Some People Have All the Luck—Tom To See the Derby

When Tom Nance shipped five carloads of calves and yearlings to Kentucky last November, he planned to make a quick sale and a limited profit.

Hardly had he placed the cattle on bluegrass pasture, however, when the cattle market began to show an advance.

Nance sold two loads and secured ample pasture for the remainder. He bought a carload of thoroughbred mares and came back home.

And now it appears that the time has come for the three loads of cattle he left there to double their money.

Bana Trip to Enid Bardsdall Well Enjoyable and Instructive

Editor's Note: The following account of the trip of the Midland high school band to Enid, Okla., last week was written by a member of the party for The Reporter-Telegram.

The Midland high school band left last Tuesday morning in ten cars for Enid, Okla., to attend the Tri-State festival held there last week. The band was fortunate in getting enough cars to offer all regular members an opportunity to go on the six-day trip.

No members were left except those whose parents would not give permission for them to go. Thirty-seven members were taken by the following parents and patrons of the school: Mrs. Fred S. Wright, Mrs. M. D. Self, Mrs. R. J. Stengel, Mr. R. Martin, Mrs. J. C. Dunagan, Mrs. L. G. Lewis, Mrs. J. E. Turner, Fred Haliman, and Russell E. Shradet.

The festival lasted four days, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The party made the homeward trip Sunday, leaving at five o'clock in the morning from headquarters at the Youngblood hotel in Enid and began arriving here before six o'clock in the evening.

All cars made the entire trip without any serious accident or car trouble. The members of the band were kept in the homes of co-operating Enid citizens. The Midland band being another of the first to arrive, was given the choice of homes and all were very well taken care of.

Some of the Midland band members were asked to stay at the same homes next year. Those who desired were given rates at the Hotel Youngblood. The weather was found to be slightly cooler than the Midland weather has been, and a few wired home for overcoats which were received in time to be of good use.

Two of the days, however, were warm and the students were able to escape taking colds. All of them returned home in good spirits and good health. All of the students and the band were very highly inspirational.

The contest feature of the Enid Festival was very interesting and exciting. The students were divided into two classes, according to Mr. Shradet. There were band contests in all classes according to the enrollment of the school.

Mr. Ochs, one of the directors and charter members of the Associated Press and organizer of the old Southern Associated Press, came here Sunday night for a few days' visit with relatives. He had been in ill health for some time.

Faces Ouster

Ouster in a rebellion of resentful House Democrats threatens Edward T. Taylor, above, elderly Colorado congressman acting majority leader during the illness of Representative W. D. Bankhead of Alabama.

Failure of Taylor to support Joseph W. Byrns in the work relief bill fight has stirred the wrath of administration backers.

Who Knows the Answer to This?

Representative R. E. Thomson apparently believes in helping his constituents—when he knows who they are.

Recently he received a typed postcard from Midland, from some one who asked for eight of the government's agricultural bulletins.

The writer listed the bulletins neatly but failed to sign his name. Which resulted in what the fiction writers call an amusing episode.

Soon afterward, R. W. Castleberry, associated with a law firm here, wrote to Thomson, comparing the listing on the card and the letter Thomson came to the conclusion that the writers of the two might be the same and wrote to Castleberry enclosing the card, saying he would be glad to send the bulletins if he knew to whom they should be sent.

PILLAR OF CLOUD GRIM WARNING OF FOLLY

About all we need to finish the warning from the western plains is a pillar of fire by night. We had the pillar of cloud by day, and it went swirling eastward as a grim reminder of the fate that follows after folly.

A dust storm, of course, is a natural phenomenon like a cyclone or a flood. But unlike these it is partly a man-made thing, also. We got our dust storm because of the way we used our land, and it was an ominous indication of the way nature can go on the rampage when man upsets her balance.

Altogether, it is a queer situation. We expanded our agricultural production beyond reason, a few years ago, just as we expanded other kinds of production. By bringing under cultivation more land than we needed, we helped to give ourselves a farm depression which today is requiring the most heroic measures.

Then, as if that were not enough, high winds and dry weather combine to ruin the land which we unwisely plowed.

Out of it all we ought at least to get a new comprehension of the proper way to use our natural resources.

Few lands have ever been as blessed with such resources as America. Fertile soil, great forests, mineral deposits—they were here in seemingly limitless abundance, and we let them dazzle us. We got into the habit of moving in on them en masse and letting the lucky first comers use them as they pleased.

That worked all right for a while. Now it is exacting a penalty. The dust storms are forcing us to learn that unwise exploitation of these resources has to be paid for by the nation as a whole. We can use our resources as individualists, but eventually we have to foot the bill as collectivists.

This is not true only of farm land. It is true of our forests, of our oil fields, of our coal deposits and of all the other riches with which nature blessed us. All of us must have a say in the way these things are used, because if they are used unwisely all of us will feel the effects.

This is the warning presented by our pillar of cloud. If we are as smart as we like to think we are, we won't wait for another warning before we insist that our resources be used under a plan which has the welfare of the whole country in view.

ESCAPE FROM REALITY

The way in which an economic crisis can be a direct menace to world peace was strikingly illustrated by a paragraph in a recent news dispatch from Berlin, telling of Germany's reaction to Hitler's rejection of the military clauses of the Versailles treaty.

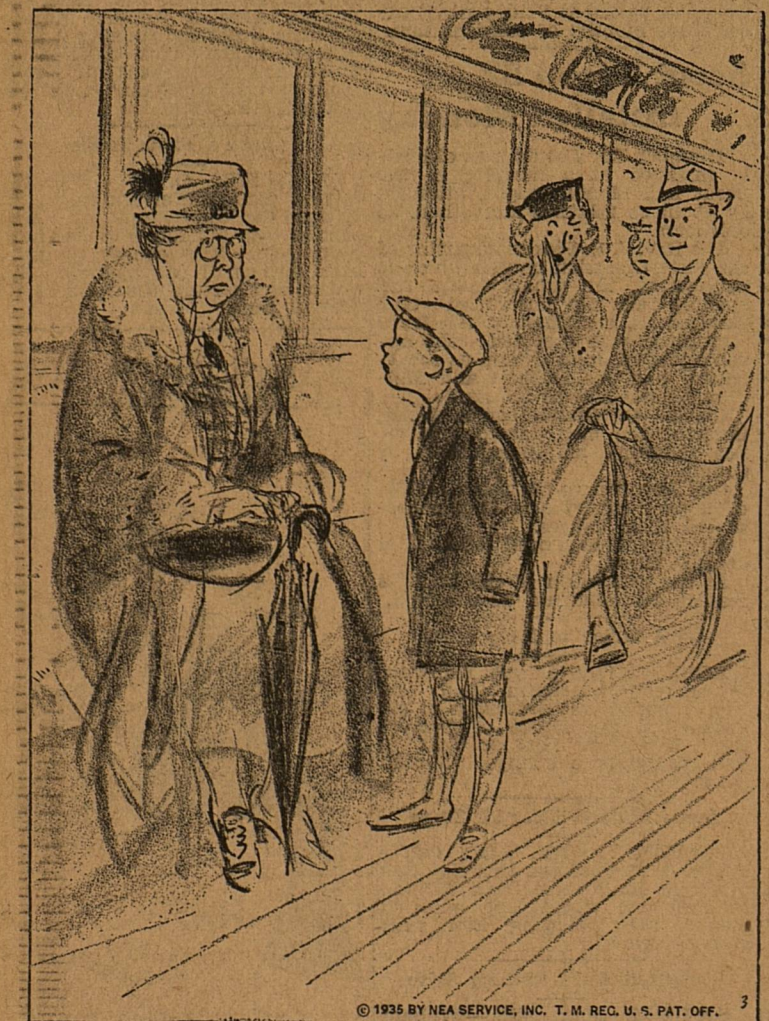

"The entire country," said the dispatch, "has forgotten its economic troubles during the last few days to swamp Hitler's office with enthusiastic letters and telegrams of gratitude."

It is right there that the danger lies. Any national leader, confronted by an insoluble economic crisis, can always take his people's minds off their troubles by adopting a "strong" foreign policy. The temptation to adopt such a policy, therefore, is extremely great.

But a strong foreign policy is the kind of policy that eventually leads to war. In trying to submerge the economic problem, the leader runs the grave danger of starting something that can only be finished by fighting.

WOOL OVER AUSTRALIA

THE foresight and initiative of a young British army officer, Capt. John Macarthur, brought to Australia in 1803 what has turned out to be its greatest industry. It was Macarthur's importation of Merino sheep from Spain that has resulted today in making Australia the world's foremost wool-producing country.

In honor of Macarthur, Australia recently issued a commemorative set of three stamps, each picturing the famous Merino ram against an Australian background.

FEMININE FANCIES

BY KATHLEEN EILAND

One of those people that we envy is Nell James, the girl who is now on her way around the world for the third time. What appeals to us particularly is that Miss James is not a plutocrat who goes traveling on an inherited fortune but that she simply takes her typewriter and sets out. Wherever she stops she immediately finds a job, being, apparently, one of those lucky people who find job-getting second nature.

Naturally in her trekking round this terrestrial sphere she has had a variety of employment. She has worked for an ice company in Hawaii, worked on a newspaper in Japan, and taught the natives on isolated Pitcairn Island how to make bamboo sandals.

She has been broke only once and that was when a bank in Florida closed. Of that experience she says: "If you've ever actually been broke why, then you can never be afraid of it or mind it again. So really it was worth it for that bank to fail just to show me."

Perhaps just in those sentences lies the secret of her journeyings round the world. She isn't afraid, and because she isn't, life opens for her the vistas that are often closed forever to those of us who cower behind the barriers of fears that in many cases are pure imagination.

Whatever the explanation of her ability to do the thing we can only long to do, we take off our hat to a girl who is gallant and courageous and travel-loving.

Speaking of traveling, we can think of few writings more fascinating and effective than the travel ads in the big smooth-paper magazines.

We wonder, sometimes, if traveling is as thrilling when one has white hair and totters about on a cane as it is when one's hair is still red and one can walk alone. We hope so, as it seems that we are not to attain our coveted goal of a trip round the world until we reach an advanced age.

Navy Sheers Are Fashion Highlight

Navy sheers, jacket dresses, white—those are the watchwords of fashion for this season, according to Mrs. Willie Steel Oliver of United Dry Goods company, who has returned from a marketing trip to New York.

Navy sheers are the high light of fashion now, she said, and she predicted that later 50 per cent of dresses shown will be in white. For later wear, heavy washable crepes will be favorites in material.

Eighty percent of styles will include jackets or coats, Mrs. Oliver explained. Blouses and skirts are good, with heavy crepes, crases, and piques popular for skirts, and blouse materials ranging from laces and nets in the more expensive makes to linens, batistes, and flaxons.

A new type lace, called peasant lace, is holding the attention of dressmakers for this season, for lace is a favorite.

Hats stress the sailor, Breton sailor or "gold digger" trend (the gold digger is rather flat and swoops up on one side).

White will be a favorite color for accessories.

Fourteen Becomes Boy Crazy and So Creates a Problem

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"What can I do about my fourteen-year-old daughter?" asks a mother. "She gets out of school and won't come home. She is getting boy crazy and after school it's going to the drug store for sundaes or piling into someone's car and taking a ride."

"Sometimes she walks home with the other girls, but be sure there are some heroes near. Then out somewhere after supper again. I hardly ever see her any more and as for helping me, she doesn't know I'm alive. I try to talk to her and make her see that it is only common to run around so at her age, but she keeps silent and the first thing I know, she is at the telephone giggling about what 'he' said, to some other girl friends, or what 'he' looked like, or where 'he' was going. He, he, he—I am sick of it."

She is just a little girl yet and her father and I are worried. We are afraid to be too severe because we fear she might be worse than ever. But she knows we are worried. What can we do?"

Spanking is a sound cure. I print this answer because this lady's problem has become national.

First of all I would spank her. This kid has chosen the run of the streets rather than try to do her part in keeping her parents happy, and respecting their wishes.

I am all fed up on this business of youngsters feeling they own the earth and the lopsided propaganda that has gone out about not letting your children get away from you by being soft and sweet and sympathetic. True, relationships of the right sort should have been established long ago. In every correctly balanced household there is a nice mixture of love, trust and at the same time respect for authority and opinion, and each other's feelings.

Little children in their first formative years need more intelligent sympathy and guidance than they usually get. Children past childhood usually receive less discipline than they need. We smack the little tots and let the others do pretty much as they please.

There is no harm in a girl being fascinated by those handsome sophomores even at fourteen. We cannot tell nature to mind her business. There is, in fact, a lot of good in young crowds being together, too. But such parties or rides or what-not should be in homes or where other people take the responsibility.

Providing a Safety Valve

To forbid a girl of fourteen or fifteen to look at a boy leads to trouble as a rule. Let them have their little blow-outs. Let them talk and giggle about "he." Outlets are wholesome things. Suspensions are likely to explode.

But if a young lady acts like this part of the emergency relief program have been proposed by the San Francisco Council of the Democratic party. Unemployed cooks would serve the meals to youngsters unable to buy hot meals.

Approximately 1 per cent of the population of the United States are morons. It has been estimated.

NEW ELECTRIC Refrigerators

FOR AS LITTLE AS

$81.50

f. o. b. Fort Worth

Price is no longer a major consideration in buying a new electric refrigerator. Mass production and simplified design have made possible new model refrigerators selling for as low as $81.50, with term payments of only a few dollars a month. These new "lift-top" models were designed for small families, small apartments, small cafes and other places where refrigeration of food is foremost and a large storage capacity isn't needed.

The economy in price is only one of the advantages of these "lift-tops." They also use very little electricity—less than a nickel a day according to many owners.

If you have a moderate-sized family or need a larger electric refrigerator, visit your dealer and see the new models that have just been offered. These conventional-type electric refrigerators, with doors in front, sell for as low as $99.50, f. o. b. Fort Worth.

WHAT MAKES YOUR BODY GO

THE man who discovered the secret of man's nervous system—what makes us react to thought and feeling—is honored by Spain in a 30 centimo stamp of 1934. He is Ramon y Cajal, histologist, winner of the Moscow International award in 1900 and of half the Nobel prize in medicine in 1905. By his microscopic study of man's nervous system he defined the laws which govern the reactions and relationships of the nerves and sense organs in man. His three-volume work on the histology of the nervous systems of man and the invertebrates is regarded as a classic in medicine.

"Bronte Gold" Legend Renewed As Trench Found

BRONTE. (P)—A recently abandoned six-foot trench at the foot of triple oak trees and a rust lined depression in one wall of the excavation are the seeds of a mystery tale anywhere. When the setting is placed in this legend-infested region, once bisected by the famous Butterfield trail, however, it is fuel to the imagination of folk familiar with frontier tales of stage coach robberies and buried gold.
