May Extend Skeleton NRA to Apr. 1

REPEAL POWER OF PRESIDENT FOR ENFORCING CODES Interstate Compacts Would Aid Labor Standards

WASHINGTON, June 6, (AP).—A resolution extending a skeleton of the NRA organization until April 1 of next year, but repealing all presidential power to prescribe, approve or enforce codes of fair competition, was agreed on today by house, senate and administration leaders.

INTERSTATE COMPACTS FAVORED FOR LABOR

WASHINGTON, June 6, (AP).—A study of the possibilities of preserving labor standards through interstate compacts, sponsored by federal cooperation, was initiated today by President Roosevelt as administration leaders agreed on principles of "stop-gap" NRA legislation. The president made known his intentions in reply to resolutions adopted by a joint commission on interstate compacts in session here. A secret meeting of senate, house and administration representatives was held after some congressional spokesmen had said that the white house was tentative concerning new and higher taxes on inheritances and gifts as a part of the future NRA program.

APPROVAL OF MIDGET NRA SEEMS LIKELY

WASHINGTON, June 6, (AP).—President Roosevelt's proposal for a midget NRA headed toward prompt congressional approval last night, while Washington watched for signs of any administration intent to replace it with a huskier organization.

Gauging the indications, observers even congressional leaders generally regarded as close to the president, disagreed except upon one point—that Roosevelt had carefully kept the way clear for additional legislation, if he should deem it desirable.

In one high Senate quarter it was contended that Roosevelt already had decided to submit proposals for extending the NRA at this session. In another equally reliable sector it was maintained that no such formal decision had been made.

Repeal Asked
A generally prevailing opinion, however, was that, first of all, the president was keeping in mind his expressed intention of obtaining for the Federal Government clear constitutional authority for dealing with national social and economic problems, a question he said must be decided by the nation as a whole.

Compare Conditions
His purpose now, as expressed in informed quarters, is to let the nation compare conditions under the codes with conditions since their abandonment and reach its conclusion whether the Supreme Court's interpretation of federal power as outlined in the decision demolishing NRA is to stand.

To that end Roosevelt proposed keeping a part of the NRA staff at work gathering comparative statistics on industry before and after NRA ran up against its Supreme Court debacle. To this he attached a second suggestion that the Government buy only from manufacturers who observe standards of minimum wages and maximum hours.

Except for some sniping about the idea of establishing a federal agency devoted to proving that NRA was right, congressional leaders expressed the view that these measures would run speedily through Congress.

Draft Amendments
A start was made today with the drafting of necessary amendments to the already approved Senate resolution to extend NRA until April 1, 1936.

However, an attempt to give the NRA "stop-gap" resolution a privileged status, so it could be passed by the House Friday, was blocked temporarily today by Representative Short, Republican, Missouri.

After some wrangling, Short asked: "How can you extend a carcass?" Democratic leaders, however, expressed confidence a special resolution making the NRA measure in order could be obtained. They predicted the extension measure would be approved by Friday night.

Meanwhile, Secretary Wallace emerged from a conference with President Roosevelt to report the Chief Executive had approved amendments to AAA intended to bring its codes and licensing powers into conformity with the Supreme Court's NRA decision.

Drop Licensing Features
Chairman Jones of the House Agriculture Committee supplemented this information with a disclosure that the licensing features are to be dropped altogether and replaced with carefully defined and limited authority for the Secretary of Agriculture to issue equivalent directions.

AUTO CRASH WEST OF MIDLAND EARLY TODAY INJURES TWO INDIANA YOUTHS

Two Indianapolis, Ind., youths were in a hospital here today, undergoing surgical treatment for injuries sustained in an automobile accident early this morning on the highway about a mile west of the city limits of Midland.

The accident occurred at about 3 o'clock this morning when a two-door small sedan en route to the west collided with an eastbound fruit truck. Malcolm Brizendine, 15, driver of the sedan, sustained serious lacerations about the head and face, also a broken arm.

Trueman Reed, riding on the front seat with Brizendine, suffered injuries about the face, as well as body bruises. Miss Lucille Brizendine, sister of the driver, was in the rear seat of the sedan and escaped with minor cuts and bruises. She said at noon today that she was unable to give the reason for the crash which badly demolished the car in which they were riding and sent the fruit truck into the ditch.

A local surgeon attended the injured men, working from a few minutes after the accident until shortly after noon today. He said Brizendine, the worse injured of the two, had good chances to recover. Reed's injuries were minor.

TUESDAY'S HAIL CAUSES DAMAGE

Considerable damage to crops and buildings in communities east of Midland followed heavy hail which fell Tuesday afternoon and night, according to fragmentary reports from these areas.

Stokes school house suffered numerous broken windows and damage to the roof. L. C. Heald's home in the same neighborhood had its roof damaged, and one wall of a room in the house on Troy Eiland's place near Prairie Lee, occupied by Woody Geniry and family, was blown in. All crops on the latter place were wiped out and crops in the Stokes vicinity damaged.

At the T. N. Wilson place in Valley View community, a heavy hail followed a two and a half hour rain, knocking off nearly all the fruit but doing little damage to crops because of the water sheet, Wilson reported. Farther away from this place, damage was heavier.

Full reports on damage sustained over the country are not available.

$100 A DAY PROTECTION PAID TO LAMB COUNTY SHERIFF—TESTIFIED

LUBBOCK, June 6, (AP).—Protecting Bill Herman's liquor trafficking was worth as much as $100 a day to Sheriff Ler Irvin of Lamb county during one period, 25-year-old Vernon Herman testified in United States district court here yesterday.

That was in 1928 when young Herman said bootleg whiskey was selling for $10 the gallon. In those days, he declared he made $500 to $600 in two weeks delivering whiskey for his father at $1 the gallon.

Paid $50 A Week
With the depression came reduced prices in whiskey.

In 1933 Guy Foster paid the sheriff $50 the week for protecting his making and selling liquor. Foster said the Clavis man declared he received $9 the case of six gallons wholesale and "didn't encourage any retail business."

Twenty six persons are on trial for conspiracy to violate liquor taxing acts. Among them are Sheriff Irvin, his son Driscoll, Deputy Sheriff J. L. Walraven, Herman, his mother, Mrs. Bill Herman, and Foster.

Foster, the government's 35th witness, will be cross examined after Judge James C. Wilson reopens court tomorrow.

Clyde G. Hood, assistant to District Attorney Clyde O. Eastus, is leading prosecution.

Herman said the "pay-off" to Sheriff Irvin was based on $2 the gallon. Sales varied, increasing in the winter. Hood asked him to estimate the largest amount his father paid to the sheriff in a 15-day period.

"As high as $1500," Herman said. Bill Herman died in Amarillo in 1931.

Mrs. Bill Herman, Vernon Herman, and Foster have pleaded guilty. Hood brought out that Foster had been convicted twice in federal court and once in state court in connection with liquor cases.

In March, 1933, Foster said he had conversation with Driscoll Irvin at the Irvin farm about his (Foster's) m. k. l. n. g. and selling whisky. Sheriff Irvin, he said, later went to the farm.

"Mr. Irvin asked $1 a gallon for his part, and I didn't agree," Foster continued.

$286,000 RANSOM SENT ABDUCTORS OF MILLIONAIRE

Valet Sent Back to Contact Attorney Of Victim

HAVANA, June 6, (AP).—It was learned today in unimpeachable quarters that business associates of Antonio San Miguel sent a messenger to the abductors of the aged millionaire, with $286,000, American money, to meet ransom demands.

SEND VALET BACK TO SAN MIGUEL'S LAWYER
HAVANA, June 6, (AP).—The kidnapers of Antonio San Miguel, aged Cuban millionaire, made a bold attempt today to contact San Miguel's attorney, Pedro Herrera Sotolongo, with the millionaire's valet, Simon Arieta.

Arieta was seized yesterday with two other servants when San Miguel was captured. Today he reached Sotolongo's home with a letter from the kidnapers. Police took him into custody and refused to divulge the contents of the letter.

Eight men kidnaped San Miguel, 78-year-old millionaire financier and railway executive, and three retainers from his automobile on the outskirts of Havana's residential section last night.

More than 500 soldiers and policemen, armed with machine guns, set out in immediate pursuit of the abductors.

Arieta's arrival at the home of the attorney today was the first word received from the kidnapers.

District Judge E. P. Adams tomorrow morning will set the case for trial.

LIKE GOOD OLD DAYS!

Studying the news from Europe, one is almost persuaded sometimes that a grim and implacable fate is at work, compelling men to duplicate the costly errors of former days.

One of the most recent dispatches from overseas told how Great Britain has at last begun a race to match Germany's expansion of her air force.

Given the present state of international politics, it is hard to see what else the British can do; and yet—is not the whole thing horribly like the Anglo-German naval race of pre-war days?

That competition paved the way for a war that almost wrecked both nations. Will the new competition in aerial fleets have the same results?

Hitler says Germany wants her colonies back, but has no intention of going to war. There remains only one alternative—an antibandit expedition.

CAMPS URGED TO LIFT BOYS FROM CRIME; SOCIAL SERVICE EXPERT ASKS FEDERAL PROGRAM FOR POOR

TUSON, Ariz., June 6, (AP)—A new idea to combat the wave of juvenile delinquency now sweeping the nation was advanced today by Michael Smith, former New York social service and educational expert who is residing here temporarily.

Smith proposed establishment of camps, financed with federal funds, for children from poverty-stricken families and those whose home environment is bad. Under his plan, the children would be kept at the camps for three weeks or more, the longer periods for children whose health required the outdoor life, or those in need of "behavior training."

Offers 9-Point Program
In a lengthy report to Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, requested by federal authorities, Smith proposed:

- 1. The unit of camp organization should be the county, or, in sparsely-settled communities, several counties combined.
2. A camp committee including county relief officials, the school superintendent, the county health officer, and three laymen interested in children's camps, should control each camp.
3. Camp facilities could be obtained either by sending children to established camps on a per capita basis; by renting charity camps unable to operate because of lack of funds; construction of camps as P. W. A. projects; renovation of abandoned CCC camps; by taking over quasi-public and industrial camps, or by renting private camps, scores of which are available because of lack of business.

- 4. The camps would observe the highest possible standards of equipment, personnel, food, diet and recreation programs.
5. Children would be provided with all necessary clothing and other supplies for the duration of the camp. At the conclusion of their periods, the articles would be sterilized and used for incoming quotas.
6. Children would be kept at the camps for minimum periods of three weeks, and in urgent cases as for health or behavior training, they would be kept all summer.
7. Adequate supervision of the camps would be provided.
8. Co-operation of army, navy and the national guard would be arranged in providing beds, blankets, kitchen and dining room, and recreation equipment.
9. If the camps prove successful, they should be continued under federal, state or local auspices.

Cites Other Nations
"If Denmark, Russia, Germany and Italy have found such camps desirable," Smith said, "the United States should at least look into the possibility of the plan."
"Since nearly all communists and other radicals come from poor homes, sending the children to health-building and recreation camps at government expense would give them a new idea of this government and engender a new patriotism."

Crime statistics, Smith declared, show that the ranks of law breakers are recruited from among underprivileged children. Sixty per cent of those arrested for highway robbery, he said, were found to be under 21.

Smith, as a social service worker in New York City, established in 1917 the first camp in the United States for "problem" boys. He was an executive in New York social service and a leader of boys in elementary and high schools of that city for 25 years.

FORT MOHAVE, Ariz. (AP)—To curb wanderlust of youths "on the road," special training is being offered by the Federal government in a transient camp here, first of its kind in the country.
For those under 25 who will agree to learn a trade, care is provided and an opportunity for study arranged. The youths are taught various other subjects, with plans made for regular high school work through co-operation with the Mohave County Union high school,

Screw Worm War Waged by U. S.; States Will Aid

WASHINGTON, June 5, (AP)—Each southern state participating in the fight against the screw worm menace to livestock is expected to set up a special committee to promote state co-operation with federal aid.

Lee A. Strong, chief of the bureau of entomology, laid down this decree recently as he prepared to launch—principally in Texas, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, Florida and Georgia—an exhaustive control campaign financed by an appropriation of $480,000.

Strong urged early and intensive efforts to check destruction by the pest.

To meet the need for which the federal appropriation has been granted," he said, "screw worm control must be considered as a community, rather than an individual undertaking. Screw worm flies move freely and rapidly from place to place so that an individual who fails to take proper steps to stop their breeding and spread is a menace to his neighbors."

Furthermore, those who apply the approved control measures can expect success only when they join in concerted action against their common foe."

The screw worm killed livestock worth thousands of dollars in the seven southern states last year before the farmers and ranchers realized what was taking place. The pest moved in from New Mexico and across Texas.

Fortified by the large appropriation the Department of Agriculture hopes the states will be quick to join in a far-reaching battle on the worm.

Part of the $480,000 will be used to send out agents to show groups of farmers and ranchers how to protect stock against infection.

With another portion the department will buy benzol and pine tar oil for treatment of infected animals and for material to build pens and chutes to hold animals during treatment. Some of the money also will be used for research to develop cheaper and more effective control measures.

Although complete eradication of the screw worm now seems impractical, Strong said its ravages can be checked. The only practical control now known is to deprive the adult flies of egg-laying sites and to kill the maggots before they mature in the wounds of livestock.

Dr. F. C. Bishop of the bureau of entomology will direct the co-operative control program with Dr. W. E. Dove representing the department in the field. Dove's office will be in Atlanta.

The states receiving aid will be divided into districts with a supervisor in charge of each. County supervisors will be appointed in any district comprised of several counties. All these leaders will work in close co-operation under the state committee.

Local communities will seek aid through their county leaders. These will consider such requests and forward those they approve to state committee. The Department of Agriculture will allot supplies and communities or individuals will be responsible for transportation of chemicals and building materials to farms and ranches and for construction of pens and chutes.

"The Old Maid," Prize Play, Is Character Study

Editor's Note: The following review of the Pulitzer prize play, "The Old Maid," was written especially for The Reporter-Telegram, by Mrs. Woods who read the play before the Play Readers club Wednesday.

By MRS. E. HAZEN WOODS

The 1935 Pulitzer prize play, "THE OLD MAID," called by many critics "the best of the season," was dramatized by Zoe Akins from the novel by Edith Wharton. It was produced at the Empire Theatre in New York with Judith Anderson and Helen Menken in the leading roles under the direction of Guthrie McClintic.

More than a narrative the play is a character study of two cousins, centering on their rivalry for the affection of an illegitimate child. With the scene in New York in the middle of the nineteenth century the standards and conventions of the time help to steady and subtilize the play's material.

The play, gradually rising from a moderate success at its opening, has leaped to a hit after receiving the Pulitzer prize. It is now in its twenty-second week with the box-office receipts still rising.

Girls this year are liking the dark slacks for a change, one saleswoman in town tells us. They are worn with contrasting blouses or jackets, for instance a yellow jacket with brown slacks or a red one with dark blue.

In our wanderings about town we've discovered a novel lamp that is new to us. This has the light globe surrounded by a hollow ball, half translucent glass, half metal. The metal half of the globe lifts off, although an ornamental red arrow apparently pierces both halves holding them together.

Trade Bad Carriage For Good, If You Wish To Be Graceful

By ALICIA HART
NEA Service Staff Writer

"There is no doubt that a great deal of our awkwardness and stiffness of motion, and a lot of our athletic ineptitude, can be traced to the peculiar misconception of considering the waist line the natural dividing line of the human body and persistently coining such phrases as 'above the waist,' 'below the belt,' etc. The waist isn't your natural dividing line."

These words, from "Your Carriage, Madam!" by Janet Lane, seem worthy of consideration by any woman who wants a graceful body that will remain youthful and attractive through the years.

Miss Lane points out that every girl should locate the joints where her legs join her body. You find them by digging into the groin on a level with the tops of your leg bones. They are only a hand-span apart and probably a lot farther from than you think.

"That's the place to walk from, work from, and swing into sports from, if you would like to do these things easily and well—and not from up around your waist somewhere," the posture authority continues. Then she outlines a test that a girl can make at home to determine whether or not her carriage is faulty.

"Sit in a hard chair with your sitting bones pointing directly down, and your rib cage and head centered exactly over them. See if you can lift each leg in turn from the chair a little without shifting from one sitting bone to the other. Now stand up, keeping this same balance.

"If you can't move your legs freely without involving your upper body, or rock your upper body on its thigh hinges without involving your legs, it means that the strain of carrying yourself out of balance has so tightened up the surrounding tendons and muscles that your thigh joints are lashed together every which way instead of swinging free."

I think every woman should make Miss Lane's test. If your body doesn't measure up to the standards she sets, then by all means get busy with exercises that will loosen up stiff muscles and make you graceful.

Wheeler-Rayburn Bill Violates Spirit of New Deal...

DOES the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, which would injure and handicap local electric companies, follow the spirit of the New Deal? This bill, now pending in Congress, has caused a nation-wide protest because it arbitrarily abolishes holding companies and usurps local control of privately-owned electric companies, passing that control into the hands of political commissions in Washington.

As generally understood the New Deal has these three main objectives. To:

- 1—Create employment
- 2—Bring back prosperity
- 3—Establish greater social security

Let's test the Wheeler-Rayburn bill as far as the New Deal is concerned:

Would the Wheeler-Rayburn bill create more jobs? NO! By abolishing holding companies it would put many more thousands into the ranks of the unemployed and on relief. Also the drastic and unfair restrictions it places on local companies would discourage greater pay-rolls and expenditures. It would spread fear to other employers of labor because of its socialistic trend. This would create greater unemployment.

Will the Wheeler-Rayburn bill aid in the return to prosperity? NO! It would delay our return to better days because it would cripple and in many instances actually destroy large segments of one of the largest industries and one of the largest taxpayers in the country. The investments of ten million people would be endangered and in many instances, destroyed.

What business can prosper with its control and its very destiny in the hands of political commissions?

Will the Wheeler-Rayburn bill establish social security? NO! For reasons already given the Wheeler-Rayburn bill would undermine security.

It would undermine the security that now exists among the half million employes of public utilities. It would make of these employes political office-holders!

It would cut loose the security of the thousands employed by holding companies, sending them out to look for jobs.

It would invade the homes of millions and destroy honest investments.

It would spread unrest, and make business afraid. This fear would retard prosperity.

The Wheeler-Rayburn bill violates the very spirit of the New Deal.

WASHINGTON, June 6. (AP)—Sifted with legal terms intended to withstand supreme court scrutiny, a bill was sent to congress by Secretary Wallace late Wednesday to "make certain" the continuation of farm processing tax—heart of the production control program.

The secretary of agriculture said he made the following statement to the president and that it was approved: "In cooperation with leaders of congress, amendments to the agriculture adjustment act are being perfected which are intended to bring the act's provisions, as to marketing agreements and licenses into line with the Schechter case decision and also to safeguard the farmers' voluntary adjustment programs on basic commodities."
