FT. STOCKTON MAN IN SENATOR RACE

H. L. Winfield Seeking Office Now Held By Ken Regan

H. L. Winfield of Fort Stockton Tuesday authorized The Reporter-Telegram to announce officially that he would be a candidate for the post of Texas Senator from the 29th district, composed of the largest section of the state embraced in any senatorial district.

Mr. Winfield has been urged for the past several weeks to seek the position now held by Ken Regan of Pecos. Mr. Regan announced the first of last week that he would not be a candidate for re-election, and Mr. Winfield at once announced his candidacy.

Campaign headquarters will be set up in Fort Stockton and an aggressive campaign, extending into every county of the district, will be waged, Mr. Winfield stated.

Mr. Winfield is a native Texan, born in 1888 in Zazalla county and educated in the public schools of San Antonio. He came to Fort Stockton 26 years ago as a young man, and has lived there since that time. He worked first in the office of Judge Howell Johnson, and then became deputy clerk under Frank Rooney from 1911 to 1915. In the latter year he entered politics actively for the first time and was elected tax assessor of Pecos county. He served two terms in that office, and then, on retirement of Mr. Rooney in the clerk's office, he was elected county and district clerk. He was elected to this office five times, without opposition during that entire period. He retired from that office at the end of 1929.

When Pecos County State Bank was organized in 1928, Mr. Winfield was made a director and vice-president, and a short time later was elected to the presidency, a position he holds at present. In addition to his banking interests, Mr. Winfield owns a 25,000-acre ranch southeast of Fort Stockton, is president of the Stockton Realty & Abstract company, and has oil interests in the Pecos Valley and

DALLAS BRINGS CENTENNIAL TO CITY AS GROUP MAKES ONE HOUR STOP ON ANNUAL TOUR OF WEST TEXAS

Delegation Parades Downtown Section After Being Met By Enthusiastic Group Of Local Citizens

Dallas brought the Centennial to Midland early today when a group of 64 wholesalers, retailers and business executives accompanied by the city's select line-up of entertainers, made a one hour stop with their special train from 8 to 9 o'clock.

Met at the station by the mayor and the chamber of commerce greeters, the Dallas delegation fell in line and followed their band on a parade through the downtown section, the south steps of the court house being the destination. There a well planned program was presented, with Mayor M. C. Umer giving the address of welcome and Chas. A. Moore of Dallas giving the response. W. V. Ballew also brought the Midland people a brief message, extending an invitation for all to attend the Centennial Central Exposition.

Entertainers from station WFAA, Dallas, gave a musical program, the local station, KRLL, broadcasting it by remote control.

Mr. Moore, in his speech, presented Mayor Umer a solid gold Centennial belt buckle as a token of the visit here. Favours and advertisements were distributed by various business men of the Dallas Party.

A folder entitled "Dallas Greets Midland" carried information about the thirty-fifth annual trip, the Centennial exposition and also gave, on its front page, the following information about Midland:

Dallas brings greetings to Midland, headquarters city of the prosperous Permian Basin, county seat of Midland county.

OFFICERS STONED Crowd Angry Because Working Hours Are Lengthened

ROCKWOOD, Tenn., April 14 (AP)—Officers used tear gas bombs today for the third time in an effort to disperse strikers and sympathizers who attempted to prevent workers from entering the Rockwood hosiery mill.

Gas clouds forced the crowds to retreat as deputies cleared a path for buses and cars bringing workers to the plant. Stones and bricks were thrown at the officers.

The strike followed an order increasing hours from eight to ten per day without pay increases.

Invitations to Press Convention Here Are Mailed

Invitations to all editors and newspaper men and women in the West Texas district to attend the West Texas Press Association conference at Midland May 22 and 23 have been mailed by J. C. Smith, Snyder, secretary of the association.

A copy of the invitations follows: "Mr. Newspaperman and a few of your friends: After you have checked those two red letter days on your calendar, take a squint at this little story. It gives you a quick picture of the West Texas Press Association convention that will be held in Midland Friday and Saturday, May 22 and 23.

The Time. Convention dates were shifted from the dog days of August because we want YOU to come. Fish-in' and visiting and business often interfere in August. Too, we're getting ahead of the Centennial opening. Almost anyone can come May 22 and 23.

The Program. The full program will be sent to you in two or three weeks. Have a taste now. Roy Baumgartner, INS chief, Dallas; Lowry Martin, Centennial dacty, Corsicana; Gene Howe, Taddy Texan, Amarillo; Houston Hart, king of the wool and mohair country, San Angelo. The full program will contain the names of several weekly writers with plenty of speaking and writing power. There'll be enough business and enough speeches to keep you interested, but not enough to bore you.

Entertainment. Midland is offering nearly anything you want. Free horse racing Friday afternoon; Midland says it's West Texas' leading racing event. A giant barbecue with trimmings Friday evening by the estimable Mr. Scarbauer. That annual Friday noon banquet. Annual dance, of course (plenty of partners promised Chief Host Paul Barron). Annual golf event Saturday, with Bill Parker cup at stake. Whadda you want?

Where Eight Died in Mexican Train Bombing

A twisted heap of wreckage was all that remained of the Vera Cruz-Mexico City express after a bomb had hurled the crack train from a bridge near Paso del Macho, killing eight and injuring 14. Coaches and Pullmans were flung down a 35-foot ravine and the wreckage burst into flames after an explosion in an oil tank next to the tender. Prominent political leaders were passengers and the bombing was attributed to their enemies.

Labor Safeguards Desired by FDR

New Line of Attack On Unemployment Is Hinted.

BALTIMORE, April 14 (AP)—Asserting that the era of "social pioneering is only at its beginning," President Roosevelt Monday night promised new consideration by his administration of a shorter work week, "adequate" minimum wages and a stabilization of annual employment.

Directly, the chief executive pledged himself to aims that once were those of the NRA before it was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

In a nationally broadcast speech before the Young Democratic Club of Maryland, which was preceded by a torchlight parade and other political fanfare, he hinted, however, at a new line of attack upon the unemployment problem.

In the form of a question, Mr. Roosevelt suggested that a deep dent could be made in the army of jobless by limiting employment to those over 18 and under 65 years of age.

"To that he added this indirect appeal: 'Industry cannot contribute in a great measure to the increase of employment if industry as a whole will undertake reasonable reductions of hours per week, while, at the same time, they keep an average individual's pay envelope at least as large as it is today.'

Addressing himself directly to the youth of the nation, the president, at this outset of his campaign for re-election, gave no direct word as to whether he would seek his NRA goals through legislative or only administrative action.

In advancing his new suggestion for an age limit of workers, Mr. Roosevelt posed the problem of assuring that the total production of the nation was back to the high point before the depression but that only 80 per cent as many human beings are engaged in turning out that production.

"We cannot legislate against greater efficiency nor can we legislate against the use of new tools—nor would we if we could," he said.

"Our working population increases every year, both because of population increase and because more and more women are working for wages. That is as it should be. But when we face our problems, these increases raise the question as to whether it is not possible and right to limit the active working ages at both ends.

REPUBLICAN PLAN HAS OPPOSITION

Buchanan Enters Fight Against Relief Work Ideas of GOP

WASHINGTON, April 14 (AP)—Powerful opposition from Chairman Buchanan of the house appropriations committee, today confronted the Republican proposal to decentralize the relief administration.

Buchanan contended that the work relief control could not be decentralized as much as it should be without sacrificing safeguards on the expenditures of federal funds.

FRANCE WAVERS Is Told To Decide On Italian, Britain As Ally

By Associated Press
The League of Nations attempted through direct negotiations today to determine the prospect for peace between Italy and Ethiopia. Salvador de Madariaga of Spain, president of the committee of 13, discussed chances with the Ethiopian envoy while the Italian representative left Rome for similar talks.

France wavered between supporting Italy or Britain after receiving point-blank demands for an immediate choice.

"Apparently ignoring the Geneva efforts for peace, Italy continued tightening its grip in East Africa, sending planes into the interior to terrorize natives.

Authoritative sources said the league sanctions committee is in session to consider stronger measures against Italy.

BRITAIN UNITING DESERT TRIBESMEN

PARIS, April 14 (AP)—A proposal for a "United States of Arabia" is being promoted by Britain in an effort to align Arabs against further Italian expansion in the Red sea region, nationalist sources said today.

OKLAHOMA YOUTH FREED OF CHARGE

Jury Fails to Convict Boley For Murder of His Father

WOODWARD, Okla., April 14 (AP)—Russell Boley, 19, was acquitted by a Woodward county district court jury Monday of a murder charge in the slaying of his father, John Boley, of near Mutual, on the night of Feb. 5, 1935.

The jury had deliberated for nine hours.

County Attorney J. G. Young refused to say immediately whether he would press a second murder charge against the youth in the death of his mother.

The bodies of Boley's parents, wealthy Woodward county farmers, were found in the smoldering ruins on their farm home.

Declaring he was "relieved and happy," Boley announced immediately after the trial he would go to Kansas City, Mo., where he said he had the promise of employment.

WASHINGTON. "Bigness" in agriculture is still far from a possibility of comparison with "bigness" in industry. The trend, however, is in that direction.

Revelation of huge benefit checks paid by AAA called attention to the growth of corporate farming and large farm land holdings. It was also shown that both the number and total of such payments were quite small in comparison with the number and total of all payments.

Icebergs Do Not Worry Skippers When Famed Ice Patrol Is On Job

NEW YORK.—"Growlers drifting southward" is the report from Commander Russel L. Lucas of the U. S. Coast Guard.

The story makes good political propaganda, but Secretary Henry A. Wallace has asked critics how they would limit production without cooperation of the large farms.

Information as to the concentration of farm holdings is limited. In the northeastern area of 22 states, reaching as far west and as far south as Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Kentucky, and Virginia it was found that from 1930 to 1935 the number of farms operated by full owners had increased 12 per cent, while those operated by tenants increased 20 per cent.

Percentage of total farms occupied by tenants increased less than 2 per cent. There were fewer manager-operated farms and the total number of these is less than 1 per cent, but the average acreage of this type of farm increased 12.5 per cent while the average acreage of all farms was declining 6.6 per cent. Yet manager-operated holdings as a whole declined 8 per cent.

The Fat of the Land. Congressman Buckler of Minnesota, explaining a previous crack about eastern plutocrats and half-fed farmers who feed them.

"The most I know about the fat of the land is that last fall, when I went down to a hotel on Fifth Avenue, they were paying $7 for a bed and $1.50 for meals, and us farmers cannot do that, so I expect that they were living on the fat of the land."

Department of agriculture economists consequently like to point out that there has been no real change since 1929 in a situation which then found that 19 per cent of retail trade was in automobiles and related sales and 22 per cent in food, but the 92 per cent of the automobile industry was in the hands of three boards of directors, while the production of food was spread among 6,000,000 farmers.

Bill Takes Care of Labor. Perhaps the last piece of legislation to be introduced by Senator Edward P. Costigan of Colorado, who has just announced that he will not run for re-election because of failing health, is a sugar bill bearing his name which is remarkable for its provisions for laborers in the cane and beet fields.

Few if any measures passed by congress have ever been so comprehensive in covering agricultural or other labor.

The bill is designed to remove legal doubt as to AAA's sugar quotas by writing quotas into the bill instead of leaving them to executive discretion and to supplement soil conservation payments of about 12 1-2 cents a hundred pounds by an additional maximum of 37 1-2 cents.

Payments would be conditional on maximum wages to be set by the secretary of agriculture, no employment of children under 14, an eight-hour day for children between 14 and 16 and the growing of enough cane or beets to meet allotments, but not exceed them, in order to have a continuous supply of sugar at prices "fair to producers and consumers."

Settlement with laborers must be made before payments are received and labor disputes would have to be submitted to the secretary. These provisions apply for Puerto Rico, Hawaii and continental United States.

Big Shots Can Get Rest. Congress recently passed laws which permit 28 days of annual leave (vacation time to be taken all at once or now and then) for federal employees and 15 days of sick leave, replacing the economy act provision for 15 days' annual leave and 30 of sick leave.

This doesn't apply to cabinet members and other high officials. But hold your tears. The big shots usually manage to get away whenever they like. There is usually an inspection trip that can be taken to Florida, the west coast, or somewhere if one wants to rest. Or one frankly can go on a vacation.

Attorney General Cummings returned the other day from a six-week vacation in Florida. The department of justice functioned as usual in his absence.

S. Coast Guard cutter Ponchartrain, cruising a monotonous beat off the Grand Banks, mean weather factory of the North Atlantic.

"Growlers" are icebergs' pups. They break off and form a mosquito fleet advance guard for the annual attack of the frozen dreadnoughts on transatlantic shipping.

Time was when the appearance of icebergs would have chilled the heart of many a salty sea captain. But the fear of collision with an iceberg is now scarcely more than an old timer's memory, thanks to the work of the ice patrol.

This annual springtime chore of the U. S. Coast Guard is at present being maintained by the Ponchartrain and her sister ship, the Champlain. Each year at this time the cutters sail forth to spot and report the southern limit of the icebergs that swarm down from Greenland's icy mountains to threaten transatlantic shipping. Before the Ponchartrain and the Champlain return next July or August, their wakes will have cross-hatched 250,000 square miles of the North Atlantic, and thousands of trans-oceanic passengers will be safe from the sudden death of the sea.

Started After Titanic Disaster. That safety dates back to Sunday, April 14, 1912. Loss of ships from collision with icebergs was a supinely accepted hazard until the Titanic, brand new pride of the transatlantic trade, had her bottom ripped off by a devil's can-opener of granite-hard ice. She sank with 1517 men, women and children. Fourteen maritime nations decided to do something about it. A conference established the international ice observation service to patrol the steamer lanes during the iceberg season. The cost is shared according to shipping tonnage and the actual patrol is made by cutters of the U. S. Coast Guard. And in 21 years, not a life has been lost from collision with bergs.

On a navigation chart Commander Lucas traced the trail of the icebergs. Glaciers, actually whole mountain ranges of solid ice, creep slowly over the edge of Greenland's high cliffs. They move only a few inches a year, but eventually edge out over the headland. Finally the brittle overhang breaks off and, with a barrage of a million thunders goes plunging into the sea. Now it is an iceberg, literally a mountain of ice. Like a submarine with only her periscope showing, the berg hides most of its half-million tons beneath the surface. Therein lies the danger, for the sub-surface bulk may have a jagged edge shelf extending far beyond the peak that thrusts above the waves. That's why Commander Lucas and Commander G. W. McLane of the Champlain will not permit their ships to approach closer than half a mile to one of the glassy monsters.

Keep Sharp Lookout for Bergs. From 4000 to 5000 icebergs are launched each year, but only about 300 or so usually reach the steamer lanes to menace ships. Last season was the worst since 1929, with over 400 located and reported. The patrol reports sent liners way down to route A, the southernmost course. Route "A" is 200 miles south of the regular track and adds 130 miles to the crossing. The fact that liner captains follow the recommendation of the ice patrol without question indicates their fear of the Titanic's fate.

The success of the patrol depends on one pair of eyes, those of the man in the crow's nest. So far no dependable mechanical device has been perfected for locating unseen bergs, although some progress has been made with sonic depth-finders. The common belief that proximity to an iceberg may be detected by a drop in the temperature of the water was declared fallacious by Commander Lucas. He explained that water temperatures frequently vary, especially where the cold Labrador current meets the warm waters of the Gulf Stream.

Trying to Destroy Them is Futile. The ice patrol veteran also grayed the bright colors of his uniform's romantic picture of the patrol's activities. Questions were asked in hopes of eliciting yarns of derring-do on the high seas, with the doughty cutters racing out to actual combat with the iceberg fleet. The happy ending of the scenario always showed the berg demolished by the gunfire of the gallant lads aboard the cutter.

Captain Lucas patiently pointed out that icebergs are actually mountains, and that there is just as much chance of destroying one with shells from a five-inch gun as there would be of leveling off Mount Shasta with field artillery.

Gunfire and dynamite are ineffectual. Newsreel shots of artillery assaults on icebergs were taken when the bergs were being shelled for scientific observation. The ice patrol merely rides herd on the icebergs, reporting their positions and probable drift in four daily radio broadcasts. The cattle-range metaphor was particularly apt last year when the Ponchartrain lassoed a berg. But Commander Lucas doesn't want any more of that, thank you.

"We ran two 28-inch lines 250 fathoms long around her," he said. "Just as we completed the loop, the iceberg turned over. It was only luck that the submerged shelf didn't pick up our ship and smash it."

Fog is Patrol's Worst Handicap. But to hear him tell it, the ice patrol usually is a prosaic routine assignment. "It may be a bit more strenuous, but it is no more dangerous than other coast guard activities," he said.

Of course there's always fog. The patrol's critical area is around the Grand Banks which nearly three days out of four are shrouded in fog that makes London's pea-soupers look like the white blaze of the tropic sun. Fog where your hand disappears from in front of your face—and the only safety from bergs is in sighting them at least half a mile away. There was that stretch last year when the Banks were blanketed in fog for twelve days and nights. Commander Lucas was on duty practically all this time, snatching his meals and an occasional forty winks in an emergency cabin erected on the bridge. But that's just prosaic routine to the ice patrol men.

Berg Forecasts Near Perfection. For thrills Commander Lucas casts wistful eyes on the greener waters of the other fellow's maritime pasture. Enthusiasm lights his face when he speaks of the work of the oceanographers who are plugging on the job of iceberg prediction. To him that's the next great job of the Coast Guard—to foretell, as the weatherman does with storms, the number of icebergs and the course of their drift.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything).

I still hold on to the belief that we are going to get a rain in the very near future. Just to get something definite before the house, let's set the time for on or before Thursday evening at 6 o'clock.

If the rain falls within that time, I will reward you by writing only one paragraph for the following day.

Anyone doubting that there will be a race meet here May 22-30 should have seen how quickly the merchants put up $1,000 yesterday for a big handicap race the last day of the meet. That should attract the best horses that ever ran a race west of Arlington Downs and east of Santa Anita.

It will supervise elections and see that "elements favorable to the campesinos" are chosen to municipal offices in order to help the Agrarians "to obtain their rights." In addition the organization will undertake the task of educating Agrarians, a majority of whom are now illiterate and many do not speak or understand more than a few words of Spanish.

In general the army reserve is primarily intended to serve as a rural police force and to work for the organization and education of Agrarians. At present there is no thought that the reserve will necessarily be used for national defense or to supplant the work of the regular army, although, such a possibility is not discounted and for that reason the members of the reserve will be given a thorough military training.

the past few weeks. A number of violent incidents have occurred creating one of the most serious problems with which the government of President Lazaro Cardenas has to contend.

Most sanguinary of the disorders was a fight between townspeople and members of an official educational mission Sunday, March 22, at Ciudad Gonzales—the new name for the century old mining town of San Felipe Torres Mochas, in the state of Guanajuato—where sixteen people were killed and at least twenty wounded.

Taking into consideration the possibility of serious repercussions, President Cardenas hurried to Ciudad Gonzales from the neighboring state of Queretaro and made personal investigation of the cause of the clash.

The results of his findings, which he announced in a speech from the altar of the town church, was that Catholics coming from mass "and urged on by the priests" had "unjustifiably" attacked the teachers with rifles, pistols, stones and clubs.

After ordering the priests to leave town within twenty-four hours Cardenas gave an emphatically worded statement of the purposes of the government's socialistic education program, which Catholics oppose on the grounds that it "teaches atheism."

"It is a lie," the president said, "that socialistic education seeks the dissolution of homes and a lie that it perverts children and takes them from their parents. Socialistic education prepares the child so that he will know how, as a man, to fulfill with a fraternal spirit of solidarity his duties toward his class comrades."

Referring to the army reserve and to the arming of peasants, Cardenas said: "we are putting arms into the hands of the masses so they can defend the patrimony which the Revolution is giving to them. Acts such as just occurred in this town are the best justification of the policy of the government."

He instructed peasants to count on the army for defense of their class interests and said the army and the reserve would protect school teachers, "who are instructing the masses in the fulfillment of their duties without harming in any way their religious beliefs."

The new army reserve, Cardenas has stated, also will be called on

Harris County Board Record Cited by Gov.

AUSTIN. (P)—Gov. Allred cited achievements of the Harris county parole board as evidence of the value of county volunteer boards established throughout the state to aid released convicts.

In Harris county, 15 parolees were placed under the supervision of the board. C. W. McPhail, chairman, reported that employment was obtained for all the men and in only two instances of a temporary nature.

Jobs varied in nature and included common labor, farming, cemetery caretaking, house painting, selling, carpentering and painting.

"The work of the Harris county board is excellent," said the Governor, "and the example so set will be a mark for other county boards to copy."

Every year, the Humble Company receives thousands of voluntary comments on Humble Service Check Cards from Texas motorists and out-of-state visitors. These cards tell their own story of courteous, helpful service, of clean stations, of spotless restrooms. Humble Station men take a justifiable pride in these comments from their customers.

Humble Service Stations are carefully designed and landscaped to make them attractive features of the neighborhoods in which they are located. They are fully equipped for your comfort and the expert care your car requires. Humble men are proud of the Stations which they man, and this Centennial year, they're putting their best foot forward.

In a recent study of Humble Service Check Cards mailed to the Company by Humble customers, nearly half the comments complimented Humble Service Station men on their friendly courtesy. These trained men render the kind of service which motorists find helpful.

We make no exaggerated advertising claims for Humble products, but we do say, you'll find them definitely second to none. We ask you to try them in your own automobile; to test Humble Motor oils and Humble motor fuels under your own driving conditions. When you do, we're confident you'll come back for more.

"Our restrooms are as clean and as sanitary as the bathroom in your home"

"We've had many compliments on the cleanliness of restrooms in our Humble Service Stations. Hometowns here in Texas have got so they expect clean restrooms when they stop at a Humble Station, and out-of-state visitors always make some comment. A lady from Illinois, for example, wrote us that Humble restrooms were the cleanest and the nicest she had found in a motor trip

We're doing all we can to make driving an automobile in Texas pleasant, comfortable and carefree, to make the Humble Service Station a real oasis of the highway. We invite you to drive in where you see our Humble sign, to try Humble service and Humble products—we're confident that both will please you!"

A TEXAS INSTITUTION MANNED BY TEXANS

1100 Home Financing Companies Operate Throughout Nation

Almost 1100 mutual thrift and mortgage-loan associations, designed to protect people's savings and to lower the cost of small home financing, are now operating in cities and towns in 44 states of the Nation under supervision of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. More than half of the number are new associations organized with the encouragement of this agency of the Government in localities where mortgage money has been scarce. The remainder are old-established building and loan associations which have voluntarily transferred from state to Federal charter. The converted associations include some of the larger and most successful institutions in the country, most of which have been in business for decades, while many of the new Federal Savings and Loan Associations are comparatively small.

Strong Federal assistance in the field of thrift and long-term home financing followed closely on the Government intervention in the banking crisis of early 1933. In June of that year Congress provided for the organization by private citizens of local Federal Savings and Loan associations, described as an improved form of the familiar building and loan institutions that have developed in America over the past century and which in recent years have financed close to one half of all small homes constructed in the cities and towns of this country.

Although conducted on uniform principles, subject to Federal examination, and with the privilege of Government subscription to shares if necessary to increase their lending funds, they are strictly local institutions, receiving the investments of the citizens of their community, and managed by their own officers elected by the shareholders. Their lending is confined to their respective communities and the neighboring area.

For the protection of the great numbers of investors in these associations, who come from all stations in life but chiefly from the ranks of wage earners and small business men, the Government has surrounded their operation with many safeguards. Their methods and practices must conform with regulations that are founded upon lessons gained in the long experience of the more successful associations of this general type. All investors share equally in the profits, according to the amount of their shares, with the exception of a special bonus for systematic saving.

The success of Government-sponsored insurance of deposits in commercial banks, begun in 1933, led Congress to provide a somewhat similar form of safety for the long-term savings of investors in Federal Savings and Loan associations and other institutions serving the same purpose. The result was the creation in 1934 of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, a governmental agency with paid-in capital of $100,000,000, which insures each person's account in a Federal association against any loss up to $5000. No matter what the amount of the shareholder's investment—$15, $125, $500, $3000 and so on—it is protected up to a maximum of $5000 in case of default by the institution. Each insured association pays an annual premium to the Insurance Corporation.

This instance of shares is also open to state-chartered associations of the building and loan type which choose to apply for the protection and are approved after examination as to their condition. Approval for insurance is testimony to the quality of the assets and the management of the insured associations. To date, many old-established, state-chartered associations have become insured. Including the membership of both Federal Savings and Loan associations and state-chartered units, there are now approximately 1,250,000 individuals whose savings are protected by such insurance.

Equally important advantages come to the borrower—the home owner and prospective home owner—from the Federal Savings and Loan associations in their communities. In the first place the organization of new associations and the strengthening of established institutions by conversion open new resources of local credit that have been sorely needed for loans for the construction, purchase and repair of homes as well as the refinancing of mortgage loans that have come due in the form of shares and numerous other desirable factors in the operation of federalized associations have brought to these units a new flow of

Travel to Mexico Questions Answered

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Constantly increasing inquiries about travel conditions on the highway between Texas and Mexico City were answered today in a form statement from the Mexican embassy.

Although the route from Laredo to the capital is not completed and the official opening will await the construction of one unfinished link, Mexican authorities here issued the following suggestions to tourists:

Automobile travelers entering Mexico are given permission to keep their cars in the country 90 days, extensions for an equal period may be obtained upon written application to the customs house issuing the original permit.

The permit fee is $3.60 Mexican currency, (about 85 cents U. S.), no bond or deposit is required, providing the motorist leaves at the customs house of entry his registration and car ownership papers, which are returned to him when he leaves the country with his automobile.

Officials said when such documentation is lacking, the owner is required to make a cash deposit or bond equal to the amount of import duties on the car.

Motorists should provide themselves with a tourist card, obtainable at any Mexican consulate for a $1 fee. No passport is required from American citizens, but documentary proof of nationality should be carried.

funds representing the savings of hundreds of thousands of people.

Assurance of moderate interest rates on their loans is another great benefit to borrowers from these associations. Incidental loan costs are small. In contrast to the practice of short-term lending which has caused foreclosure to home owners in the past, loans by Federal associations are made on the monthly reduction plan of repayment by which, over a period of from five to twenty years, a payment of a small fixed amount, adapted to the ability of the borrower, is made every month. The amount roughly corresponds to the rental charge on the same type of home and includes both interest and a payment on the principal. Month by month the interest requirement decreases, leaving still more to be credited to the reduction of the principal. This convenient method is safe for both the borrower and lender. Practice of this plan, which has been developed from centuries of experience in home loans, and is now being widely adopted by all classes of lending institutions, leads the borrower economically to free and clear ownership of his home.

3 Designs Account Of Beauty of New U. S. Post Offices

WASHINGTON, April 9 (U.P.)—Three basic architectural designs account for the simplicity and beauty of lines of the hundreds of federal postoffice buildings now springing up all over the United States, it was revealed today.

The depression and the PWA have made new postoffice buildings as common as "little red schoolhouses" once were. The procurement division of the treasury department has awarded 780 construction contracts since February 14, 1934. A great majority of these have been for post-offices. Several hundred remain to be built.

The outward appearances of these structures are almost as diversified as the contracts are numerous. Yet, they all trace their origin back to three basic designs: the Colonial, found most frequently in the Atlantic seaboard area; the Contemporary or modern, found in all communities of the country and the Spanish or Mission type, in the Southwest.

Local Scenes Studied.

"This is not an attempt to make 'canned' architectural drawings or designs," one of the chief architects of the procurement division explained. "It is an attempt to make the postoffice buildings fit or blend into their surroundings as if they had grown up out of the ground in their respective localities—in short, local products."

The procurement division has developed scores of designs of each type of architecture used. In some localities where two types of architecture prevail, a postoffice building in which both types are blended may be constructed.

"In considering plans for a post-office building in any city or town, there are three basic requirements which we must take into account," an architect explained. "We must consider the total floor space required or likely to be required in the reasonably near future in that locality by the government. We must take into account the historic or traditional type of architecture in that locality. We also must consider climatic conditions."

Space Requirements Surveyed.

Space requirements by the government have been carefully surveyed in every city and town of the United States. A "space control" department has been set up within the procurement division to inventory these space requirements and the space available. This "space control" department allots the space occupied by government bureaus and agencies throughout the country.

"We have found," the architect explained, "that when we take the three basic requirements for post-office buildings in two or three hundred cities, itemize them on cards and shuffle those cards thoroughly, they fall into a comparatively few designs. From those basic designs we have worked out a multitude of designs and types which fit virtually any requirement."

The smallest fog particles have been measured by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It was found that 25,000 of them could be placed on the head of a pin.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Unless his managers change their minds, Barney Ross will defend the welterweight championship he took from Jimmy McLarnin in the Irishman's old home town, Vancouver, B. C., in July.

McLarnin will not be in the opposite corner, for a change. In his place will be another and newer Vancouver product, Gordon Wallace. Ross is offered $35,000 to permit Wallace to come in at 147 pounds, the purse to be poised before the Lollapalooza of the Loop leaves Chicago.

The Pacific coast's first title match to be held north of San Francisco should be a sure-fire success, but there is no chance of a financial ship-up. It is to be backed by the Vancouver Jubilee Sports Committee, which has a fund of $200,000 available for attractions. Ross' handlers, Sam Pian and Art Winch, indicate that they will accept the offer.

Heavyweights Menopelize New York
Vancouver is one of Ross' favorite cities. It should be. Ross got rich in three engagements with McLarnin, and the $35,000 bid from the city that turned out the heavy-listed star will come in handy in an outdoor season which will find the heavyweights occupying the center of the platform in New York.

Wallace is no stranger to Ross, who recently took a debatable decision from the British Columbian in a 10-round non-title scrap in Vancouver. Wallace has dropped only one other verdict in four years—to Ceferino Garcia, the Filipino. McLarnin, with the venerable Pop Foster ever on the lookout for a pull in poundage, returns to the wars after a year's layoff to engage the much lighter lightweight leader, Tony Canzoneri, at Madison Square Garden, May 8.

It would appear that the Ross-Wallace battle would stir up some business for McLarnin at home. Particularly if the good people of Vancouver wish to have tight-folgers help them celebrate their city's fiftieth anniversary.

Turf Court Game

Falls Behind
Another sign that the turf court game is rapidly falling behind comes with the Eastern Lawn Tennis Association's competitive list. It includes only nine competitions on grass, or less than a third, for 29 tournaments are slated for hard court surfaces.

The famous old metropolitan championship, which has experienced vicissitudes in the last decade, has been revived. This title dates back 40 years, when it was established by the now affluent West Side Tennis Club, long since moved to Forest Hills, but then a struggling young organization possessed of five clay courts, only one of which was good, at 89th street and Central Park West.

In the old days, Davis Cup players won the metropolitan championship. Holcomb Ward, Harold H. Hackett, Raymond D. Little, and William A. Larned captured it. Walter Merrill Hall, president of the U. S. L. T. A., prevailed in 1917. Ellsworth Vines scored in 1930.

Favor Shorter Training Seasons
Several major league clubs plan to curtail training next spring. Rogers Hornsby agrees with Tyrus Raymond Cobb, who contended that three weeks were enough for the conditioning period.

The principal reason why the magistrates keep their arrays in the south for six or seven weeks is ballyhoo. Now some suspect that the opening of the season is overballyhooped. Several managers have had their fill of unfavorable weather and cow pasture parks en route north. Two or three favor jumping direct from the original training base to the site of the curtain raiser.

Grandma Bradford

What makes her telephone calls "tick"?

Grandma Bradford can remember, with a smile, a good many of the "growing pains" of the telephone service.

The calls she placed over the crude little box that was her first telephone weren't always very clear, nor very fast. Sometimes even the repairman was "stumped" by the mysterious things that went wrong with the instrument. And "long distance" was an adventure she seldom undertook.

It's different now, we're glad to say.

Telephone folks have been at work on Grandma Bradford's telephone service for more than 50 years. Making her calls clearer. Making them faster. Trying to hold their cost down, in the face of increasing complexity in the telephone system, to a price she is willing and able to pay.

It hasn't been an easy job. Thousands of problems have had to be solved for the men and women who manufacture the tailor-made calls that Grandma Bradford uses to say . . .

"Measles? Now don't worry, Mary. Just keep that youngster in bed and tell him his Grandma will be right over!"

A fine thing it has been for all the Grandma Bradfords who use the telephone service, that these Southwestern Bell men and women had back of them the resources of American Telephone and Telegraph Company; with the Bell Telephone Laboratories at one elbow and Western Electric at the other.

Technical advice and help, a constant stream of inventions and improvements, the benefits of mass manufacturing and purchasing from these sources have aided in making her telephone service better, and in keeping down rising costs.

Perhaps that's why Grandma Bradford now has full faith in the thousands of men and women, the millions of dollars in wire, cables, poles, switchboards and delicate machinery which enable her to lift the receiver and in a few seconds have her "Mary" on the line.

was reported present in cores from 4,498 to 4,521 in Humble No. 1 Jessie M. Spinks, mile and a half north-west extension test of the Means pool in northern Andrews County. Verdict on the well should be known some time this week.

Farther north, midway between the Means pool and the Walsh and Adams gasser at Seminole, Landreth No. 1 Kirk, only active wildcat in Gaines County, is drilling below 1,560 feet in red rock. It is in the southwest corner of section 22, block A-21, public school land.

Cleaning out is still in progress in the Yoakum County pool opener, Honolui and Cascade No. 1 Bennett, crew having reached 5 feet off bottom this morning. Rated at 235 barrels per day, the northern discovery will probably run tubing in the next day or so. Additional storage has been erected at the rig.

Ector Test at 3,740
The interesting mile and a quarter extension test northwest of the discovery well in Ector's Foster pool, Stanolind No. 1-B E. F. Cowden, in the northeast corner of section 14, block 43, township 2 south, T. & P. survey, is drilling below 3,740 feet in anhydrite.

In the North Cowden pool of Ector, Stanolind No. 30 J. M. Cowden in the center of the northeast of the southwest of section 35, block 43, township 1 north, T. & P. survey, reduced hole at 4,015 and is drilling ahead in lime below that depth.

URGE CITIES BUILD SEAPLANE BASES

WPA Funds May Be Procured By Places Desiring Facilities

Seaplane bases are eligible projects for development with WPA funds, and the Bureau of Air Commerce, which passes on technical phases of airport projects for the WPA, hopes that many cities will provide facilities for marine aircraft in this program, according to an announcement today by Eugene L. Vidal, director of Air Commerce in the Department of Commerce.

"Thirty-two civilian seaplane bases now are available in 14 states," Vidal said. "These bases, which provide servicing facilities for seaplanes and amphibians and have ramps or marine railways for storing marine aircraft, have been established in some cases, for a long time. They were provided by cities and commercial interests on their own initiative. If cities now take an interest in securing seaplane bases under the WPA program, this number can be considerably augmented."

"In addition to the 32 listed seaplane bases, there are other localities which provide sheltered areas and bays for tying up seaplanes and which may have some sort of an arrangement whereby fuel may be procured by small boat, but which do not provide ramps or regular servicing. Such localities would be ideal for development under the present program.

"The number of existing bases is small in comparison with the possibilities that exist for seaplane flying. Any city of 4,000 or more population, situated on a harbor, or beside a river which has sufficient clear space for seaplane landings, would find a seaplane base a valuable addition to its transportation facilities.

"Even though they are not numerous, the 32 existing seaplane bases make the establishment of any new one a more worthwhile undertaking, because there are already bases at other cities to which seaplanes may fly."

Two types of seaplane bases are suggested by the bureau, which has drawings and specifications. These will be furnished to interested city officials.

Type I, a "Seaplane Landing Float," consists of four 10 by 22-foot wooden floats of low freeboard, together with a suitable gangway, mooring booms and other accessories, capable of being attached to any bulkhead or pier. Such a base will serve as a suitable landing for all types of seaplanes, flying boats Masterson pools. He is a former mayor of Fort Stockton, and is at present president of the Fort Stockton Lions Club.

In making his announcement, Mr. Winfield stated that he had no formal statement for issuance at present, but would state his position on various matters of legislation at a later date.

Mr. Winfield made the following statement to The Reporter-Telegram Tuesday:

"If I am successful in being elected to this office, I pledge the people of the District my whole time and attention to the office during the sessions of the Legislature, and will support any measure that proves beneficial to this District, and oppose any that is detrimental. I feel that I am qualified to know the needs of the District, and to the best of my ability will work with the view of being of some real service to the people in the District."

and amphibians, and when properly located will permit passengers to get ashore at the heart of any waterfront city. The Bureau of Air Commerce estimates that the Type I base can be built and installed as a WPA project for $3166.

Type II, a "Marine Railway Seaplane Storage Base," consists of a marine railway with a 40 by 40-foot wood planked car capable of hauling seaplanes or flying boats weighing up to 20,000 lbs. out of the water. It includes a large concrete parking area ready for the erection of a hangar, together with small handling dollies for moving ships, and all necessary machinery. The Bureau of Air Commerce estimates that such a base can be built and installed as a WPA project for $30,000.

Citing other advantages of seaplane bases as works projects, Vidal pointed out:

"They do not detract from present airport programs, since additional funds can generally be allocated to cover them. They require a minimum of supervision, and can be started immediately on the basis of Bureau of Air Commerce forms, drawings and specifications. Much of the work can be done under cover, thus providing for progress during inclement weather. They provide a means of bringing relief work to small towns—towns not large enough to warrant airport projects.

"The floats need not be confined to aviation uses. They also serve admirably for use by persons going ashore from motor boats, and it is possible for the city to realize an income on the facilities through charges for their use by operators."

"Jumbo" Will Be Feature at Ft. Worth

FORT WORTH, April 14.—"Jumbo," a new and different type of show that has made theatrical history at the New York Hippodrome, will be among the many attractions at the Fort Worth Frontier Centennial which opens July 1.

Billy Rose, creator of this fabulous circus-musical and director general for the Frontier show here, announced today that he has arranged to bring the show world sensation to Fort Worth intact.

It will be housed in an old-fashioned circus building, the first of its kind to be built in the United States in 50 years and a type of structure remembered only by those who were show minded when Texas was the last frontier.

"Jumbo," the "Frontier Follies," the "Last Frontier," a musical rodeo, and such other attractions as will be produced in the old dance hall will make the Fort Worth Frontier Centennial the amusement center of the nation this summer.

Stars of the stage, screen and radio with such orchestras as Paul Whiteman's, hundreds of beautiful girls and the outstanding rodeo performers of the world are now being assembled for these amusement attractions.

The out-door cafe-theater, seating 3,000 persons at tables on a huge terrace arrangement that affords a perfect view of the dance floor and revolving stage, floating on water and 130 feet in diameter, is one of the huge amusement plants under construction. It will be the scene of the "Frontier Follies."

The "Last Frontier" will be presented in another huge building and will blend rodeo stunts with a blazing-whirling action dramatization of Texas the last Frontier.
