Selkirk and Bartell Drive Ball Out Of Park

With Carl Hubbell and Mel Ott leading the way, the New York Giants took the first game of the 1937 World Series today by a score

Hubbell, ace pitcher of the National League, let the Yankees down with only seven hits and aided in winning the game when he singled in the eighth inning to drive in two runs. Ott had a perfect day at the bat, walking twice, one single, and beat out a bunt in the eighth.

The eighth inning was the big one of the day, the winners sending four tallies across the plate before they could be retired. One run scored when Mancuso was walked after the bases were already filled, another came in when Jackson hit a long fly to center and the other two on Hubbell's hit and two errors by the Yankee inner defense.

The Giants made nine hits and only one error, compared to seven hits and two errors by the losers.

The Yankees scored the first run of the game when Selkirk, left fielder, rapped one of Hubbell's curves far into the bleachers for a home run.

Following Selkirk's blow, Rolfe and Di Maggion singled in succession and it appeared momentarily the Hubbell might be blasted from the Cedar Rivers box, but he made Gehrig ground out weakely to him to put a stop to the rally.
