CHIVALRY AND NEED FOR VOTES SET WOMEN IN SPOTLIGHT FOR THE DEMS

CHICAGO.—The women at democratic conventions are always a memory that lingers on.

Some of them are fools, like most of the men, but they add vastly to the color, the zest and the attractiveness of what otherwise would be a dull and overgrown loggia meeting.

The democrats, probably owing to the strong influence of the south where chivalry remains a favorite fetish, or perhaps because they usually are more in need of votes than the republicans, customarily give the gals a better break. They give them more places on the delegations and more conspicuous roles on the platform.

Tammany girls from New York, the Virginia belles who came to scream for Harry on Alfalfa Bill Murray's kiltie band from Oklahoma City (sometimes called "Bill's Bare-Legged Babies" because they were so much better looking than the average chorus).

So much for a general bow to democratic femininity in the aggregate. Getting down to individuals, young and older, one found a more picturesque galaxy at the latest convention than at any other since women became a factor in politics.

Those Greenway Boos Mrs. Isabella Greenway of Arizona, another at whom any discriminating person would take two good looks, won the distinction of being the first woman to be hooded thoroughly. But it was only at the outset, when she made the gallery (See CHIVALRY page 4)

WETS PLAN BIG RALLY ON FIELD DAY, JULY 18TH

FORT WORTH, Tex., July 11, (UP)—The "wets" plan a statewide field day here July 18. That date has been designated as Texas repeal day.

Plans for the demonstration, expected to attract several hundred men supporters from all parts of the state, are being worked out by the Crusaders, under the direction of Wilbur D. Bacon, San Antonio, state director.

Eighteen members of the national prohibition research committee, composed of professors of leading colleges and universities will be here for the demonstration and to make a study of police records and other data to determine whether the 18th amendment has brought any decrease in the consumption of alcoholic beverages, Bacon announced.

"Those who fought for the 18th amendment had one sole purpose, a decrease in the consumption of alcohol and it is found by this committee that the consumption is greater now, then the 18th amendment was passed, as the most colossal failure in history," Bacon said.

While the adoption by the democrats of a "proving wet" plank indicates a change in sentiment all over the United States, should congress now modify the Volstead act, Texas would be unable to profit economically from the change because of the Dean law, Bacon said.

Continental Oil Men Pass Midland

A big bus carrying Continental Oil company executives passed through Midland Sunday, on route to Hobbs, N. M.

President D. J. Moran headed the party, which began its tour several days ago from the homes offices in Ponca City, Oklahoma. George McIntyre, of Fort Worth, general superintendent for Texas, was also in the party.

The group was on its way here from Amarillo and Big Spring, where a night stop was made, and had visited the East Texas field and other Texas producing areas before going to the Panhandle.

H. B. Hurley, West Texas superintendent with headquarters on the company's property south of Big Spring, joined the delegation at Big Spring.

Members of the party were: President Moran, E. J. Nichols, Walker Miller, R. E. Colton, G. F. Smith, T. D. Harris, George McIntyre, Joe M. Dawson, E. G. Smith, H. J. Kennedy, P. J. Ryan, T. H. Forester to Talk On Tree Growing

H. N. Wheeler, forest service lecturer of the U. S. forestry department, will be in Midland the night of August 11, to deliver a free lecture on beautification, with special reference to tree growing.

He will come to Midland under auspices of the Midland chamber of commerce and the Federated Women's clubs. Wheeler is being sent to Midland and other West Texas towns through courtesy of the West Texas chamber of commerce and O. Fred Arthur, forest supervisor of Lincoln National park of New Mexico. He comes to Midland at no cost to the chamber of commerce or women's clubs.

The general public is invited to hear Wheeler. He will speak in the Crystal ball room of Hotel Scharbauer at 8:15 p. m. Mrs. John Haley and Miss Lois Patterson will be in charge of Federated Women's club participation. The chamber of commerce calls attention of Midland to the opportunity to learn to plant trees.

PROOF REQUIRED

AUSTIN, July 11, (UP)—Those charging waste must present proof, Commissioner E. O. Thompson, presiding, said as the railroad commission opened the Southwest Texas oil hearing.

Thompson said any orders made by the commission must be separate and although proration does not apply to pools under 10,000 daily, waste is always prohibited.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

The cause of prohibition had been making progress, nevertheless. In 1899 the prohibition party, never really influential but significant, just the same, of a slowly rising prohibition sentiment, was important Woman's Christian Temperance union came into being; and in 1893, in the First Congregational church of Oberlin, O., was born the Anti-Saloon league.

The league was founded originally to support a local option law; but later it was organized on a national scale, with a convention at Washington. In a very short time it was making its influence felt in no uncertain fashion.

LAWYER BERATES COLONEL

Charge Follows the Sentencing of John Curtis

FLEMINGTON, July 11, (UP)—Judge Adam O. Robbins, overruling a defense motion to set aside his verdict, sentenced John Curtis to a year in the state prison and set a $5,000 fine.

Lloyd Fisher, defense attorney, presented 18 technical points favoring the motion. He argued the verdict is contrary to the judge's charge, weight of evidence and that it results from passion and prejudice.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was not present for the sentencing.

"In 10 years on the bench I have never given anyone's sentencing as much consideration as yours," the jury recommended mercy. There's evidence you have been a respected citizen, but this cannot sway the court. I sentence you to the state prison to one year in the state's prison and to a $5,000 fine.

Curtis, unmoved, said when questioned, "You can hardly expect my saying anything just now."

Fisher said Colonel Lindbergh attended the trial "for the sole purpose of prejudicing the jury."

Minister Asks Why People Drink Booze

Why do people drink booze? Maybe you know, possibly the friend of a friend of yours can say. The Rev. Winston E. Horton believes the Bible gives a graphic reason.

He will speak on the subject Sunday evening, but needs answers as he is asking through The Reporter-Telegram that the Midland public write him letters with reasons outlining and reasons for the next court. I sentence you to the state prison to one year in the state's prison and to a $5,000 fine.

Those who will get to sit at the honor table reserved for those who have enlisted four or more members are: M. D. Johnson, T. O. Minkoff, S. M. Francis, Cotter Hiett and Albert Orck.

The class is inviting all members and men who attend part of the time and all church pastors, superintendents and members of Sunday schools of all denominations. Besides the class members, only men teachers and superintendents and pastors of the various churches are invited. The class had 102 men present Sunday.

By the middle of the 19th century this movement had given birth to a definite movement for the enactment of prohibitory laws.

Maine went dry first of all, and by 1856 no fewer than 12 additional states had done likewise. All of these backslid, however, and shortly after the Civil war, Maine was left alone as the nation's solitary dry state.

There was another rise of prohibition spirit in 1880, however, when Kansas wrote a prohibition law into its constitution, and several more states went dry in the decade following. Again, though, there was backsliding, and by 1905 America contained just three dry states—Maine, Kansas and North Dakota.

The cause of prohibition had been making progress, nevertheless. In 1899 the prohibition party, never really influential but significant, just the same, of a slowly rising prohibition sentiment, was important Woman's Christian Temperance union came into being; and in 1893, in the First Congregational church of Oberlin, O., was born the Anti-Saloon league.

The league was founded originally to support a local option law; but later it was organized on a national scale, with a convention at Washington. In a very short time it was making its influence felt in no uncertain fashion.

Power in Politics The league was primarily an organization supported by the protestant churches; but is officials, with their brilliant general counsel, Wayne B. Wheeler, soon strategized the league knew as much about practical politics as any men in the country.

Farty labels meant nothing to the league. In 1874 the much more serious candidate for office the single test—(See PROHIBITION page 4)

PROLONGING THE AGONY

Just about the best comment that could be made on the depression seems to have come from a New York banker. This man, as quoted in press association dispatches the other day, remarked:

"New Yorkers are all afraid of something that is going to happen. They don't know what it is, but they're afraid just the same. The plain truth is that it already has happened and that we are still alive and moving. I doubt if any crisis that could possibly arise would be worse than what we have survived."

There has been, of course, an enormous amount of fake optimism broadcast since the depression began. If it had been possible for us to talk ourselves back to economic health we would be robust by this time. But at the same time there has been an amazing undercurrent of fear, and this, like the verbal optimism, has been sadly overdone.

For more than a year people have been expressing this fear privately. You've heard them—everyone has. Dark prophecies of doom have enlivened every bridge party and every luncheon table. The result has been the acquisition by the country of a pronounced case of the jitters.

And yet, when you get down to it, isn't this New Yorker just about right? The thing we're so afraid of has already happened to us. We have already hit bottom. The worst has come, and we have somehow lived through it. Any move that we make now is bound to be upward, because we can't possibly go down any farther.

It would do us a lot of good if we could manage to get that fact through our heads.

Timidity and jittery nerves do not provide the best possible background for a business revival. While we are waiting, and looking for new and blacker clouds to arise, the stage is slowly being set for a return to prosperity. If we stop looking behind each bush for a bogeyman we can recognize our opportunity when it arrives. If we don't we shall simply prolong the agony.

THE WET PLANKS

In one way, the prohibition planks of the two major parties represent a clear-cut return to the traditional cleavage between the doctrines of Hamilton and Jefferson.

Considered objectively, the Republican plank urges that the federal government continue to exercise control over the liquor traffic, while the Democratic plank would vest practically all control in the states. The Republican plank is good Hamilton doctrine; the Democratic plank is excellent Jeffersonianism.

Of course, there are other elements entering into the situation, and it seems unlikely that either side will stress the return to traditional policies. But the contrast is there, just the same, interesting to a student of politics if not of any surpassing moment to the ordinary voter.

AN AIR TRAFFIC PROBLEM

The federal rules governing aviation contain one clause providing that no aviator may fly over a city or town at a height of less than 1000 feet. This rule—as anyone who has gone out in the backyard and looked up on a summer Sunday knows—is very frequently violated. But once in a while an accident happens and makes it clear that the rule ought to be enforced strictly.

Such an accident came in the middlewest the other day, when a pilot who was flying over a city had to make a forced landing and crashed into a house. By a fortunate chance, no one was killed—although a good deal of property damage was caused; but the accident speaks volumes for the necessity of keeping all planes at a safe distance above the housetops.

As the volume of aerial traffic increases this necessity will be even more imperative. This particular plane may have been flying at the proper height when its descent began. The accident, nevertheless, points its moral very clearly.

Helpful Health Suggestions

By Martha Bredemeier County Health Nurse

PREVENTION OF TYPHOID FEVER

Three things of special importance in stamping out typhoid fever are: (1) increasing individual resistance to the disease; (2) disposing of human wastes properly; and (3) protecting our food and drink from typhoid germs.

Individual resistance to the disease is increased by immunizing with anti-typhoid vaccine. Such immunization is particularly valuable to those who come in contact with sick persons and those who live where sanitary conditions are not good.

Where practicable every person, especially those between the ages of 12 and 45 years, should be immunized.

Three injections of the anti-typhoid vaccine at intervals of five to eight days is the method of immunization. Usually there is little or no noticeable reaction or discomfort from the injections.

Remember that immunization does not take the place of sanitary measures and the immunized person should still follow careful health habits.

The proper disposal of human wastes is probably the most important preventive measure against typhoid fever.

The cheapest satisfactory way to dispose of wastes is by means of the pit toilet, protected from surface drainage and flies. The cost of a proper toilet of this kind, not including the house is about $15. For about $200, standard plumbing fixtures and a water flush system may be installed. This would include a septic tank and subsoil drainage.

Flies which carry typhoid germs from wastes to human victims should have relentless war waged against them. Their breeding places in garbage, manure and so forth, should be destroyed, houses should be screened against them, and swatters or poison used against all survivors.

Sun and air and boiling water are fatal to typhoid germs. Hence all bedding, linen, and similar articles coming in contact with typhoid patients should first be soaked in strong disinfectant and then boiled for fifteen minutes. Contact infection due to close contact with the sick, spoons, thermometer, and so forth of the typhoid patient should be guarded against as such cases are usually severe.

LUCKY POLICE HOUR

The cold blooded shooting of two bank messengers and the subsequent capture of the murderers by the police, furnished the data for one of the most heartless payroll robberies in the records of the New York police department—data around which D. Thomas Curtin has created as thrilling a drama as any born in the wild imaginations of the best fiction writers. This dramatization will be broadcast from coast to coast Tuesday evening, beginning at 10 o'clock, E. D. S. T., from station WEAJ on an NBC network, as one of the features of the Lucky Strike hour.

Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney of the New York police has authorized the use of this material for Curtin's dramatization, in which the actual slaying of the two bank messengers is vividly re-enacted as well as the chase by the police who followed the robbers to Philadelphia and Cleveland and finally captured the head of the gang aboard a "jinx" a few moments before he would have sailed safely out of the country.

Walter O'Keefe, witty pilot of the magic carpet and Joe Moss and his orchestra will also be heard on this program.

Amazon Leads British Gang

LONDON (UP).—A young Amazon of gaudiness—about 35, fair-haired, well-mannered, and charmingly dressed—is said to be the leader of at least six detachments of youthful motor-bandits and shop-raiders operating here.

Her troops are understood to be made up of young people, mostly from the provinces, between 18 and 25, and the Amazon takes an active part in every big coup.

Scotland Yard knows everything about this fragile law-breaker—everything except her name, her address, and how to catch her!

posals system. It is, of course, more convenient and satisfactory than the pit toilet.

In protecting our food from typhoid germs, water and milk should be particularly watched, for they are most often offenders. All milk used should come from tuberculin-tested cows in sanitary dairy barns where all utensils are sterilized and milking is done with clean hands.

Water borne typhoid usually comes from a surface supply, such as a lake, river, etc., but shallow wells are sometimes infected. Shallow wells need watching. When a well is infected, chlorinated lime or other substances should be put into it to disinfect the water. The sources of the infection should be removed and the well protected against future infection by concrete curbing and prevention of surface drainage or other measures.

Babies in contact with typhoid patients should be guarded against as such cases are usually severe.

HOME RUNS, PLENTY OF SCORES FEATURE OF BUSHER WIN SUNDAY

ROBINSON HOLDS PENWELL WHILE A FLOCK OF HARD HITTERS POUND OUT AN OUT-OF-PROPORTION DECISION

Big guns of the Bushers Sunday roared into life and, for the second consecutive time, battered out a lop sided decision over opponents. Penwell, former conqueror of the Bushers, fell before the slants of Robinson, with Stevens, Cook, Estes, Allen and Girdley pacing the Busher hitting orgy. The score was 19-6.

Doc Ellis' crew did not outthrust Penwell much, but kept bingles coming when they were needed. Robinson did a fair job of scattering Penwell hits.

Estes hit two home runs, and Fred Girdley and Leslie Stevens one each.

On the Fourth of July, Ellis' Bushers walloped a team from Crane City in a game of almost similar uncontrolled hitting and base running.

was he wet or dry? If he was wet, it called on its members and followers to go to the polls and sock him; if he was dry, it demanded, and got, his support.

At Westerville, O., it established its headquarters, with a printing plant. In the decade and a half following 1909 that plant had printed for distribution to the country more than 14,000,000 leaflets, nearly 2,000,000 books, more than 5,000,000 pamphlets, upwards of 2,200,000 placards and approximately 157,000,000 copies of weekly and monthly magazines.

And the league's war chest was kept full. In its first 20 years of life it spent fully $35,000,000 to further the cause of prohibition. When the fight was at its hottest it was spending $2,500,000 a year. Nor was this money wasted. The league knew precisely what it wanted and how to get it; its propagandists were able, its political experts were shrewd.

Sought State Laws
State prohibition laws were the goal at first. When the league celebrated its 20th birthday, in 1913, the list of dry states had increased to nine, and congress had been induced to pass the Webb-Kenyon act, pledging the federal government to help dry states stop importations of liquor from wet territory adjoining.

In that year the league held a jubilee meeting at Columbus, O., and announced that from that date it would drive straight for a federal prohibition law. Two weeks later 4000 men and women paraded in Washington in a prohibition demonstration. The league bused itself in congressional elections, and in 1914 sent no fewer than 50,000 speakers into the congressional fights.

Wheeler later testified before the Senate that it was not unusual, at that time, for whole freight carloads of prohibition propaganda to be shipped from Westerville in one day. All of this had its effect. A fact not generally recalled today is that in the fall of 1914 a majority of the house of representatives voted for a prohibition amendment. To be sure, the amendment got no farther; but the indication of the league's growing power, and of the growth of prohibition sentiment, was plain enough for any observer.

Nevertheless, those most opposed to prohibition paid little attention to it. The organized liquor trade certainly failed to see the handwriting on the wall.

Unbiased observers have stated that the liquor trade in a very real way helped to bring prohibition on itself. It permitted the open saloon to become a festering sore in municipal life when it could very easily have compelled a clean-up. It allowed the very phrase, "liquor trade," to become weighted with unpleasant connotations. When it tried to fight the Anti-Saloon league it used tactics that were not only pitifully ineffective but highly repellent. In every way it alienated those who might have defended it and strengthened the cause of its foes.

Not until 1916 did the U. S. Brewers' association wake up and offer to clean house. By that time it was too late. The tide was rising—or perhaps it would be better to say that it was going out—too fast. The stable door was being locked not only after the horse had been stolen but after he had been spirited away to the other side of the country.

Congress Goes Dry
By the time the United States entered the World War, in 1917, 26 states had gone dry, and the Anti-Saloon league was ready to introduce the 18th amendment in congress.

The fact that a war was on probably helped the league materially. In the first place, there was an undeniable need to conserve the cereals which were used in the manufacture of liquor.

Second, the attention of the country at large was focused on France instead of on prohibition.

Third, many of the most prominent anti-prohibition leaders had undeniably Germanic names, which helped to identify prohibition in the popular mind as a war measure.

Nevertheless, the signs of the time had been clear before the nation entered the war; and the congress that passed the 18th amendment had been elected before the war.

The 18th amendment passed the senate on Aug. 1, 1917. On Dec. 17 of the same year it passed the house. Incidentally, J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama, then a congressman and later famous as a bone-dry senator, spoke and voted against it.

On Jan. 8, 1918, the amendment got its first ratification—by the Mississippi legislature. On Jan. 14, 1919, it got its 30th—enough to fit into the Constitution—by the Nebraska legislature. Twelve other states ratified it later, the last one being New Jersey, which approved the amendment on March 7, 1922.

Thirteen-Year-Old Dallas Girl Is up For Next State Golf Champ; Took Over Chance to Play and Beats Her Father

By SIDNEY C. LEE
United Press Staff Correspondent

DALLAS, (UP)—Betty Jameson, 13 years old, just out of grade school, and only a few months removed from playing paper dolls, may be the next Texas state women's golf champion. This sturdily built, big-boned girl—who once delighted and amused a gallery when she took time out from a tournament match to investigate a quail's nest and on another occasion by capturing two turtles from a creek and taking them with her the rest of a round—has already become the youngest player to ever win the Dallas and state women's municipal course championships.

Betty will enter the next Texas Women's Golf association tournament if a promised membership in a local country club is redeemed. The club membership is required of contestants in state titular play.

One thing is certain—if she continues development at the rate maintained since introduction to the game 18 months ago, she will require no odds of anyone by tournament time. And going even farther, it may be said she will, by the time she has attained the age at which most feminine players are getting their first tournament experience, have become the nation's greatest all-time woman golfer.

Betty won the state women's municipal title at Wichita Falls last month. Dallas municipal players bowed to her in May when she augmented her natural driving ability with a deft sure touch on the greens.

Mrs. Alfalfa Bill Murray was there, enjoying her first convention, and entranced all the numerous newspapermen by giving them frank, good-natured interviews. A man next to me, viewing Mrs. George A. Waters, head of Oklahoma's boys' reformatory, as she seconded for Bill, kept insisting she was a "knockout." Right!

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, of Washington, D. C., statuette and socially prominent, old friend of Woodrow Wilson and national committee woman from the District of Columbia, sat with her lognette on the platform, frequently smoking a cigaret and frequently joining in applause regardless of her preference for Roosevelt.

One man's poison is another man's pumpernickel; but perhaps the most likely beauty contest winner among the national committee-women was Mrs. Jean Springstead Whitmore, of Puerto Rico, one of the active Roosevelt workers.

Mrs. Bernice Pike, of Ohio, led off for the anti-Roosevelt forces in the Shouse Walsh fight for the permanent chairmanship with a speech which gave a verbatim report of the negotiations in which Roosevelt was alleged to have given his support to Shouse. She is white-haired, handsome and active in democratic national affairs.

In this High-pressure Age smokers want a Milder Cigarette

WE LIVE in a fast-moving age. We work harder... play harder... travel quicker. And we smoke more cigarettes.

But there's this about it: They have got to be milder today. In this high-pressure age, smokers don't like strong cigarettes.

About four miles of warehouses are filled with mild, ripe, Domestic tobaccos, stored away to age for two years to make them mild and mellow for CHESTERFIELD Cigarettes.

To make sure that CHESTERFIELD is a milder cigarette, the greater part of 90 million dollars is invested in the tobaccos used in CHESTERFIELD. These tobaccos are "Cross-Blended."

This "Welding" Together—or "Cross-Blending"—permits every kind of tobacco used in the CHESTERFIELD blend to partake of the best qualities of every other type. It's the same principle that Burbank used in crossing different fruits to make a still better fruit.

CHESTERFIELDS are milder... never harsh... and that's why, in this high-pressure age, more smokers, men and women, are changing to CHESTERFIELDS every day.
