NATURAL GAS FOR OZONA IS IN PROSPECT

Grand Falls Man Will Install System If Gas Available

CITY IS PLEASING

Clyde Bradford Investigating Massie Gasser For Supply

Prospects for piping natural gas into Ozona for local distribution brightened this week when Clyde Bradford, manager of the gas company at Grand Falls, Texas, paid a visit to this city Monday to gather data with a view to bringing gas into the city and establishing a local distributing company.

Bringing in of an 18-million-foot gas well on the Massie ranch 13 miles from Ozona prompted Mr. Bradford to investigate the local situation with a view to utilizing this supply in the event it is found suitable for commercial use.

Mr. Bradford was impressed with the possibilities of the development of a gas distributing system in Ozona and indicated that if the Massie gasser proves a suitable supply source that he will start at once on preliminary work looking to establishing the local system and supplying this city with gas.

Bringing of natural gas to Ozona being one of the major projects of the Ozona Lions Club, that organization pledged its whole-hearted support to Mr. Bradford in making any necessary preliminary surveys or gathering any class of data. In the event the gas supply from the Massie well is found suitable, a preliminary survey of possible connections will be made by the club under Mr. Bradford's dictation and the organization will assist in any other manner needed.

Mr. Bradford has lived in Grand Falls four years. He formerly was an oil well driller. He is at present a candidate for county commissioner from his precinct in Ward County.

E. B. Baggett, Jr., Out For Clerk

Second Contest For County Office Develops Here

E. B. Baggett, Jr., this week authorized The Stockman to announce him as a candidate for the office of county and district clerk of Crockett County, subject to action of the Democratic primaries. Mr. Baggett held the office here now seeks one term, from 1926 to 1928, and the coming race will mark his second against the incumbent, George Russell, the latter successfully opposing him in 1928. In effect, he is seeking a second term in the office.

Mr. Baggett is one of the long-time residents of Crockett County and is too well known to need an introduction to voters of this county. He is at present in the insurance business and has been secretary of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association for a number of years.

"I am seeking the office of county and district clerk because I feel that I am entitled to a second term and I am entering the race with confidence that my friends will accord me another term." Mr. Baggett said in making his announcement. "I feel that I am thoroughly qualified to perform the duties of the office and I invite an examination of my record in office to support my claim."

Mr. Baggett's entrance into the race for the clerk's office makes the second local contest for county office, the four-way race for tax assessor holding the stage heretofore.

LARGER WOOL SUPPLIES

IN SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE

Apparent available supplies of wool on May 1 in Australia, New Zealand, Argentina, and Uruguay are estimated as 8 per cent greater than supplies on the same date a year ago, but 15 per cent less than supplies on May 1, 1930 when stocks were unusually high.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics in its current report on world wool prospects.

Exports from these four countries of the Southern Hemisphere up to May 1 in the current season are placed at 1,246,000,000 pounds, a decrease of 4 per cent compared with the corresponding period of 1930-31, but 16 per cent greater than exports in that period of 1929-30.

Australia and New Zealand have shipped more wool so far this season than last, but exports from the South American countries have decreased.

Fleeces from sheep shorn on western ranges in the United States are reported as being generally lighter than last year's, and on May 1 sheep and range conditions were considerably below normal. The bureau says that Russia has more sheep than any other country of the world, but the larger proportion are of the unimproved type. The clip to be shorn in Australia the latter part of this year will be "unusually good both in quality and average weight per fleece," it is expected. Weather conditions have improved in New Zealand, and the bureau says "there is now a fair chance of ewes entering the winter in average condition."

Herders Beaten, 13-Inning Game

Giants Win Over Angelo Crew In Spectacular Battle

The Shepherders, crack San Angelo diamond crew, were beaten to a standstill on the local diamond Sunday afternoon in one of the most spectacular games of the season on the local lot, the Giants pushing over the winning run in the thirteenth inning, after the teams had been in a dead lock from the sixth inning. The final score was Ozona 4, Shepherders 3.

The splendid hurling and fielding of Pitcher Lowery of Del Rio, a special importation for the day, was a feature of the day. Lowery allowed the visitors only five hits during the 13 innings. He handled 13 fielding chances without a bobble. In the last eight innings of the game, only one man of the visiting crew was able to reach first base, and he got there on a walk.

The Giants opened up with the heavy artillery in the opening frame of the game to score two runs, a single by Frank Russell, an error at third base that let Jack Sharp on, followed by a heavy rap by Rex Russell that scored both runners giving the locals their early lead.

Exactly the same procedure was followed by the visitors in the fourth inning to score two runs, except that they followed it up with another batter on an error and another single that scored a third runner and gave the Herders a one-run lead. The Giants, however, evened the count in the sixth when R. Russell walked. Greer and Pierce both flew out and White and Brown were both safe on errors to fill the bags. Lowery delivered a safe blow that brought in Russell, White going out at the plate trying to score.

The winning score in the 13th inning was made after two were out. Greer had singled and was roosting on second when White banged out a double to bring him in.

Road Contract To Be Let Tomorrow

9.13 Miles Grading To Be Awarded At Commission Session

Contract is scheduled to be awarded by the State Highway Commission at Austin tomorrow for grading and drainage structures on 9.13 miles of Highway No. 27 from Ozona west.

This will be the first work to be done on the Old Spanish Trail paving project west of Ozona. It will also include construction of a bridge over Johnson Draw in Ozona.

At the same time, contracts for 25 miles of grading and drainage structures on Highway 27 through Pecos County will be awarded by the commission. These contracts will complete the Trail grading through that county. Contracts were let last week for the twenty miles of the highway from Sonora to the Crockett County line in Sutton County to connect with the present grade from Ozona to the county line in this county.

Flowers Grocery On Cash Basis; Market Makes Credit Limit

Flowers Grocery and Bakery will be closed all day today marking down prices on its entire stock of merchandise in preparation for inaugurating its new "cash and carry" policy beginning Friday morning, June 10. After that date the firm will sell for cash only and is announcing substantial reductions on all its merchandise, made possible through elimination of bookkeeping and credit losses.

The Ozona Meat Market is also announcing a new policy effective June 10. On that date this firm will limit its charge accounts to strictly thirty days, extending the convenience of charge accounts only to those whose accounts are paid promptly at the end of each thirty-day period. Both of these changes were made necessary on account of present depressed business conditions and the difficulty of obtaining money with which to conduct business.

BARBECUE FOR JULY FOURTH GAINS FAVOR

Plan For Local Celebration Receiving Commendation

MANY PROFFER AID

Old-Time Jubilee To Be Staged If Plan Materializes

The movement to stage an old-time barbecue and county-wide get-together here on July 4 in lieu of the annual Rodeo, Race Meet and Stock Show, which has been called off for this year, had received such city-wide support and commendation this week that it is practically assured that such a celebration will be staged.

Organization of committees to perfect arrangements for the affair will likely be completed sometime this week and definite plans will be outlined for the day's celebration.

Already a large number of goats and some muttons have been offered by ranchmen for the barbecue. Others have volunteered their services in putting on the free feed and it is believed that it can be staged this year with a minimum of expense.

A two-days baseball tournament, with from five to seven games in prospect for the two days and a dance on each night of July 4 and 5 are other features of this year's local observance of July 4, the first year in the last six in which the annual rodeo and stock show will not be an attraction for all West Texas. Members of the local baseball club are making an effort to arrange a series of games for the two days and it is understood that the baseball club is sponsoring the two dances, music for which has already been engaged.

TAX BANKRUPTCY

The spectre of tax bankruptcy is faced by a good many Americans these days. Tax levies, according to Melvin Traylor, President of the First National Bank of Chicago, take the estimated equivalent of one day's labor every week from everyone in the country. A few years ago one out of every 22 persons gainfully employed was on the public payroll; now the percentage is one in 11. It is said that if the present rate continues, in a little over twenty years we will have one person working for government for every person who pays taxes!

Recently, in a middle-western state, one million acres of land were taken over by the counties for unpaid taxes. Another state has an $18,000,000 deficit. Another has $10,000,000 in signed contracts for certain projects and is unable to raise a single dollar with which to meet them. In many parts of the country local bond issues have defaulted, schools have been closed, necessary functions of government have been crippled, public employes have been unpaid.

This is what government extravagance has done. Higher taxes is not the solution. The people cannot pay. In Ohio, according to Mark Sullivan, with present low commodity prices, the state and municipalities take, in taxes, an amount about equal to the entire value of every farmer's crop. Nothing but tax bankruptcy can result if the trend of today is continued.

LEARNING TO PUT ON THE BRAKES

That we have been going through the most disastrous times in years no one will deny and yet out of its ruins we have at least learned one lesson. How to put on the brakes. Of course a lot of us hadn't used them for so long we had about forgotten where to look. But listen, brother, when you are going down hill at full speed, overloaded with self-confidence, and geared for a non-stop run; then look up only to see the bridge gone before it's time to take your foot off the accelerator, reach for the emergency brake before you're lost in the maelstrom of disaster.

Yes, truly, we have progressed, and at a rapid rate. Speed has been our watchword and final goal below and no one cared very much about what was to happen above. In fact, everybody was so busy speeding up nobody had time to think. It simply wasn't being done in the speediest families. Then what was the use of bothering about thinking, anyhow. Let the other fellow do it.

Wasn't your broker investing your money for you at a 20 per cent yield, which could never get lower? Was not motor cars getting cheaper and gas stations more plentiful? Didn't we have a two billion dollar Congress? Why, said the wise boys of industry, we hadn't started to go yet. Just wait until the farmers get speeded up and then things will happen—and they did.

Everybody with as much as thirteen acres bought one tractor, two automobiles and a dozen mortgage blanks, and started out to multiply and replenish the earth, and all that's left now to replenish is mortgages.

But at last we are, through necessity, slowing down and beginning to really think for ourselves, and when men and women begin thinking right, then will right plans be formulated and this old sphere move along in a safe and sane manner. Yes, brother, it's been a pretty hard lesson and a very expensive one, but we have at least learned where the brake pedal is.—Hunter Freeman in Paris, Mo., Mercury.

The Spirit Of Fair-Play

Through the years gone by, Ozona merchants have stood by the people of Crockett County in fair weather and foul. They have made an honest endeavor to treat fairly with their customers in business dealings and with their community in every project of general community interest. When it was possible for them to do so, Ozona merchants have extended long-time credit in times of temporary stress, carrying the load of past-due accounts to their limit, tying their money up without interest waiting for payment when it was most convenient to their customers.

Ozona merchants are still willing to do their share toward helping Ozona and Crockett County to get back on its feet, but their condition is much different now from past years. Profit margins have been lowered, sales volumes have dropped off. Overhead has been reduced in most cases, but expenses have dropped in proportion to sales and profits.

Facing such a situation, it is natural that business must be done in a more orderly fashion—money must be collected promptly for merchandise sold or else the merchant will be unable to meet his obligations and if he does not meet his obligations promptly, he is soon out of business—his wholesaler has not the personal interest in him that your merchant has had in you, and DEMANDS payment when payment is due. Count the RICH business men and merchants of Ozona. How many do you find with reserve capital sufficient to carry accounts long overdue? Even when money was easy to borrow, do you think it was fair-play to withhold payment of accounts and force your merchant to pay interest on his own money—money you owed him—in order to continue in business? It wasn't right then—it is not only not right now, it is a physical impossibility. Your merchant cannot borrow money on your open account, no matter what your reputation or your assets may be.

Let's face the facts. Under present conditions business cannot take credit losses and continue. Business cannot carry past due accounts. If you have the money to pay your account, doesn't the spirit of fair-play prompt you to pay it promptly when due? If you have not the money to pay what you owe, wouldn't it be fair-play to go to the man you owe, tell him you can't pay him now, and give him an idea of when you may be able to pay him and assure him that you appreciate his letting you use his money without interest charges? In that condition, wouldn't it be fair-play also to go on a strictly cash basis yourself, live within your income, and give the merchants who are carrying your overdue accounts all of your cash business wherever possible?

Your merchant has played fair with you—now, you play fair with him.

MAN MADE THE TOWN

by RUBY M. AYRES

SYNOPSIS

Diana, a young English girl, in love with Dennis Waterman, a married man, undergoes a nervous collapse and is sent to the country to recuperate under the care of Dr. Donald Rathbone, who lives near the cottage where she stays. She finds herself falling in love with the doctor, but still trying to hold Dennis' affection. Linda, Dennis' wife, tells her that she offered Dennis a divorce but he would not accept it; he would have felt compelled to marry Diana. Diana's love for Doctor Rathbone is tempered by jealousy of a woman named Rosalie, who lives in the doctor's house. At last Rathbone finds that he is deeply in love with Diana, but confesses to her that Rosalie is his wife.

THE STORY

"I was terribly sorry for her, too, and perhaps—flattered that she should think anything of me, but I did not love her, Diana, and we were just friends until . . . until I got an appointment abroad. When I told her about it she . . . it was the first time anything really definite was spoken between us. Perhaps I wasn't very brave, or perhaps I didn't really care for her sufficiently well, but I tried to show her how impossible it was—that I could not . . . There is no need to tell you every detail, and God knows I am not blaming her any more than I blame myself, but without my knowledge she told her husband that she cared for me, and she asked him to divorce her. . . . He refused. I have often wondered why, seeing how he had always neglected her. . . . Then, after a short time, she left him. Diana—if you knew how hard it is for me to tell you this—

He broke off agitatedly, but Diana did not speak, and after a moment he went on again:

"In the end . . . in the end . . . I agreed to take her away. We thought it would force her husband to divorce her. . . . She was so different in those days, gay and reckless, never counting the cost of anything—only living for the moment. . . . Then—the night before we were to have gone she was nearly killed in a motor accident. She was driving her own car, and she was alone. . . . She was unconscious for days, and when she recovered . . . she was as she is now—like a child. She recognized me, as she still recognizes me, but only as an affectionate child might, and that is all. The rest, everything that has happened in her life, is gone from her.

"I paid a visit to see her husband—she had nobody else who cared or who could have looked after her—and I remember that he laughed in my face. He was a much older man than I, and he said to me, 'Well, you've begun to pay already, Rathbone, and you'll go on paying for the rest of your life.' . . . It seems that he was right. . . . I brought her down here to my house, and Mrs. Farmer came to look after her. Two years later her husband died. . . . and I married her, Diana. You see, I'd always promised her that if she was ever free I would. I gave my word, and I felt that I must keep it. There was always a thought at the back of my mind that perhaps some day she might get better—and know! I didn't tell anybody—it wasn't anybody else's business, so she's still always 'Miss Rosalie' to Mrs. Farmer and Hobson—and to the rest of the household. But she is my wife, Diana, though I—we—we've never lived together as man and wife.

"That's all. . . . Perhaps I was stupidly quixotic, but I was—fond of her, and besides. . . . I had given my word. She's like a gentle affectionate child—always happy—asking nothing except that people are kind to her. She made very little difference to my life one way or the other till—I met you, and then I realized what I had done. . . . Even then I thought it only meant that I should be the one to go on—suffering. You seemed so much younger than I feel—I never imagined you might—might grow to care for me, and when I realized that perhaps—quite unconsciously—you . . . had, I tried my best—a poor best, I can see now—to keep you from realizing the truth. I don't think you will ever know what it meant to me . . . how I . . . when Nero hurt you, and afterwards, when you . . . when you asked me to tell you not to go away with Waterman, I could have borne it for myself, but to know you were unhappy—perplexed . . . that you didn't understand why I should seem so . . . unkind . . .

CHAPTER XVIII

He stopped speaking, and Diana said faintly:

"You mean that . . . she—Rosalie—"

"Like sweet bells jangled—out of time," Rathbone quoted grimly.

Diana closed her eyes.

There was a little silence; then she said again:

"Perhaps—some day—when we're both quite old—I shall wonder . . . if you have forgotten me. Do you think you will, Donald?"

"I shall never cease to think of you—and love you."

"But you'll send me away from you . . . all the same. I know that's what you mean to do," she said with a cry of pain.

"What else is there for me to do, Diana?"

"I could see you sometimes—couldn't I? . . . Not very often if you didn't want to—but just . . . sometimes! . . . I wouldn't care what people said if you didn't. I'll do anything—anything you want me to do, if only it doesn't mean I shall never see you any more. . . . We could just go on—being friends."

"Do you think we could—just go on being friends, Diana?"

She struggled for words in which she could best express herself. "It seems to me that it would not be such a great—wickedness if you and I lived together, even if we can never be married. Don't think all the wrong things about me for saying that. I know quite well what I'm saying. It wouldn't be like going away with Dennis—that was just a sort of bravado—defiance—to try and forget you. I'd made up my mind to drink lots of champagne tonight just so I should not care, but if it had been you . . . I love you just as well every minute of the day as I do now. I shouldn't care if you never kissed me or made love to me at all, if I could just be with you. I've been so silly. You said once that you didn't believe I'd ever met real love."

"I hadn't till you came. I must have been waiting for you. Can you understand that, too?"

"You make me very humble, Diana."

She lent forward a little, trying to see his face.

"And—will you?" she asked.

"Will I what, my dear?"

"Let me live with you?"

Rathbone turned suddenly, groping for her through the dim light and taking her to him with the strength of despair.

"Let me kiss you—let me kiss you."

She put her arms around him, and their lips met and clung together in a first kiss that seemed as if it could never end; Diana could not think, could not reason; she was only conscious of the passionate joy he brought her and when at last he let her go, she asked with a sob:

"And can you kiss me like that and still want to send me away?"

For already she had realized the hopelessness of her appeal.

"I love you so terribly," Rathbone said, but it was no answer to her question.

Diana put up her hand and gently touched his face.

"Donald?"

"Yes, my heart?"

She caught her breath on a half sob.

"How lovely," she whispered. "Nobody has ever said a thing like that to me before."

"Like what, Diana?"

"My heart!—isn't that what you called me?"

"You are my heart."

She leaned her cheek against his shoulder, and his arm tightened a little, drawing her closer to him.

"You're such a child," he said with emotion.

She shook her head.

"I'm not any more. I think I grew up all in a moment, just now, when you kissed me."

It gave her a queer little feel-

"I ought not to have kissed you," she laughed at that; she felt that at all costs she must not allow too great a sadness to come between them.

"Why not?" she asked. "Why not—if you love me?"

She turned round, lifting her face to his. "Kiss me again, Donald."

But he would not.

"We've got to face facts, Diana. We've got to realize that we can't go on meeting—like this. I'm not made of stone. We've got to make up our minds that the only possible thing is to say good-bye."

She gave a little cry.

"Don't do that, Diana. Don't cry, for God's sake. . . . I can't stand it. I'm to blame for all this—I ought never to have done what I did tonight. . . . You were right when you told me that I only just pretend righteousness."

He took his arm away from her, and with a great effort she checked her tears, though she sat forlorn and shivering without the shelter of his close embrace.

Then Rathbone said heavily:

"I must take you home."

She was silent for a moment; then she broke out:

"If I'm never going to see you any more—"

"I didn't say that, Diana."

"But you mean it, I know it's what you mean," she told him despairingly. She broke off to ask breathlessly after a moment: "I wonder what you think is to become of me?"

She would go back to London, she thought, tearfully, she would pay visits, and laugh and flirt, and stay up late, and get sick and weary and bored once again, with no hope of anything better to come.

She said with a last effort:

"If you would only promise me that some day I should see you again—and be with you. Can't I have anything to hope for? Don't you want to be with me too?"

"Every moment of all my life," she said, with a touch of her old obstinacy:

"If you really meant that, you wouldn't send me away. You've often talked to me about being happy."

"Now I've got the chance—a beautiful chance—you won't let me take it."

She was silent for a long moment; then she said wearily:

"Please take me home now."

Rathbone started the car without another word and drove silently back through the quiet lanes.

They were at the cottage gate now, and Rathbone stopped the engine.

Diana moistened her dry lips.

"I suppose this is—good-bye?" she said faintly.

"Let us say good-night instead, Diana," Rathbone answered hoarsely. "In my heart you know I can never say good-bye to you."

She said with a sob: "I don't want to be only in your heart, I want to be with you in real life. I want to feel your arms around me—to kiss you."

He did not move for a moment; then, almost roughly, he took her in his arms again, holding her silently, not speaking at all, just holding her, till after a long time he turned her face up to his.

He kissed her many times—on her eyes, her throat, her hair, and then once again on her lips, before, very gently, he put her away.

She stood beside him at the gate, unable to speak, shaken to the depths of her being, her eyes raised to him in mute appeal; then suddenly she turned and fled up the little garden, sobbing as if her heart would break.

CHAPTER XIX

The following morning there was another letter from Mrs. Gladwyn telling Diana to get ready to return to London on Wednesday.

"Wednesday! That is very soon," the Creature said. "I shall miss you."

"I shall miss you too," she said quietly. "But I suppose I shall have to go."

"By the way," she said as she left the table, "I can't find the frock you wore when you went away yesterday."

"No," Diana kept her eyes lowered. "I changed at my aunt's house and left it there. It doesn't matter."

It gave her a queer little feeling to realize that in all probability her carelessly packed suitcase was now in Dennis Waterman's possession, because of course he would have sent for it as they had arranged.

"And what are you going to do today?" Miss Starling asked. "I think it's going to be fine, by the look of it."

Diana glanced towards the window.

"I think Mr. Waterman will be coming presently," she said.

Miss Starling said, "Oh—I see."

Location Made For Deep Test

Stanolind To Drill On Todd Ranch In Crockett Co.

Stanolind Oil & Gas Co. and others have staked the location for a deep unit test to be drilled in central Crockett County in the center of the northeast quarter of section 67, block UV, GC&S Ry. Co. survey. The contract has been awarded to the Noble Drilling Co. of Tulsa and digging the cellar and slush pits and laying in of materials will be begun at once. It is understood that the test depth will be 7,500 feet. The test, however, will be drilled sufficiently deep to test the age of Ordovician age from which produce the world's deepest wells, in Reagan county, 31 miles northwest. It will be on the ranch of J. S. Todd of Fort Worth, about three-quarters of a mile west of the lime dividing blocks V on the east and WX on the west, along which Bob Reid of San Angelo alleges a strip exists for which he has filed, J. H. Walker, commissioner of the general land office, has not ruled on the application pending numerous surveys in the area.

Stanolind and others' No. 1 Todd will be about 1 3/4 miles northwest of Stanolind and Midland's No. 1 Robert Massie heirs which on May 31 struck slightly over 18,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily from 1,271-73 feet. This validated leases on several hundred acres in the area and assured far more than sufficient gas for fuel for the drilling of the Ordovician test. The gasser is 660 feet from the south line and 1,980 feet from the east line of section 47, block IV, GC&S Ry. Co. survey. Section 5 and a corner of section 56 lie between No. 1 Massie and the location just staked for No. 1 Todd. It had been thought for some time that the deep test would be section 66, block UV.

Stanolind and Continental Oil Co. were the largest contributors to the block unitized for the drilling of the deep wildcat and Stanolind will have charge of operations, directed from its West Texas offices in San Angelo. The location was staked Tuesday by Phil Wilkinson, Stanolind engineer from Fort Worth. Reports that the deep test would be drilled became current several months ago and contributed to a heavy lease and royalty play in Crockett County.

IN LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

CARL H. W. GETZ

New York has a number of so-called gypsy restaurants where waitresses will tell your fortune from tea leaves. These restaurants have been so well patronized that coffee houses are now telling fortunes from coffee grounds. Then there are Arabian restaurants which give sand readings.

Was walking through Bryant Park the other noon when I saw a line of men paying 10 cents to look through a telescope. I was curious to know what they were looking at. Got closer and saw that the telescope was focused on the top of the Empire State Building.

The cook's cocktail has made its appearance at several New York clubs. It consists of a lump of sugar soaked in red pepper sauce.

"Little Old German Bands" of four or five pieces appeared this last week on the streets of several New York suburbs. Despite the depression these musicians do pretty well.

One of the prettiest sights in New York is the manner in which a traffic officer's horse will always remain parallel to the sidewalk while the traffic is moving by. These horses are trained for a period of months before they are taken to the busy streets.

There are 300,000 adults in New York who can neither read nor write.

To Our Customers:--

We wish to announce that beginning Friday, June 10th, we are discontinuing our policy of extending long-term credit to our patrons, being forced to take this step because of depressed business conditions which have prevailed for so long. In future, we are limiting our credit accounts to strictly 30 days. This step is necessary if we are to extend the courtesy of credit to our patrons, as we find that we are not able to carry any account for a longer time. By limiting our credit to a 30-day period we can still extend this courtesy to our patrons, enabling those who do not have ready cash to make their purchases as usual. In addition, we are announcing a

Reduction of 5c Per Pound

On All Classes of Fresh Meats

This reduction is made possible through the more prompt receipt of money which a 30-day limit on credit will permit.

In the event that your account is paid in full each 30-day period, your credit account with us will be maintained. But should the account not be paid when due, we will be forced to discontinue credit and ask that you pay cash when any purchase is made. This change is not made through choice, but through necessity, as we cannot carry long-term credit and remain in business. It is our purpose to adhere strictly to this policy in all cases and we ask your co-operation and continued patronage.

Sincerely,

Here's Simplified Cooking

Actually, cooking consists of only three fundamental operations: preparing the foods ... putting them in the oven ... and placing the meal on the table.

But so many more are required by old-fashioned methods! So much pecking, poking and poking is necessary! So much time is wasted on these unnecessary, tiresome tasks!

With a modern Electric Range, cooking is reduced to its three fundamentals. You merely prepare your meal, place it in the oven, set the Time and Heat Controls, and forget the usual cooking! All the work is done automatically ... requiring none of your time or attention—and leaving you free to enjoy happy leisure hours!

... And this freedom is only one advantage of modern Electric Cookery! Foods cook better, taste better and are more healthful. In fact, there are so many advantages you'll wonder how you managed with old-fashioned, inefficient methods!

Call us for an individual investigation of your use of electric services, to determine the cost of cooking by electricity in your home. You may be surprised to know that there are many cases where electric cookery actually decreases the total of electric and gas bills.

FOR MISSOURI WARBLER

Every editor has received them—the postmaster is not to blame. For instance, there was a man named Tim Short who sent a Missouri editor three notices to stop sending his paper; he did not want it any longer. Upon investigating the subscription list, it was found Tim was short $4.50.

He never paid a cent, and yet, as a matter of economy, he stopped his paper. A few evenings later, the editor stepped into a church and Tim's melodious voice rang out clear in a soul-stirring song, "Jesus Paid It All."

His earnestness impressed the editor. The next day he sent Tim a receipt in full, begging his pardon for not knowing that he had made an assignment to the Lord.
