

KING REED TO TRIAL ON THURSDAY

State Attempts to Prove Walton Was "Inoffensive" Boy

TELEPHONE CALL TOLD OF TODAY

Witness Says Walton Hung Up On By Hamilton

WEATHERFORD, Nov. 4. (UP)—Efforts to refute the testimony of a half dozen defense witnesses that Walton was an apparently dangerous person, was made by the state, sending witnesses to the stand to testify that the youth was "kind and inoffensive."

Defense objections slowed the state's case. The state called G. W. Doid, Amarillo steel worker, who testified that Walton worked under him and was "kind and inoffensive."

Orville Hinkle, Amarillo bank employe said he stood within a few feet of Walton the morning he was killed. He testified he heard Walton dial a telephone number and say, "Tom Walton speaking. Understand you want to talk to me. Hello, Hello."

Walton hung up and said, "He hung up."

Hinkle said he could not swear that Walton was taking to Hamilton.

Defense attorneys argued that Hinkle's testimony was unfair. Defendant testimony was refused.

WEATHERFORD, Nov. 4.—(P)—About fifteen minutes before Tom Walton was slain in the office of his father in law, R. H. Hamilton, on May fourth, he telephoned Hamilton, a witness testified today in Hamilton's murder trial.

Only a portion of what the witness, Orville Hinkle, said he overheard at Tourist Inn was admitted as evidence after a lengthy argument in which three prosecutors, and five defense attorneys participated.

Hamilton testified Saturday that he had a telephone call shortly before the homicide, and that when he attempted to talk, the person on the other end of the line hung up or the connection was broken.

"WHITEY" WALKER TRIAL POSTPONED UNTIL NEXT TERM

The trial of William J. Walker, held on three murder indictments, was passed until next term of court by agreement of attorneys today after District Attorney Clem Calhoun told the court he needed witnesses absent and that he wanted more time to investigate charges against Walker who is under indictment for shooting to death Policeman Coke Buchanan, and for the deaths of the sheriff's deputies, Elmer Terry and Pat Kenyon.

Midland Twelfth In Texas In Permits

With all cities of the state falling off in building permit issuances, Midland stood twelfth for weekly growth in Texas over week ending Nov. 2, and eighteenth for yearly growth, according to an Associated Press tabulation.

Table with 3 columns: City, Week, Year. Lists cities like Houston, San Antonio, Beaumont, Fort Worth, Dallas, Galveston, Shreveport, San Angelo, Austin, Port Arthur, Amarillo, Midland, Waco, Pampa, Lubbock, Big Spring, Wichita Falls, Coppus Christi, Abilene with their respective permit counts.

GULF PRODUCTION CO. TO PUT DOWN 8500 FT. TEST ON RANCH

By T. S. HOGAN In January, 1929, I published in this newspaper an article about the world's deepest producing oil well, which is located in the Big Lake Field. The circumstances justify me in recalling that in that article I stated that this well was the most important oil well drilled any place in the United States during the year 1928 and that the State of Texas could well afford to pay the enterprising and courageous companies that drilled a bonus of a million dollars. Outside of the immense value of the well itself it proved the existence of deep pay horizons in the Permian basin and opened up anew to exploration areas theretofore considered condemned by shallow wells. Below the "Big Lime Pay" three pay horizons were encountered with increasing gravity in each successive pay and a gravity of 56 degrees in the pay encountered at 8523 feet.

This well has consistently increased in production of both oil and gas from a beginning of about 100 barrels per day of oil and 4,500,000 feet of gas until last week's record which was 2912 barrels of oil and 26,669,000 feet of gas. This gas carries about 2 1/4 gallons of gasoline per thousand cubic feet so the well is highly valuable for the gas as well as the oil. The well has produced to date about 740,000 barrels of oil which with the gas produced makes the value of its output well in excess of two million dollars. This gravity oil is blended with the lower gravity oil from the 2900 feet horizon thus creating a highly valuable product. This high gravity oil from the deep pay is worth at least three dollars per barrel.

A second well in the same field recently reached the deep pay at a somewhat shallower depth and while not yet completed due to the fact that the drilling tools were blown up in the hole by the gas pressure, it is producing a large quantity of oil and gas and is certain to be a large producer. In spite of the fact that it costs about $150,000.00 to drill these deep wells, several are being drilled and new locations are being made. The facts fully justify this development as the No. 1 well pays for the cost of drilling every 15 days, the value of its output being in excess of $10,000 per day.

The Tulsa Oil and Gas Journal of October 31st announces the beginning of an 8500 feet test by the Gulf Production Co. on the McElroy Ranch in Crane County. The location is 200 feet from the north line and 330 feet from the west line of Section 185. It would be difficult to overestimate the importance of that announcement to this whole community and particularly to Midland.

Some may wonder why such deep wells should be drilled when there is already a great excess of production. There is the soundest kind of business and economic reasons for such deep drilling. In fact the State might well seriously consider the encouragement of such drilling in other pools as for instance the Yates Pool and for the following reasons:

It would not be possible to produce a 56 degree oil by itself without enormous economic loss due to evaporation and other difficulties of handling and transportation. When it is considered that this oil is of as high a gravity as Navy test gasoline these difficulties can readily be appreciated.

In northwest New Mexico where a very high gravity oil is produced it was found that the evaporation from a 250 barrel tank full of oil in one instance amounted to over 100 barrels in 24 hours. The problem of handling and transporting that oil has never been satisfactorily solved though the field is in production several years.

Assuming that this deep pay high gravity oil were now being produced in the Yates Pool a blend could be made with the 30 gravity oil from the upper pay bringing the blended product to about 40 degrees and making it the most desirable of all refining oil. The great loss which will occur if the high gravity oil is later produced alone would be avoided by this method. In addition (Continued on Page 6)

OFFSET TO PENN NO. 1 TO BE SPURRED IN ECTOR COUNTY MIDDLE OF THE WEEK

The second well to be drilled in Ector county's new oil pool, R. R. Penn No. 2, 330 feet from the north line and 2640 feet from the west line of section 16, block 44, 3 south, has the rig up, and will probably spud in by the middle of this week.

The discovery well, R. R. Penn Kloh-Rumsey No. 1, has been connected with the Gulf pipe line and was started flowing into the line Thursday, says the Odessa News-Times which continues:

For the last week or more the Penn No. 1 has been choked down in an effort to hold it within the limits of the storage on hand until the pipe line connection could be established. Wednesday afternoon the backpressure was as high as 675 pounds, and the men were afraid it wouldn't stand any more.

George Webb, son of Representative Henry E. Webb of Odessa, has broadened his flying activity since getting his commercial flying license. Young Webb is to begin a course of instruction to Pecos pilot aspirants within the next few weeks.

IS CHARGED WITH DEATH OF HOLCOMBE

Case Up Before Judge Klapproth In Stanton

King Reed, former Midland chief of police, will go to trial Thursday in Stanton district court for his alleged part in the shooting to death of former Night Watchman J. C. Holcombe several months ago.

Holcombe and Reed staged their battle at the corner of Wall and South Bair street, and when the smoke of their guns had drifted away Holcombe lay dead, pierced through the heart by a slug from a .45 calibre revolver and Reed was weakly leaning against a concrete column of a garage, shot in the abdomen.

Motive Not Known

Only one witness seems to have been present at the shooting. Bill Chilton, former Lamesa peace officer, was with Reed, sitting in Reed's automobile while the fight was waged.

Statements given out immediately following the shooting were few and not particularly revealing. Chilton gave out the statement that the gun battle was waged in the dark, and on the other side of a car parked between the car in which he sat and the two officers.

In the Thomas hospital, after Reed had waged a long fight for life, the former chief of police told a reporter of Midland's daily paper that he "will have something to say later on. I think it best to give out nothing concrete at the present."

Town Is Wrong

"The whole town has been believing something which is not true. I shot Holcombe, it's true, but there was a totally different reason than that advanced in the theory of those who merely discussed the case."

Reed referred to the charge of Holcombe's friends that the former chief of police killed the night watchman because Holcombe's two dogs followed that officer on the street at night contrary to a general order issued by Reed against any dogs running free on Midland streets.

Reed has been out of jail on bond since his recovery. During this time he has lived in San Angelo, where he was at one time house detective of the San Angelo hotel. Before coming to Midland Reed was house detective at the Crawford hotel at Big Spring.

WHAT FLOWERS CAN DO

Those who have not driven over Midland to see the wealth of Chrysanthemums and other fall flowers in bloom in some yards have missed a real touch of beauty.

These flowers speak well not only for the growers, but also for the city and for the climate. Any Californian would pause to look with admiration on some of the flowers blooming in Midland yards at present.

What is needed is more flowers in more yards. These flowers beautify the homes, bring cheer to the sick and bring good prices to those who market them. Make Midland a flower growing community.

A LESSON FROM THE CRASH

The recent disturbing events in the stock market should serve one useful purpose at least and this is that we have great need in this country for a more widespread understanding of the values of true thrift.

It is not the purpose of the writer to attempt in any way to analyze the Wall Street situation either past or present. The only point sought to be made here is that greater thrift among the American people would have prevented much of the trouble that has occurred.

It is hard sometimes to make people believe that fundamentalism do not change—that it is always risky to try to get something for nothing, to try to get rich over night, to try to run a shoestring up to a million.

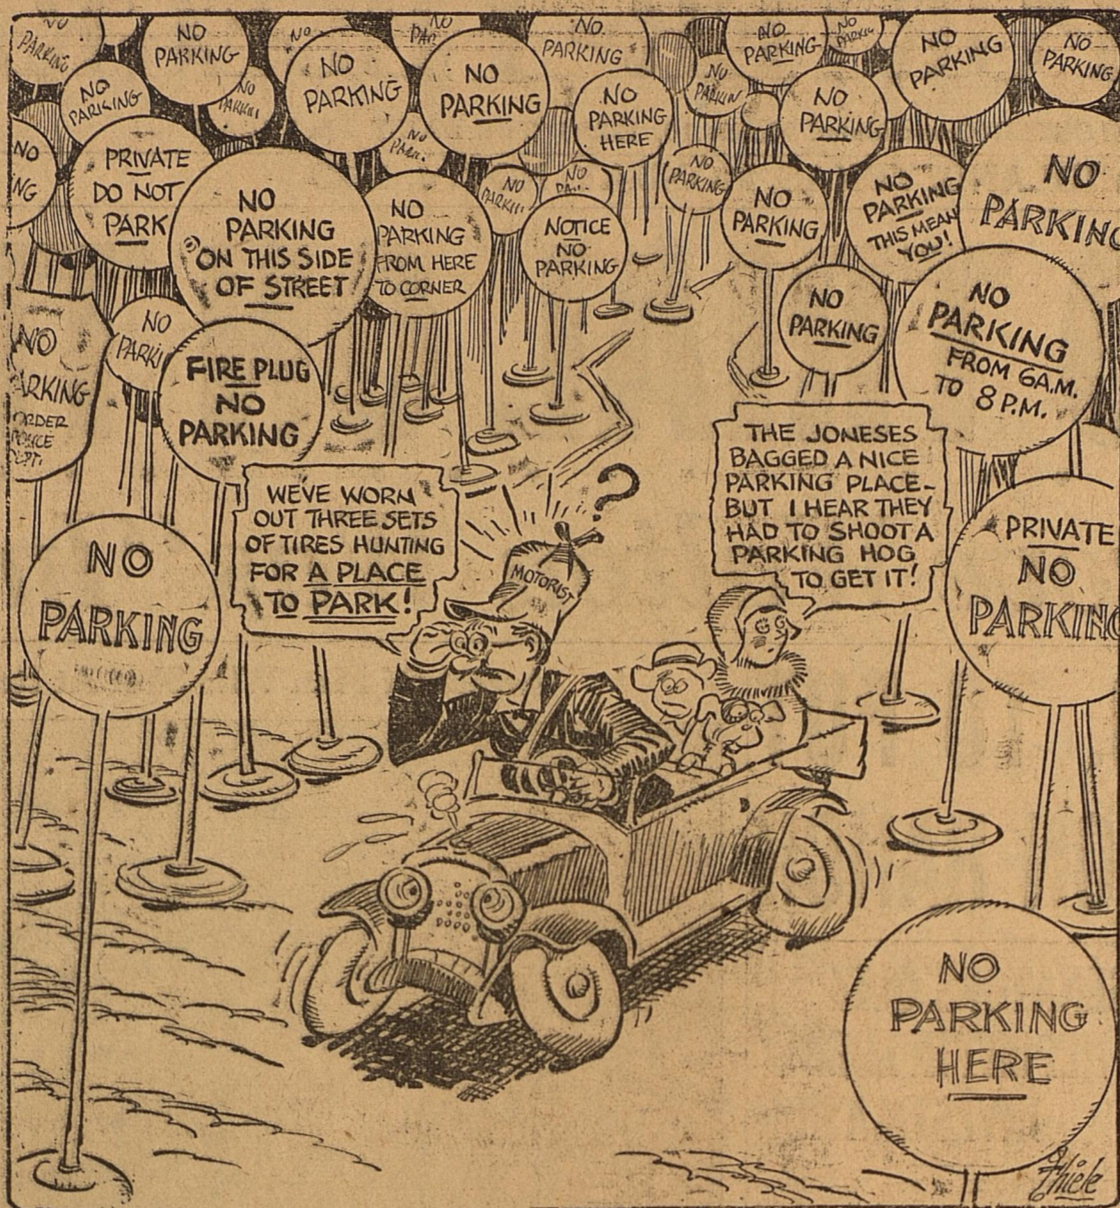

Once in a while someone proves the exception to these rules but such instances are exceedingly rare.

In the long run it is better to be satisfied with such returns from your money as are safe and sound. Through the processes of compound interest or reinvestment of proceeds one can build one's capital to such a great volume as might sound truly amazing. These processes are slow at first. It requires much patience to let your earnings grow along sound lines when those around you apparently are reaping prodigious profits and getting rich from their speculative activities.

But while these methods are slow they are dependable and there are millions of people today who are thanking their lucky stars that they have been satisfied to put their money in safe places even though the profits may have seemed small.

As long as we stick to the fundamentals of thrift we are safe. Whenever we get away from them there is no likelihood what financial disaster may overtake us.

The Great Year-Round Hunting Season!

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—It begins to look as if the one and only George W. Norris of Nebraska, who has been the most conspicuous figure in the Senate's special session, would be with us for another six years after his present term expires in 1931.

In that case the credit or the blame probably will go to President Hoover.

There are various signs and reports to the effect that Mr. Hoover would like very much to get rid of Mr. Norris and that Mr. Hoover's champion and co-worker in the undertaking will be Mr. Samuel R. McKelvie, a former Nebraska governor, who would like to run against Mr. Norris in the Republican primaries of 1930.

He'd planned to quit. Until he began to hear reports of this arrangement, Mr. Norris had rather intended to retire from the Senate. He had to be tricked into the running again in 1924 and a year or two ago he told his friends that if he ran for public office again it would be for governor of Nebraska, as he wanted to work for an ideal government in his own state. But now Uncle George begins to hear reports that the president has marked him for the slaughter—that Mr. Hoover wants to send his own trade-marked candidate before the Nebraska voters and find out whether they prefer a conservative, "constructive" gent who will work in harness with the White House or an incorrigible independent like Mr. Norris.

And Uncle George has not the remotest thought of refusing to accept a challenge such as that. In fact, there is no chance at all that he will drop out and let Mr. McKelvie walk off with the nomination. All of which promises a battle of the century if Mr. Hoover indicates any interest in the Nebraska fight. If the standpat element in the Republican party ships its big guns into the state to attack Norris there will be a large trek of the most important Progressives pouring into the state on their heels, and the plains of Nebraska will shake with some of the loudest rumbles of impassioned oratory ever heard.

Heaven knows that Mr. Hoover's provocation has been great. Few men have been more painful thorns in the sensitive Hoover hide than Mr. Norris. And no man who has ever attained a high place in political life has ever been as independent as Mr. Norris.

Uncle George was a thorn long before the two men ever heard of each other. He led the fight in the House against the arbitrary rule of Uncle Joe Cannon. He is the only man left in the Senate of the "wild" group which fought Wilson's war policy to the bitter end. He has fought reactionary measures and reactionary men year in and year out.

Smith was more honest and more progressive.

You might have thought that the Republican senators would have read Mr. Norris out of the party and taken from him his important chairmanship of the Judiciary committee. They didn't dare because every senator with a pretense of progressivism swears by Uncle George.

Fought Hoover's Policies. Lately he has become almost Nemeses for Mr. Hoover. As the leader of the Progressives he fixed up the tariff bill amendment which deprived the president of the right to fix tariff rates, as provided by the flexible clause. As the most important figure in the farm bloc, he put over his own revised version of the export debenture plan into the tariff measure. Each time he led the two worst defeats which Mr. Hoover has suffered in Congress.

And if Mr. Hoover sees red when he thinks of Norris, who can blame him? Heaven knows he sent a long enough procession of emissaries to Norris long before the Republican national convention, assuring Mr. Norris that Mr. Hoover was a progressive of his own stripe and would shortly be coming out boldly for the things for which Mr. Norris stood. It wasn't Mr. Hoover's fault that Mr. Norris had to be shown before he would support Mr. Hoover's candidacy.

Mr. Norris is the most important figure in the Senate today and he doesn't agree with Mr. Hoover on the points concerning which Mr. Hoover seems most interested. So it is easy to believe the stories which would have Mr. Hoover planning to throw the administration influence behind anyone whom Mr. Hoover believes able to defeat Mr. Norris. The only subject of speculation here is why Mr. Hoover isn't willing to let Mr. Norris retire without baiting him into another fight. Stories have been coming from the general direction of the White House to the general effect that Mr. Hoover and the Republican organization would start a major offensive against all insurgents in 1930, but Mr. Norris had promised to step out even before Mr. Hoover was elected.

Few doubt that Mr. McKelvie is Mr. Hoover's fair-haired boy in Nebraska. Mr. McKelvie played Mr. Harding and Mr. Coolidge for a federal job and everyone knew he wanted one. Mr. McKelvie, claiming to represent the farmers, shouted against the McNary-Haugen bill when the farmer groups and the Senate and House farm blocs were unanimously for it. Mr. McKelvie, when the Nebraska delegation at Kansas City was supposed to vote for Mr. Norris, undertook to get everyone to vote for Mr. Hoover and made a second speech for Mr. Hoover. Mr. McKelvie got himself appointed as the wheat representative on Mr. Hoover's Federal Farm Board—the only obviously political appointment to the board. Mr. McKelvie said he would only serve about a year. When the year is up it will be time to think of the Nebraska primary.

He Hasn't Much Chance. Mr. McKelvie, having at some time in the past been elected governor of Nebraska, is the sort of man Mr. Hoover might think could lick Mr. Norris for the Senate. Mr. Hoover knows that the Anti-Saloon League became very sour on Mr. Norris because the Anti-Saloon League was fighting Mr. Smith, whom Mr. Norris preferred.

Nevertheless, Mr. Norris has a very dry record and so have many of the Progressives who will invade Nebraska to take up his cause. It is too early to suggest that the Anti-Saloon League will definitely identify itself with Mr. McKelvie's candidacy as against that of Mr. Norris. And it is a long time since Mr. McKelvie was nominated or elected to anything by the farmers of Nebraska.

In fact, the betting in Washington is that if Mr. Hoover puts Mr. McKelvie into the race, Mr. Norris will not have much trouble in licking Mr. McKelvie. And this in spite of the fact that Mr. McKelvie, on the Federal Farm Board, has been given a beautiful opportunity to set up shop as a warm-hearted friend of the farmers.

Coffee Guzzling Club notes. The boys from the Texas Electric, who are strong contenders for championship honors, have moved their coffee guzzling hours up 30 minutes ahead of the club's regular meeting time, 9:30 a. m., 1:30 p. m., and 3:30 p. m. They must be getting in another drink at 5:30. Boys from the ad department, look to your honors!

Fred Wemple and Percy Mims, members of the Rotary committee on the Armistice Day program, ran true to army form when they started at once to pass the buck. These boys, it might be said, are training hard for coffee guzzling perfection.

When several of the construction crew working on the new railroad from Alpine to Presidio quit their jobs, a report was immediately circulated that a new gold strike had been found. The story later was branded as a mistake. Maybe they had to find some way of getting workmen back on the rail job. If I can get a few days of this column written ahead, I'm going prospecting to see if there is really any gold there.

SOPHIE RISES ON MAGIC STAGE IN "HONKY TONK"

An unusual feature of the great night club setting in Warner Bros. latest picture, "Honky Tonk," which introduces the famous Sophie Tucker as a film star and is the feature attraction today at the Ritz Theatre, is an ascending stage on which the magnetic lady makes her entry to the floor of the cabaret.

Throngs of merry-makers dance—a bevy of choristers trip down the runways—others put on a dancing act—then from the far end of the club floor, rises a stage—bearing the astonishing Sophie!

Some of Sophie's most dramatic moments emanate from this platform, and for others she steps down into the middle of the floor, going back at the completion of the scene and disappearing as the stage returns to its former level.

This stage is moved by hydraulic power, and is one of the most finished examples of stagecraft.

"Honky Tonk" was directed by Lloyd Bacon, and Miss Tucker's supporting cast includes George Duraya, Lila Lee, Audrey Ferris, Mahlon Hamilton and John T. Murray. Leslie S. Barrows did the original story, C. Graham Baker the adaptation.

The WOMAN'S DAY by ALLENE SUMNER

The death of Mrs. Anna Bryan Ayres, outstandingly successful business woman, obviously the result of a suicide pact, brings up the apparently unanswerable question: What do women really want?

They want a career, say others. Very well, Mrs. Ayres certainly had this. As advertising manager of a large corset firm and an authority on women's styles, she was one of the most successful and highest priced women executives in the country—sitting right on top of the world.

They want children, say others. Mrs. Ayres had three, two daughters and one son—all of them fine, beautiful specimens. The oldest was just 13, at an age where she could be companionable, and the boy 7, still almost a baby.

They want background, say others. Mrs. Ayres had that. A college graduate herself, she had taught English and Mathematics at Brown and Chicago University, and her divorced husband had been a college professor at Amherst where she had lived for years in the cultural environment of a large college.

They want to look young and have nice clothes, the frivolous one might suggest. Mrs. Ayres was handsome and youthful looking. She was exquisitely groomed and had beautiful clothes.

Lonely—and in love. Yes, she had children, a career, plenty of money, and education and brains. But she wanted something else. When she met William Gaylord, infinitely less successful than she, who had never risen any higher than a counting stool, and probably never would, because he was 50 and looked it, Mrs. Ayres realized she wanted a husband and companionship again—that she wanted to mother someone, and to be needed.

Though devoted to her children, perfectly satisfied with her job, and with all the money she needed, she faced the fact that she was lonely—and that she was in love. Then, instead of parting, as these two had planned, because of the obstacles—For Galord was already married—they died together. No one knows just how. When found, both were dead from bullet wounds.

One of the newer problems that is coming up is what women are going to do with the youth they are so frantically preserving. In the old order of things, romance came early in a woman's life, if it came at all. By the time she was 45, she was usually the mother of several children who had stolen her strength and her looks. She was old when her biological usefulness was over. She watched from the sidelines.

Today a woman may marry in her 20's, have a reasonable family by the time she is 35, and still be young in looks and in spirit with 10 or 20 years in which she is still attractive, handsome, and eager for life and adventure. She is still interested in men—and they often find her more fascinating than the flapper.

HER PROBLEM She cannot live in her children's world—they don't want her. She can't use up all her energies in the modern home where everything is done mechanically. She can give much of her enthusiasm and energy to a job—but not all of it. She needs the companionship of a congenial man. If this man happens to be her husband, that is splendid. If he happens to be someone else's husband, the situation is not so easy to handle.

Perhaps what women want was summed up honestly by an ultra modern who said: "I want a home, and I want to work. I want a job, and I want leisure. I want children, and someone else to take care of them. I want a devoted husband and exciting suitors—I want everything."

Midland People Return From Convention Mrs. Florence Richardson, Rev. Thomas D. Murphy and Mrs. Murphy and daughter, Lois, returned Saturday from Corpus Christi, where they attended the convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

YOUR CHILDREN by Olive Roberts Barton © 1929 by NEA Service Inc.

About every dozen years or so we have an autumn that out-does all other autumns in color as completely as a rich red peony outdoes a daisy. And this is one of them, at least in the part of the world where I live.

Certainly old Pa Nature has spilled all his paint pots—I refuse to consider nature as entirely feminine—and talking about painting the clouds with sunshine, the year is certainly dying in a blaze of glory as far as the woods are concerned.

I hope you've taken the children to see the woods, if you live in the city. For some reason or other few city trees turn. Even the park trees seem to be true to their colors and stay green until a hard frost turns their leaves into a dismal brown, then off they drop.

I don't know why it is—lack of moisture, perhaps, or something in the soil, or the more even temperature. Country trees are subject to more sudden changes of heat and cold and no doubt that affects the chemistry of vegetation.

Nature's Stage Setting Anyway, the woods are a most remarkable panorama of beauty now and I wouldn't miss some of the things I've seen recently for a new winter coat.

The blood-red and orange-red maples, depending on the variety, the oaks a burgundy shade that makes a grove of them with the sunlight shining through a glowing furnace of beauty, the bright gold-yellow of chestnuts and locusts against the dark green of the beech's pearly purple—well, you'll have to see it to know.

I wonder how many little city children who don't have cars don't know what the country looks like in the fall. A good many, I'm afraid.

If it were humanly possible I wish the schools could let out for just one heavenly day, load these little city dwellers on buses and show them what this good old world can look like.

"Doc" Young's Old "Landmark" Razed?

The number of stories to a man's house should, from physical law decrease as a man's age increases, says J. D. Young, president of the J. D. Young corporation of furniture stores.

Young advances as his reason for arriving at such a theory the convenience of not having to climb so many stairs.

Now the story which goes with this aforesaid generalization is this: the doctor had an "edifice" of marvelous construction on one of the outer fringes of the city. In fact, architects studied the lines of the structure for months, trying to decide under which type of building it belonged. They mulled over the matter very like a paleontologist would the fossilized remains of some prehistoric specimen.

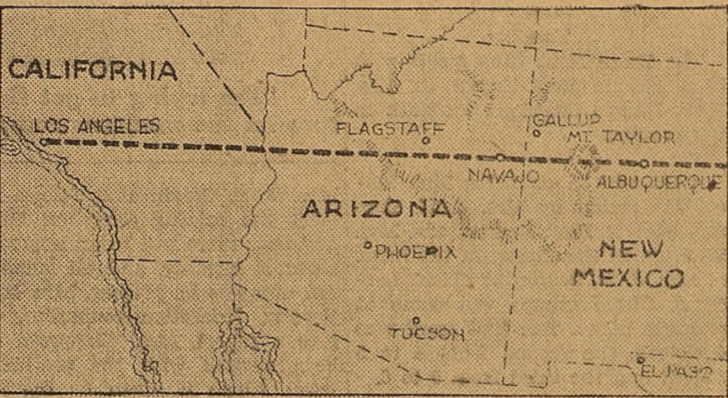

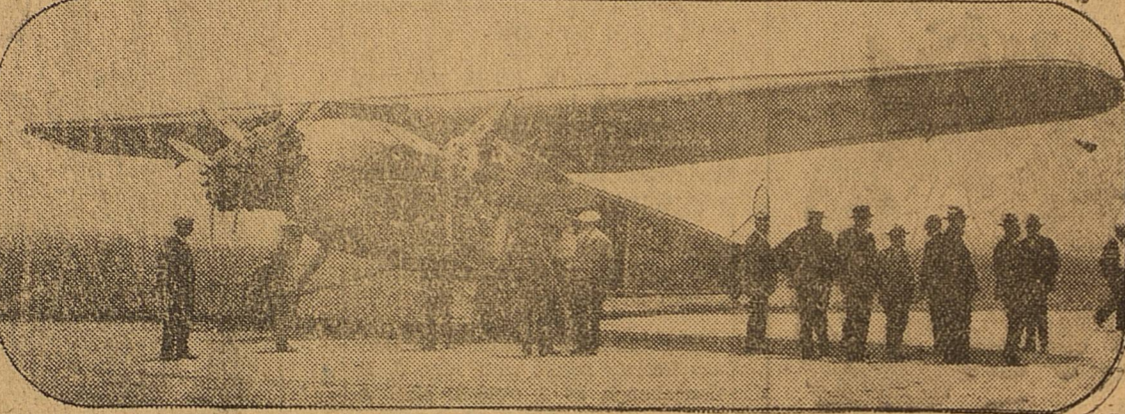

Eventually they decided to give up the task of classifying the building and announced in tired, disappointed voices the fact to the doctor.

"It is too much of a problem for us," one of the eminent men exclaimed. "It is what we would describe from physical properties or—cocco, shambling, bizarre, lacking in heterogeneity, a misnomer, and other such terms known to the nomenclature of the architect."

Dr. and Mrs. Young have moved into the Stratford. The "doc" says little, but it is thought that his theory of age requiring a home with no stairs is a stall—and that Mrs. Young had quite some little "say" in the moving is the opinion of their many Midland friends.

At any rate it is the hope of many West End home owners that the J. D. Young former home is to be razed.

Big Passenger Transport Missing After Battling Storm High Over Arizona

Pictured above is a typical scene in the Arizona "Bad Lands," beautiful in their rugged grandeur, where searching planes sought a big passenger liner of the Western Air Express that disappeared with five men after leaving Los Angeles for Kansas City. The ship was last reported over Navajo, Ariz., headed toward Albuquerque, N. M., but was battling a storm and was believed to have been driven toward Mount Taylor, where a T. A. T. plane crashed recently with a loss of eight lives. Below is a closeup of a big Western Air Express plane. The map at the left shows the scene of the search.

Howard-Glasscock Daily Potential Is 57,022 Barrels In October Says Umpire

BIG SPRING, Texas.—The daily potential on 128 wells receiving proration in the Howard-Glasscock county fields totaled 57,022 barrels during October according to report issued by E. E. Andrews, proration umpire. The field is under a 37,500 barrel per day allowance, the amount run the past month totaling 34,212 barrels. The Western Extension field which has received the principle play during the past thirty days which yielded four wells that tested over two thousand barrels each. This field was placed on a 40 percent proration allowance by proration umpire instead of the 75 per cent allowance allowed by the Railroad Commission to meet the demand for the maximum amount of oil the pipe line companies would use. The pipe lines refusing to buy more oil than their outlets. The proration allowance was recently lifted on the wells produced from the 2500 foot sand by the railroad commission but retained on the wells produced from the 3000 foot and 2200 foot horizons.

Sister Mary's Kitchen

By SISTER MARY, NEA Service Writer

Very often some form of "quick" bread adds the finishing touch to an otherwise plain meal. Baking powder biscuits and honey, muffins and marmalade, cornmeal sticks and soup, brown bread and cottage cheese—these combinations and innumerable others are engaging and nourishing.

The chemical action back of the "quick" biscuit or muffin mixture is interesting and worth the cook's consideration.

There are three general types of baking powders on the market, but they all liberate approximately the same amount of carbon dioxide gas. Their main difference lies in their action in the dough before it is heated. The various powders differ also in their residue in the baked product. These compounds apparently have little effect on the other ingredients of the dough.

Carbon dioxide gas is a leavening agent which is produced by the chemical action of an acid on sodium bicarbonate. The sodium bicarbonate or baking soda will not give off its gas until combined with the acid, so all baking powders must contain an acid and baking soda. A starch filler is added to keep these ingredients dry and inert.

When baking soda is used with sour milk, there is the combination of sodium bicarbonate and acid which produces carbon dioxide gas.

An emergency substitute can be made for baking powder by using for each tablespoonful of baking powder called for in the rule one-half teaspoon cream of tartar and one-fourth teaspoon baking soda. Less of the substitute is used because no filler is present.

Too little thought and care are given to the handling of doughs and batters made with baking powder. Too much stirring and manipulating produces soggy, misshapen and "tunneled" products. Quick work and little stirring prevent the escape and loss of carbon dioxide gas before the mixture begins to bake.

Corn meal muffins will be appreciated this time of year if served at any meal from breakfast to dinner. Any that are left over can be split and toasted for afternoon tea.

Two cups flour, 3-4 cup cornmeal, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons melted shortening, 1 egg, 1 cup milk. Mix and sift flour, salt, sugar and baking powder. Add cornmeal and mix. Beat egg until light and add milk and shortening. Add liquid ingredients to dry mixture and stir hard to mix. Fill oiled muffin tins about two-thirds full and bake 20 minutes in a hot oven.

SEVEN GINS BURNED

BRADY, Texas.—(P)—Burning of seven gins in this section, some of them under circumstances that have caused officers to assert the fires were incendiary, has caused armed guards to be placed around the gins. In many of them armed men with shotguns are on constant duty. Special detectives have been employed to investigate the work of what many think is an organized set of night riders but findings have not been made public. Many expect information to be in the hands of the next grand jury meeting here in January.

TEACHER IS STUDENT

entered the University of Arkansas as instructor in mathematics. Later he became president of the institution. Now he is a student. Two former pupils of his mathematics class, George Vaughn, a graduate of 1896 and Robert Leflar, a graduate of 1922, are his instructors. Dean Droke is enrolled in the law school. The LL. D. degree was conferred on him at the spring graduation exercises here last June.

NUDE SLEEPY-WALKER

HOUSTON, Texas.—(UP)—Houston police spent several hours in a recent search for a Godiva-like woman who went for a stroll clad only in a small felt hat and a purse.

The woman's daughter telephoned a frantic call to police headquarters in which she declared that her mother was walking in her sleep. The wandering somnambulist returned to her home while officers were still searching for her.

"I am so old-fashioned as to believe that you can't bring about temperances, social morality and political probity by legislative enactment, compulsion or the power of the police."

Stanton Coach Had Little Football

Another of those sports paradoxes—Briggs Irvin, Stanton coach who is putting out a seeming championship football eleven in this district, played no football until his last years at Simmons.

Formerly, however, he had attended the University of Southern California, where he-man grid teams are perfected, and he had the chance of a lifetime in watching the methods employed in the west.

Irvin has a degree from Simmons university.

Sheep With Cattle On Midland Ranges

Some surprise has been occasioned through the reading public learning in the press of the state that relations of sheep and cattlemen is amicable in the Midland area despite the fact this country was once that of the cattle baron. T. O. Midkiff is not the only Midland county cattleman who has the little woolly creatures in his pastures; and the survivors of the barons realize sheep as range improvers have their definite value.

Midkiff not only has sheep, but he ships them to the north. That is something aside from the comprehension of various state readers, reports say.

SIX FOOTED EAGLE SHOT

DALLAS, Tex.—(UP)—An eagle, measuring six feet from tip to tip, was the trophy brought back here by C. M. Russey, Dallas, from a West Texas hunting trip. Russey killed the bird while hunting with a party of friends. The group had been searching for ducks near Floydada when the monster bird was found. The eagle is being mounted.

MANY men have sought words to describe that "extra something" in Chesterfield. It is there, undoubtedly... a "sparkle" of spicier aroma, an extra touch of flavor, a certain added "character," unmistakably Chesterfield's own. No one word describes it—but only the most inexperienced smoker could fail to mark it. Between other cigarettes and Chesterfield, there is the clear-cut difference between just something to smoke and the cigarette that puts— "TASTE above everything"
