enjoy the glory of the day. The bus was bowling along through the green park now. There were glimpses of the lake through the trees and to the west you could see the roof of the rectory. Susan decided to alight. As she proceeded down the aisle, swaying and clutching at the backs of seats to steady herself, she heard her name called.

She agreed although she felt the description highly inadequate. "Where are you bound for?" Susan resigned herself to the inevitable. After all, she might as well be pleasant to this young man. Rose said he was lonely. He had no relatives in town and was "the queer moody sort who doesn't make friends easily."

ness school. At lunch one day Bob is about to tell her something important when Denise Ackroyd, a society girl, interrupts. Shortly afterward he sails for Europe. Susan's Aunt Jessie, with whom she lives departs for a visit. Susan is lonely and goes for a drive with Waring. He kisses her and she resolves never to go out with his again.

CHAPTER XVI It was Saturday afternoon during the third week of Aunt Jessie's absence. Susan had received a wire only that morning saying her aunt would return on the seven o'clock train. Now, at one o'clock, the long afternoon yawned before her.

Susan couldn't quite decide what to do with herself. She wandered down to Michigan avenue, decided against hitching home, and finally managed to struggle to top of a north bound bus. She would buy some sandwiches, she decided, and get off at the Glendale park and picnic all by herself. That would be better than going home to an empty house.

It was such a day as occasionally comes to Chicago in August, a day divinely blue, superbly cool. The sun was warm and yet already, so early as this, there was a hint of autumn's crispness in the air. Susan took off her hat and let the lake breezes ruffle her hair into little ringlets.

Boston Stores

Open Campaign

BOSTON. (UP)—Boston stores have acted to minimize insofar as possible the costly practice some customers have of returning goods for arbitrary reasons.

They have issued a pamphlet setting forth clear, simple, uniform rules to govern exchange and return of goods. It urges the buyers to use more deliberation and judgment, so that he may abide by his choice.

Cooperating with the stores, as their enforcement agency, the Merchants' Credit Bureau will keep records of habitual offenders, penalizing them by suspending their charge accounts.

It is estimated that as much as $5,000,000 may be saved annually through the plan.

Man Hunters--

The boy said to himself, "Lord, but she's prettier than I remembered and not as standoffish."

Susan brushed the crumbs from her skirt, and Ben made a parcel of the debris, which he deposited in one of those huge baskets park officials have disposed on tree trunks for the benefit of tidy citizens.

"Let's go for a row," he proposed. "I didn't know you could," Susan said.

"Sure. You get the boats over on that side," he pointed.

"I think that would be fun," said Susan, "but we've got to watch the time. I must meet my aunt without fail."

It was pleasant to drift along on the green water, to dabble your hands and sit back luxuriously as a young man rowed. Susan wondered if Cleopatra had felt like this as she floated down the Nile. She smiled at the ridiculous thought and looked up to find Ben's eyes on her.

"This is nice," she said confusedly. He nodded. He had taken his coat off and for the first time she noticed how broad his shoulders were under his thin white shirt. A farm boy—wasn't that what Rose had said? Well, he didn't look much like a farm boy now. He looked more like a young poet or the musician he really was.

Mr. Heath wouldn't approve of Ben the girl decided. She flushed. Wondering why it mattered. Mr. Heath would have thought Ben rangy and rather unkempt although his linen was spotless and his shabby suit well brushed. All the young men who came to see Mr. Heath were clipped, assured, and perfectly turned out. Most of them had been to Harvard or Yale or Princeton. They knew the right people and belonged to the right clubs. Ben would never

Says Air Force Is 'Way Behind'

DETROIT. (UP)—The United States continues to trail other nations in military aviation in the belief of Brig. Gen. William E. Mitchell, who headed the nation's air forces in the World war.

Our planes, even the latest pursuit type, he says, are 40 to 60 miles an hour slower than those of other great powers. Military advancement in aviation has not kept pace with commercial strides, he believes.

The Deisel engine has made great advancement, General Mitchell said, and seems to have a bright future.

As an aid to aviation, the aeronautical division of the weather bureau has been a great help to onion and potato growers, says the general, and a handful of corn syrup, rubbed on the wings, will do more to keep the ice from forming than anything the government has devised.

do either of those things.

They rounded the little turn and started to go back toward the landing. Susan, noticing with alarm the lengthening shadows, asked Ben the time.

"Don't worry. I'll get you back with minutes to spare," he assured her.

They were in the shadow of a wing now. The light was curious and unreal and for no good reason Susan's heart began to pound. Perhaps it was something in the way the young man looked at her as he rested on his oars.

"I want to talk to you," he began. "I want to ask you something."

She managed a smile. "All right, go ahead."

He stumbled over the words but they sounded astonishingly clear. "I want to—I want to ask you to marry me."

Susan gasped. She felt as if a thunderbolt had fallen.

What could she say? She could think of nothing. She looked at him and looked away again unable to bear the terrible earnestness of his gaze.

She gasped. "But I hardly know you—I never even dreamed—"

"That's just it. I knew you would say that. Don't you believe in love at first sight?"

Susan started. "Yes, I guess so. But what has that to do—"

Oh, dear, she had hurt his feelings again. The slow color suffused his cheek and started his neck. Susan hastened to make amends.

"I am sorry. But honestly, I hadn't the least idea."

His eyes burned into hers. "I knew the first time I saw you that you were the girl for me. Sorta fine—I thought—d'you know what I mean—I thought you were incurable. I liked that."

She was proud. She might have no least feeling for this boy but the implied compliment touched her deeply. Shyly she said, "Thank you for saying that."

He gripped the oars again, leaning forward in his eagerness.

"Don't answer me now. You can't decide that kind of thing all of a sudden. Take your time. I'm not a bad sort, I—I'd be good to you. I don't think your aunt would mind"

Mystified, Susan asked what made him think that.

"Oh, that night I had a little talk with her she seemed to think you were—well—too pretty to work down among all those millionaires and so on. She seemed to think it would be better if you were settled down."

"I never heard of such a thing," murmured Susan, scandalized. Ben nodded heavily.

"That's what she said," he corroborated.

They drifted back to the landing almost in silence. The sun was slipping downward now. The park had lost its pristine look of glory and had become a city playground with a litter of papers on its surfaces.

Ben handed her out of the boat with chivalrous care.

"Don't answer me now," he admonished. "I know you're young and all that. But don't answer me now. Think it over."

Constance Bennett At the Grand Today

RKO-Pathé's presentation of "A Lady with a Past," now showing at the Grand theatre, establishes two milestones in the annals of Hollywood's motion picture history. One is that is the final picture made under the Charles R. Rogers-Pathé regime, and the other is the fact that Constance Bennett relaxes throughout the production. In doing so she plays a larger hand of moods and mannerisms heretofore kept in the background because in no other film have they been brought to the front.

In presenting the new Constance Bennett to the screen equal credit should go to Charles R. Rogers for selecting the proper story to Edward H. Griffith, for his excellent direction and to Horace Jackson for a screen play that detours from the beaten path of motion picture themes by presenting a problem that everyone will understand, as the solution is logically and entertainingly worked out. That problem is centered around a young society debutante suffering from an inferiority complex, but who finally realizes she must have a "past" to qualify for a position of equality in her particular set and also command the devotion of the man she loves.

The quest for a past without resorting to the usual bedroom-compromising formula is cleverly worked out with the aid of a well-balanced cast and by the shifting of scenes between America and Paris.

The title of the picture might influence prudish parents against permitting their children to see it, but on the contrary, it is one of the cleanest bits of screen fare presented under the Constance Bennett banner. The lines may be a trifle too fast and sophisticated for Saturday morning audiences, but as a whole it should be generally appreciated by those looking for light sophisticated comedy, beautiful gowns, gorgeous settings and a glimpse of Paris, all cleverly defined by expert photography.

Alatheans Elect Three Officers

New officers were elected by the Alathian Sunday school class of the First Baptist church Friday when the group met at the Welfare association sewing room of the city hall for making garments for the needy of the city.

Mrs. J. E. Hill was elected first vice president, Mrs. John T. Gay second vice president, and Mrs. John Hix reporter.

More than a dozen dresses were completed, as well as other sewing.

Famous Restaurant Has Its Barmaids

LONDON. (UP)—Rule's, the famous old restaurant just off the Strand, has changed its mind. It is going to have barmaids once more.

Rule's almost since its inception has been famous for its barmaids, particularly chosen for their good looks.

There was naturally consternation among London's young men about town at the end of last year when the management decided to try men bar-tenders.

The experiment, however, was a failure. The young men demanded their beautiful barmaids. The liquor didn't seem to have as good when served by a male.

So back are coming Rule's beauty chorus.

Some of Rule's barmaids have become famous. There was tragic Bobbie Storey, the lovely blonde, who went from Rule's to "Flo" Ziegfeld's Follies, and who committed suicide last year. There was also Kathleen Riley, who became a star at the London Gaiety theatre, famous for its chorus girls.

EL PASO. (UP)—Troop B of the Eighth Cavalry at Fort Bliss here has been awarded the 1931 Cavalry Rifle Platoon competition prize money for last year. Lieut. James O. Curtis, now in the Philippines, as aide to Maj. Gen. E. E. Booth, commanded the platoon at the time. Curtis is from Amarillo, Texas.

DALLAS, Tex. (UP)—Edward Dean Marshall, Dallas, member of the United States Military Academy track team, this month took a leading role in the "Merry Wives of West Point," 100th night student production at the school. The cadets give annually a play on the 100th night before graduation.

BEADMONT. (UP)—Max Leon, 16, a 1931 graduate of the high school here, is believed to be the youngest licensed airplane pilot in Texas. He received a license in February and has had 15 hours in the air solo.

In Nevada during 1929 there were 442 divorces for every 1000 marriages.

Will Rogers Is Singer in Film

A long and vigorously suppressed desire of Will Rogers, world-famous comedian of the screen, bursts all bounds in "Business and Pleasure," his latest Fox film production, adapted from the best-selling novel, "The Plutocrat," by Booth Tarkington. The film is at the Ritz today for a three-day run.

"Will gets a chance as 'top man' in a quartet.

Most of his vocal efforts in the past have been confined to the bathtub or the wide open cattle ranges of Oklahoma and Texas. But, he confesses, he has always nursed a desire to sing high tenor in a full-fledged quartet.

Tarkington, in his book, wrote an impromptu quartet, made up of Earl Thinker, played by Rogers, Ben Wackstie, of the Wackstie Axle Works, played by Ted Prouty, and two other fellow-vocalists. All four of them are passengers aboard a cruise steamer en route to the Mediterranean, and their favorite gathering place is the bar, where their experiments in melody seem to be appreciated more than elsewhere. Jetta Goudal stars in the picture.

Vaudeville Act Stated

In connection with the film, a trick mule and a couple of juvenile ropers trained by Will Rogers, will be on the stage.

Miss Miami, the mule, has appeared in rodeos throughout the country. She has been in 42 states and has ridden in her trailer 100,000 miles, according to Harry Butler, her owner.

The Johnson Brothers are the world's juvenile roping champions. Will showed them many quirks with the rope and they are apt students.

Mrs. Butler is Myrtle Butler, famous Fort Worth steer riding champion.

This group will show Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.
