MONEY IS DEMANDED BY PARTY

Upon Denial, Pistols Bark and Family Slaughtered

BERINO, N. M., April 2. (UP)—Seven members of a wealthy pioneer Mexican-American family were slaughtered and another wounded by Mexican bandits here last night. Three bandits in an automobile drove up to the ranch home of Melquiades Espinosa as ten members of the family were preparing to retire. Posing as Mexican officials they gained entrance, drew guns and demanded $5000 cash, knowing that Espinosa had recently sold a herd of cattle and thinking the money was hidden on the ranch. Espinosa denied having the money. Without a word of warning the bandits opened fire killing six instantly and wounding two. Melquiades escaped killing when he feigned death as a bullet grazed his temple. The dead were: Filomena Espinosa, 43, her six children, Louis 32, Hipolito 26, Andreas 23, Vicente 18, Juanita 12, and Felipa 9. Vincente died in an El Paso hospital this morning. The others were killed instantly.

LINDBERGH HUNT TURNS AGAIN TO CHESAPEAKE BAY

NEW YORK, April 2. (UP)—Hope for the return of the Lindbergh baby, kidnaped a month ago, turned to the sea today with new reports that the child was safe aboard a boat beyond the 12-mile limit. A copyright article appearing in the States Island Advance said that United States immigration authorities had been advised that the baby was safe on a small vessel and would be returned in a matter of a larger vessel after the ransom was paid.

Local Entries in Bridge Tournament

Midland had its place in the World Bridge Olympic held Friday night, when five tables of players assembled at the home of Miss Fannie Bess Taylor to play the contract hands set out by officials of the contest, sponsored by Ely Culbertson. It was thought by judges that the bid of a hand held by Russell Lloyd was the most outstanding, inasmuch as a similar hand was demonstrated in a current magazine a few months ago, and Mr. Lloyd's bidding was practically the same as that done by a super-expert in the magazine. Groups were unable to tune in on broadcasting of the past scores, by which the playing will be judged. When these are received, The Reporter-Telegram will carry a fuller account of the local bidding and playing. Players were: North and South positions—Mrs. A. S. Legg, Tom Patterson, Mrs. J. M. Shipley, Mrs. E. H. Ellison, Mrs. Margaret Francis, Hugh West, Mrs. Harry Neblett, Mrs. Elliott Cowden, Mrs. Joe Crump and Miss Lois Patterson. East and West positions—Mrs. Homer E. Rowe, Russell Lloyd, Mrs. Daniel, Allen Hargraves, J. F. Blount, Mrs. A. N. Hendrickson, Miss Fannie Bess Taylor, Mrs. Harry Tolbert, and Miss Cordelia Taylor.

$7,581 Is Received Here by Farmers

Out of 59 applications sent in for federal farm loans, representing a total of $12,276, 37 farmers have received checks totaling $7,581, which represents one half the amount they borrowed. The remainder of their loans will be received in 30 days. E. H. Johnson, district manager here for the farm loans, says that farmers should hurry and get their loans through, as several days are required for acting on applications and the money available continues to be narrowed. April 30 is the last date for making applications, and if the money allowed Texas farmers is used before that time no other will be forthcoming. He expects $30,000 to be borrowed in Midland county.

STOKES WINNER OF FIRST PLACE IN RURAL INTERSCHOLASTIC MEET HELD FRIDAY AND SATURDAY; MANY ATTEND

Stokes, Cotton Flat and Warfield were winners in that order of the rural interscholastic meet held here Friday and Saturday, judging from an unofficial check-up early Saturday evening. Athletic events were not reckoned in the check, those in charge not having reported to Miss Margaret Carpenter, director in chief. Scholastic events were held in the court house, several court rooms of which were utilized. Good crowds attended most events. The meet was declared by many to have been the best ever held in this county. Results of scholastic events follow: Essay writing—Mabel Blanton of Cotton Flat (the only entry to finish). Crack Band of High School Caught in Formal Pce

Year by year in every way they get better and better, this colorful musical group of the high school. Musicians may come and go, some may be graduated, others may move away—but the system of Director Russell E. Shrader quickly whips raw recruits into place and the balanced sections continue to grind out harmony in the individual Shrader-directed way. TWO-YEAR LYNCHING BOAST OFF

Negro, Identified as Trespasser, Is Strung up

CROCKETT, April 2. (UP)—Dave Tillis, 52, a negro who was identified as the attempted assaulter of Mrs. Hattie Parker, a white woman, near here, was lynched last night by a party of white men. Tillis' body was found hanging in a tree 15 miles from here on the San Antonio highway. This was the first lynching in Texas in nearly two years. Arch Maple, farmer for whom Tillis worked, told Sheriff J. L. Hazlett that the negro appeared in the woman's house two nights ago and announcing that he was spending the night, pulled off his boots. The woman drove the black away with an axe, throwing the boots after him. The negro failed to appear at work yesterday. Maple learning of the incident, started to Crockett with Tillis, who was overtaken by a lynching party who took the negro to a nearby woods and strung him to a tree. District Attorney Ben Greenwood arrived today to investigate. Adjutant General Sterling announced at Austin that he was sending rangers to investigate. Tillis was charged with attempted assault on an 11-year-old negro girl two years ago, but was no-billed.

2,000 Homeless as Aftermath Strange Sinking of Earth

NAPLES, April 2. (UP)—Two thousand persons were living in tents today as a result of their homes caving in as the town Santa Stefano sank from a hilltop to oblivion in an underground cavern. It was believed that infiltration of water into the porous ground on which the town was built caused the formation of the huge cavern beneath. Scarcely a house was left standing. There were no casualties.

Alcorn Expects Better Business

Charles Alcorn, former Midland man who is assistant manager for the Shell Petroleum company of Texas, passed through Midland Saturday, en route to his home in Dallas. Alcorn said oil men throughout the state are more optimistic than they have been in months and that they expect the oil business to gradually make a come-back.

Happy Again!

For awhile the future looked dark for this little family. But now Mrs. Luis Martinez—together with her 15-month-old son Joseph—won't have to stay behind when her husband returns to Spain under pressure from Uncle Sam. When Martinez' deportation was ordered and it appeared that he would have to leave the country alone, Burlington, N. J., women intervened and raised enough money to pay the trans-Atlantic fare of the mother and child (shown here).

COWBOY BAND AND DELEGATION FROM MIDLAND ATTEND OPENING OF ODESSA BANK; OFFICIAL GREETING IS WIRED

Odessa was a happy city Saturday. The new First National bank opened. Large crowds attended the official opening at 9 a. m. Bank officials were busy receiving deposits and congratulations. The Simmons Cowboy band, bound from a Friday concert at Midland to points west serenaded the new bank. John M. Gist, first depositor in the new institution, was introduced by Gib Sanderfer, manager of the band, and made a short talk. Sanderfer congratulated Odessa on the new bank. Hundreds of people thronged the new institution. They were greeted by W. E. Bees, cashier, J. C. Hamilton, assistant cashier, and directors and others connected with the bank. Judge T. G. Hendrick, wealthy oil man and land owner of Odessa, is president of the new bank, which is said to be one of the strongest in this area of West Texas. Official greetings from Midland were wired by the Midland chamber of commerce, and the First National bank of Midland sent flowers. Ralph M. Barron, president of the Midland National, Mayor Leon Goodman, Marvin C. Ulmer, cashier of the First National, Clarence Schaubauer, Paul T. Vickers, and W. G. Eldred, Southwestern Bell Telephone company manager, attended the opening.

Long Line of Depositors Forms

ODESSA, April 2. (UP)—With the Simmons Cowboy band playing, cowmen who had been keeping savings in socks or distant banks for a year today stood in a block-long line to deposit money in the new First National bank opening here at nine o'clock. City officials and bank presidents from Midland took part in the ceremonies.

Getting Shot Is Not So Bad to Him

Getting shot is not so bad, after all. Boy A. Woods of Galveston simply operated on himself when a shot from a .22 entered his hand Saturday as he and Jack Grumpton were shooting rabbits. "My eye was saved," he said, "as I had just taken off my cap and was rubbing my forehead. Jack was too far away to do my hand much damage and I just pricked the bullet out with my knife. But it would have put my eye out." He said the bullet struck a rock and was deflected his way. He said he was shot once before, but that the bullet merely creased him after passing through a tin of tobacco he was carrying in his hip pocket.

LOOT FIGURES REVISED

DICKINSON, April 2. (UP)—First National bank officials today gave out revised figures of the loot taken by bandits Thursday night, placing the loss at $19,896, including $6,500 in cash. The remainder, in bonds and jewelry, was all covered with insurance.

RECORD IS BROKEN IN BALLOTING

Yeager, Hicks, Martin And Cowden Are The Choices

Polling a record vote for a school trustee election in Midland, three new candidates replaced three old members of the school board Saturday with majorities of approximately 100 votes each. A total of 1,151 votes were cast. W. A. Yeager, present member of the board, received the greatest number of votes, with a total of 1,072. Others elected were: Alvin Hicks, with 638 votes; J. R. Martin with 606, and J. Frank Cowden, with 597. Retiring board members were as follows: J. E. Hill, 490; John P. Howe, 506; and B. Frank Haag, 526. The election marked the close of a brief but spirited campaign. Proponents of the two "sides" were busy throughout Saturday with automobiles, transporting voters and otherwise carrying on the campaign. Besides Yeager, Hicks, Martin and Cowden, elected for two years each, the board consists of Dr. John B. Thomas, R. V. Lawrence and James S. Noland, who have another year each to serve. The election affected only the Midland Independent School District Number 1. It was held at the high school auditorium between the hours of 3 a. m. and 7 p. m. Another election was held at the same time to name a county trustee for commissioner's precinct No. 1. W. E. Pigg was elected with 239 votes, and B. H. O'Neal 1. Fannin is president of the Midland county board of trustees and is already serving in this commissioner's precinct. This election was solely for rural schools. A similar election was held in Stephenson School District No. 15, lying in county precinct No. 2, but results had not been learned at press time.

Two of New Members In for Three Years

Two of the four newly elected board members will serve for three years, and two for one year, numbers being drawn to determine the term of service. This is done in accordance with the law. The trustees will be sworn in at a call meeting of the board within a few days, it is understood.

Missionary Will Speak on Tuesday

Two speaking engagements of James Wallin, missionary for several years at Bulale, Africa, have been announced for Midland this week. He will speak at the high school Tuesday morning and at the Presbyterian church at 8 o'clock that evening. The minister is in this country on a speaking tour, and for the time, is in charge of the Manhattan Presbyterian church of El Paso. About five years ago he was supply pastor for the Presbyterian church here for several months.

SEEK RARE BIRDS

WASHINGTON—Naturalists are constantly on the lookout for five birds, once discovered by an explorer, but never since located. According to the American Nature association, the five rarer are the "Spizella monticola," Townsend's bunting, Audubon's "Regime curvieri"—a species of kinglet, his small-headed flycatcher, and a rare species of the argus pheasant.

THE JOB RIOTS

News of the clash between police and unemployed men at the gates of the Ford plant on the edge of Detroit is tragically disturbing—not because it indicates any danger from violent Communism, but because it proves that we have not yet learned how to deal with desperate men who cannot get jobs.

There were Communist agitators in the mob at Dearborn, of course. It goes without saying that the fighting, if not definitely caused by them, was at least right in line with their ideas.

But it is simply idiotic to suppose that a majority of the 3000 men who marched to the plant, or even a sizable percentage of them, went out with any idea of provoking violence, or took with them any positive desire to see the existing framework of American society torn down.

They may have some of those ideas now, but it is very doubtful that they had them before the fight. They were simply distracted men for whom America today has no work. They wanted, somehow, to get out of the slough of despond; they wanted jobs, and if they couldn't get them they at least wanted to dramatize their plight and express their feelings.

But organized society had no way of meeting them but by using force. It killed four of them, wounded 15 or 20 more and threw 15 into jail.

By doing this, what did it accomplish?

It made a lot of those 3000 permanently bitter. It gave the Communist organizers throughout the country a tremendous lot of new fuel for the sputtering fire that they are trying—with scant success, thus far—to start. It enormously emphasized the sad fact that organized society sometimes seems a lot readier to hit jobless men over the head than it is to keep them from going hungry.

A newspaper photographer who covered the procession from its start said:

"As the men formed they were a jolly lot, some laughing and joking as they marched to Dearborn."

Marchers who laugh and joke are not dangerous. When organized society does its best to make them stop laughing and joking it is acting with supreme foolishness.

COMMERCIALISM AT ITS WORST

If there exists, anywhere, any sort of booby prize for those who most callously disregard the privacy and the feelings of other people, it ought to go to those New Jerseyites who tried to make a little easy money by offering to fly sightseers over the Lindbergh estate near Hopewell, N. J., for $2.50 apiece.

Not in a long time has unintelligent commercialism offered the nation quite so ugly a spectacle.

Duplicates of this prize, by the way, ought to be struck off for all the people who accepted the proposition and spent $2.50 for the privilege of being carried over the estate. Those people, beyond doubt, would have been happier if they could actually have been escorted into the Lindbergh home, so that they could have poked their grubby fingers at Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh at close range. As it was, they had to be content with a distant view; but it may comfort them to know that they have earned the contempt of decent folk.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Having heard, admired, and officially passed a pleasing tune in an imported gramophone record, the state censor of Soviet Russia suggested that a stirring Communist song should be written to the tune. This was done and applauded. But was it journalistic conscience or a sense of humor that impelled the Moscow News, the only English-printed daily in Russia, to embarrass the censor by pointing out that the tune is known in Britain as "God Save the King," and in the United States as "My Country, 'Tis of Thee"?

Sinanthropus, the Peking Man, was, or had, a careless housekeeper. But if he, or she, had taken more care to sweep up the charred bones there would have been nothing left by which it could be decided a million years afterward that Sinanthropus knew the use of fire for cooking meat.

the man HUNTERS BY MABEL McELLIOTT IFA FICION NFA ©1932 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY Susan Carey, studying shorthand in a Chicago business school, meets Ben Lammpan, a four young musician, at a party. Although Aunt Jessie, with whom Susan lives, objects to her having suitors, the girls lets Ben escort her home, Robert Dunbar, a young millionaire, is a schoolmate of Susan's at the business institute. Dunbar takes her to lunch and Susan finds herself deeply interested in the young man.

CHAPTER IV They walked along through the summer dusk, two very self-conscious young people. Susan thought everyone on the block must be noticing them. Aunt Jessie, who was sitting outside the cigar store, winked and showed a pink and purple display of cold creams and powders, she shrank into young Lammpan's tall shadow.

"You always walk so fast?" demanded Ben Lammpan in a surprised tone of voice as they arrived, rather breathless, under the theatre's blazing portals.

"No, he would think her what Rosa Milton called a 'dope.'" She would not tell him. Susan was afraid of small bills.

Silently they walked past the door man in his white coat and silver buttons. Silently they allowed another white-coated youth to show them to their seats. Susan, crushing past knees in the darkness, wondered suddenly and agonizingly why she had come. She longed with all her heart to be safe and quiet and solitary on Aunt Jessie's front porch.

There was this much to be said about the pictures. You didn't have to talk to your escort. You could be silent for many more such successes at a Nancy Carroll talkie.

Susan smiled. "He is pretty bad. But she's cunning. I like her." Ben groaned. "I think it's rotten. What to say?"

Lammpan settled down with a martyred air. Was this, Susan wondered, the way all boys behaved when they invited you out? Somehow it didn't come up to her ideal of knightly conduct. She was a bit huffed and showed it.

"Let's hurry. My aunt will be home—and—?" he wanted to know. "She doesn't like me to be out late. She'll be mad as hops. She's very particular." Susan tossed her head. Let him like it or not!

"Don't you want to leave me here?" the girl inquired nervously under the street lamp at the corner. "I know there's not a cut-throat waiting way out on the south side."

"I do," he informed her darkly. "But when I take a girl out I see that she gets home safe. How do I know there's not a cut-throat waiting in the alley-way?"

Susan giggled. She said, "You sound just like Aunt Jessie." Suddenly Ben Lammpan took her arm and the vice-like grip of his long fingers on her bare flesh shocked her into silence.

What Secret Six Found out About the Kidnap Business

By ALEXANDER JAMIE Director of the "Secret Six" of the Chicago Association of Commerce Written Especially for NEA Service and The Reporter-Telegram

Kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby has focused public attention on the newest big-scale activity of the underworld. There are two distinctly different kinds of kidnaping. One is the kidnaping of gangsters by gangster rivals for revenge or for business reasons. The other is the kidnaping of private citizens, most often adults, to obtain huge ransoms for their release.

The first method is old, having been employed in practically all of the wars between rival gangs. The second is something relatively new—that is, on an organized scale—and it is not confined to may lead to very serious conditions.

The Secret Six has records of 31 recent kidnapings for ransom in Chicago and vicinity. Doubtless, there have been many more such crimes that never were reported, because the kidnapers chose victims who are engaged in some illegal or quasi-legal business—victims who will not be so likely to go to police with their troubles.

Therefore any effort to estimate the amount of ransom money they have collected would necessarily be a guess. But, undoubtedly, the total would show a tremendous figure because demands for as much as $150,000 have been made in individual cases.

KIDNAP RING Kidnaping for ransom is relatively new and therefore, as yet, difficult to fathom. I do not know about the east and other parts of the country, but undoubtedly the total of the major kidnapings in the Midwest have been committed by a group of about 15 men. They go where their business requires.

These professional kidnapers have a very definite system and there are many indications that the big kidnaping jobs in the Midwest have been pulled by the same gang. The first step of the gang is to send out a "finger-man" to get all possible information on the intended victim. This "finger-man" carefully checks his quarry to find out his ability to pay, his personal habits, when he goes to and fro from his home and his place of business, who his friends are, the kind of auto he has, his license number, etc.

Arriving at the hideout place, the victim is blindfolded before he is taken from the car and led inside. The house is usually in some remote location. Two guards are placed over him. After threats of death and torture, he is directed to write a letter to friends requesting that they pay the stipulated ransom.

The victim is seated at a table, given pen and paper and warned to look straight ahead while the blindfold is temporarily removed so he can write the letter. His captors stand behind him and thus he never sees them.

The Town Quack. (Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

They tell one on W. G. Riddle, district manager of the telephone company, that he paid his stenographer her wages in currency which had seen considerable use. He apologized for the dirty money, saying that she might get germs from it, but she assured him that no germ could live on her salary.

Somebody backed out a car and drove to town Saturday morning without noticing that a couple of hens were in the back seat. The hens kept up a loud cackling while the car was parked on the street and it wasn't long before Timberline Floyd drove up by the side of the other car, opened his sedan windows, got out and, waded in the hope that the hens would jump across.

Once before Hillary Bedford was county commissioner, they say he had to put out a trap to town four or five days to allow a setting hen to hatch off a bunch of chickens in his Model T.

I don't see what a hen has to do with these days when you can buy a half dozen eggs for a nickel.

More people imitate a duck now. They just keep on quacking.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

Midland, Texas, April 2, 1932.

The Cowboy band Friday night at the Yucca unloaded 4 1-2 tons of Tschalkowsky as a finish to a good program. Tschalkowsky is awfully heavy stuff, at least 3-4 of a ton per page. So divide 3-4 into 4 1-2 and you will find how many pages we had to stand for.

Friday night we heard a cowboy band and tomorrow night we may hear cowboy songs from John Lomax. A few more entertainments of this character and we will "go western."

recession! Is it played before the bride bumps her head on the altar rail or after the job has been ditched? We noticed several ladies hurriedly wiping the tears away during the splendid rendition of this classic but whether from fond memories or because their old man had failed to live up to specifications it is impossible to delineate.

PRYOR'S "The Whistler and His Dog" made a hit. The whistling wasn't so bad but these were some doubts as to the breed of dog the barking was intended to imitate. One suggested that it might have been an imitation of a Sea Dog, which could not be disputed as we're too far from the sea to dispute it. Besides there ain't no such animal.

The brass quartette gave us a few moments of delight in "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes." It's encouraging that they have put that kind of construction on drinking. Usually it's bad for the eyes. Sousa, that grand old march king who reigned in a glorious rendition of the "Stars and Stripes Forever." A couple of other members were mistaken in their opinion as to the front row. Too modest. His Dad should teach him better for he knows how. Director D. O. Wiley can be credited with remarkable directing. Bill, who is most artistically and coming into the stretch just noised out the band. Wagner, a busy-headed composer, wrote Lofengrath and put it somewhere along the end what is known as the Buidal Chorus, roughly speaking, which has gotten more men and women into more trouble than all other tunes added up. One thing this incompetent scribe can never get into his head correctly, is the Bridal Chorus a professional or a dilettante?

Famed Texas Man, Preserver of Folk Lore, to Be at Local Theatre Monday

This linoleum cut, made by Fred T. Hogan of Midland, is of John Lomax, author and famous compiler of folk lore, who is to be at the Ritz theatre Monday night, under the auspices of the Fine Arts club.

An entertainment to be presented at the Ritz theatre Monday night, sponsored by the local Fine Arts club, in connection with the regular movie feature, brings to Midland John A. Lomax, who is well known for his two volumes of folk lore and cowboy ballads, compiled by him after much research work a great many years ago.

Most people are familiar with the priority and completeness of Mr. Lomax's collection of cowboy songs, but few knew that he, with his sons of the cattle trail, tried the nation-wide interest in native balladry that has reached tremendous proportions in the two decades since his work started.

By Kathleen Eiland The life story of any girl with blood half-Irish and half-Japanese should prove interesting. Kathleen Tamagawa's story, as told in her autobiography "Holy Prayers in a Horse's Ear," follows the rule. It is interesting and engagingly humorous as well, for the author's Irish blood dominates her writing.

Kathleen Tamagawa (now Mrs. Frank Eldridge) is the daughter of an Irish mother and a Japanese father. This circumstance has made her life one of unusual and (according to her) often uncomfortable situations. In America where she was born and spent her early childhood she was called a "Jap" and in Japan she was considered an American.

Because her birth was not registered in Japan, her existence is not recognized by authorities there. In fact, under Japanese law she does not exist. "My lawyers (she writes) say that I am an 'ultimate international legal absurdity.'" Yet she is married to an American government official and is the mother of four living children.

Kathleen Tamagawa's story is not concerned with the politics of Japan and America, although she has spent her girlhood and adult life in diplomatic circles. Neither are the oddities of Japanese customs her theme, although she gives amusing sidelights of the life of foreigners in the land of Nippon. Her own difficulties as the child of an interracial marriage occupy her attention. Apparently she has found these difficulties too great, for her final decision is: "I do not approve of Eurasian marriages. I do not approve of interracial marriages." And again: "Why venture on such a marriage, a marriage which must include chasms of misunderstanding?"

In inter-racial marriages it is the woman who is usually supposed to suffer most (and most often is condemned) but no one reading this book could doubt that the daughter's sympathy is with her Japanese father, as the one who made the greater sacrifice, though he took his wife back to Japan and she lived with him there many years. To an unbiased reader, it seems that despite her heritage of Japanese blood Miss Tamagawa (or should one say Mrs. Eldridge?) is almost purely American in outlook. She writes sincerely but one feels that she does not reveal the depths of her thinking and feeling in her autobiography—which may be more characteristically Japanese than American.

ALASKAN MOUNDS

POINT BARROW, Alaska.—Four or five large mounds located in this vicinity are thought to be sites of ancient villages, and James A. Ford, Smithsonian Institute archaeologist, has been spending the winter preparing to investigate these mounds as soon as the weather breaks. He hopes to find evidence of culture extending back 2,000 years.

BOWED TO BOUGH

LONDON.—William Wester will keep his eyes open the next time he rides on top of a truck. On his last ride he noticed that the truck was approaching the overhanging bough of a tree that would knock him off the top of the truck. He grasped it and, as the truck moved from under him, was left hanging 20 feet in the air. He dropped to the ground and sprained his ankle.

COSTLY STEW

TACOMA.—Stew is one of the world's commonest dishes, but the Joe Marchesini family found it can be one of the most expensive. They were having stew for dinner when Game Warden George Mitchell walked in. He sniffed the stew, inspected it, and found the breasts of three quails in it. As quails are protected in this state, Joe was fined $30-$10 for each bird.

FOR A RAINY DAY

FORT WORTH.—It was a rainy morning when J. M. Powell plied out of bed and took his umbrella for a trip to the corner store. The grocer hadn't yet arrived, and Powell stood in the doorway waiting for him. A car drove up to the curb, sensing he was to be the victim of a hold-up. Powell slipped $15 out of his pocket and put it in his closed umbrella. The robbers searched him and found but 25 cents. In disgust they returned the change to him and drove off.

TO BEGIN WORSHIP

A 40-hour devotion is to start at the Catholic church this morning.

"I did visit the Rangoon Bazaar (she writes) but not that day—not with that gallant Oriental guide. I went with my American husband, who said, 'Ah—what's the matter with you? What if they do kill you?' And left safer." Score one for American husbands. By the way, this same American husband, Mr. Eldridge, writes the concluding chapter of the book—an honor not usually accorded the husbands of women writers—thereby gaining the advantage of the last word. The title "Holy Prayers in a Horse's Ear" is unfortunate conveying, as it does, little meaning to the average American reader. It is not a deep book, but an entertaining one, cleverly told, and humorous, and worth reading. In addition it has the merit of being just off the press, as the copyright is February, 1932. It will be found on the rent shelf of the county library.

MIDLAND GOLFERS PLAY UNOFFICIAL GAME WITH BIG SPRING IN AFTERNOON

Thinly Clads to Enter Lubbock Meet

Eight or ten members of the high school track and field squad will enter the Texas Tech invitational relay games Saturday at Lubbock. This will likely be the last meet of the thinly clad before the district meet at San Angelo, April 15-16.

Hooks and Slides By William Braucher

An Old Southpaw The scene is Clearwater, Fla. The Brooklyn ball club is going through the military motions prescribed by Manager Maximilian Carey as spring training routine.

Over in one corner of the ball park, five young pitchers are leisurely tossing baseballs to two catchers. In the center of the group is a lanky individual whose uniform is about two sizes too large. Gray hair shows at the sides and back of his cap. Now and then he takes a ball from one of the youngsters, holds it up in his left hand for their inspection, wheels, and with an easy, graceful motion, hurls it to the waiting catcher.

Midland golfers who have been qualifying for team membership in the Sand Belt Golf association will play a match with Big Spring golfers this afternoon at the Big Spring country club course.

Sandy Auchterlonie, golf pro, will take the place of J. Ellis Cowden, who will be unable to make the trip. Others expected to play on the Midland team are Delo Douglas, Joe Chambers, C. L. Jackson, Earl J. Moran, and Frank Day. The eighth member could not be learned.

Official play in the Sand Belt begins next Sunday, when Midland plays Odessa, one of the new members, at Odessa.

Ninety holes of golf must be put in before the team qualifying score can be played, and several of the best golf players of the city have been playing a couple of rounds each pretty afternoon.

Team prospects have not been spoken of much, but it is understood that Midland is likely to have a stronger club than that of last season.

Rucker heads for the clubhouse. But he is sidetracked before reaching the showers.

How About These Chaps? "Which of these kids looks best?" he replies to a question. "Well, that is a hard one. All those young 'uns look mighty good. One day I'd say Mungo or Mattingly was the best of the lot. Another day I'd say Kridler or Jones. Every one of 'em looks like the makin' of powerful good pitchers."

which one was 'ripest' right now, I might say Mattingly. Reminds me of Burleigh Grimes, too. Plucks 'em off when they get too cocky. Great fighter. I've seen him dust off batters in the Sally League, then invite 'em out to the box for a poke in the nose. Ready to meet 'em half way, also.

"Then again, if you asked me which was the best, I might say Jones. Makes me think of old George McQuillan. Same easy motion. Lots of stuff, just like George had. Started out like George, too. Just a throw or Lopez, took the ball and heave it. Lord knows where. Now this kid is getting wise, though. Picked up a change of pace with his other stuff. Throws his curves at different speeds. Looks like a ball player."

He Discovered Vance

Well, Nap ought to know. When the Brooklyn ball team takes the field, there are several faces in the lineup that owe their success to the slim farmer from Georgia. He discovered Johnny Frederick, Al Lopez, Babe Phelps, Scrub, and the induced Squire Ebbs to sign a big white-haired minor leaguer named Vance. That was a pretty good investment.

Besides this year's consignment of young pitchers that Rucker has helped to develop, there is a 33-year-old catcher in the camp who used to have what it takes. He is Paul Richards, from Waxahatchie, Texas, and a former battery mate of Art Shires. Paul used to do the pitching and Shires the catching for the high school team. Paul would pitch either right-handed or left-handed, as the whim struck him.

He Can Wing 'Em

"I never saw a catcher who could throw like that boy," says Rucker. "The ball just seems to be on fire when he heaves to a base. He's as good a hitter as any I know. Of course, maybe he's not ready yet. It might be better if he stayed in the minors another year, just for the experience."

Manager Carey shares Rucker's interest in the young fellows, some of whom will be seen regularly in the Flatbush lineup this summer. If you should notice in the box scores that Mattingly or Mungo has pitched a shutout, you won't have to ask anybody how they got that way.

Rickety Bench Where Uncle Robbie Sat Is Empty Now

The Brooklyn Balmness Boys, a polking baseball troupe that toured the National league for years with an act consisting of making three outs on a home run, are going to school now.

What used to be the jolly Robins has become the Brooklyn Institute for Bigger and Better Baseball, under the direction of Prefect Maximilian Carey, a smart and earnest young man who has changed the rickety training camp of other years into a baseball reformatory where pep talks are regularly administered and where the fellows are supposed to behave.

Even the old hotel at Clearwater, Fla., where your Uncle Wilbert Robinson used to house his cast, has been deserted for a more pretentious hostelry where the clerk doesn't carry the keys in his pocket, and where the window shades actually are on rollers that roll.

Ernie Schaaf and Steve Mamas are not ball players, but they ought to be able to get a job shadow-boxing in the Brooklyn outfield this year.

The Sagging Throne

At a rickety little ball park where Uncle Robbie used to herd his athletes together and try vainly to remember their right names, all is hustle and bustle and drills and instruction.

I looked for the rickety little bench in front of the crude grandstand where Robbie used to hold his court. It was still there, still sagging a trifle perhaps from the burden of Uncle Robbie's benevolent

SAND BELT GOLF PLAY WILL BEGIN ON APRIL TENTH

BIG SPRING, March 31.—The Sand Belt Golf association schedule will open April 10, according to a schedule drawn up by the officials of the league. Midland, Odessa, Colorado, Big Spring, Snyder, Texas and Lamesa compose the loop, which was organized last year. Texas won the title in 1931.

Cuss Words and Fun

There he wagged his stub of a finger at one of his athletes after the execution of a particularly bright play. There he berated dumbness with resounding cuss words, and then there he used to cuss Dizzy Vance, and turned to ask who "that feller" was playing shortstop and "guessed he'd better get him outa there 'fore he gets killed."

There he told how he had struck to Glenn Wright and knew that his arm would come around okay because it wasn't a shoulder injury. And, perched there, he had turned to ask in a stage whisper if that Joe wasn't his name out there pitching wasn't a "one-year pitcher."

There he had chortled in high glee as his athletes pounded the ball across the high board fence in the outfield. As he sat he told how he had fooled some of them fellers out about of Luque—he called it "Lookee"—being all washed up as a pitcher. When he had brought to Brooklyn from Cincinnati in a trade.

By the hour he regaled the newspaper boys about the glamorous old days when he had been coach of the Greater Brooklyn Boys. His stories were sparkling with whole-souled humor.

Max Carey, new manager of the Brooklyn Balmness Boys, has an almost military bearing. It may come in handy to him later on when he has to court-martial a few of his erratic young men.

What Would He Say?

Well—there was the bench. There were the players there, but the bench was strangely empty.

Out on the diamond, Manager Max Carey, a young man with the air of a top-sergeant, moved about here and there, telling this one how to do that, and that one how to do this, according to the code.

On one corner of the bench sat Waite Hoyt talking to Hack Wilson. Hoyt was telling Hack something about starches at noon and problems in the evening. Wilson listened blinking owlishly.

If Uncle Robbie could have been there to hear Hoyt talking to Hack Wilson about his diet!

THE BROOKLYN TEAM IS SURE TO START THE SEASON IN BETTER CONDITION THIS YEAR THAN LAST. THERE ARE NO EXHIBITION GAMES IN HAVANA.

Manager McKechnie of the Braves may use Shires at first. Akes at second, and Maranville at third. Judge, but he ought to sign Al Jolsen to play third.

Bill Klem Breaks Down; Admits He "Never Missed One HERE"

Bill Klem, umpiring for 28 years, averred in a 120 decision a day for 154 days of the year, is "the man who never called one wrong." That is his own honest opinion, mind you. This story isn't being told by John McCraw.

Hugh Bradley, newspaperman writing for American Mercury, found Bill at his winter home in Miami Beach recently. Asked Hugh: "Bill, do you honestly believe that you never called one wrong?"

Klem's response was dramatic. "The man leaned forward," writes Bradley. "He wears a lavender shirt with collar to match, a blue tie of quiet pattern, blue suspenders, white socks rolled in collegiate fashion, low tan shoes and a blue serge suit.

"A heavy, almost pugy, hand beats twice against his left breast in the approximate neighborhood of his heart. He speaks earnestly, slowly. "No, I never missed one, HERE."

"Bill, don't you think it is possible that you have missed one?" "Again the man leans forward. His eyes are small, of a faded blue. They are not eyes that flash danger signals, nor eyes that warm you with their glow.

"You might call them expressionless, yet somehow they express the intensity of the man, his calm certainty. "Once more the hand is raised against the left breast. "I could miss one, MAYBE. But never from HERE."

The Heart Would Know Then Mr. Klem proceeds, in forceful, challenging tones. "I defy any man to prove to me that I have ever called a foul ball fair. I defy any man to prove that I have ever called a fair ball foul. I defy any man to prove that I have ever called a fly ball catch wrong."

And then the interviewer says: "Bill, how do you know you never missed one?" To which the swift reply is: "If I missed one I would know it here."

Again the hand comes to the breast. Under Bradley's picture of Umpire Bill Klem is correct. Bill's estimate of his own worth is not prompted by conceit. Bill is simply sure of himself. He is always sure of himself. He takes pride in his work.

A Tough Spot In the second game of the last world series, an odd play came up in the ninth inning. Poxx walked, and after two were out, Dykes walked. Moore swung at a low third strike which Catcher Jimmy Wilson scooped out of the dirt. With a certain putout by throwing to first base Wilson, noting the runners advancing, pegged swiftly to third. Jake Flowers, at third, had only to touch third to execute a force-out.

Only one important change was made in the rules, a motion being passed that all matches between clubs 100 miles or more apart must be played on neutral territory upon request of either team.

PHAR LAP MAY BEAT OUR "20 GRAND" EQUINE

By WILLIAM BRAUCHER NEA Service Sports Editor

This Phar Lap seems to be a pretty fair sort of hide—for $800. That is what owners D. J. Davis and H. Telford paid for the gelding that has won $332,750 in five years of racing.

But that is not the only unusual thing about the big red Foy Train from Down Under that won the $50,000 Agua Caliente handicap recently and now is threatening to lick every thoroughbred in America.

In disposition the big fellow is like a St. Bernard dog. He loves to eat and rest. In fact the training methods of his trainer, Tommy Woodcock, were severely criticized before Phar Lap's record-breaking race at Agua Caliente. Woodcock, upon arriving in California, asserted the giant gelding needed mostly rest, with very light workouts.

Phar Lap trained for his first big race in this country, you might say, by lying down.

Not even when Mr. Davis brought a party of Wall Street friends to the stable to look at the big boy would Woodcock permit his charge's repose to be disturbed. Mr. Davis and his friends had to leave without so much as a peck at the great gelding.

It was feared the change in climate, Phar Lap's unfamiliarity with dirt tracks after running most of his five racing years on turf, and the fact that the horse would have to run in this country from left to right whereas he was accustomed to running from right to left according to the quaint old British custom, would bother the big fellow. But Phar Lap seems to be one of those horses that can't be bothered. The only thing he has been able to do so far in a strange climate, running in reverse, and on dirt rather than grass, was to set a new record of 2:02 4-5 for the Agua Caliente mile and a quarter.

The prospect for the summer, in which he is expected to meet such of our aristocracy as Twenty Grand, Mate and others, appears to be just a pleasant afternoon in a rocking chair for the Australian invader. If Phar Lap is not saddled with such impossible weights as the 150 pounds they loaded on his back in the 1931 Melbourne Cup, Twenty Grand is going to have a couple of good cries for himself at some of the eastern and middle-western tracks.

Because he is a gelding, however, Phar Lap is not allowed to race with some of our best runners in a few of the more important fixtures. Judge Francis A. Nelson, president of the Agua Caliente, writes of him:

"Phar Lap is all that a champion should be in appearance—a giant full of quality and power. He never has missed a meal in his life. He can run on any kind of track. He is easy to take care of, for he has horse sense to a remarkable degree—indeed, the highest type of equine intelligence I have encountered. He actually does tricks like a dog at the command of his trainer, who will lie down to sleep in a stall at night, the big fellow following him a half hour later, without disturbing or awakening Woodcock. He is never fretful or fussy on the track."

Beer is mentioned in Egyptian papyri over 3000 years old.

DEMAND WET STAND

ERIE, Pa. (UP)—Major General Smedley D. Butler can expect no support from Erie marines in his candidacy for U. S. Senator from Pennsylvania, according to Joseph Gallagher, head of the Erie Marine Corps league.

"Marine, or no marine, he must be 'wet' or we won't vote for him," Gallagher said.

FAVORS EXAMS

KANSAS CITY. (UP)—Examinations should never be cut out of a college curriculum, according to Mrs. Helen Tait Manning, dean of Bryn Mawr College, who disagrees with certain educators that examinations have outlived their usefulness.

"An examination is an educational device in itself," she said on a radio here. "Many types of examinations might be objected to, of course, but there hardly can be any valid objection to asking direct and well-founded questions on a subject that has been studied."

Londoners Walk To Save Taxes

LONDON. (UP)—Londoners are walking to work in order to pay their income tax.

Such is the belief of Lord Ashfield, chairman of the London Underground Group, as the London subways are officially known. He expressed his opinion to his shareholders at the annual general meeting of the company at which a reduction in receipts was announced.

"The citizens of London," declared Lord Ashfield, "are walking more. They are restricting their income tax to indulging in travel."

Traffic Drop
Twenty-eight million less passengers were carried in 1931 than in 1930 owing to the rapid fall in the volume of traffic consequent on the creeping paralysis in trade and industry generally. On top of this loss of passengers statistics show that from the people who continued to travel the average receipts per passenger were reduced by about one per cent.

It would appear that the depression is hitting the wealthier sections of the city harder than the working class districts for at stations serving the former places the fall in traffic amounted to eight per cent, but in the workers' areas the reduction was only two per cent, despite the fact that unemployment in London had already doubled in volume.

Underground Group
The Underground Group also controls the majority of London's omnibuses, and Lord Ashfield pointed out that the various road and driving taxes amounted to $273 ($1,865) a
