't you go to the man you owe and tell him why you can't and when he may expect payment?

RAPTURE BEYOND

by KATHARINE NEWLIN BURT

Fresh from a French convent, Jocelyn Harlowe returns to New York to her socially-elect mother, a religious, ambitious woman. The girl is hurried into an engagement with the wealthy Felix Kent. Her father, Nick Sandal, surreptitiously enters the girl's home one night. He tells her he used to call her Lynda Sandal. The girl is torn by her desire to see life in the raw and to become part of her mother's society.

Lynda visits her father in his dingy quarters. She finds four men playing cards. One of them, Jock Ayleward, her father tells her, is like a son to him, but warns the girl he is a trifle.

Jock gets into a fight at a cabaret with a gangster who insists on dancing with Lynda. He then takes Lynda home. Later she mentions Felix's name to Jock and Ayleward's face displays his demoniac hatred of the millionaire.

Jock tells Lynda that Felix caused him to be sent to jail unjustly by fixing up his report on a mine. Later Lynda tells Jock she does not believe in his innocence but will try and find, through Felix, some letters Jock claims will clear his name.

Marcella finds her jewels stolen and hires a private detective, who uncovers the mysterious prowlings of Lynda, without knowing who she is. Lynda suspects her father.

Jocelyn decides to marry Felix quickly and preparations are made for the wedding. She asks him to tell the combination of his safe, as a mark of his confidence in her.

Armed with the combination and accompanied by Jock, Lynda enters Felix's office at night, abstracts the wanted papers from the safe and throws them down to Jock, who is waiting below. Then she is captured by the janitor and turned over to the police. Felix learns the next morning, in Washington, that a "boy" had broken into his safe, Becky Deal calling him by telephone.

THE STORY

"Yes, sir, I know how you must feel. When I heard it, it went right through me like a bullet. About one o'clock, or a little earlier, Rory thought he heard a movement on our floor and let himself into the outer office. There he saw a light moving close to the inner threshold. He caught a young boy in the act of climbing in at the window.

"Rory struck him over the head with his stick. He thinks he got him in good time. Nothing seems to be disturbed. The safe is quite as usual. All the papers on your desk and inside it are intact. I do believe, Mr. Kent, that no harm's been done. But I'm just kind of scared. I wish you were here to go over your papers in that safe. And though Rory is almost sure he was climbing in of course he might have been climbing out. No, sir. They didn't find anything on him. They're holding him at the station. You'll be back before noon."

"I'd have to make it by airplane to do that, Miss Becky."

"Well, perhaps it isn't that important but I do feel kind of scared."

Kent, without troubling himself to reassure her fears, hung up and pondered the exasperating news.

If the thief had taken something from that safe... a thousand hideous betrayals darted through his fancy, whitening his lips, pulling down lines beside the grim mouthcorners. He saw wolf faces, hyena faces.

He stood up. He'd take to the air. No use putting himself to the strain of these imaginary disasters.

At precisely noon, Charles having been warned by wire to meet him at the landing field. Felix presented himself in his office.

Miss Becky was glad to see him. She repeated to him the disorganized details of her information. One that she added caught Kent's breath.

"But Michael does say that for an instant he kind of thought may be the boy threw something down to the court before he knocked him out."

Kent was now at the safe and his face was pinched as he began to pull out the contents of the metal drawers.

Miss Deal said timidly, "By the by, Mr. Kent, Mrs. Harlowe's been ringing and ringing to ask for you."

"Mrs. Harlowe?" snapped Kent. "If she rings again put her off until I'm through with this. Just tell her I'm on my way from Washington and that you'll put me in touch with her as soon as I get in. It's some idiotic woman business about the wed—"

He stopped in the middle of that word.

Miss Deal turned her pince nez upon him and all the blood in her body rushed up into her square face.

"Oh, great heaven, what's got you?"

Kent had stood up. He was chalk white, a pallor that showed blue about his lips.

"Get me the police station quick."

phone and then went on, "You've got the man my night watchman caught in my inner office early this morning. Has he been searched? ... Yes, I'll hold the wire."

While he waited, Kent moved the fingers of his left hand in and out like a tiger's claws.

"Nothing, eh? But I tell you he did get some papers. Yes, they're missing. Important papers. . . . An accomplice at the foot of the fire escape? Jove! Get his name, his whereabouts. . . . Well, get 'em. Find out. Can't you make the boy speak?"

The officer at the other end demurred at some length.

Said Felix presently, interrupting, "A woman? What difference does that make? Oh, to hell with such hysterical slush. She'll speak all the quicker if you turn on the works. I'll take the responsibility. All of it. I tell you," his voice lifted to a shrill whining note, "you've got to get back those papers for me or I'll make your place down there so hot for you that you'll wish you'd put your young lady on a gridiron to save your own skins."

Except for an uncertain sort of mumble there was no further protest from the other speaker. Felix sat, his hand picking cruelly at a blotter, his face ugly as though it watched torment.

He bent forward again. "Wants to speak to me? Won't speak to anyone else?" He sat thinking. "All right. Keep her squirming till I get there. Trust me to make her come clean."

Miss Becky asked no question as her Great Chief turned to the door. A moment later the phone rang shrilly.

"Oh, Mrs. Harlowe, I am so sorry. He was here but he's just gone out. I did tell him and he just hadn't a second to get round to calling. He was brought back on very urgent business and, as it's turned out the matter is even more serious than we feared. I'll take your message. . . . Yes indeed, Mrs. Harlowe, I'll keep it perfectly quiet. I'll tell it only to Mr. Kent himself privately at the earliest possible moment."

She listened, her face was all aghast.

"Oh, Mrs. Harlowe, how dreadful that sounds. . . . Oh, I am so sorry. Yes indeed I will."

Five minutes later, having in the interval walked distractedly up and down the room, she wrote down on a pad: "Urgent. Miss Jocelyn Harlowe was not in her bedroom this morning. After repeated summonses the door was forced. She had gone to bed early. None of her outer clothes seemed to be missing. There was no message or note of any kind and no explanation has yet been discovered of her absence. She seems to have completely disappeared. No one saw her leave the building."

This message Miss Becky, crying and blowing her nose, placed in an envelope and sealed. She labeled it, "For Mr. Kent. Urgent Personal. Private" and propped it conspicuously on his desk.

The room where Lynda Sandal sat waiting for the arrival of Jocelyn Harlowe's fiance was neither comfortable nor luxurious. It was on the contrary incredibly grimy, dingy, depressing and suggestive of down-trodden guinea and hunted lives. Three men were in attendance upon her. They ringed her like a wolf pack and like a wolf pack they snarled and snarled and circled and squatted, wearing her out so that she might drop down unprotestingly to suffer the fleshing of their fangs.

Since morning of that April day which was only so short a tale of hours before her wedding hour, she had sat on a hard chair gripping its edge with both her hands, turning her white face from this tormentor to that, listening to threats that made her blood attack then leap away from her scared heart.

She still wore Nick's shabby suit but her collar had been torn open under Rory's grasp. Her tie was lost, her hat had been taken from her and above the crumpled male attire her fine feminine throat and head gave an effect of startling delicacy. There was no particle of her vivid coloring in this trapped face but the tilted eyes flared, angry and golden, and the lips still went tight when she closed them at the end of each reiterated reply.

"I won't tell you anything," Jock must be given his chance her will doggedly repeated. This until after some outside message, her arm had been savagely twisted and she had turned faint. Then, "I won't speak to anyone but Felix Kent," she had conceded.

"Why do you keep on torturing me now?" she wailed when this message and one of the men's departure and return with the news that Kent was on his way, had brought no surcease to the rain of furious question and threat. She had begun to weep.

A voice in the room beyond her torture chamber put a question sharply and Jocelyn opened her strange and lovely eyes wide.

That was Felix Kent. For the first time they were about to meet. She forgot her attendant inquisitors. She sat up straight, commanding the cruel bewildered throbbing of her head, and as the door opened she rose slowly to her feet.

Felix Kent, staring down at her, turned scarlet and his eyes changed. He drew in his breath, put up one hand, let it fall and mastered his face. He turned to the men.

"Here, let me alone with her a moment. I think I've seen the girl before. There's more in this. . . . This is hardly a police matter. I'll explain. Just let me have her for an instant," his even voice cracked under the force his will had put upon it but smoothed itself immediately, "and I think I can find out all I want to know."

The men, curious, grimly amused cynical, went willingly away. The greasy door was closed. Felix waited. He moved close to Jocelyn, caught her wrists in his two hands and drew them up to his breast, pulling her near to him in a gesture that was passionately possessive, furious, masterful.

"Now," he said between his teeth, "if you haven't gone mad since I left you yesterday—at your own request, as I seem to remember—or if I have not myself lost the use of my wits, you will please explain this preposterous joke. . . . for which I imagine, you've been already sufficiently punished by orders of my own. And you will please return the papers you took from my safe. I see now why you coaxed that combination out of me. At least I begin to see why. Say it over to me now."

She found herself whispering, "Three-eight. Three turns to the left. Eight-five-two. Two turns to the right. One-One-One-seven. Six turns right. Then turn left."

"Right. Now tell me why you took those papers and what you've done with them. And the whole purpose and reason—if there can be one—for this disgusting masquerade." He held her away from him and looked her from head to foot with a contempt that scorched.

"You'll do me a penance for this," he told her. Then he went over and sat down on the chair of her long torment and, forcing her to her knees there on the floor before him, he held her between his own knees. The young strong body in his grasp straightened and tightened proudly.

"Let me go, Felix," said Lynda Sandal. Her voice was resonant. "I'm not a child. Nor any property of yours. I'll not be held like this, bullied and threatened."

WOOL TO BE FEATURED IN 1932 STYLES

Milady's Raiment From 'Teddies To Topcoat' To Be Of Woolens

PRICE TREND DOWN

Consumer Recognition Of Woolens Attained, Says Stylist

By Grace E. Anderson
Stylists' Division

Milady's raiment from teddies to topcoat will be of wool in fabric and varied in hue for 1932.

The thousands of woolen and worsted patterns loomed by American mills for spring and summer combine Parisian acceptance with new American trends.

From the sheerest and softest fabrics for undergarments to the light and comfortable coatings, wool is the keynote for this year.

The duller year in a decade during 1930 has evolved the greatest American development of stylistic ideas, subtlety in the use of interrelated fibres, blendings conducive to novel textural expression and both creative and adaptive design freedom.

Therefore, ladies—look well to the new weaves and a brilliant display of fashion's fanciful wool creations for this year. They are as novel as they are durable and style fabrics have been made at such attractive prices that the depressed consumer can buy her spring wardrobe cheaper than last season and at the same time have chic costumes appropriate for all occasions.

Attain Novelty Effects

From the remarkable collection of woolens and worsteds a basic idea is shown—a solid color fabric in which there is no definite pattern, but through use of yarns interwoven, a novelty effect is produced. They make be thick yarns, slub yarns, ratine yarns or hard-twisted worsted yarns over soft ones.

Progressive development in highly styled woolens in the United States and abroad has revealed these interesting facts: That consumer recognition of quality woolens has not actually been difficult to obtain; that textural interests and not an arrogance of design and color has both won and retained this consumer recognition; that the clarity and beauty of flattering colors in good taste has greatly aided the cause of woolens; that their noncrush virtues in all weathers and under all testings in sustained sports and travel usage are recognized by every well-born woman as a tradition easily brought to remembrance during such a revival.

Color—that intangible which scries seek to set off a story in a new dress—will be very obvious in chromo and style in woolen and worsted offerings for madam and miss this year.

Blue Leading Color

It might be laid to the depression, for blues constitute the leading spring color range. The blues long in fashion range from navy notes and tones to the pale blue in advance popularity. Black and white combinations, with swanky washes and bows in red have made early appearances. Beige will be favorite, in color effects ranging from pale to brown with streaks. These shades are equally popular in rough tweeds in suits and coats and the lacy afternoon-evening dresses spun from wool so fine that one must look closely to see it is wool and not silk lace.

Colors like spring and autumn you can wear 'em both seasons in durable wool)—orange, tawny orange, red-orange, rose yellow and apricot. Dark red, geranium-red, bright red, beetroot red, bright red in combination with dull or dirty pastels in green and yellow, currant red, rose-henna, orange-red, rust, rose, soft coral and light red. Gay-green, bright sports green, medium green, light Irish green, light soft green, platinum gray and dark gray.

For the coating trade, mills have developed a wide range of fabrics, some of staple character, others patterned monotonous, while a different group achieve their decorations through novelty yarns

Tailored Suits Lead

Classic suitings have returned for the spring tailleur. This year the collections vary more than any other group of woolens and worsteds. They are being made into dressmaker or jacket-and-frock suits and smart tailored types. However, great emphasis is being placed upon the chic, strictly tailored suit and a wealth of practical fabrics are being shown for this ever-smart woman's wear item.

Besides plain, rough wool-filled crepes, many pattern variations and thread decorations have been developed for the dress trade. Diagonals, open-work checks, zig-zags, faconne fancies and many other fascinating materials are being highlighted for early spring trade.

Woolen and worsted fabrics for spring and summer 1932 dresses include many crepes. Highlighted among these are granite crepes—plain, hard-surfaced and crisp. These are considered leaders. Transparent-textured crepes are extremely pliant and tailor well, in spite of their sheer cobwebby character. Romain crepes are sheer and attractive in the new deep pastels.

Wool Crepes For Coats

Among important woolen and worsted coatings for spring and summer 1932 are crepes and crepe weaves. Noteworthy for coatings is a crepe roman weave of wool, delicately napped to give the fabric a wooly look. Cheviot coatings in crepe yarns are new and interesting. Crepe mixtures feature tight-twisted yarns in surface worked weaves.

Rough-surfaced bouclets are particularly popular this season and much more effective than previously.

A new range of chinchilla coats for women should not be confused with the heavier chinchillas used for children. The newer weave retains the classically nubbed surface.

Flannel for suitings is highly important. Classic tweeds for suitings are selling well in smooth or slightly coarse surfaces and in checks, plaids, stripes and cross bars.

Hundreds of other new and novel weaves are being shown in a variety of enough creations to suit the 1932 shopper.

AN EYEFUL OF FIGURES

Weekly home laundering expenses in families that numbered four to six members, ranged from a maximum of $10.75 to a minimum of $2.61. The average cost was $5.26. Depreciation on the washing machine was figured at 30 cents a week; on a home flat ironer also 30 cents a week; interest on the investment, 20 cents; electric current, 30 cents; cost of heating an electric hand iron based on the average ironing period of five hours, 17½ cents; cost of power ironer operation for the same work, 50 cents; other costs not listed individually brought the total to $5.26.
Do these figures sound interesting? They should for they were compiled by the Denver Chapter of the American Association of University. Women after a careful survey made among Denver home managers.

Check up on your weekly laundry bill from your home town laundry, or ask your neighbor what her laundry bill is. See what a saving you will be able to

"The Store That Lowered Prices In Ozona"

Life Of Washington Told In Biography By Ernestine Watts

The following is a brief biography of George Washington written by Ernestine Watts of the eighth grade, Ozona High School, and presented at the Washington's Birthday program held in the School Friday morning:

GEORGE WASHINGTON

George Washington was born in Westmoreland County, Virginia, February 22, 1732, the son of Augustine Washington, a well-to-do farmer, and the eldest of a second family of children.

As a boy, he possessed a fine body and was inclined to be a good rider. He was especially graceful and expert in this. He was not by nature a scholar, but was thoughtful and studious. His education was limited to the elementary subjects, but he acquired a fine knowledge of mathematics and surveying, chiefly by self study. He desired to enter the navy, but his widowed mother prevailed upon him to abandon the idea. He therefore adopted surveying as a profession and became a public surveyor in 1748.

At the age of 18 he began his military career. He was made an adjutant general and soon showed, in operations against the French and Indians, as a successful commander.

When his half brother, Lawrence, died, he left all of Mount Vernon to Washington. He increased these possessions by marrying a wealthy and attractive young widow, Mrs. Martha Curtis, in 1759.

As the dispute with Great Britain grew more bitter, Washington was chosen commander-in-chief of the Colonial army. In 1783 he offered his resignation and retired to Mount Vernon.

When the Constitutional Convention was called Washington was chosen its president. Later he was chosen first president of the United States and took the oath of office at New York, April 30, 1789.

Some events during that time were the admission of Vermont, Kentucky and Tennessee, chartering of the first United States Bank, and the Whiskey Insurrection.

He served two terms as president, refused a third election, issued his famous farewell address, and retired to Mount Vernon. He died December, 1799, from long exposure in the saddle. There was almost as much mourning in Europe as in America. The words of his friend "Lighthorse" Harry Lee were very true, "First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen."

The entire life of Washington was a story of sacrifice for others. First for his relatives, particularly his mother, next for England, next for the thirteen colonies and lastly for the United States of America, which he so nobly endowed with the precepts which caused it to become the greatest nation in the history of the world.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Oberkamp entertained members of their bridge club and a few guests at their home last Thursday night with a Mexican supper and bridge.
