Hon. Harry Hines Addresses Citizens of Dozen Counties

SPEAKS AGAIN AT LAYMEN'S MEET AT 7:30 TONIGHT
Luncheon Attended by More Than 200
At Noon
IS HONOR GUEST
Chairman of Highway Commission Here Entire Day

Addressing approximately 235 citizens of Midland and a dozen neighboring counties, the Hon. Harry K. Hines, chairman of the Texas Highway Commission, eloquently inspired his audience to fuller realization of the duties of citizenship, in a luncheon given in his honor at the Crystal ball room of Hotel Scharbauer at noon today.

He will speak again at 7:30 o'clock this evening, addressing a meeting of laymen at the First Christian church. All men are invited and representatives of 18 counties in the church district are expected to attend.

Besides the Midland audience of approximately 200 today, eleven neighboring counties had a total of 35 representatives at the luncheon, including visitors from Nolan, Howard, Martin, Ector, Dawson, Andrews, Winkler, Loving, Reeves, Ward and Crane counties.

Mayor M. C. Ulmer was master of ceremonies and Mr. Hines was introduced by Rev. J. E. Pickering, who paid tribute to the speaker's many material accomplishments, emphasizing also his service as a Christian gentleman.

Mr. Hines, arriving by automobile at 10 o'clock this morning, was accompanied by his secretary, Tom Paine of Dallas, and J. C. Garret, division highway engineer of Lubbock.

Mr. Hines, guest of Clarence Scharbauer, chairman of the site committee, conferred with various delegations here throughout the morning and early this afternoon. He will leave tonight, leaving by automobile early Saturday for Wichita Falls and Dallas.

The speech given by Mr. Hines, broadcast through remote control over station KRLL, follows, in effect:

I am grateful for the privilege of being your guest on this most delightful occasion. I feel confident that you are all striving for the same goal, our aims, aspirations and visualizations are on common ground.

I realize the sincerity of purpose and purity of motive of each individual in this community, whose personality radiates in the growth, development and success of this city as a whole. Am sure you are one of those who are putting the success and failures of the community as of mutual concern and moment to all of you, as your interests are interwoven together, for what affects your community affects you personally as well.

Am sure you face with inspiration the task of making a better life for its people, its industries, schools, churches, amusements and recreational facilities render a distinct and unique community service, thus developing a sense of appreciation on the part of your citizenship; a feeling of satisfaction that this is their home. A satisfied citizenship radiates out to others. Prospects in many cases who are really searching for just such a place to live.

Your city bears a high reputation throughout the state. I won't call names but you do have an unusually strong leadership, men of vision, men striving to bring definite improvements to pass. Among other things, they are "fighting for better highways and moreover they are getting them."

Those on the outside are of the impression that your citizenship is fortunate by reason of your heritage and your opportunities, likewise your community riches—riches that are not all stored in counting houses and banks, but riches in the form of friendships, associates, neighbors, and those who care.

New Blast From Arctic Slashes Down As Nation Counts 77 Dead

CHICAGO, Jan. 24. (AP)—A new blast of Arctic weather slashed down the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains today with more sub-zero weather for the shivering nation. Snow barriers deepened over the northwest just as the eastern half of the country was beginning to thaw out.

As the mercury climbed Thursday from lows that set new all-time marks in many sections of the plain and northern border states, readings started a dip in the east with New York experiencing the most frigid below 6000 feet.

CRANE DEEP WELL MAKES OIL HEAD

Gulf Waddell Shows Net Production of 162 Barrels in Day

When bridge at 6950 was knocked out, Gulf No. 1 Waddell, a county deep discovery, made a head of 207 barrels of oil. This included, however, the 150 barrel oil load put in before the well was completed. A 24 hour period the well swabbed 105 barrels, registering a net production of 162 barrels in 24 hours. It is now cleaning out just below 6000 feet.

The lower producing horizon, sealed off when the hole was bridged at 6991 feet preparatory to shooting the upper pay has not been penetrated by cleaning tools, and in all probability, the combined production of lower and upper pay wells will show that enough oil is being made to put the well in the commercial class.

The second shot was from 5990 to 6050 feet, in the upper section of the Simpson, a middle Ordovician formation, the lower section having been shot two months ago with net much gain noted.

The No. 1 Waddell is in section 4, block B-27, public school land, in the Tubb area of Crane county, J. B. Tubb, Jr. is in the northwest quarter of section 11, block B-27, public school land, and is drilling anhydrite at 1865 feet.

England Reluctantly Accepts View That New King Will Remain Bachelor

This is the second of a series of six intimate glimpses of Edward VIII long known to the American public as sportsman and man-of-the-world while Prince of Wales.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Gradually, as year has followed year, the royal family and the British public have begun to reconcile themselves to an idea—that it is probable Edward Albert intends never to marry.

That he has reached the age of 41-plus, and assumed the throne without marrying and providing a natural heir to his crown, is the best argument of those who believe he will remain a bachelor king.

The days when he would be most likely to yield to pressure on the subject, the days of his youth, have passed. In late years, when he has been more at liberty to construct his own design for living, it has always followed a bachelor pattern.

Since the very day of his birth, the Prince of Wales naturally became the favorite object of speculation on the part of matchmakers, official and amateur. There is a story that his great-grandmother, Queen Victoria, began it when he was a fair-haired toddler of 2, remarking, perhaps playfully, that "he and the Czars' baby daughter Olga would make a sweet alliance."

The game of mating the prince thus begun by the austere Victoria has been played ever since by practically everyone but the prince himself. He has gone his own way,

Leaders Confident Senators Will Beat Veto

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24. (AP)—President Roosevelt today vetoed an immediate payment of the bonus to war veterans, recently passed by both the senate and the house, but the house quickly overrode the veto.

Breaking precedent, Roosevelt sent a terse, hand-written message to the house returning "without my approval" the bond payment plan. The sudden action faced almost certain overriding, Democratic leaders flatly predicting the bill would become a law, since both houses approved the measure by more than the two-thirds majority necessary to override the veto.

The president referred legislators "to every word of what I said in last year's veto of the currency-expansion bonus bill. My convictions are as compelling today as they were then; therefore, I cannot change them," he said.

MOMENTUM FOR FORESTRY

More than half a billion trees were planted in this country in 1935, to shatter three all-time records in reforestation. Michigan, in third place a year ago, is the leader, while Wisconsin ranks second and New York third, says the Forestry News Digest.

Most extensive of the single campaigns was the shelter-belt program, in which 5,700,000 trees were planted in a vast area stretching from the Dakotas to Texas. In addition, the Soil Conservation Service planted 89,250,000 trees. The work of the Civilian Conservation Corps was conspicuous in both projects.

This year forestry officials expect an even larger planting. It will take many years, they believe, to repair damages wrought by ruthless timbering of pioneer days. But already these men have achieved much in making the nation forest-conscious. The 1935 planting figures are evidence enough of that.

Huge Corporations Wage Bitter Battles to Win Rich Oil Fields

The world powers are speeding up their frantic race for control of the sources of oil, vital to the mighty war machines. How they are competing in all parts of the world and what lies in the background of the great struggle is interestingly told by Willis Thornton, NEA Service and Reporter-Telegram staff correspondent, in a series of three articles, of which this is the second.

By WILLIS THORNTON NEA Service Staff Correspondent

The oil-bearing regions of the earth, fought over time and time again by competing companies and jealous nations, are again becoming "hot spots."

Venezuela, where British and American interests have struggled for rich oil resources, is in a litany state following the recent death of Gen. Juan Gomez, iron-fisted dictator for nearly 30 years.

Under Gomez, foreign companies received valuable oil concessions, though Gomez saw to it that both he and his country got a generous share of all royalties.

His death brought Venezuela to the brink of a revolution of the type that has been going on in Mexico. Already there has been rioting and general disorder.

Gen. Vincenzo Soto, for instance, Governor of the rich oil-producing province of Zulia, was promptly removed from his post, lest he make an independent state of Zulia. Gen. Leon Jurada replaced him.

Had Soto started such a secession move, most of the concessions granted by Gomez might have been voided, and a new struggle for them begun.

Among American companies, Texas Corporation, Standard Oil, Sinclair-Consolidated, and Gulf, all have valuable concessions and refinery properties in or near Venezuela. How these would fare in case of a political upheaval is in doubt, with rival British-Dutch interests ready to seize any advantage that might come along.

The great Caribbean oil area has been called "the Balkans of the oil world."

Iraq Is Trouble Area With production just beginning to come from the long pipeline to the Mediterranean from the Iraq fields, another trouble area looms up. It is British-controlled, as a by-product of the exploits of the picturesque Lawrence of Arabia, but French and Americans also have an interest in this line.

Yet with Africa and the Near East in turmoil, it is felt that Ibn Saud, the Arab chieftain, might easily be convinced by Italian, Dutch, or other interests, to cut out or seize the line in his interest, and the interest of his country. The Standard group is also reported to have recently acquired an interest in the Iraq fields from Gulf.

The Russian question continues to loom larger in the world oil situation. Production in the Bakou-Caucasus fields is increasing.

Shell Charges "Steal" Russian oil has been the cause of a long and bitter battle between the American Standard Oil interests and those of the British-Dutch Royal Shell group. Shell, for a long time refused to traffic with the Russian Oil Trust (ROP), claiming that Shell had bought control of the old Russian oil companies (Nobel) and that the Soviets had stolen what was really Shell oil.

Shell protests were one of the elements which kept Britain from recognizing Russia for so long. Standard (N. J.) had also bought up old Russian oil stocks.

Soco-Vacuum has no scruples against dealing with the Soviet, and now has a contract with ROP to buy its spare kerosene for sale in the Near East.

Japan Stirs Alarm Russia sells to the Spanish government monopoly, and to Japan, and in recent years actually invaded England with service stations, underselling Shell on its home grounds and causing a bitter price war.

Royal Dutch Shell and other companies, including Americans, with oil interests in the Dutch East Indies, are perturbed by the southerly advance of Japan. For they know that Japan produces only about 2,000,000 barrels of oil a year, only half of what it needs for its navy, and a tenth of its total needs. They know that part of the Japanese expansion plan is the hope of adding to Tokyo's concession from Russia in northern Sakhalin Island the producing wells and oil shales in north China.

Establishment of the new commonwealth government in the Philippine Islands brought an almost immediate boom in leases of land, believed to contain vast undeveloped oil resources.

But the new government has just outlawed 31 leases obtained during this "boom" by American and Philippine companies. Ten leases of the Standard-Vacuum Company, Far Eastern subsidiary owned jointly by Soco-Vacuum and Standard (N. J.) were nullified.

They were outlawed apparently on the ground that the joint ownership of the Standard-Vacuum Co. involved a more complicated corporate setup than the new Philippine government cared to deal with.

May Affect Isles' Future Should the Philippine oil lands turn out to be producers on the scale hoped for, the future of the islands as an independent country will be profoundly affected.

Bitter commercial warfare for the oil markets of China, India, and South America has added fuel to the flames. The business of supplying "oil for the lamps of China," which is still in the keystone-burning stage where the United States stood in the '80's, is a prize hotly contested by Royal Dutch Shell and Standard interests.

In the course of this war, Shell invaded the United States and now sells its gasoline in every state in the Union. It gets nearly all its supply from wells it controls within the United States, for gasoline and oil can be sold cheaply only comparatively near the point of production.

World-wide organizations such as Shell and Standard must have supplies all over the world if they are to compete for world markets.

Government Hand in Pie This competition is complicated by the fact that no one knows where private business leaves off and government steps in. The American companies, except for such pressure as they are able to exert from time to time, are independent of the government.

But the same cannot be said of the other two great international oil companies.

Anglo-Persian is directly controlled by the British government through stock ownership.

And Royal Dutch Shell group so ably directed by Sir Henri Detering has extremely intimate government connections, working Despite threats of a diminishing supply, the United States is still furnishing the bulk of world oil production, as shown by the above chart of world production, 1934.

Figures for 1935, not yet complete, will show almost the same relative positions between producing countries.

Mexican Levees Cause Agitation Among Americans

BROWNSVILLE, (P)—After inspecting the levee system Mexico is erecting on the south banks of the Rio Grande, officials of Cameron county are seeking to impress upon the Federal government the need for immediate preparations to meet the strain flood waters will put upon the American side of the river.

When the Rio Grande reached high stage heretofore, water overflowed on the section between Matamoros and Reynosa, which lies opposite the Texas Valley lands from Brownsville to Mercedes.

The big levees on the Mexican side are expected to hold the water in the channel during the spring rise this year. This will result in higher river stages than in the past.

The solution engineers say lies in an expensive program of river rectification between Brownsville and the mouth of the Rio Grande including straightening the channel and probably jettifying the mouth.

They believe this would increase the fall, speed the flow, prevent silt deposits, increase scouring of the river bottom and thereby bring about lowering of the river's stages.

Immediate action in construction of more retaining levees is sought and Representative Milton H. West of this district has been asked to expedite availability of the $1,600,000 appropriation for this work which has been given tentative government

STORIES IN STAMPS

ESCAPE FOR THE SOUL

THE soul of a dying Maori, New Zealand tribesman, had to travel to the far north on leaving his human abode, before it could arrive in the spirit world, and the path to the distant pole had to be straight, his compatriots believed. So the Maoris built their homes, or "whares," with the doorways facing the north, and death came so much easier to the afflicted ones within. The doorway also was the family meeting place, where the natives enjoyed the warmth of the sun most of the day.

The Maori was a master at carrying fine examples of his work being reproduced in New Zealand's latest pictorial series. Below, for instance, is the two-penny stamp showing a Maori house, with its walls and door and window frames elaborately decorated with Maori carvings. Inside, the walls are paneled with intricately woven designs.

Only the whares of chieftains, and tribal meeting houses, were carved in this way, and members of entire tribes participated in the work, which took many months, even years, to complete.

This work would strengthen the levees on this side to match the new embankments on the Mexican side.

FEMININE FANCIES

BY KATHLEEN EILAND

Despite the fact that we seem never to have time to do the necessary mending on our wardrobe, much less really make something new, we are always attracted to the new materials.

There are numbers of novelty weaves this year—with names as novel as themselves, so that one need only walk through a store to find something that is just what one wants.

For spring coats, there are Field-ridge coatings in soft-looking plaids, in both the more subdued and the brighter combinations. There are solids and plain material in the Heatherlane and Plaidlane fabrics.

In lighter-weight materials for suits or dresses, our choice is Silvaknit, an intriguing fabric which is loosely knit in appearance and comes in some of the most thoroughly satisfying colors that we have seen this spring. One merchant in town, who is displaying this told us that "Silvaknit" is the biggest item in piece goods in two years.

At the risk of seeming over-enthusiastic, we'll say it deserves some kind of record. And we say that, despite the fact that it is a material that we, personally, could not wear.

A silk and wool material that comes in solid colors is another attractive offering and a ribbed crepe in most delicious (that's the only word) tones of blue and pink.

The printed crepes that appear every spring show some pretty designs, too. We have noticed some materials in which dots almost obscure the background and some in which designs are good-sized blocks of contrasting color.

In wash goods, there is a pretty creation called "Cream Puff" which promises to be more practical than its frivolous name implies, being an ABC creation, fast color and washable.

But there, if we say much more, we might be tempted to upset our wardrobe plans and sally forth in search of patterns and materials to make a dress ourselves. And we fear the result might not be up to rosy-colored anticipation.

Nevertheless, no woman who has ever sewed can go window-shopping these days without feeling her fingers fairly itch for the feel of a thimble and the slither of crisp material beneath the foot of a sewing machine.

THIS NATURAL FOOD GENTLY REGULATES YOUR SYSTEM

Furnishes Needed "Bulk" for Regular Habits

Your doctor will tell you that keeping healthy depends far more on proper diet than on drugs, that common constipation is usually due to insufficient "bulk" in meals, and that patent medicines give you only temporary relief.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies gently acting "bulk" which corrects the cause of common constipation. This "bulk" takes up moisture, forming a soft mass which helps to cleanse the system.

ALL-BRAN gives your body the regular internal exercise it needs to prevent sluggishness. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

Studies on normal men and women have shown that this delicious cereal is perfectly satisfactory. Serve ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity, with milk or cream—or use in cooking.

Two tablespoons daily are usually sufficient. Consult your doctor if you do not gain relief this way. ALL-BRAN is much more effective than part-bran products. Get ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

the Countess Carrick were among those mentioned in recurrent rumors.

While the prince was on a hunting trip to Africa, Lady Ann fell ill, and daily reports from her bedside were radioed to him.

That lent strength to this report, but as usual nothing came of it. Lady Ann has since married.

There have been other London society women, of high position, but not of noble blood, with whom the prince has been friendly for many years, but none of these friendships has given rise to any serious talk of a royal marriage.

The prince's free-and-easy manner of dancing with whomever seized his fancy when on parties has again and again blossomed out in reams of newspaper stories, especially in America.

At one time during 1926 he danced frequently with Adele Astaire in London, and his dancing with Irma Cherry in Biarritz in 1931, with Carolyn Granberry at Panama City in 1921, Eileen Stanley in New York the same year, and Joyce Lindsey in New York in 1924 all brought their share of open-mouthed comment from the press.

Just Another Dance With Pretty Partner

To few commentators did it occur that the prince was just like so any other young man—he liked to dance with pretty girls, and did so on every convenient occasion. And that was really all there was to that.

The prince has been especially fortunate, too, in his family associations, and his devotion to his sister Mary, the only girl in the royal family, and to little Princess Elizabeth, daughter of his favorite brother, Prince George, is noteworthy.

The answer, among those who know the prince well, is simply that he has been too busy to become interested in and court a bride. Having missed this experience due to preoccupation with the war during the years when he was most likely to be drawn to it, he launched into the period of post-war gaiety and later-day seriousness without ever having had time for marriage.

What seldom occurs to the sentimentalist is this—Edward may simply prefer the bachelor life, and the competence and completeness with which he has set up his bachelor quarters and regime at St.

James Palace and Fort Belvedere suggest that this may be true.

Whatever the inner reason, the mere fact that the prince has been able to resist for so many years the family and political pressure put upon him to marry speaks volumes for his strength of will. In this, as well as in other matters, he has been increasingly "his own man" for the last five years.

NEXT: How Edward's education and service as a soldier and sailor have influenced his life and will influence his reign. How, in his war service, he came a lot nearer being killed than it is the fashion to think.

Exciting Musical to Open Sunday at Ritz

Reported as introducing a new idea in screen musicals, Warner Bros. latest musical, "Stars Over Broadway," is scheduled as the feature attraction at the Ritz theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Besides being the film debut of the popular radio stars, James Melton and Jane Froman, the picture has an all star cast which includes Pat O'Brien, Jean Muir, Frank McHugh and Frank Fay.

The plot concerns the rise and fall of the loves, the lives and the struggles of Broadway radio aspirants with an inner glimpse of the hidden portals of the broadcasting stations. There is a large variety of musical numbers including new and catchy airs by Harry Warren and Al Dubin, famous song writers, and selections from the compositions by Schubert, Verdi, and Von Flotow.

Mutiny on the Bounty Year's Top Adventure

"Mutiny on the Bounty," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's great sea picture, is shown at the Ritz theatre Saturday night, and Sunday, Monday and Tuesday carries one away with the sheer intensity of its drama. Although a historical romance, wrung from the actual records of the British Admiralty, it is far more absorbing than pure fiction. It is a superb achievement in motion pictures, a historical picture as it should be and one that will live for years to come as one of the most exciting sea tales ever screened.

"Ten Nights in a Bar Room" Alfred's Play

"Ten Nights in a Bar-room," age old comedy-drama, is the feature attraction to be presented by the Jack and June Alfred comedians at their tent show tonight.

The feature, a stand-by for traveling troupes since time-immemorial, is one that is regarded as a sure laugh producing one, and one that always leaves an audience satisfied. Merchants tickets will not be good for general admission tonight—the regular admission price of 20 and 10 cents being charged.

As a people thus strives in a spirit of harmony and community team work—they will accomplish One thing this community must attain in 1936 and that is a higher degree of local prosperity, and this cannot be done by citizens crawling into their shells; for retrenchment and rigid economy cannot possibly bring prosperity. Prosperity only lives in the commercial expansion, confidence, faith and daring.

There are people in every community that can afford to remodel their home, add another room, a little paint and wall paper and other wise tidy up a bit, brighten up the home, make it more cheery; yes, they can add a few pieces of furniture, carpets, rugs, curtains and re-work their yards.

Some have a married son or daughter trying to get a start and you are able to build them a little cottage and furnish them some equipment. Do it now while you live, and watch them enjoy it.

Communities must accept responsibility to their citizens out of employment, shorten the hours of your employees and do not reduce their pay; make room for more employees; add one here and there realizing that if every one had work and were receiving a living wage, that they would become consumers of groceries, clothing, automobile accessories, gas, oil, etc., and then they would rent a little place and become normal citizens. There is no surplus of products, my friends; it is a fictitious surplus. If the millions of unemployed are to prosper, our land were receiving pay checks and could thus become consumers, they would tax our industrial and commercial output, and reduce their capacity. A town therefore that creates work for its people, creates a natural circulation of money.

Therefore we must think in terms of prosperity and plenty. Thoughts are things; thoughts are energy; thoughts are magnets which attract to us the very things which we think.

Prosperity is not limited to time or to place. It manifests itself when and where there is a conviction of the possibility of success. It is attracted to an individual or community consciousness that is free from worry, strain and tension. The curve signs of human life, to live it, for prosperity attracts while poverty repels.

One thing is quite certain—success number one is to have a vision that thrives where one's vision is such that of picking the visible and available fruit in the community without being in only one thing at a time. More work, more daring, more courage, more faith should be the order of the day. Every chamber of commerce, civic organization should be interested in preserving human life.

A great deal is being said these days in the newspapers, magazines, and on the radio and on the picture screens concerning the alarming toll of human life by the most dangerous piece of machinery known to man—the automobile—how alarmed and excited we would become if war was declared against the United States and a death list of 36,400 men, women and children from automobile accidents in twelve months does not seem to penetrate our consciousness. No one seems to realize that an automobile traveling 40 miles per hour cannot be stopped under 158 feet and still the ditch along the road is not over ten feet away; neither can we realize that a car traveling at 60 miles per hour develops a shock pressure equivalent to falling off a twelve story building, and that the highways are as terrific speed as compliant as though we were in a rocking chair in our living room. Even the birds of the air realize the highways are dangerous more than we. A hunter was shooting at a couple of ducks; shot were flying all around them and one duck said to the other, "This is a hazardous world for ducks, isn't it?" And the other replied, "Not so bad, think of those people down on the highways."

The world would call us barbarians if we were to get out of the streets with six shooters, knives and tomahawks and kill another, as we are doing on our highways. Two definite steps should be taken without delay. First, Congress should at this session pass an emergency law forcing the automobile manufacturers to weld a governor on the carburetor of every car, making it impossible for the car to make in excess of sixty miles per hour and for every car now in use to be so equipped within sixty days, with a criminal code covering this, as well as intoxicated drivers and other reckless road infractions. They should pass the most rigid and drastic law ever known in the United States. The country has gone speed crazy—there is no one left who is sane enough to save us?

Second, Our legislators and that of the other states should provide the funds for hundreds of state road police who with the law enforcement officers of our counties, municipalities should be required to put a stop to this slaughter of human life; failure to do so making any law similar with the fact subject to removal.

Third: A more rigid drivers' license law requiring examinations and tests to physical and mental fitness and ability. The physical and mental unfit cannot get a license to drive an automobile, and an automobile plunging forward at the rate of sixty miles an hour with only a few feet clearance between passing cars is in many respects more dangerous. When you think of it, certainly it is insane to place our lives in the hands of a man who is not a highway commissioner. I sincerely trust our department will be able to widen the road surface on the six miles of highway on our hills warning "Do Not Pass Cars on Hills". These cautionary measures we have started. It has been suggested that we place a "warning" on the pavement across the road at the foot of hills that it might make the driver more mindful of his speed.

Am hoping that we can paint a center strip on all highways that carry any appreciable amount of traffic using the black line, concrete and yellow stripe on asphalt, which is more durable and more easily seen in the glare of approaching headlights than white. Yes, it would cost money, but it would save lives. It isn't about time we are spending more money in a drastic way to meet the situation of today, isn't the saving of human life worth money? I personally am very anxious to see a general painting campaign at this time.

All of our bridges should be wider than our highways and the pavement flanged to add clearance as we have done in some cases.

We should enlarge the number and numbering of our road signs. For instance, the newer signs are some eighteen to twenty inches in height, where so many deaths are occurring, larger signs demanding that the traveling public comes to a stop (unusual signs) should be erected; and on many of such intersections crossing lights should immediately be installed. Am hoping that conditions will make it possible for us to accomplish many of these things in the near future, for the present death rate on our highways is alarming and creates an emergency that requires drastic action. The newspapers are to be congratulated for their very fine effort and unselfish use of their space in their campaign against reckless driving.

It is tremendously gratifying to note the public's interest in highways. A remarkable transition of public concern has manifested itself in recent years, and it is to the world the important places of interest in Texas. Our mammoth oil fields, irrigated sections, natural resources of our state, our beautiful cities and towns, health resorts, the recreation areas, hunting, fishing, scenery, bathing beaches, the mountains and still another, as we are doing on our highways. Two traditional, romantic Old Mexico on the south, and the nation's wonder marvel, Carlsbad cavern, on the west.

When our main arteries are all paved, truly Texas can make a bid for the nation's travel by reason of all-year weather conditions so attractive to both tourists and commercial travel, all of which will add a constant day by day revenue to our merchants in Texas as well as a tremendous revenue to the state from gasoline taxes.

It is my desire to see the highway system of Texas put on a business basis, for our highway system can be likened to a great railroad system, with its feeder lines leading out into the productive areas, hamlets and towns, creating the tonnage as well as the passengers for the main line, the longer and more profitable haul.

This is the reason for my advocating so strongly lateral farm-to-market roads hard surfaced that the farmers and the populace of our inland towns and villages may be able, regardless of the weather, to haul their products to market and to be able themselves to get to town or out on their main artery to go where they may, when they desire.

These lateral farm to market roads will undoubtedly materially increase the volume of traffic. It is not to be forgotten that this use of the highways is at the rate of four cents per gallon service charge, two cents of which is collected through tolls and to build new highways and bridges.

Highways are, after all, a community enterprise. They are built and maintained through money, unfortunately called taxation. One writer says we should not call it taxation, but rather it should be called a "service charge" just as the sums we pay for our utilities, gas, water, electricity, telephones, or railroad fares are called "service charges."

When we pay a gasoline tax we really are making an investment in roads providing the money goes for road construction and not for the maintenance of the wisdom of any further inroads upon the gasoline revenue for any other purpose.

If we do not pay taxes to build good roads we will have to pay higher taxes in the form of car repairs, tires and rapid car depreciation.

We are all interested in the development of this great southwest, the land of opportunity, and it is to be remembered that your town isn't any bigger or better than your members of commerce. You may not be able to accomplish much individually to improve your city, but collectively you can; therefore, make a definite monthly or yearly investment in your chamber of commerce, not a contribution. Resolve that you will adequately finance your organization.
