CHAPTER XIX

hadn't expected anything half so lovely." She could see his great eyes rolling delightedly at her in the mirror. "It is, miss," he agreed. He was tooing the car carefully through a narrow lane, avoiding the sharp branches that reached out and that might have scratched the glossy surface.

There were steps in the hall and the blur of the maid's voice speaking. "Ah, how do you do," Susan faced Mrs. Heath, cool and arrogant in fawn-colored tweed. "Good morning," she said. "I'm very much annoyed at his working at all and the door forbad it. But he insists. He has a very bad throat."

roundings as she worked. The man coughed once or twice, harshly and deeply, and she looked up. "Aren't you tired? Perhaps we had better stop now." Heath frowned. "I want to get this off my mind."

"I'm sorry you haven't time to see it," he said formally. "Some other day perhaps." "I was amazed at the light that glowed in the girl's lambent eyes. "Oh, I should love it," she said eagerly. "I have always loved flowers so much but we have such a tiny back yard and its too shady for anything to grow except a few violets in the spring. Nothing," she finished softly, "could be more wonderful than to have a home like this and be able to stay in it." He stared at her. "You really feel that?" he said incredulously, Susan nodded.

Heath went slowly back up the stairs. He sat at the window of his dressing room where he could glimpse the blue water of which Susan had dreamed. Below him the lawn sloped, a clipped green miracle to the vegetable garden and the tennis courts beyond. He rested his head on his hands and sighed. Wonderful to be young like the girl who had just left, he reflected. How the color had come and gone in her cheeks when he spoke of the flowers! How her eyes had glowed. He tried to remember when, if ever, things had seemed as important to him as they seemed to this child.

There was something about Susan Carey that set her apart from the crowd. Heath didn't quite know what it was. Why had Ruth disliked her so, he wondered? Surely she was too unimportant to mean anything in Ruth's life. Heath sighed again and tried to settle himself for the rest the doctor had ordered, but somehow sleep would not come. The pearl-pale face of the girl wavered between him and his dream. (To Be Continued)

STRONGEST SAND BELT CLUBS MEET HERE FOR TOURNEY SUNDAY

TEXON WON LOOP OVER COLORADO LAST SEASON

The Sunday engagement on the country club links of Midland of the Texon and local golf aggregations means more than just another meeting of clubs on the Sand Belt Golf association schedule—it indicates a close match between what are described over the association as the two strongest clubs this year.

Texon was the nemesis of the association last year, emerging from a play-off with Colorado to win the first cup offered by the loop.

Texon maintains her club intact, even though losing to Lamesa here recently in her first match. The day was windy and no club plays in the gale like Lamesa. The Texon club is better balanced than most in the association. Every man plays about the same match as another, and this is decidedly in favor of the invaders, particularly as each is recognized as an excellent golfer.

Midland, on the contrary, has a club that is made up of greater and lesser luminaries. Ellis Cowden, C. L. Jackson, Delo Douglas, Frank Day, and Billy Moran rate in the first mention, with Joe Chambers, Red Knight and Arch Thomas bringing up the other. The loss of H. S. Forgeron from the last year's group was a blow and one that will be severely felt, it is feared.

On the other hand, the remaining members of last year's club are much improved. All are hitting the ball solidly, though some of the new members are a bit erratic at times. Sandy Auchenlomie, golf professional at the course, says all are making improvement and playing nice games.

While the club is concentrating for the Sunday match, challenge rounds come up Friday, when other players of the club bid for places on the team. Particularly are J. P. Blount, J. H. McClure and E. M. Miller forging to the challenge front, with Fred Chapman, William Simpson and Harry Adams running close behind. Chapman and Simpson are long distance hitters, but are not able to play frequently because of business taking them out of the city.

The Sunday matches will begin promptly at 1 o'clock.

Midland Leading In Belt Percentages

Midland now stands at the top of the Sand Belt, through the club's sweep of the Odessa match two Sundays ago.

The standing, by points of the association, follows:

Midland	36
Big Spring	32
Lamesa	25
Sweetwater	25
Snyder	19
Texon	12
Colorado	8
Odessa	8

Results of matches played thus far this season (each club having played only one match):

Midland beat Odessa 36-8.

Big Spring won from Colorado, 25-12.

Lamesa trounced Texon 25-19.

Sweetwater copped from Snyder, 25-19.

Interest Picks up On Club Ladder

On the ladder at the country club there has been a minor shake-up with all evidence pointing to a considerable temblor Friday when more challenge matches are played.

Billy Moran beat Frank Day, one up, for third place. Bill shot a 78 and Frank a 79.

Then Delo Douglas beat Day, one up on the 18th hole, both shooting 75.

C. L. Jackson beat Ellis Cowden, four and three, and was one over par through the 15th hole, where the match ended.

With Blount, McClure and Miller after the seventh and eighth places on the club, business is picking up.

GEORGE SISLER READY TO STAY IN SMALL LEAGUE; WILL PLACE HIS CLUB FAR OUT IN RUNNING, HE INFORMS

DALLAS, Texas. (UP)—George Harold Sisler, one of the greatest players developed in the big leagues, has come to the Texas league determined to carry his Shreveport club to the championship and as willing not to return to the big leagues.

Sisler, in the big leagues from 1915 to 1930, is player-manager of the Shreveport club. He has enrolled several former stars of the big leagues on his club.

The famous first baseman is content, he said, with managing a Class A club. He played last year with Rochester of the International league, a class AA organization, and batted only .303 in 159 games.

"That is not a good enough average for a first baseman in Class AA company, not even a Sisler," he said smiling. "But I do not consider coming to the Texas league a step downward. We all have to move out of the big tent to make room for ambitious youngsters, who are faster than veterans so why not now. I still have my health, I have always been able to put in a full season of baseball, except for 1923 and I should be able to bang the ball in this league."

Sisler looks the picture of health. He is 39. Standing two inches less than six feet tall, he weighs 170 pounds. His hair is not grey, his eyes are clear. He covers first base with plenty of speed. His throwing arm is good and his batting eye appears all right.

When his club played in Dallas recently, Sisler rapped out several good hits. He hit when blows counted, a Sisler trait that made him a leader in the big leagues.

Sisler doesn't look for his club of veterans to wither under summer's heat.

The Shreveport roll now includes Aaron Ward, Wally Schang, George Harper and other veterans. They are a fighting crowd, anxious to play for Sisler. With them Sisler says his club is complete and he is looking for a couple of good pitchers.

The coming of Sisler to the Texas league is breaking down a tradition of baseball. Most stars end their playing days on the Pacific coast. Sisler doesn't intend to move. He can see no reason, he said, why he should follow this custom.

Some day Sisler looks for his three sons to carry the family name into the big leagues again.

"But my boys have got to be good players, if they follow the profession," he said. "I do not want mediocre players in my family."

A daughter and his wife are other members of the household. The children and Mrs. Sisler will move to Shreveport from St. Louis when vacation time comes.

Letter to Dan Howley, with an Apology to a Guy Who Is a Very Game . . .

This is an open letter to Dan Howley, ex-manager of the Grand Rapids, Toronto, St. Louis American league and other ball clubs, and now the pilot of what is beginning to look more and more like a baseball club in Cincinnati. It is somewhat in the nature of an apology, addressed to a game guy who never gives up. Here it is:

Dear Dan: When I saw you down at Tampa in the spring, the Reds didn't exactly appear to be the team the Cardinals would have to beat to win a pennant this year. To be candid, your club seemed to me to be the one assurance that any one of the other seven clubs wouldn't finish at the tail end of the National league procession.

You Didn't Fool . . .

When you said you would trade anybody for anything, even an old pocket knife, I'm afraid I didn't take you seriously enough. I didn't see what the Reds had to trade. I wrote that your club not only had no cash with which to buy.

Well, Dan, I was wrong. For it seems you not only had players to trade but had scratch with which to do business, too. In a month you changed the Reds from a drab and hopeless tail-end team to a colorful contender.

They'll Like the Babe . . .

When you traded Stripp, Cucinello and Sukeforth for Herman, Lombardi and Gilbert, a lot of the boys expressed the opinion that you had given Brooklyn the very power they needed for a pennant winner, but that remains to be seen. Herman will bat plenty of runs, and say, he's not as bad an outfielder as he's painted, at that. Anyway, with Herman you have somebody those Cincinnati fans will pay to see.

Now you have taken Hafey away from the Cardinals. Some of the St. Louis baseball writers commented that the St. Louis fans were not sorry to lose Chick because Hafey was a chronic conscientious objector to salary offers and they had no faith in him in a pinch. In four world series, it was pointed out, Hafey played in 24 games and hit only .285.

Be that as it may, Dan, when the Cards let Hafey go to Cincinnati, I think they gave you the very man who will beat them out of the pennant this year.

The Cardinals won the pennant, last year, you might say, by beating Cincinnati. Out of 22 games between the two teams, the Reds won only 2. I'm not trying to rub it in, mind you, because it is pretty generally realized that you were up against last year. Now with Hafey on your side, with that batting average of nearly .350, the Cardinals needn't expect more than an even break on the games with the Reds. It will mean a lot when the totals are added.

He'll Beat St. Louis . . .

Hafey will hit for you—and he will hit for you plenty in games between the Reds and Cardinals. Chick is like that. He will give you the best work of which he is capable, and when he's bearing down, he's tough. Hafey beat your club in plenty of games last year, as you know very well.

Well, that's about all there is to say at this time, I guess, except that I want to apologize for quitting on you in the spring. I should have known you better, after what you did for the Browns and for every other team you ever managed. You won, Dan. You fooled me. Pick up the marbles.

Gorki Berates Filmland Art

MOSCOW. (UP)—Motion pictures generally and Charlie Chaplin in particular were denounced recently by Maxim Gorki, the grand old man of Russian literature, as enemies of genuine art.

In an article aiming to prove the degeneracy of capitalist culture, Gorki said at one point:

"The cinema is gradually killing the high art of the theatre. There is no use speaking of the corrupting influence of the bourgeois cinema: it is such an obvious fact. Having exhausted all forms of sentimentalism, it is now beginning to demonstrate physical deformities, as evidenced by the cast collected for a Hollywood picture called 'Freaks.'

The great artists of the theater are replaced by Douglas Fairbanks, Harold Lloyd and other conjurers, headed by the monotonously sentimental and melancholy Charlie Chaplin, just as classical music is replaced by jazz and Stendal, Balzac, Dickens and Flaubert are replaced by Edgar Wallace and his kind."

Carrying his indictment further to other aspects of capitalist society, Gorki wrote:

"In the sphere of art the bourgeoisie is quite satisfied with collecting stamps and trolley-tickets, and at best, fake Old Masters. The real problems of science are alien to the bourgeois mind. Intellectual development and physical improvement of the human race, exhausted by capitalist oppression, the solution of the puzzle of the construction and growth of

Titanic Sank 20 Years Ago

NEW YORK. (UP)—The twentieth anniversary of the sinking of the steamship Titanic was observed April 14. The Titanic, then the largest ship in the world, struck an iceberg off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland and sank with a loss of 1,513 passengers out of the 2,224 aboard, in what is called the greatest of sea disasters.

The Titanic, trying for a speed record and enjoying fair weather and a calm sea, had covered 1,562 miles in its three days from port. On the fourth night, April 14, 1912, at 11:40 o'clock, the collision occurred. The steamship Carpathia picked up a distress call, but when that ship arrived three hours later, the Titanic had sunk, leaving only 711 survivors to be rescued.

Many heroic tales have been told of the disaster but the outstanding ones concern the musicians, who stood knee deep in water playing "Nearer, My God, to Thee"; the wife who refused to leave her husband; and the 50 happy-go-lucky bellboys who obeyed orders to keep out of the way in the cabin until the final "every man save himself" released them only to be drowned.

Among the passengers to perish were John Jacob Astor, Isidor Straus, Benjamin Guggenheim, and Major Archibald Butt, aide to President Taft.

The human organism—all this is as interesting to the bourgeoisie as to a Central African savage."

When you shop

Do you buy what you want or WHAT SOMEONE WANTS TO SELL YOU?

What a pleasure it is to shop when you know exactly what you want and can get it without trouble.

And what dissatisfaction often follows, if you let yourself be talked into buying some other article instead!

You probably know how disappointing such purchases often are. Most women do! For even at the grocery or drug store insistent salespeople will sometimes urge you to buy something "just as good" as the product you request.

When you ask for certain products which you know are dependable, why should any clerk insult your judgment by insisting that you take other brands instead?

There is always a reason. Usually a very selfish one!

At times, of course, a store "runs out" of the brand you ask for. But some stores seem to be deliberately "out" all the time. Others, even though they have the brand you want, will very often try by sheer persuasion to sell you some other in its place.

When this happens, frequently it is because the merchant reaps extra profit, or the clerk a commission, by switching you to the unknown and often inferior merchandise!

Many of the best stores everywhere forbid this practise. When you buy from them you are always sure of getting exactly what you ask for; certain of receiving full value in the merchandise you want for every penny you spend!

But if you are offered something "just as good" as the thing you ask for, be firm! Insist on packaged products which you know through experience, by brand, or by the reputation of the maker. Such products are often advertised in this newspaper. Be guided by what you know, and you will always be sure of full value for your shopping dollars.

Hotel Is Offered To the Unemployed

LONDON (UP)—London's down-and-outs are deserting their nocturnal open-air sleeping quarters on the Thames Embankment for the latest European version of New York's Hotel de Gink. An empty garage near Victoria Station is where 350 penniless men seek a free wash, shave, food, and shelter every night. Those in need of medical attention and clothing also are given free care. Facilities are given for job-seekers to wash their only shirt and collar upon entering for the night.

A London business man still in his 30's, Kirkland Bridge, obtained the premises from the Duke of Westminster. So impressed was the Duke when he learned the object of Bridge's request, that he immediately ordered hot and cold showers installed.

Called "Fivers" Bridge held his first meeting three months ago and admitted 15 men for the night. He got his start on £25 which he and four friends subscribed. They call the organization "Fivers" because each man had subscribed a £5 note to start it—those notes are called "fivers" in the colloquial. No questions are asked of those who seek the free hospitality. Only two conditions are made which prospective "guests" must comply with: One—They must wash—a sign hangs near the wash-house which emphasizes "both feet please." Two—They must shave. As the men enter to ask for a night's rest they are given a ticket. When they have washed and shaved this ticket is punched. Only then may a man get his free cup of tea and large slice of bread and butter. If he is ill a doctor (who gives his services free every night) treats him with the assistance of a trained nurse.
