LINDY'S HOLD ON THE PEOPLE

One of the most amazing things in recent history is the way the tragic events of the last few days have demonstrated anew the tremendous hold that Colonel Lindbergh has on the American people.

It is doubtful if any other American ever occupied a position quite like his. From being a human being, with ordinary frailties and imperfections, he has become—not exactly a demi-god who can do no wrong, but an institution which is established on an absolutely solid and permanent basis.

That flight to Paris is a long way in the past now. Other great flights have been made since then, other sensations have come and gone, other heroes have arisen to have their day in the limelight and then fade out of the picture; but the peak on which that amazing flight landed Lindbergh has grown higher with the passing years.

Probably no other conceivable event short of the nation's entrance into a great war could have stirred the American people as deeply as the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby stirred it. During the past week it has been almost the only topic of conversation. You hear people discussing it on street cars and in busses; the waitress who gives you your sandwich in the restaurant, the boot-black who shines your shoes, the acquaintance you meet on the street—all have wanted to know the latest news.

And this hasn't been merely an evidence of public desire for sensation. The loss of the child was a personal matter to almost everyone in the country. People who did not simply feel that a horrible crime had been committed; they felt that their own deepest sympathies had been outraged, and in a very real way they suffered with Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh.

Many times in the past the public has shown how greatly it cherishes its most famous aviator. Now, in the time of his greatest sorrow, it has revealed the full extent of the way in which it has made him its own. Henceforth, apparently, we have an unofficial first citizen whose status cannot change; and, in his charming wife, we have an unofficial, deeply-loved first lady.

AN APPALLING TOLL

Nearly all industrial eye accidents are preventable. Yet more than 2,000 American workmen lose the sight of one or both eyes each year through accidents, and more than 300,000 suffer less serious injuries to their eyes. In fact, more people are permanently robbed of their sight by occupational hazards than through any other single cause.

These facts were brought out the other day by speakers at a safety conference held in New York under the auspices of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness; and they deserve the earnest attention of employers and employees everywhere.

Safety education campaigns among workers can do much to cut down this toll. In some plants, too, it has been found advantageous to order all workers to wear goggles. But whatever needs to be done, it is obvious that both labor and management much tackle the problem together. The present toll is an appalling one.

AN ENCOURAGING SIGN

One encouraging sign in the midst of hard times is noted by the Magazine of Wall Street in its current issue, when it points out that during January more new business enterprises were begun in New York than in any other single month in the past two years.

This indicates that an increasing number of people are gaining confidence that the worst is over and that the long upward pull is beginning. More important, perhaps, as the magazine points out, it also indicates that an increasing number of jobless people are finding it possible to adapt themselves to changed conditions and are setting out to make a living on their own hook.

How far away prosperity may be is something no one can say. But this little report from New York is one of the most encouraging straws that recent months have provided.

Alice, Led to Wonderland, Will Come to This Country

"Alice in Wonderland" . . . is shown above as she appeared in the familiar sketches by John Tenniel, famous illustrator . . . and in the center as she (now Mrs. Reginald Hargreaves) looks today with her eight-month-old granddaughter, Mary Jean Alice . . . Lower left is a view of The Beeches, "Alice's" castle-like home in Westerham, Kent . . . and at right is Westerham's monument to its greatest son, Major Gen. James Wolfe.

Alice! A childish story take, And with a gentle hand Lay it where childhood's dreams are twined In memory's mystic band, Like pilgrim's withered wreath of flowers Plucked in a far-off land. —From the prologue to "Alice," by permission of D. Appleton & Co., publishers.

By MILTON BRONNER NEA Service Writer

WESTERHAM, Eng.—Many, many years ago, Alice, a round-eyed child of ten, lived in Wonderland. Today an old, old woman of 80, known here only as Mrs. Reginald Hargreaves, she dwells in this little village in Kent-land.

She is of today, but her mind goes back mostly to yesterday—that long golden yesterday on the river near Oxford University when a stern, celibate, clerical gentleman, known to the world as the Rev. Charles Dodgson, took her by the hand and led her and her sisters into a wonderful country which has since then, by the printed word, enchanted millions of Alices, Marys and Janes in every civilized nation of the globe.

To Alice, Dodgson was not the forbidding master of mathematics at a great university. He was the kind, genial friend, who showed the other and tender side of himself, the whimsical and humorous side of himself. He called that other self Lewis Carroll.

Then Reality Came Fate had dealt Alice a kind blow. Many years ago she lost that immortal friend. Then she lost her husband, a cultured landed gentleman. Next, came the World war. Her three strong sons went out to fight for England and only one, Captain C. L. Hargreaves, came back.

But he is with her and so is his only child, a baby of seven months. Fate decreed that the only grandchild should be a girl. And that was well, because amid a string of pretty names like Mary and Rosalind, she also possesses that of Alice. As Alice she is known, and the original Alice looks forward to the day five or six years hence when she, in her turn, can take the little one by the hand and lead her into Wonderland.

Where Time Is Not

It's an ideal spot that the heroine of "Alice in Wonderland" has chosen to spend the sunset of her days. Only 26 miles from London, Time seems to stand still here. The only reminder of the workaday, fretting world is the little jerk-water branch line train of two coaches that puffs in and out three times a day, and the occasional rumble of a bus. Mostly the passage of the hours is marked by the sweet chiming of bells in the clock tower across the village green from the home where Alice dwells.

In ordinary periods, when the weather is fine, Alice, whose sight and hearing are still keen, goes for a meditative stroll, ending up at a statue of a very great young man, who was born in this village, Major General James Wolfe.

At 32 Wolfe was the commander of British troops in that last and final encounter which was to decide whether civilization in the North American continent should be French or Anglo-Saxon. Had he lost the United States, as well as Canada, might have been French. But he did not lose. He took Quebec, and sealed the doom of French power in America. In doing so he was mortally wounded Sept. 13, 1759.

To Another Wonderland

When Alice thought of those things she never dreamed that she would ever visit that America. But now she expects to, because Columbia University, New York, which has arranged a great exhibition of pictures, books and manuscripts in connection with Lewis Carroll, asked her to come in January to be present on Carroll's birthday. Then, because the weather would be so bad on the seas at that time, it was arranged to postpone the biggest celebration until Alice could come and be present on her own 80th birthday, May 4, next.

The Mad Reporters

And the news of that has caused great trouble to Alice. She does not like publicity, so most times lately she has remained behind the closed doors of her rambling old English house.

In Wonderland she got used to the Dodo, the White Rabbit, the Walrus and the Carpenter. She even got used to the Mad Hatter.

But it was something different, when on Carroll's birthday, the Mad Reporter and the Mad Photographer from NEA Service wanted to cross the magic easements of her house. But she felt them, did Alice. She has a Dragon. Oh, a very nice Dragon whose name is Lucy and whose cheeks are rosy and her eyes smiling.

"Oh, but you can't see Alice," said the Dragon.

"But we must see Alice," said the Mad Reporter. "She will remember—"

"The time has come," the Walrus said. "To talk of many things; Of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax— Of cabbages—and kings—"

The dime-a-dance girl. BY JOAN CLAYTON

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ELLEN ROSSITER, beautiful 20-year-old falls in love with LARRY HARROWGATE, young artist, whom she meets at Dreamland where she works as a dance hall hostess. Larry is engaged to ELIZABETH BOWEN, a debutante, but shows attention to Ellen until his fiancée returns from Europe.

From a sense of gratitude Ellen agrees to marry STEVEN BARCLAY, a kind and wealthy man of 57 who has paid hospital expenses for her brother, MIKE, injured in a street accident. He also finds a job for BERT ARMSTEAD, engaged to Ellen's sister, MYRA.

Barclay has been married and divorced from LEDA GRAYSON, dancer, and fearing talk of the divorce may be revived he and Ellen agree to keep their marriage secret. Bert and Myra are to be married the same day as Barclay and Ellen.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXIV

At dawn Ellen awakened when her maid entered the room. Molly tipped to her daughter's bed tucked in the covers and smoothed Ellen's fair hair away from her forehead.

"It's going to be a lovely day," Molly whispered.

She was trying hard to be casual but Ellen saw that Molly was frightened. Seeing that, Ellen became determined not to share her own fears.

"Myra's asleep," the mother whispered again. "I wanted to talk to you, darling—to tell you—"

"There's nothing to tell," said Ellen nervously, almost sharply. She drew the light spread closer.

"But honey," Molly went on wistfully as if she were sorry for something. "Do you really want to marry Steven? Do you understand—"

She had never seemed more helpless.

"Yes, I want to," Ellen insisted. The girl's voice had risen slightly so that Myra stirred and woke. Bright sunshine came pouring through the window.

"Early the bride the sun shines on," Myra cried out and sprang from bed.

The day was bright blue and perfect, a day cut from a picture postcard. Once Ellen was out of bed and had breakfasted the terrors of the night and those strange fears of the dawn were gone. She was not afraid now. She seemed to feel nothing but the stinging of the feet from the shoes she was wearing and that she should be excited and nervous but was not.

She and Myra dressed while Molly, happy and reassured, flew about getting in their way and in her own, too. Mrs. Barclay came flying up from downstairs with a telephone message for Myra, who grabbed a negligee and streaked down after her. When Myra had returned and had begun to do her hair all over again Mrs. Barclay was back with a message from Steven.

He would be there at 10 o'clock. Through it all Ellen dressed calmly. A wispy chemise, a brassiere sewn with rosebuds, white slippers. She had never noticed before how small her feet were. She eyed her legs critically, standing on tiptoe away from the mirror which tilted at the wrong angle. They were nice legs, a little too long perhaps but then— She sprayed verbenia on her shoulders and sniffed the spicy smell. Her slip next, airy as a shadow. Long chain of pearls and her garters—blue because Molly had insisted all brides wore "something blue."

The "something borrowed" was a fine, lacy handkerchief, which Molly had carried when she was a bride. In Myra's case it was a string of pearls that were Molly's, also. For the "something old" both girls wore little jeweled pins made from cuff links which had once adorned a blue-eyed, tawny-haired Charles Rossiter, page at the court of Queen Elizabeth. The "something new" was the dress, shimmering with opaque lights and recalling in its demure fullness and length a debutante of the 50's.

"Something old—something new— Something borrowed—something blue."

Ellen stood away from the mirror and looked at the shining eyes of the low-cut gown. It was beautiful, tawny-haired girl was Ellen Rossiter. This was her wedding day.

Ellen wondered uncertainly if she should cry or laugh and knew that she did not want to do either. She thought she was composed and steady. She thought that now she was ready to meet anything but she did not seem to be herself. Nothing seemed real to her.

Deliberately she made a test that, in this strange mood, she did not fear to meet anything but the thought of Larry. But Larry was in this disordered bedroom with Myra and Molly running back and forth and chattering endlessly, only a half remembered path. He seemed to be a bright and shining creation of her imagination. She had dreamed him. Larry was not real.

Molly and Myra, wondering as they had wondered so often if it would not be better after all to wear street clothes in the car and change a place to change in the small Connecticut town where the double wedding was to take place, did not seem real either.

"It's nearly 10 now," Ellen said. "There's no time to change our mind or clothes either."

The Dragon Guardian

"Tell her the Mad Reporter said the time had come to talk of Carroll and how he first took her into Wonderland."

The Dragon, being ever so kind, said she would see what could be done. Soon she returned, but she said:

"Alice is sorry to disappoint you, but the time has not come to talk of Carroll and many things. She may do that and she may pose for her picture when she comes to America. She plans, if all goes well, to sail the latter part of April with her son and her maid, and is quite looking forward to it."

No mere Mad Reporter could get the best of Alice in her own chosen, timeless village.

Addison Wadley received a phone call from the post office, advising him that he had a three-man load of parcel post for the store. Addison called "Bird, on Bird, run get the packages."

And then there are fellows who would call Bird Lord "Peanut."

I heard a little after season anecdote about a fellow who didn't like a play made by the Bulldogs in one of the games. He rushed to the coach and asked, sarcastically: "How long can a man live without brains?" Coach: "I don't know. How old are you?"

She said that her date the night before declared he would kiss her or die in the attempt. Anyway, he was still alive the next day.

A Midland business leader was making an address in which he stressed happiness in the home as

"We'll, I guess—" hesitated Myra. "Ellen, aren't you so excited you could scream? So excited you can't sit down and you can't stand up and you can't keep still either?"

"No," Ellen said. After thought she added, "No."

"Larry," Myra commented affectionately. "You can't fool me. Your cheeks are simply blazing!"

"There's the bell now," Molly cried.

Ellen picked up her skirts and ran to the door. It was Steven. "Oh, my dear," he said, regarding her. "You're too lovely to believe! I've never seen you look so lovely. No one has ever been so beautiful before."

Ellen had never seen Steven look so well, either. He was handsome and distinguished, agreeable and charming. But he was a stranger to her. She did not know him. She sat down beside him and began to talk, clinging to any commonplace trifle that came to mind. At the time she was thinking how odd it was that she did not know the man she was to marry.

Bert came in after a while. Myra danced in from the bedroom and then Molly. The chauffeur came for Ellen's bags and carried them away. Someone told her she must put on her hat. It was time to leave. Ellen walked slowly into the bedroom. She put on her hat and turned to go.

All at once she knew that she would never see this bedroom again. She and Steven were not returning to the apartment. It would be dismantled before she returned from Europe. This part of her life was over, ended.

She began to cry, slow tears at first that coursed her cheeks and dropped to her hands. Then the tears came faster and faster. She could not endure it. Honor and loyalty decay and pride. What were they? Steven had not the right to take her dreams from her.

She flung herself across the bed in a very passion of tears. She remembered only that they must not hear her in the living room and forced her shaking body deeper and deeper into the pillows. Her heels ripped the sheets but she did not know that. She wanted to beat her head against the floor, to scream until she could not hear anything but the sobbing of her spirit.

When the first outbreak of violence had worn out she still lay sobbing quietly, conscious that she

Ellen did her best to repair the ravages of her grief and terror while her sister watched.

They were in the living room again and then on their way down the stairs. They stepped out into the glorious day. The limousine swept them out of the shabby neighborhood, out of New York and on to the smooth road that led to Haley, Connecticut. They had chosen this small town in the hills because Steven knew a clerk who would withhold reporting the ceremony until he and his bride were far away on the ocean.

No one spoke of Ellen's long absence in the bedroom. There had been no time. But as they swept down the tree-lined, shady streets of the little village Ellen sensed that Steven meant to mention it. When they alighted from the car he drew her away from the others.

"I believe you were crying before we started," he said gently. "If you want to stop right here there's no reason for going on. Perhaps you would rather have more time to decide. Shall we wait until I return from Europe?"

Circle B Closes the Year With a Luncheon At J. M. Caldwell Home Friday Afternoon

Bringing to a close a year's work, members of Circle B of the Women's auxiliary of the Presbyterian church enjoyed a beautifully appointed covered dish luncheon at the home of Mrs. J. M. Caldwell Friday at 1 o'clock.

Guests found their places by recognizing old-fashioned pictures of themselves which had been combined with comic sketches.

Profusions of peach blossoms and sweet peas were floral decorations about the entertainment suite while baskets of flowers centered the tables.

Amusement during the luncheon was rhymes recited by members, telling how they had earned one dollar for the circle during the past month.

For the most clever rhyme, Miss Edna Hanna received first prize, an embroidered yarn picture, and Mrs. W. G. Whitehouse was second, receiving a mountain scene.

Gantes and contests suggesting St. Patrick's day were played. Novel prizes were bunches of fresh vegetables.

At a brief business meeting, Mrs. J. G. Gossett, treasurer, read a financial report, stating that the circle had more than raised its church quota.

Mrs. J. L. Greene and Mrs. Butler Hurley composed the entertainment committee for the affair.

Members attending were Meses. A. Harry Anderson, Arthur Stout, R. D. Healy, T. R. Wilson, W. G. Whitehouse, D. W. Freeman, J. G. Gossett, Luvie Eaves, J. L. Fine Arts Club Will Present John A. Lomax, Prominent Literary Figure

John A. Lomax, eminent preserver of American folklore, has been secured by the Fine Arts club for a public appearance in Midland Monday evening, April 4.

As the discoverer of Texas cowboy songs 20 years ago, Lomax has won a place at the forefront of American literary explorers and is outstanding as an authority on folklore.

The presentation of Lomax in Midland is one of the major projects of the Fine Arts club this year. It will not only attract local interest but crowds are expected from many nearby towns.

The program will be composed of the lecture and songs of the Southwest.

Lomax has searched for cowboy songs particularly in Texas, New Mexico and Wyoming—the states traversed by the Old Chisholm trail. Armed with a phonograph sprouting its huge horn, his equipment for recording the songs as they flowed, he has traveled thousands of miles.

In writing of Lomax, Miss Gladys Sharp of the Dallas Times-Herald says: "Most people are familiar with the priority and completeness of Mr. Lomax's collection of cowboy songs, but few knew that he, with his songs of the cattle trail, fired the nationwide interest in native balladry that has reached tremendous proportions in the two decades since he started."

More complete announcements of the Midland appearance will follow during the next few weeks.

Cancer Facts Quoted by County Nurse

Editor's Note: In connection with the lecture on cancer by Dr. Charles H. Harris here on Thursday evening, the following article written by Miss Martha Bredemeier, county nurse, is published.

FEW CANCER FACTS

The ancients knew cancer and feared it. Today with scientific knowledge concerning cancer we need to fear it less.

Early diagnosis is almost positive cure, that means the huge home information regarding early symptoms. Realizing the value of periodic physical examinations is a step in the control.

The American society for the control of cancer gives the following facts:

In 1900 of 100,000 deaths in the United States registration area tuberculosis was the leading cause, rate of 201. Cancer was sixth, having a rate of 63. In 1927 heart disease leads the list and cancer is second with a rate of 96.

Tuberculosis is fifth, rate 81. It would be interesting to know what part public education has to play in the reduction of the tuberculosis death rate. Leading authorities indicate that the public must be better informed regarding cancer before it is controlled.

The death rate for females has been consistently higher than for males. In 1927 the rate for males was 79, as compared to 103 for females. Cancer strikes at all ages, contrary to popular opinion children may have cancer. The heaviest toll is from middle age. Cancer attacks all parts of the body.

Quoting from the pamphlet, "The Prevention of Cancer," by the American society for the control of cancer: "We are so much absorbed in the pursuit of business and pleasure that we much prefer to take out life insurance for the benefit of heirs rather than devote a few hours to the acquisition of a little knowledge about our wonderful animal body and how to take care of it. The average American is grossly and inexcusably ignorant of physiology and hygiene. Ignorance of the nature of disease breeds the fear of it and does not help the victim."

HARD TIMES HIT HOOVER'S HOME TOWN

By ROBERT TALLEY NEA Service Writer

WEST BRANCH, Iowa.—In far-off Washington, President Hoover may be struggling today with a billion-dollar plan for relieving the nation's depression, but this little town of 700 souls, whose dusty lanes he trod as a barefoot boy 50 years ago, has some depression problems of its own.

Town Marshal J. W. Hayslett—who is the police force of West Branch—is going around with a long face. There is a movement in city council to cut his salary from $85 to $65 a month.

The five councilmen seem to be in earnest. Just the other day—as a prelude to embarking on their program of municipal retrenchment and as evidence of their good faith—they cut their own salaries from $1 per monthly meeting to 50 cents per monthly meeting.

They also cut Mayor Tom Butler from $50 a year to $1 a meeting.

Now, they are getting ready to operate on the fire department. It consists of 20 volunteer firemen who now receive $1 each for every time the town siren screams and they hop their two trucks to answer the alarm. They get an additional $1 each for their monthly meetings.

Since West Branch has about five fires per year, this means about $17 per man. Some folks in the council think the rate per fire should be cut to 50 cents, but Councilman T. A. Moore is in favor of letting the present pay stand and saving the money by reducing the number of firemen.

Another proposal before the council is to cut the salary of the man who reads the water meters from a $100 a year to $50 a year.

School teachers already have had their cut, a blanket reduction of approximately 5 per cent.

The town where Mr. Hoover was born is having its depression problems, just like any other town. Its own two banks are still standing as firm as the Rock of Gibraltar, but of the 16 other banks in the county, five have closed their doors and three have been consolidated.

Two banks have closed at Tipton, the county seat, and at Iowa City—10 miles away, but in an adjoining county—every bank in town has closed.

"Farm prices explain it," says F. L. Pearson, president of the West Branch State bank which never has failed to pay a semi-annual dividend since it was founded in 1876.

"Today our farmers are getting 27 cents a bushel for their corn as against 60 cents a year ago; 3 1/2 cents for hogs, for which they should get at least 8 cents, and which were up to 18 cents during the war; 23 cents a pound for butterfat, as against a normal price of 35 to 40 cents; 7 to 8 cents for their cattle; 12 cents for their eggs.

"As a result, the farmers lack money and that hurts business. But it is the same all over the country. We are stagnated by fear—that's it, fear. There is nothing wrong with our country; if people with money to spend only had confidence, we soon would be back to normal."

I asked him what he thought of Mr. Hoover's course during the crisis.

BRUSHING UP SPORTS . . . By Laufer

THEY ALL LAUGHED WHEN JOHN MCGRAW connived to have Edd Roush's home run disallowed. The Reds were playing the Giants at the Polo Grounds. Roush was the batter and the score was tight. Just as Edd took a hefty cut at a nicely grooved ball and sent it flying for the right field bleachers, McGraw, fearing that the ball would carry for a homer, threw two balls into the infield. Base Umpire Harrison yelled "Time!" but Plate Umpire Hank O'Day called "Play!" The ball sailed into the bleachers for a homer, but McGraw disputed its legality and won. McGraw indulged in a chuckle and the Giants all laughed in the privacy of the clubhouse after the game.

"I think," he replied, "that Mr. Hoover has done all that a man in his position could do. If we had had somebody else in Washington, things might have been worse."

Practically all the farmers right around West Branch have been able to weather the storm thus far, though with the hiring of new hands as March begins they are offering reduced wages. This year they are offering about $30 a month, plus board and keep. Last year it was about $50.

There have been no business failures among West Branch's stores. One ladies' ready-to-wear emporium has retired from business and a confectionery and lumber companies have consolidated. That is all.

Newt Butler—the town's most famous citizen, because he once licked

Bert Hoover when they were boys together—has sold out his soft drink and cigar emporium and moved to Cedar Rapids. The store still bears the sign "Newt's Place" and Alvin Marks, the purchaser, says he is going to keep the sign there until after the presidential campaign because it might help business by attracting tourists.

Newt was a red-hot democrat and the place continues to be a hot-bed for West Branch's democrats, who seem to be growing in number. Judging from remarks I heard here, not everybody in West Branch believes that Mr. Hoover is a wizard.

Even such staunch republicans as the venerable Dr. L. J. Leech, who has practiced in West Branch for 50 years, and who treated Bert Hoover for the measles, the chickenpox and whatnot when he was a schoolboy—admits that the anti-Hoover bloc in West Branch is gaining.

"Four years ago, we tried to make it unanimous for Hoover in this precinct," but Al Smith got about 42 votes," Dr. Leech recalled. "This year there will be more votes for somebody else because of the unrest. I look for from 80 to 100."

The 77-year-old physician remembers Hoover well. Fifty years ago, he lived just across the street from the blacksmith shop operated by the president's father.

"I'd know Hoover today if I found him in the gutter," Dr. Leech said. "He's got a mark on him and always will have. When he was a barefoot kid running around his father's shop one day he stepped on a red-hot iron chip that flew from the anvil.

"They hollered for me to come—or maybe I was already in the shop, I can't just recall now—but anyway I dressed his foot with some ointment and bandages."

Down the muddy street and past the water tower, is the cemetery where President Hoover's mother and father are buried. Their graves lie side by side under a leafless maple tree through which the wind

WALKER WINS BY K. O. OVER JIM MALONEY

SALT LAKE CITY, March 12.—Mickey Walker, former middle and welterweight champion, won a technical knockout over Jim Maloney, Boston heavyweight, in the second round of a feature ten-round bout here Friday night.

All-Southwest Cagers Named

FORT WORTH.—The official all-Southwest Conference basketball teams as picked by the seven coaches of the conference is as follows: First team: Strickland (Baylor) and Sumner (T. C. U.) forwards; Dietzel (T. C. U.) center; Murphy (Ark.) and Sexton (Ark.) guards.

Second team: Alford (Baylor) and Beard (A. & M.) forwards; Merka, A. & M. center; Brannon (T. C. U.) and Barnett (Baylor) guards.

Others who received votes but not enough to be placed on either of the two teams were given honorable mention. They are: Hess and Dixon, Rice; Rundell and Kubrick, Texas; Wells, Baylor; McLaughlin and Williams, S. M. U.; Kendall and Gibson, Arkansas and Green, T. C. U.

The blank sent out by Coach Schmidt of the Frogs also asked the coaches for their opinion of the men deserving national recognition. Of the five that voted, Dietzel received three first choice votes. Strickland and Murphy are also prominently mentioned.

Adolph Dietzel and Raymond Strickland were chosen unanimously. Dietzel received six votes at center and one at forward while Strickland was named by four at forward by two at guard and by one at his legitimate position, center. Tom Murphy, Arkansas guard, received six votes for first team by five of the coaches and the other two dropped him to second team.

For the fifth position on the team Doc Sexton of Arkansas, Buster Brannon of the Frogs and Raymond Alford of the champion Bears tied sights softly amid the stillness of the surrounding tombs. A simple headstone marks each.

On the crumbling stone of Jesse Hoover's grave one reads this: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

And on Hulda Hoover's stone: "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them which sleep in Jesus will God bring unto himself."

A quarter of a mile away, on the other side of town, stands the house where Hoover was born. It is owned now by Mrs. Jennie Scellars, but during her absence, her son, Earl Scellars, is "bathing" there.

Earle Scellars opens the door to let the visitor in. He leads him to a little room in the rear, barely big enough for the bed, dresser, and chair it contains. The visitor stands in respectful silence, awed by the thought that within this room a president was born.

On the dresser are a dozen or so samples of Gith—serge, worsted and the like.

Earle Scellars explains: "You see, I'm a linenman by trade, but I'm out of work now. So I've been trying to make some money by taking orders for suits for a mail order house. This depression is pretty tough."

High Guy

Adolph Dietzel, in his name, but his teammates on the Texas Christian basketball team call him "Too Tall." He's the highest individual scorer in the Southwest conference. In 11 games, Dietzel counted 171 points, more than 15 points per game average. He's only a junior, too.

In first team votes with three each; however, because of the fact that Sexton received four second team votes as compared with two for Brannon and three for Alford he was given the fifth position.

Thus Brannon and Alford are head and shoulders above the other second team men as some of them got the position by two second team votes.

Use 15,000 Pints of Whisky Yearly

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UP).—A "spoonful every hour"—prescribed by physicians—is a slow way to consume liquor but Fort Worth "patients" use 15,000 pints of prescription whiskey a year.

The amount was used in 1931, statistics compiled by Jack Palmer, district supervisor of industrial alcoholic permits, revealed.

The price ranges from $1.65 a pint on "Hill and Hill, aged seven years" to $4 on "Black Gold, aged 18 years." Prescriptions cost from $1.50 to $3 each unless the doctor is feeling "big-hearted," Palmer said.

More than 425,000 permits were filled in Texas in 1931, according to Palmer.

1932 TO BE FIRST OF FOUR YEARS OF DROUGHT, IF OLD CHART LEFT BY UNCLE BOB TRENT IS INDICATION

By R. D. SHINKLE

ODESSA, March 12.—Cattlemen in the Odessa section are of the opinion that the year 1932 will be the first of four dry years.

Their belief is based on a report and data kept by Uncle Bob Trent, well known in West Texas and among all West Texas cattlemen, has a record of each year to show the conditions. After his death the records became the property of W. H. Rhodes of Odessa. If the rainfall in this section keeps the perfect cycle, as shown on the chart, this year is the beginning of a four-year dry spell. Any dependable record which may have been kept in reference to the cattle industry of West Texas for the past 50 years will remind that a severe drought prevailed over the cattle ranges of Texas from 1869 to 1871 resulting in a heavy loss during the latter year. This havoc was repeated over ranges west of the Colorado river from 76 to 79.

The first record of the droughts begins with the year 1870, according to Trent's charts:

1870, dry; 1871, extremely dry; 1872, flood year; 1873, rain and good cattle ranges; 1874, rain; 1875, rain over all the ranges; 1876, dry in parts; 1877, dry west of the Colorado river; 1878, dry west of the Colorado river; 1880, rain; 1881, rain; 1882, a flood year; 1883, rain; 1884, dry, bad range generally; 1885, dry; 1886, dry; 1887, extremely dry; 1888, rain, better conditions; 1889, rain; 1890, rain; 1891, rain; 1892, dry in many sections; 1893, extremely dry; 1894, extremely dry; 1895, dry but conditions better; 1896, rain throughout; 1897, rain; 1898, rain; 1899, rain; 1900, dry, but little rain; 1901, dry; 1902, extremely dry; 1903, but little better, very dry; 1904, rain; 1905, rain; 1906, rain, frost Sept. 20; 1907, rain; 1908, dry, but little rain; 1909, dry; 1910, extremely dry; 1911, still dry but better in parts; 1912, rain; 1913, rain; 1914, rain; 1915, rain; 1916, with few exceptions, dry; 1917, very dry; 1918, extremely dry; 1919, dry until late, conditions better.

It will be easily noted that the records show the series of wet and dry years to have followed in almost perfect cycles. The only imperfect four-year period is the first, which shows only three, and it is highly probable that the year 1868, not shown was dry, completing that cycle perfectly. If these cycles were continued, as most seem to believe they were, then 1932 would be the first of the series of four dry years. A check up on the years from 1919 until 1930 shows that the perfect cycle has been followed closely.

Bat Wallops Ran With Gusto

NEW YORK, March 12.—Christopher (Bat) Battalino of Hartford, Conn., recent ruler of the featherweights, celebrated his debut as a welterweight Friday night by sporting Eddie Ran of Poland eight pounds and then giving the Warsaw crowd a brutal beating before a crowd of 15,000 persons in Madison Square Garden. Had the bout gone another two rounds, Bat probably would have scored a knockout.

The decision of the two judges and Referee Johnny McAvoy was unanimous. The Associated Press score sheet credited Battalino with a clear advantage in seven rounds, with Ran taking two and one even. For the last two rounds the Polish lad, who substituted against Battalino on three days' notice when Billy Petrolle came down with a stiff neck, was staggering around using every bit of his ring knowledge to avert a knockout.

Battalino never succeeded in putting Ran down, but he repeatedly staggered him with crushing rights to the jaw and had his heavier rival bleeding freely from a deep cut over the right eye after the fifth round. Ran, a 7 to 5 favorite when they entered the ring, never once succeeded in hanging his poisoned right on Battalino's whiskers, so carefully did the Hartford battler stay covered up.

Battalino weighed 138 pounds to Ran's 146.

Prior to the main event the crowd stood in silence while Announcer Joe Humphries offered a prayer for the safe return of the sidwaped Lindbergh child.

Little Interest

In Tunney Talk

HARTFORD, Conn. (UP)—Reports from Washington discussing the availability of James J. (Gene) Tunney as democratic senatorial candidate in Connecticut this year have been received here with interest but are not taken seriously. Democratic political leaders admitted strong admiration for the former heavyweight boxing champion, now a gentleman farmer at Stamford, but apparently believe a more seasoned politician is needed at this time. Tunney's fellow townsman, Homer S. Cummings, former national committeeman and now one of the leaders in the Roosevelt-for-President movement, is regarded as the probable senatorial nominee.

Tunney, however, has shown evidence of growing interest in politics since Governor Wilbur L. Cross appointed him a major on his staff on recommendation of Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale. Tunney is a member of the democratic "victory fund" committee, charged with raising funds for the fall campaign. Governor Cross has expressed a hope the former champion would enter politics. Tunney is an avowed liberal and expresses his opinions in a frank and attractive manner. In addition, he is wealthy—and wealth, when coupled with liberalism, is never a handicap to a politician.

UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE

NEW YORK—One of the world's great needs at the present time is a universal language, responsive to a culture above our present highest levels and yet so simple that it can be taught and understood readily. Such is the belief of Dr. Alfred D. Finn, director of the Engineering Foundation here.

"A universal language should be an invention using in new ways the elemental materials from which spoken and written media for expression of concepts may be constructed," he says. "Its grammar and rhetoric should be simple. Its rules need have no exceptions, so troublesome in all existing languages.

"Primarily the universal language should be designed for expressing exactness, clarity, brevity, and permanence. Freedom from idiom and disorderly change are essential. To the natural languages may well be left the expressions of emotions through poetry, drama and fiction."

JOLLY COLD FELLOW

LONDON—Seated before a roaring fire was Peter Ball when Manchester police captured him. Ball was dressed—too well dressed. He had on two suits, four shirts, three vests, two pairs of socks, three belts and a knitted woolen jacket. He explained that he was cold.

There are about 800 men in the British coast guard service protecting about 5,000 miles of coast line.

ALLRED THOUGHT PRIMED TO RACE FOR HIGH OFFICE

AUSTIN, Texas, March 12. (UP)—Despite the continued refusal of Attorney General James V. Allred to discuss politics, the belief is steadily growing about Austin that when June 6 rolls around, the name of the dynamic little attorney general will be found entered on the Democratic primary ballot as a candidate for governor.

The spectacular success which has marked the early stages of his $17,850,000 anti-trust suit against major oil companies has done much to bring his name again into the governor race.

Political wisecracks point out that neither Allred nor Lieut. Gov. Edgar Witt had definitely announced their candidacies for re-election to their

Late News

AUSTIN, March 12. (UP)—Steady increase of mohair clip in Texas since 1925 was shown in a report issued by the federal and state agricultural departments today.

The production increased from 9,100,000 pounds to 16,400,000 pounds in 1931.

More than 6,750,000 sheep were shorn of 53,300,000 pounds of wool in 1932.

WASHINGTON, March 12. (UP)—Democratic Floor Leader Rainey announced today his poll of the house indicated a defeat of the sales tax in the revenue bill.

WASHINGTON, March 12. (UP)—The world average wheat and rye is but slightly less than a year ago, the bureau of agricultural economics reported today.

Sample of Argentine wheat received shows exceptionally good quality and has resulted in an increase of a few cents a bushel for European delivery.

Strong competition from Argentine wheat is likely to be felt this year by Canadian and United States hard winter wheat, the bureau reported.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 12. (UP)—A call for strike of all members of the United Mine Workers of America in district one for March 14, unless demands are met, was issued today by Thomas Maloney, insurgent leader.

The call was not sanctioned by regular union officials.

The demands include reopening of abandoned colliers and equalization of work, discontinuance of wage slashing, restoration of wage scales where cuts have been made and abolition of the contract system of mining.

WASHINGTON, March 12. (UP)—Southwestern railroads today petitioned the interstate commerce commission to postpone for 90 days the effective date for new freight rates on petroleum products which are scheduled to become effective April 15.

The new schedule will result in reductions. The railroads' petition was based on the contention that they have not had enough time to complete schedules.

AUSTIN, March 12. (UP)—Headquarters were opened here today by common carrier motor truck operators, who formed an association to care for their interests in present contests over different classes of motor and rail carrier service.

E. D. Balcom, of Dallas is president and Walter Gates, recently assistant director of the motor division of the railroad commission, is attorney and general manager.

present offices. Entry of either into the race for governor will not come as a surprise here.

While refusing to discuss politics, Allred is not ignoring the practical side of it. He found time during recess of his oil suit to do some effective speaking. Both he and Governor Ross Sterling addressed the American Legion meeting at Columbus, Texas.

As a campaigner, Allred is probably the most feared of any other man in state politics. An office record with a string of court victories needs only a verdict in the pending anti-trust suit to cap the climax.

The winning of the Whitesides case by which the title to a large part of the Yates oil pool was kept in the hands of grantees from whom the state school fund receives royalties, has alone been hailed as a $20,000,000 victory for the state.

Beautiful Blonde At Ritz Theatre

A tan complexion and robust features usually associate themselves with the athletic girl.

This rule, however, as any rule, may have its paradox. And one positive exception to this rule is Carole Lombard, whose almost fragile type of blonde beauty belies her enthusiastic love of sports and outdoor diversions.

Miss Lombard, headlined in the Paramount screen version of Rupert Hughes' novel, "No One Man," is one of Hollywood's finest equestriennes, an excellent swimmer, a keen follower of football, ranks with the best tennis players in Hollywood, and is an otoboard motorboat racing enthusiast.

Her partner in a recent mixed doubles tennis match was Harvey Snodgrass, former professional singles champion, and present coholder of the national professional indoor doubles championship.

Odessa to Hold Rodeo May 30-31

ODESSA, March 12.—Plans for the biggest and most attractive rodeo ever seen here are now under way, with the date set for May 30 and 31. The celebration is to be staged under the auspices of the Earl S. Bailey post of the American Legion.

Purses larger and more attractive than ever before will be offered at the Memorial day rodeo. Some of the outstanding performers of the state will be present.

Roping, riding, bronc busting, horse races, wild steer riding, rabbit races, wild cow milking, and wild jackrabbit roping will be some of the interesting events that will take place. The chamber of commerce is assisting the legion post in the work.

Junior Chamber To Be Organized

Organization of a junior chamber of commerce will be discussed Monday night at 7:30 at the regular meeting of directors of the Midland chamber. Herbert Berry, Delo Douglas and some of the other younger business men of the city are initiating the movement. The 21 directors of the chamber of commerce are asked to attend the session, which is scheduled to last about one hour.

Midlander Muscles In on Dallas Trade

A Midland merchant has "muscle" in Dallas trade, according to a letter received by that merchant, Addison Wadley, Saturday morning.

Wadley received an order from Andrew Q. Allen, prominent citizen of Dallas, for several of the shirts that the local department store has been featuring in a special sale.

GIRLS CHANGE MINDS

DENTON.—Marriage qualifications have changed along with everything else in the last 25 years, according to a questionnaire submitted to a group of students at Texas State College for Women (C. I. A.).

Twenty-five years ago a Topeka minister questioned 100 young women regarding their "ideal" man. In their answers, the girls drew for him a composite picture of a handsome young fellow who didn't drink, play cards or smoke, and was a Christian.

Today college girls do not include preachers in their marriage choices, giving the medical profession the largest favor. Their ideal men play cards, drink moderately, smoke if they choose, and are college-educated. The girls are indifferent as to church membership of their future husbands, not believing it necessary to a successful marriage.

Sheriff Expected Back With Woman

Sheriff A. C. Francis of Midland was expected to return today from Memphis, Tenn., where he went last week to take charge of Geraldine Hines, an Odessa girl charged with having taken the automobile of John Jones, who lives on the Ector county ranch of Walter Cowden.

She was taken into custody by Memphis officers in Hotel Ambassador.

According to information received from Odessa, the girl was known in Odessa about three years ago. She went there with her family during the early boom days. Her father, who since has been sent to the penitentiary from Big Spring, according to the report, worked in a cafe there.

Kidnapings--

torney, and two Communists, C. J. Cober and Lewis Hurst, were kidnaped as they left the city hall here last year. Edwards was released and the other two were taken out of town and beaten. This type of kidnaping was a daily affair in 1922 when the Ku Klux Klan was active. Notable kidnapings took place in Dallas, Fort Worth, Marshall, Greenville, Mexico and San Antonio. Victims usually were beaten and sometimes tarred.

J. E. Bristow, San Angelo oil man, was kidnaped by Mexican bandits in the state of Nayarit in March, 1930, and held until his son, Obie Bristow, University of Oklahoma athlete now coaching at Big Spring, paid a ransom. A few months later guards were thrown about the homes of C. P. Bareda, Brownsville millionaire, and Juan Cross, wealthy Matamoros residents, after reports of a plot of Chicago gangsters to kidnap them. A similar plot was reported at El Paso against General Marcelo Caraveo, wealthy Mexican refugee.

A 200-pound negro attempted to steal a daughter of L. E. Elliott, Grayson county farmer, on June 6, 1930, but was frightened away by her screaming sister, A. L. Pattilo, Fort Worth bookkeeper, and Miss Audrey Carter, stenographer, were kidnaped and beaten the night of April 25, 1930. J. B. Borden, Fort Worth automobile salesman, was kidnaped by a "prospect" and forced to drive to Wise county to be robbed.

In February, 1931, an effort was made to extort $5,000 from E. T. Page, president of the Redwater State bank, a man resembling him, H. J. Gahagan, was kidnaped in front of a Dallas bank and held 36 hours. In April last year, Lamar S. Ealling, San Angelo, charged four men with attempting to kidnap him at Laredo in an effort to extort $50,000. The four pleaded guilty to lesser charges and the kidnaping cases were quashed.

T. A. Pickett, Palestine business man, received a demand for $500 on Dec. 10, 1926, from extortionists who threatened to kidnap his nine-year-old daughter. In the same month, three Dallas high school girls were torn from their escorts, criminally assaulted and held captive several hours.

Ector Working Fund Is $24,500

ODESSA, March 12.—According to a statement from the county clerk of Ector county as of January 31, Ector county has a working fund on hand in various departments amounting to over $24,500, with an additional $2,000 in assets in form of city warrants. This amount does not include tax collections for the month of January which had not been reported by January 31. The tax income this year was around $40,000 in January and it is expected to have an additional $30,000 in June, on the split tax roll.

Non American Book Has Ever Approached the Circulation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Fisher Pollard, sheriff's deputy, is not addicted to strange practices, which may make more humorous the tale that he grabbed his bathrobe and sat before a radiator most of the morning at the sheriff's office. A reporter who had been in the office earlier in the day did not catch "Fish" at this unusual warming of his huge frame, but will vouch for his incomplete recovery from a late attack of the flu, which may allow of any method of warming that is legal.

Buster Howard, weather observer, also recovering from the flu, is explaining some "inside" weather information—which means that he is standing on the inside, looking on the outside, and talking over the telephone some facts to several who are beside themselves over the cold wave. And Mrs. Johnson Phillips is explaining over a cup of steaming coffee to Mrs. Ethel Horst about "the time I laughed at someone in Alabama just because they fell on a snow covered corner, and then fell twice myself."

Cool Outlook--

thievery has been going on, despite the general difficulties for procuring money. Several farmers have had their meat stolen, however. And Thomas Barber, relates Ray Gwyn, smashed a wheel trying to park his car.

At one of the principal corners a thermometer was hung out. The mercury registered 21 degrees, only one degree higher than it had been at dawn—four hours earlier! A large group gathered around looking at it and exchanging the usual patter about this and that. One group merges off to a coffee place (it would be interesting to know how many gallons of coffee were sloshed about over counters Saturday) and Police Judge J. S. Knowles wanted to know if this season had not broken all records for snow over a Midland winter.

In spite of the numerous falls over the business section, one more intrepid lad got out of a Pennsylvania automobile before the Schaubauer hotel and tried to skate. First time ice skates have been used (or tried) on a Midland street, one would imagine.

Wheeler, Woolsey At Grand Theatre

Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey have broken out again!

Their latest cinematic fun-riot is "Peach-O-Reno," showing currently at the Grand theatre. This time RKO-Radio Pictures' great comedy team represents a firm of Reno divorce lawyers, and the picture is an hilarious take-off on the wide-open town.

The two star comedians, who have appeared in many notable film comedies, satirize Reno and its chief industry with enthusiasm and a rollicking sense of humor.

As the law firm of Wattles and Swift they disintegrate marriages, grant a cut rate divorce war, and cupids on occasion and finally fall victim to the wiles of two girls from Main Street.

wide interest and enthusiasm in Texas for Texas," and by "practicing closer co-operation between all our inter-related state industries." She favors creation of an orderly marketing system for every farm product whereby the natural "law of supply and demand will control the markets instead of the markets controlling the natural law of supply and demand."

Mrs. Warner is 65 years old, a graduate of Illinois Wesleyan, a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, and has been active in women's rural club work since coming to the Panhandle with her husband, a country physician, more than 30 years ago.

Thomason Gets Midland Protest

Opposition to a proposed tax on admission to theatres has been wired Congressman R. E. Thomason by the Midland chamber of commerce.

The action was in line with the general policy to oppose increased taxation.

The view of the executive committee of the chamber responsible for the message is that assessments are necessary to the well being of the public and should not be taxed out of existence.

Cold to Destroy Influx of Insects

Insect damage which might have been serious to cotton and vegetable crops in this area of West Texas if warm weather had continued will now be negligible, farmers believe.

Fred Dale, a leading Midland farmer, says insects had become so bad this month that they had even mowed down young onions, a thing which never before occurred here. He believes the severe cold weather of the past 10 days will prove a blessing to farmers, as the soil was frozen deeply enough to kill plant insects.

BUY CATTLE HERE

Earl Barker of Burns, Kansas, Carl Scanlon of Missouri and Zach Martin of Kansas City bought 1,000 two-year-old steers from Lenton Brunson last week and looked at the spring calf crop.

The men have been regular purchasers of Midland cattle for eight years.

Brunson has 700 cattle on feed now, and will ship them in early May.

Russell, was given quite a reception by the Big Bend people. A jubilee meeting was held at the El Paisano hotel and a big gathering of Maria and Big Bend people was present.

TO HOLD TOURNAY

ODESSA.—The Odessa Golf club, with a course east of town, is planning a two-day tournament within the near future. If weather and other conditions are favorable, the course is being improved, fairways and greens worked, and quite a bit of labor is being used. The greens, after being worked over, will be among the best in the country.

Urges Support for Speaker's Campaign

UVALDE, Tex., March 12. (UP)—H. P. Hornby of Uvalde, one of the first Texans to urge Speaker John N. Garner for president, has issued an appeal to Texans urging them to write their relatives and friends in other states, urging them to support Garner in the district conventions to be held in the next six weeks.

"If the residents of Texas who have moved here from other states, will write back to their relatives and friends, urging them to look for the nomination of Speaker Garner, it will have a powerful effect in the coming presidential primaries," said Hornby.

"At least 1,500,000 people in Texas have moved here from other states in the past 15 years. If a few thousand of these would write back home, just a few letters each, calling attention to Mr. Garner's particular qualifications at this time, it might have a wholesome effect.

"Surely this unusual opportunity for Texas to elect a president should have a tremendous appeal to all Texans regardless of party affiliations. Perhaps never before in the country's history has a president had the previous training and personal knowledge of the country's affairs as possessed by Speaker Garner, who for 30 years has been in the national congress, and many of those years were spent as a leader on the powerful ways and means committee where he came in contact with the needs and issues before the entire country."

"Speaker Garner has fully demonstrated his great executive ability. He also has the confidence of his fellow congressmen regardless of their political views. His ability to get along with the members of both houses would be of distinct advantage if he was president. Let me appeal to all Texans, especially to those who have friends and relatives in Missouri and Kansas to write to them without delay."
