A MEANINGLESS REMEDY

Samuel Vauclain, prominent industrialist, seems to have hit upon a depression remedy that at least has the merit of extreme simplicity.

"When everybody makes up their mind to go to work and stops talking about the government supporting them, we'll get out of our troubles," he remarked the other day.

Nothing could be much simpler—or, incidentally, much more meaningless. "Make up our minds to go to work"—well, there are quite a few millions of Americans who would do just that, in a jiffy, if only someone would tell them which and where and how they could get the necessary jobs.

It seems to be easy, somehow, for a rich man to overlook that little fact.

ILLUSTRATING A FACT

The extent of the decline in security values brought about by the depression was never better illustrated than in the shrinkage of the estate of the late Samuel Mather, famous Ohio philanthropist.

Mr. Mather, who had extensive holdings in steel companies and in Great Lakes steamship lines, had an estate that was worth upwards of $40,000,000 in the summer of 1929. Last year he died; and when an inventory of his estate was filed in the Ohio probate court the other day, it was found that that $40,000,000 value had come down to about $6,500,000.

Could there be a more graphic example of the way in which values have contracted in the last two and one-half years?

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

Preacher Borum's carrier pigeons don't have much on that hawk when it comes to covering the country.

As I write this, I don't know whether Pete Patterson has arrived with his bay horse or not, but I heard he was going to spend a few days here prior to taking in the Ojessa races.

I'll bet a lot more people would have gone to the Rankin rodeo if they had known it was going to be a rehearsal of world champion roping at the big shows this summer.

I'm glad to see the local republicans so wide awake that they can hold two or three separate conventions and elect different sets of delegates, enough to stir up a contest when the delegates attempt to be seated at the state convention.

Even Aunt Jessie blinked and fumbled for her handkerchief. It had been so nice of that Mr. Waring to offer to give Susan away. Of course, he wasn't a member of the family but it seemed more proper to have a man do it.

CHAPTER XLVIII

The church was dark and old. There was about it none of the feverish activity usually associated with a wedding. There was no canopy nor was there a strip of crimson carpet.

A tall, pleasant-faced girl prettily dressed in dove-gray was whispering to some friends in the third pew. They were listening to her words with interest.

"You could have knocked me over with a feather last night when she called! It was about nine o'clock. I knew they were thinking about it but I didn't know it was to be so soon."

"But, Rose," protested a small, chubby damsel sentimentally, "I think this is the nicest way to be married—without any fuss and sort of like a surprise party."

"I thought it was all off," put in another girl, nodding her head. "Her aunt told my mother yesterday afternoon that she was going down to the country to live and Susan would probably go with her."

"Here they come," Rose murmured. Every head was turned toward the door and back again toward the chancel from which the bridegroom, tall and fair-haired, now emerged.

She was all in white, ivory white crepe dress with long sleeves, small white hat made entirely of flower petals. Her eyes were lowered. There was something unreal, something unworshipful about her.

There was not a sound in that quiet place beyond the voice of the minister and the low, clear responses

Dances at Nobles And Adams Homes Of Interest

Informal dances have held interest for a group of younger folk since commencement last week.

On Monday evening Sarah Woods and Louise Wolcott were hostesses at a dance given at the home of Mrs. E. C. Adams.

At weddings, Aunt Jessie wondered, pretending that she herself had got a cinder in her eye. There was no sense in it. She might do a bit of weeping with every good right because she was going to miss Susan, no mistake about it.

The music was crashingly triumphant now as the bridal pair turned to leave. The little swarm of guests followed.

Rose was whispering to the chubby girl, "Yes, I ran down this morning and picked out the hat and dress for her while they went to City Hall."

The chubby girl murmured that was her idea of romance. "And they are going to Montana! What do you think of that?"

Rose said sturdily, "I think it's marvelous." The bride and bridegroom signed (See MANHUNTERS, Page 4)

DO YOU INHALE?

A frank discussion at last on a subject that has long been "taboo"

"Let sleeping dogs lie!" So said the cigarette trader when first we raised the subject of inhaling. But dodging an important issue is not Lucky Strike's policy!

Do you inhale? That question is vitally important... for every smoker inhales—knowingly or unknowingly. Every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette! And the delicate membranes of your throat demand that your smoke be pure, clean—free of certain impurities.

No wonder Lucky Strike dares to raise this vital question! For Luckies bring you the protection you want... because Luckies' famous purifying process removes certain impurities concealed in every tobacco leaf. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it! So, whether you inhale knowingly or unknowingly, safeguard those delicate membranes!

Thank you! You were right."

them all. The white dress and the little flowered hat were packed away in one of the big bags. She wore the faun-colored suit. "Goodbye, goodbye, don't forget to write to me!" The bell clanged and the little group of faces under the station lights began to fade into a blur. Bob's arm stole around Susan. "I'm here," he whispered. "She gave him a shy smile. Was he really here--this splendid young man with the soft voice and the dark blue eyes? It scarcely seemed possible. They sat, hands linked, on the platform of the club car. "I'm sorry you had to make your father angry, Bob." The young man shrugged. "Hell come around. He always does."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES The lesson-sermon subject was "Soul and Body" in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, May 22. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth within you?" was the golden text taken from I Corinthians 3:16. The service included the following passage from the Bible (I Corinthians 5:1): "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. The following citations from pages 317 and 359 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, were also included. "The individuality of man is no less tangible because it is spiritual and because his life is not at the mercy of matter. The evidence of the existence of Spirit, Soul, is palpable only to spiritual sense, and is not apparent to the material senses, which recognize only that which is opposite of Spirit."

Mrs. Ernest Schumaker and her family, of Salina, Kansas, took a real vacation trip last summer--6,000 miles, through eight Western States. Road construction was going on in every one of the eight states--but the Schumakers ducked the detours! They knew before they started where the torn-up roads were and how to miss them, thanks to a Conoco Travel Bureau routing map. "We missed several awfully bad detours and lots of minor ones by following the trails you mapped out for us," Mrs. Schumaker wrote us. "We traveled 6,000 miles without any trouble whatsoever."

If you are planning a trip this year, write the Conoco Travel Bureau, Denver. Tell us where you want to go and when. Or, if more convenient for you, fill in one of our applications for this travel service at any Conoco station, and it will reach us without delay. We'll send you--free of charge and without obligation--an official Conoco Passport, excellent road maps with marked routes, illustrated travel literature and other information. Gomez Returned To B'Spring Jail

DIG SPRING.—F. A. Gomez who escaped through a maze of blind passages and false doors here last summer when the sheriff's department raided a whisky still and concealed several hundred gallons of liquor, is back in "the home town" today. Gomez, considered the leader in the whisky enterprise, was placed in the Howard county jail by Deputy Sheriff Bob Wolf, who had brought him by automobile from Hutchinson, Kansas. Gomez was convicted recently at Hutchinson for operating a whisky deal and given six months and a fine of $1000. He is under indictments in 32nd district court for illegal possession of intoxicating liquor and for illegal possession of equipment for manufacture of intoxicating liquor. From the time of the raid here until several months ago when he turned up in Kansas the long arm of Howard county law had been searching over the entire southwest for Gomez.

"Front Page" Stars In "Final Edition"

Pat O'Brien and Mae Clarke, who made their initial talking picture hits in "The Front Page," once again are seen on the screen together in a story of the Fourth Estate. They head the all-star cast of "The Final Edition" which opens tomorrow at the Grand theatre. Mae Clarke, plays the sob sister on the staff of the tabloid daily. The cast includes Mar. New Comedy Is Best for Robert Robert Montgomery and a hilarious cast in a hitting comedy romance of "Merely Old England" is the attraction at the Ritz theatre today, where his latest picture "But the Flesh is Weak" is mingling laughs and heart throbs for delighted audiences. Montgomery plays the clever but laughable Max, impoverished young aristocrat who resolves to marry a rich girl. He finds a prospect in a wealthy noblewoman, works all his engaging charms, and the girl's love falls in love with her best friend who hasn't a cent. The Ritz theatre will offer a novelty attraction to patrons on June 10, showing babies and children of Midland people on the screen. An artist has been employed to catch the smiles of the children and show them to Midland people between now and the showing date.

Supplies Bulls

Calves for the 4-H club boys of Lubbock county were supplied this week by John M. Gist. Gist supplied the 4-H club boys of Hale county last year and a part of the calves for the Hale youths again this year. Gist reports the sale of a herd bull, Finley bred, to John Doane of Palo Pinto county for $500 and $500 bull to Tom Mitchell of Marfa, being the second Anxiety bred bull sold by Gist to Mitchell this year.

Seed Calls Increase

Calls for Red Cross garden seeds increased this week, as more people started trying to raise their own food. Land belonging to non-residents is being put to work raising vegetables in a few cases where people have no land of their own. Those who have families they don't want to go hungry, can get free garden seed from the Red Cross at 413 West Wall, and get free land by applying at the chamber of commerce office. The welfare association is gathering data on people who garden, but refuse to grow gardens. The charity funds will be so low next winter, a strenuous effort is being made to induce people to get away from charity now by growing gardens to save the funds for winter.

GALVESTON.—Lyman C. Coffin, government undercover man, who said he was beaten and thrown into the Gulf of Mexico, described himself Monday as "holding the sack and on the spot" and criticized his employers for allowing him to face a narcotic ring single-handed. Coffin remained secluded in a hotel room, fearing to venture forth. He said he was forced into an automobile Friday night, driven to a boat, carried far out in the gulf, knocked in the head and tossed overboard. Synthetic wood can be made by using a mixture of 50 per cent saw-dust with chalk and chemicals and subjecting it to heavy pressure.

Huey Long Is Much Funnier Than Tom Hefflin of Alabama

By RODNEY DUCHER NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—Certain things about Senator Huey Long the burly Louisiana "kingfish" are bound to remind you of Tom Hefflin, the boisterous ex-senator from Alabama. But there is only one Huey Long and this town has not seen a senator who could compare with him for a very long time. He is, for instance, a much more intelligent person than Hefflin and a more dangerous man with whom to swap blows. He seems to have a rather clear idea what he is trying to do. He flails away at specific, existing targets, adopting causes that have plenty of support, rather than concentrating ridiculously on such subjects as the pope.

Like Tom, however, Huey sprinkles his long tirades with humor, which seems more apt in debate and also funnier than old Tom's. Here are samples taken from his filibuster on the tax bill: "I hope that senators will understand that I am undertaking to save them for themselves and from themselves in this matter. . . I am through agreeing to anything now. I am going to express my opinion. I am feeling the urge to talk as I progress. . . I am becoming convinced by my own logic that it is necessary to talk a long time on this matter. . . I have concluded since I have been talking here, that we ought to send senators home too late to see the secretary tonight and that we should come back here two or three hours before they have a chance to see him in the morning so that senators can follow their own dictates." Senator Jim Watson of Indiana: "The secretary is a pretty vigorous man and he might stay up late, too." Huey: "That's what I am afraid of."

"Back up in my country one of our fellow citizens had left, one of our colored brethren, vowing vengeance against another one. He came home Saturday night, after he had gone off and earned enough money to buy a Harrington & Richardson pistol, to get vengeance on the man who was his superior in physical virtues and power. He knocked on the door. 'Who's in there?' The answer came, 'Mose Jackson.' Then, 'Mose, let me in. I have come to settle matters.' 'The voice came back, 'This ain't Mose Jackson that is here now. This is where Mose lives, but Mose it out.' 'Then the man said, 'All right; if Mose lives here, open the door. I'm going to wait for him.' He said, 'I think you misunderstand me. This ain't where Mose Jackson lives; this is where Mose Jackson used to live.' 'Then let me in there, if Mose Jackson ever did live there.' 'You must have misunderstood me, brother. Mose Jackson never did live here.' 'So the committee took up their bill. 'This is us. This is me. Then they went two or three more days and said 'No, this ain't us, but this is where we was.' Then they went a bit longer and the senators from Utah and Mississippi (Smoot and Harrison) come in here and say, 'No, we never was over there. We has been here all the time.' 'When the senator from Mississippi stand by the committee, I am reminded of the old man who died in East Carroll Parish. He put a little poem on the tombstone. 'Remember, man, as you pass by, So you are so once was I. So as I am, so you must be. Prepare to die and follow me.' 'But the wife who put up the tombstone did not want to be bound by what was on it and so as a saving grace to herself she wrote two more lines: 'To follow you I'm not content, Until I know the way you went.' ' (Gallery occupants laughed so hard at that one that their ejection was threatened.)
