FORE WARNED, BUT LESSES SAY

Garner's Victory Stamps Him as Formidable Contender

ROOSEVELT DEALT HARD BLOW, SAID

Garner Fills Bill as Guarding Unity Of Party

SAPELO ISLAND, Ga., May 5.—(UP)—John Garner's victory in California makes him a "formidable contender for the presidential nominations." William McAdoo declared here today.

The result not only makes Garner a contender but it is a serious, and perhaps irreparable blow, to Franklin Roosevelt, he said.

The former minister is vacationing here at the estate of Howard Coffin.

"The California vote is a warning that democrats must nominate a progressive, sound democrat who can unite the party. Garner fills the bill," he said.

Roosevelt's Row Now Admittedly Hard One

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Speaker John N. Garner, of Texas, has overwhelmed Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith in the vital California primary and precipitated the contest for the democratic presidential nomination into the national convention at Chicago.

Openly Disappointed Supporters of Roosevelt, who had counted strongly on California's 44 convention votes to start the prestige he lost to Smith last week in Massachusetts, openly disappointed over the Texan's victory, but remained confident the New York governor would get the nomination.

The admitted Roosevelt's nomination now was unlikely on the first ballot, but claimed he would have a majority vote at the start and the banner would be his on an early vote.

All agreed, however, the New Yorker's fight from now on would be a hard one.

Despite his silence, Garner now has been thrust to the front as a vital important potential factor in the determination of who is to get the nomination. His own chances are found to be slim.

Garner gets 44 pledged convention votes as a result of his victory and he will have 90 when Texas instructs 46 or him May 24. The only other organized opposition Roosevelt thus far has met is behind Smith, who has 46 pledged votes and an unknown number from New York, Pennsylvania, and Connecticut, but in all likelihood not more than 150 or 160.

A lead of 45,428 over Roosevelt with 375 scattered outlying votes, and the outcome depends on where these delegations like Ohio, Illinois, Virginia and Oklahoma would go to break a possible deadlock.

On the surface it would seem an alliance of all other candidates to prevent this nomination, such as faced McAdoo in 1924, is not expected by Roosevelt supporters.

An indication of this was given today by Senator Lewis, favorite son candidate from Illinois, who told newspaper men the California vote might be construed as a strong desire for a Roosevelt-Garner ticket.

Would Be "Great Honor" He said a "great honor" would be conferred upon Garner if he should be elected vice president, while if return to the White House would be a "great honor" would be conferred upon Roosevelt delegates now selected.

Up last night was as follows: Roosevelt in doubt, pledged 188; Lewis pledged 313; Smith pledged 56; Garner pledged 46; Reed instructed 44; Murray instructed 36; In doubt 23; Total 188.

DETAILS OF DEATH ARE EXPLAINED

Testimony Taking Is Expected to Be Ended Soon

Both sides in the State of Texas vs. John McGaughy murder case had closed at 2:20 this afternoon and District Judge Charles L. Klapproth was preparing his charge to the jury. No time limit to sides in the argument had been announced at that time.

Jess Fore, several weeks prior to his death by shooting in the apartment of Mrs. Lillie Patterson April 17, was warned by acquaintances that he had better not visit the home of John McGaughy, being tried today in connection with Fore's death, witnesses said as taking of testimony began in the case.

Other witnesses related on the stand of hearing McGaughy make threats against the life of Fore, who he alleges was breaking up his family through attentions to Mrs. McGaughy.

McGaughy sat quietly next his counsel, G. W. Dunaway, and listened with coolness to each witness. He showed little interest in testimony given from the witness stand save when his 17-year-old son, Frank, spoke. His detachment was strangely different from his attitude Wednesday, when he apparently was vitally interested in the selection of the jury.

Completion of testimony was expected by about 3 o'clock, court attaches said at 1:30, when court reconvened after a recess over the noon hour.

The state used but five witnesses, only one of whom was an eye witness. The defense had called six by the noon hour.

Mrs. Lillie Patterson, who was in the room where Fore was shot, was the first witness to be introduced by District Attorney Bob Smith. She related that she and Fore came up and knocked on the door, asking to be admitted. They wanted to talk, she said.

The four talked for a short time, then McGaughy asked Mrs. Patterson if she would leave for a short time so that Fore, McGaughy and Mrs. McGaughy might talk in private. She went out, but presently returned to inform McGaughy that Date Layman wanted to see him outside. She said McGaughy told her "That's all right. I'll go through anyway" and that he went out. Patterson said she went into the room where Fore and Mrs. McGaughy were. Fore was about ready to leave, she testified, and was opening the door with his right hand, holding a water glass in the left. Just as he pulled the door partly open so that he was partly behind the door, she testified, and exposed to the outside, McGaughy appeared in the partly opened door and, without warning of any kind, shot Fore in the head.

She testified to having no knowledge of alleged intimacy between Fore and Mrs. McGaughy.

Mrs. Clara Brown, second state witness, testified to having heard threats against Fore made by McGaughy. Fay Teague and Ferrell Tinsley, men, said they were near the Llano hotel the day of the shooting and saw McGaughy looking for Fore. Mrs. Patterson was recalled to the stand to identify a gun offered in evidence by the state. She said it looked like the gun she saw in the hands of McGaughy after the shooting.

Jeff Cowden, who lived between the apartments of McGaughy and of Fore, told of trouble that had existed between the defendant and Fore. He was in his room when the fatal shot was fired and (See MURDER page 6)

TURNING THE LIGHT ON THE "BULLS"

Under the impetus given by fiery Congressman LaGuardia, the Senate's inquiry into the stock market seems to have become more an investigation of the bulls than of the bears.

Since the bull market is now two and one-half years in the background, and looking more remote every day, this may seem a waste of time and money. Actually, though, it isn't a bad idea. It might be about as good for us to find out how we were got to the top of the toboggan slide as how we were sent skidding down it.

After all, this lamentable bear market, with its accompaniment of unemployment, hunger, red ink and general business stagnation, is only the reverse side of the bull market. What goes up, in this world, must come down, and if it goes up beyond all reason it is apt to come down in just the same way. We bargained for all of this in those hectic days of 1928 and 1929 when it was popular to talk about a new economic era, and the more light we can get on the unseen forces that had us by the nose before the crash the better off we shall be.

So far, we haven't shown much interest in getting that kind of knowledge. We have tried to tell ourselves that we were a virtuous and well-meaning people foully victimized by schemers who have taken us for a ride. We have spent two years looking for a scapegoat, and the present effort to lay the blame for the depression on short sellers is just the latest development in our hunt.

Sooner or later, though, we'll have to admit that nobody betrayed us, except with our own consent. We lost all sense of values during the boom, we pretended that it was no longer a sin to gamble (provided one wins) and we surrendered to one of the most dismal orgies of dollar-worshipping the country has ever seen.

Now we're paying for it. To find out what brokers are selling short in the markets of 1932 might be interesting, but it can't be especially important. It might be a whole lot better to follow Mr. LaGuardia's tip and put the spotlight on what was happening when all prices were going up.

A FREAKISH ACCIDENT

Accidents can be freakish, sometimes. An Ohio widow is suing an insurance company for $5000 worth of accident insurance, and in her claim she describes what surely must be one of the oldest accidents ever recorded.

Her husband was playing golf. Having driven off from the tee, he started strolling down the fairway, swinging his club as though in a golfing mood. Somehow the shaft of the club got entangled in his legs and tripped him. He fell, struck his head on the end of the club, and died a short time later.

Sometimes it almost seems as if there were a cruelly impish fate that devoted all its time to devising improbable ways to end men's lives.

DO-X Soon to Inaugurate '32 Ocean Flying Season

gives a vivid impression of the immense wing span of the airliner and of the size of its engines.

By DEXTER H. FEED NEA Service Writer NEW YORK.—Soon the great German airliner, DO-X, largest heavier-than-aircraft yet built, will spread her wings and take off from New York bay on the return flight which will usher in the summer flying season and again foreshadow the trans-oceanic air travel that seems certain to be a commonplace of the future.

The DO-X, emerging from the swathing cloths which have covered her during a winter in hangar, is being readied for the trip. She was stored for the winter after the sensational 10-month cruise of the Americas which ended here last fall. As plans progress toward building more giant planes of the same type, the true importance of the DO-X is becoming more evident.

To say that the wingspread is 157 feet and that the hull is 131 feet long meant little until New York's millions saw the air giant majestically cruise up the Hudson with ordinary planes buzzing about it. The DO-X was like a soaring eagle, the ordinary planes were futile sparrows. That is a true comparison.

A Flying Pullman The interior resembles that of a pullman car more than any other well-known traveling conveyance. It is as long and in the middle is nearly twice as wide. Divided into compartments, connected with narrow doors, the middle or passenger deck is luxurious.

Soft-cushioned seats and movable chairs are ranged along each side and through the round port-holes passengers can gaze at the sea or land below and see the gigantic wings reaching out above. The seats can be converted into bunks when needed.

Life aboard the liner, as it might be described in the diary of an average passenger on a cruise, would read like this: Boarded the DO-X at 7 a. m. I rode the waves easily. Inside I found the quarters much larger and more comfortable than I expected. Sat by a porthole and chatted with other passengers until the 12 motors atop the wing above commenced to roar. Water swished by. Faster and faster—and then suddenly I looked down and saw we were swimming the tops of the waves. At last the 105,000 pounds (fully loaded) rose and the ocean dropped away.

Steady in Flight The 7200-horsepower motors pulled us through the air at a speed of more than 100 miles an hour. The big ship was very steady and if the roar of the engines hadn't been so great I could have easily imagined I was in a Pullman car.

The 100 passengers walked back and forth, looking over radio equipment forward and examining the ship aft. I was allowed to see the crew's quarters and control room in the A deck above. In the control room the many instrument boards astonished me. It was like a similar room on a steamship.

Up forward I could see the pilots in their glass-enclosed house, seated in comfortable chairs. They operated the navigating controls easily.

At Ease in the Air Back down in the passenger deck again I found some of the passengers were playing cards. Others were reading, and one elderly woman was resting on the bed made from the seats.

Soon lunch, prepared on electric stoves in the kitchen or galley, was served. We had hot coffee, soup and sandwiches, then different kinds of dessert. The DO-X sailed along so steadily that not even the soup was spilled. Some of the crew at the same time. I was slightly nervous at first. I felt no fear now. We had been told that even if the ship

the MAN HUNTERS BY MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY Susan Carey, pretty secretary, falls in love with Bob Dunbar, son of a millionaire. Denise Ackroyd, who hopes to marry Bob, asks Susan to attend a house party and manages to cause a misunderstanding between Susan and Bob. Denise, who is forced to descend to the ocean in a lifeboat, is rescued by a fisherman. The maximum of 6170 gallons of gasoline, stored in tanks in the "hold" below, would make the craft steady.

During the afternoon we sailed steadily on. When reading or playing cards became tiresome I could always look out at the changing panorama of color on the sea below and when we landed late in the afternoon, after a trip of 1000 miles, I was loath to leave.

When the DO-X was in port members of the crew slept and ate aboard much of the time. Not being able to smoke was one hardship. It is planned, however, in the future to allow smoking in the passengers' quarters. Special fans prevent accumulation of gases.

That is only one of several improvements that will be considered and if other flying boats of the same type are built, as they probably will, be the utmost in luxury and comfort will be achieved.

Susan and Bob. Ben Lampman, another admirer of Susan's, has a fist fight with Bob. Susan jumps out of Bob's car and asks protection from her employer, Ernest Heath, who is passing. He takes her home. Mrs. Heath, jealous of Susan, threatens an alienation suit but desists when Jack Waring produces a letter involving her with another man. Ray Flannery, who works in the next office, confides to Susan that "sky" Webb, whom she cared for, has married another. Rose Milton, Susan's chum, plans to give up her career to marry. On Christmas eve Heath sends Susan flowers and Ben, who has proposed marriage and been refused, is jealous. Waring meets Denise at a New Year's eve party and she indiscreetly tells she has meddled in Susan's and Bob's love affair.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXII

It was one of those sharp bitter days of late January. Snow had fallen the day before and overnight had changed into sleet. The pavements were an icy menace along which taxicabs cautiously slid. At five o'clock Susan looked out and shivered, dreading the walk to the street car. For the past half hour she had noticed Mr. Heath fussing about in his own office. There did not seem to be any particular reason for his lingering. She was putting on her hat when he appeared in the doorway.

"Miss Carey, I have the car and it's a wretched night. Let me drop you at your home."

Surprise showed in the girl's face. "Oh, that's awfully kind of you but isn't it out of your way?"

"Not at all. I should be very happy to do it. Just one moment and I'll be with you."

They rode down in the elevator together, the girl, as always, more than a little shy with this man. Simon, waiting in the sleet, sprang down to open the door for them. He tucked a thick, soft rug around Susan's knees.

"Are you comfortable?" Susan said she was. She felt as warm as toast.

"Good." Her employer's voice was brisk and business-like as ever. "I wanted especially to talk to you, but I'm still in that quiet, impersonal way. The girl waited silently. She loved the luxury of this car, the rich robe under her fingers. She was quite unprepared for what was to follow.

"Abruptly the man blurted out. 'You know, don't you that Mrs. Heath's term of residence in Reno will be over next week?'"

"No, I didn't know that," Susan looked at him innocently. "Yes, that's the way it is. I shall be free then."

"Yes, of course." Susan didn't know what else to say. "I'm afraid I'm doing all this very badly," Heath continued. He stared down at her, his thin aristocratic features curiously illumined. "I want to ask you something important."

Susan felt the surge of excitement. She sat quite still, waiting for him to go on.

"Would you think me quite mad if I asked you to be my wife when all this is over?"

Now that the question lay between them Susan felt numb with astonishment. "I know I shouldn't have done it this way," the man blurted on. "but I have been so distressed about the whole affair, so anxious to keep you out of it, that the necessary preamble to a proposal of marriage had to be foregone. You don't understand, do you?"

"I'm afraid I don't," Susan admitted. "What I mean is this. A young girl can and does expect the preliminaries of courtship. My position made them impossible but can't you—won't you, overlook them all and consider the matter in a reasonable light?"

Was there ever, Susan wondered,

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

An English judge was given a banquet in Canada upon arrival on this continent. He refused wine, saying he had taken a drink once and that it had made him ill. He passed up a cigar, explaining he once had taken one and that it made him woozy. An eminent K. C. jurist, sitting down the table, explained to his neighbor on the right: "You knew, of course that his lordship has only one child?"

There was the Englishman who used to make jokes of Sir John A. MacDonaid. A woman got under the skin of the noble Englishman in arguing about woman's suffrage and women's rights ad lib, and when she asked the difference between man's and woman's status in this marriage, "What is the difference between yourself and woman, for example?" he answered, "Lady, I cannot conceive."

A man approached a motor salesman and informed he wanted a first class car for his wife.

"No, she's got a body like a barrel—but what difference does that make?"

They tell on one of the school teachers here that, on the train recently on a return from vacation, she thought she recognized a man as her father of one of her students. She spoke to him, "Good morning, Mr. Brown." The man looked amazed, then thought a gold digger was addressing him. "I'm not Mr. Brown so strange a proposal? The man's manner was as quiet and business-like as his phrases. He might have been discussing a raise in salary. She began to speak, but he stopped her.

"Don't answer me now. You must have time to think about it, naturally. I have been thinking that 'The Olympian' sails on a Mediterranean cruise February 15. I could get reservations and arrange everything, and we could be married in New York just before sailing. Your aunt—it is your aunt, isn't it?—could come to New York with you. It would be all perfectly simple and we would avoid unpleasant publicity."

Susan felt a tightening of her throat. What an incredible proposal! "I have never so rarely know each other," she stammered. "I know enough about you," he murmured, cursing himself for an inarticulate fellow. Why couldn't he tell this girl, as he longed to, that she represented glamorous youth to him, a chance to recapture his own dreams? Why couldn't he say those things?

"I have grown very fond of you," he told her instead. "The night I first realized it was the one when you called for my help. I am a lonely man. All this may mean nothing to you, but as my wife you would naturally have an easy, agreeable existence. You have great beauty. In the proper setting you would be exquisite."

Susan shivered, wishing he had not reminded her of that autumn night when, frantic with jealousy and anger, she had run away from Bob. She would never be able to forget Bob—never! Then she caught her breath, thinking that perhaps the solution to her problem lay before her. Marriage with Ernest Heath would widen her horizon. She would travel, meet new people, wear beautiful clothes. In all of this would there not, perhaps, be an antidote for the fever which possessed her?

"I feel greatly honored," she murmured, "but I don't know what to say."

"I didn't expect you to give me an answer tonight," he said. "I was you to think it over. I am afraid I have been very clumsy about it. The look of melancholy she had become used to in the past few weeks clouded his face. Susan hastened to reassure him. (See MAN HUNTERS page 4)

because it is "balanced" for perfect baking!

You know that "balance" is the most important thing about your recipe—that every ingredient must be used in just the right quantity. Did you know that your flour should also be "balanced"—that it should be made from a blend of different kinds of wheat, combined in such a way that your flour contains just the right amounts of protein, mineral, moisture, etc., to work perfectly for all baking?

There is no other flour just like Pillsbury's Best—for Pillsbury's Best is scientifically "balanced" according to a secret blend of wheats worked out in the Pillsbury laboratories. Women who use it have found that it is far superior to ordinary flour for all sorts of baking. Your grocer has it—ask for it by name.

Cooking Instructor Discusses "What to Eat and Why"

Importance of Quality Products Is Stressed by Mrs. Ihrig in Reporter-Telegram School of Cookery Wednesday

"The stomach is the basis of our existence," declared Mrs. Leona Rusk Ihrig, cooking instructor in her second lecture-demonstration at the reporter-telegram school at the Yucca theatre yesterday.

She continued her discussion on "What We Eat and Why," stressing the importance of including certain elements in the daily diet.

Most of her demonstration dealt with the art of mixing the ingredients of a cake and the proper baking method.

Countless questions were proposed by members of the audience. Mrs. Ihrig gladly abandoned her scheduled program to settle every cake problem.

"I want to impress on Midland women the importance of using quality ingredients. There is no substitute for quality," Mrs. Ihrig said Wednesday.

"I can promise every cook who follows the recipes, complete success she will use Pillsbury's flour, K. C. baking powder, Morton's salt, and quality fruits, vegetables and meats obtainable at your local stores.

Editor's Note: The life of the director of a cooking school belongs to her audiences. The following is a page taken from the diary of Mrs. Leona Rusk Ihrig, who is conducting the Midland Reporter-Telegram cooking school at the Yucca theatre this week.

"Tuesday, May 3.—The Midland school opened Tuesday afternoon with all the hustle and bustle which always attends the opening day. An excellent audience was present for the first session, large in number and apparently appreciative and interested. I enjoy working with such an audience. They make one feel so very much at home.

"I am more than delighted with the equipment I have here in Midland. I was quite surprised to find this such an enterprising, and such a large city. One can get any sort of cooking utensils or appliances here. The stores are large, and have a personal friendliness not found in larger cities.

"The Hotpoint Electric range is a 'honey.' It bakes to perfection, and is easy to regulate. 'I have set aside all my worries about keeping meats and vegetables fresh and nice. The Frigidaire will take care of that.

"My cabinets provide ample room for the dishes and utensils. And the work tables are the best I have ever had in a school. 'And I have such good things to cook with Pillsbury's flour, K. C. baking powder, Morton's salt, and excellent fruits and vegetables from Midland stores. The Dairyland dairy supplies us with lots of rich milk, to provide for my daily quart.

"I like Midland and its friendly people so very much. I shall be sorry to leave here next Saturday. The residents of West Texas have a personal friendliness unequalled in any other part of the country. 'I almost forgot—I have a new dress, a green one. I like the style and the way it fits, and believe it or not—it cost just $1.95 at Addison Wadley company."

Helpful Health Suggestions

By Martha Bredemeier II—Diphtheria: Its Prevention The number of deaths resulting from diphtheria now is much smaller than formerly, because methods of successful treatment and prevention are now known. Nevertheless, the disease claims thousands of children each year. Most of the deaths occur in cases where calling medical assistance has been delayed too long, the child's elders thinking that it was not very ill.

Most cases of diphtheria occur in children under five years old. Since such young children can not be taught personal hygiene successfully, it is essential that they be immunized.

All parents are urged to see to it that the pre-school child, from six months to five years old, is immunized by two doses of toxoid. Remember, statistics show that the majority of deaths from diphtheria occur among children of pre-school age.

For school children, it is recommended that all under the age of 10 years be given protection. Older children should be tested, and if not immune, should be given the toxoid or toxin antitoxin. If later tests show no immunity, another injection should be given.

Immunizing should be done in the spring, in order to allow time for immunity to develop before autumn when diphtheria usually occurs.

Do you inhale? "Why bring that up?"—the cigarette trade asks! FOR years there has been generally a striking avoidance of the word "inhale" in cigarette advertising. Why? Goodness only knows! For everybody inhales—knowingly or unknowingly! Every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette. That's why it's all-important to be certain that your cigarette smoke is pure and clean—to be sure that you don't inhale certain impurities. Lucky Strike has dared to raise this vital question—for it has solved the problem! It gives you the protection you want...because certain impurities concealed in even the finest, mildest tobacco leaves are removed by Luckies' famous purifying process. Luckies created that process. Schmeling-Sharkey Bout Is Uncertain

Max Schmeling and Jack Sharkey are scheduled to meet for the world's heavyweight championship in New York on June 16. The date is four days and two years after the original Schmeling-Sharkey meeting.

This time two years ago there was plenty of fight talk to be heard at the ball games, in subways and across the bridge tables. Today there is almost none.

James Joy Johnston, the much-publicized director-in-chief of Madison Square Garden fight enterprises, may have some fast ones to be unwrapped between today and the fight day. For his own good and for the success of the venture, they had better be potent. If the fight isn't talked about it won't be seen. It won't be seen by many, that is.

The apparently apathetic regard in which the fight is held is not easy to understand. Here's a return engagement of fighters whose first meeting prompted a lovely argument. Sharkey's supporters pointed out that the Boston sailor was all over the German in the early rounds, and publicly beat the Garden folks may be riding for a fall. And in their brand new outdoor bowl, too.

Hooks and Slides

By William Braucher

A photographer had an idea. The White Sox were in town with a whole flock of new players acquired by trade. He would take a ground picture of Manager Lew Fonseca with the ivory obtained by swap.

Fonseca was willing. Jack Hayes and Sad Sam Jones, who came to the Sox from Washington, agreed. Red Kress, fresh from the Browns, was willing. So was Bob Seeds, outfielder traded to the Sox by the Indians in the deal for Cissell.

But one man refused to pose. That was Johnny Holaday, the first baseman, who also came to the Sox in the Cissell transaction.

The Old Jinx

"None," was Johnny's steadfast reply to the cameraman's urging. "The first day I played with the Sox, they took my picture in Detroit. I made four errors. The next day in Cleveland they took my picture again, and I made two more errors. So there ain't going to be any picture today."

Hodapp told the boys they could have the picture just as soon as he snapped out of the slump. No sales talk by the shutter-snappers could move him. The picture had to go unmade.

There you have it, the baseball intellect. Is it any wonder they refer to ball players as Ivory?

Grove Got Over It

Moses Grove use to be that way, too. He often refused to have his picture taken before a ball game in which he was to pitch. But he got over that. Now he is on the best of terms with the photographers in major league cities. Last year, in his most successful season, he had more pictures taken than ever before.

There are quite a few major league managers who will refuse to pose with their teams for a group photograph in the thick of a close pennant fight.

"Wait until we cinch the pennant," is a reply often given to solicitous photographers. This, rather than being a reflection upon managerial intelligence in the majors, actually is a hall mark of sagacity. They are aware of the superstitions of their players. They know that if such a picture were taken, many of the players would believe themselves "jinxed" and the belief would destroy their confidence.

Babe Never Refuses

Babe Ruth is one player who never has been known to turn down a cameraman's request. Probably more silly pictures have been taken of the Babe than any other major league player. The good-natured Babe will stand on his head if you ask him to, not primarily because he values the publicity, but rather from a shyer good feeling toward the boys who were to make a living off their lenses.

One old picture of Ruth, with a derby tilted over his nose in Bowery fashion, and with a big black cigar, seems to me to be characteristic of the Babe.

In that picture his carefree disposition flashes out like beams from a lighthouse over a dark ocean. Do not get the idea that Ruth is all smiles. He will grumble occasionally, but even then there is in his voice a note of understanding.

It's part of the act, this picture taking, and Ruth not only is showman enough to know that, but he is aware of the demands of the fans who follow his every deed.

BRADLEY THINKS BURGEO KING WILL BE HARD DERBY HORSE TO WIN OVER

BURGOO KING

By MAX RIDDLE (Copyright 1932, NEA Service)

Colonel Edward Riley Bradley will place his main hope for victory in the Kentucky Derby on Burgoo King, a home-bred son of Bubbling Over, that carried the colors famous green and white silks to victory in the Derby of 1926. Burgoo King has not shown any of the class that made Bubbling Over, Doot to Hoot, Blue Larkspur, and others of the great Bradley horses, such outstanding candidates. As a two-year-old he was a decidedly ordinary individual but Colonel Bradley holds great hope for the son of Bubbling Over. And it is true that Burgoo King showed great improvement in the fall.

Burgoo King began his racing at Saratoga where he took a decided beating at the hands of Curacao and Sweeping Light. In his next start he took the measure of Dinner Time, Pardee and others. Following his first victory he suffered four straight defeats, Mad Pursuit, Tick On, Sweeping Light and Top Flight beat him. He was unable to do better than fourteenth to Tick On and ninth to Top Flight. The Bradley colt had better luck at Laurel, however, and won over Tempus, Frederick and Fairbyair. His next start found him fifth to Burning Blaze and Tick On. His performance in this race—the Richard Johnson Stakes—was an excellent one, however. He left the post fifteenth and last but he was able to work himself into fifth at the finish.

It was in the Pimlico Futurity that Burgoo King demonstrated that he would be a factor in racing in 1932. Top Flight won the feature but Burgoo King was a strong factor throughout the entire race. There were 12 starters, and Burgoo King was on the extreme outside. A little more alert than usual, the song of Bubbling Over broke seventh and improved his position until, at the half he was in third place. He was unable to catch Top Flight and Tick On, but he held third place safe. While it would appear that Burgoo King has not shown enough real form to merit serious Derby consideration, Burgoo King may well be the sort of horse that develops slowly. It is not unusual for a poor two-try where low hills lay. She should have a French house with fine, delicate furniture and velvet textured rugs. That would be the proper setting for her.

"Let me think about it," the girl was saying, her fine, soft eyes luminous. What color were they, Heath wondered? Gray or black or were they a lamber, hazel? Some day, perhaps, he would really know. The car jolted around a corner. In spite of Simon's careful driving the going was rough. The motion flung Susan into Heath's arms, and the fragrance of the burden momentarily intoxicated him. She righted herself, laughing, but a bright apricot stain colored the pure oval of her face and the man felt silent. He had not realized before how his heart was set on this marriage. Now he knew fully how much he had builded upon it. It was Ruth, with her irrational jealousies, her fierce and sudden decision to try to blacken this girl's name, who had made him see. It had been the last thing Ruth had meant to do, but she had accomplished it.

Heath took up the speaking tube and told Simon in a low, stern tone to be more careful. Nothing should happen to this girl through fault of his. Heath swore in his heart. Nothing but good!

Susan thrilled to the tone, realizing in some small measure what prompted it. She glanced sidewise at his nicely etched profile. Yes, here was a man to respect, perhaps, truly love. It would not be a wild, whirlwind emotion such as she had felt for Bob Dunbar, but it would be real. There would be dignity in it. "You must have time to think," the man said again after a long pause. "It is nothing to decide today or tomorrow. Only don't keep me waiting too long! I'm not a very patient man."

He turned to smile at her. Her slim fingers, lying curled on the soft furry surface of the laprobe, found themselves imprisoned and held fast. "I am not patient usually," Ernest Heath said. "But I can wait for this. I can wait for my girl." Susan felt an impulse to tears. He was fine and honorable and reticent. He was all the virtues. Why couldn't she love him?

They did not speak again until Simon halted before the little house. "I'll see you to your door," Heath said gravely. Susan's heart fluttered.

She hoped Aunt Jessie would not be watching at the front window!

There would be so much to explain.

Luck was with her. The man bent over her hand at parting. Stripping aside her heavy glove he turned the palm upwards and gravely, deliberately kissed it. "You darling," he said. "Good-night."

When she was on the other side of the door and the great car slid away through the night.

Susan stared about her with new eyes, seeing the shabbiness of the little hall with its "coat tree", its artificial fern, the worn carpet on the floor. The odor of a boiled dinner floated out from the kitchen. Aunt Jessie would be there, stirring and seasoning, working as usual. What couldn't she do for Aunt Jessie if she married Ernest Heath? It would mean security and luxury for them both. It was—there was no denying it—a grave temptation. (To Be Continued)

"It's I who am clumsy—and stupid, too," she amended. She had the satisfaction of seeing that rare smile lighten his features. Heath was thinking. "The girl has tact and, what is more, graciousness." He had considered himself a completely disillusioned man but there was something in Susan's fragrantness which delighted him and gave him hope for the future. What could he not do with this girl at his side? He liked to think of her in soft, fine fabrics with pearls at her throat. He would build her a new home somewhere in the coun-

Australian Toll Collectors Shocked

SYDNEY, Australia. (UP)—Toll collectors, who take passage fees from motorists passing over the new Sydney Harbor bridge, also received electric shocks when their hands touched those of the motorists. The bridge authorities were puzzled, but the investigation of Dr. Bradfield, supervising engineer, revealed that the dustless purity of the atmosphere over the harbor was responsible. In the ordinary way the electricity escaping from the batteries of automobiles is attracted by particles of dust, but in the dust-free air of the harbor it rushed to the metal bodies of the cars and the bodies of the passengers themselves.

Toll collectors are now wearing rubber pads on their hands. Roads built in the United States offer employment to about 3,000,000 persons, 1,000,000 working on the roads and the rest making material for them.
