REMEDIAL LEGISLATION PLANK FOUND IN PLATFORM OF SMALL

TO FAVOR NO CLASS FACTION

Candidate of All the State, not Merely West Texas

Development of natural resources and introduction of large industries as a stimulus to West Texas development were promised as part of his official duties as governor by Clint C. Small of Wellington, Democratic candidate for the gubernatorial office, who spoke here last night.

Small is on a speaking tour of the state in the interest of his candidacy and is on his way back to Fort Worth from where he will renew his campaign activities in the eastern section of the state.

The candidate, who is state senator representing the 26 Panhandle counties, spoke on the needs of West Texas and of his familiarity with conditions under which this country has been developed by pioneers.

Without equivocation he stated his stand on various important matters of state and national importance and said that any man asking to be elevated to the important office of governor should be made to come out flatly either for or against vital questions of government.

Constructive Platform Senator Small declared himself as firmly in favor of development of Texas natural resources; laws fully protecting Texas labor; regulation of utilities by creation of a utilities commission; equalization of state taxes; aiding agriculture by state encouragement of greater consumption of farm products; introduction of new industries and new capital and development of irrigation by utilization of flood waters and streams.

He just as firmly declared himself as against any state road bond issue; against modification of the prohibition laws; centralization of the prison system and against operation of our state government by political machinations.

While mentioning none of his political opponents by name, the candidate deftly drew pictures in vitriolic criticism that left no doubt as to the object of his attack.

Perhaps the most scathing denunciation was that of one candidate who has been advocating removal of the ad valorem tax and collection of this revenue by placing a levy against ginger ale and malt extracts.

"Any man who would publicly advocate such breaking of our prohibition laws has no place in the democratic party, to stay nothing of the governor's office," Small said.

EARLY EDITOR HERE RELATES INTERESTING STORIES

Bert Rawlins, son of A. Rawlins, former owner and publisher of the Midland Gazette and the Midland Reporter, was telling some "fast ones" on the old times this morning while here on business connected with the Acorn store, with which chain he is district manager.

Master Walks Into Hotel; Cow Right In After Him; Is Shot

The Scharbauer bell hop was doing his best, going into the coffee shop and into the drug store and barber shop, calling out "Ima's Delaware."

A bunch of cattlemen were laughing to themselves. Everyone else seemed to realize that something unusual was taking place, but couldn't realize what it was.

At that moment a regular old-fashion cattle bawl aroused the readers in the lobby. There behind a pillar of the place was a prize heifer of the Marcus Gist show herd.

Someone had conceived the idea of fooling the hops and had made such a good job of it that no one except cattlemen realized what was going on.

The cow Thursday afternoon went right into the Scharbauer hotel after her owner, Marcus Gist. She is tame, and leads well only when she sees her self mirrored in a glass window or finds some paper in the floor or street.

In the former case she stops and bellows, in the latter stops and eats.

"She will clean out a wastebasket for you, by the simple expedient of eating the paper," Gist explained. The cow likes music, especially the radio. She will go into a house like a dog if she isn't watched, he explains.

The cow is to be given away during the American legion convention at Odessa Saturday and Sunday. Many Midland people are going for the rodeo and other events. Odessa is decorated in brave colors in honor of the celebration.

Before completing her visit to Midland, the cow "dropped in" on business men, the editor of The Reporter-Telegram, and was "shot" by a cameraman in the lobby of the hotel.

J. Frank Elder of Big Spring made his mistake about this time, or thought he had. He was sitting directly beside the cow when the picture was taken.

He did not realize a flash light picture would be taken. When the powder flashed, he "ducked" thinking he would have the cow in his lap.

The picture will be printed by The Reporter-Telegram early next week.

Eleven Held For Oklahoma Rioting

CHICKASHA, Okla., June 6, (UP)—Eleven of the 17 men charged with rioting in the mob murder of Henry Argo, negro assault suspect, are in jail today.

Rioting charges were filed after the coroner's jury decreed that the negro died from a gunshot wound which evidence indicated was inflicted by Jud Brown.

Officials agreed on blanket rioting charges, but included in the complaint murder, conspiracy to destroy public property, arson, theft and assault and battery stipulations.

George W. Skinner, husband of the woman the negro attempted to attack, was named in the complaint.

IS RESULT OF MEETING YESTERDAY

Meets Need Here For Hospital Serving Entire Public

All legitimate physicians and surgeons of Midland now have access to the service of John B. Thomas hospital, it was announced by Dr. Thomas this morning, arrangements having been perfected late yesterday at a meeting of the local doctors.

Heretofore, only those doctors having offices in the building had their facilities, but through arrangements with Dr. John B. Thomas, owner of the building and of the hospital, the services are now offered to all of them.

This arrangement follows recent conferences in which plans for attempting a bond issue for a city-county hospital, or for some other means of promoting a community hospital, were discussed. Recently, a committee of doctors met with chamber of commerce directors and were appointed to represent the organization in investigating available buildings as possible community quarters.

The John B. Thomas hospital, equipped at considerable expense at the time the Thomas office building was constructed, is situated on the sixth floor of the building, and the owner has plans for converting such other space as may be needed into hospital rooms.

A bond election for a city-county hospital, voted on recently in Odessa and Ector county, failed to carry.

INTER-TOWN BASE BALL LOOP TO BE DISCUSSED TONITE

Organization of a baseball loop to include towns close to Midland, among them Odessa, Penwell, Lenora and Stanton, will be considered tonight at a meeting to be called in Odessa.

It is expected that details will be worked out, and that work towards making out schedule for the season will be started.

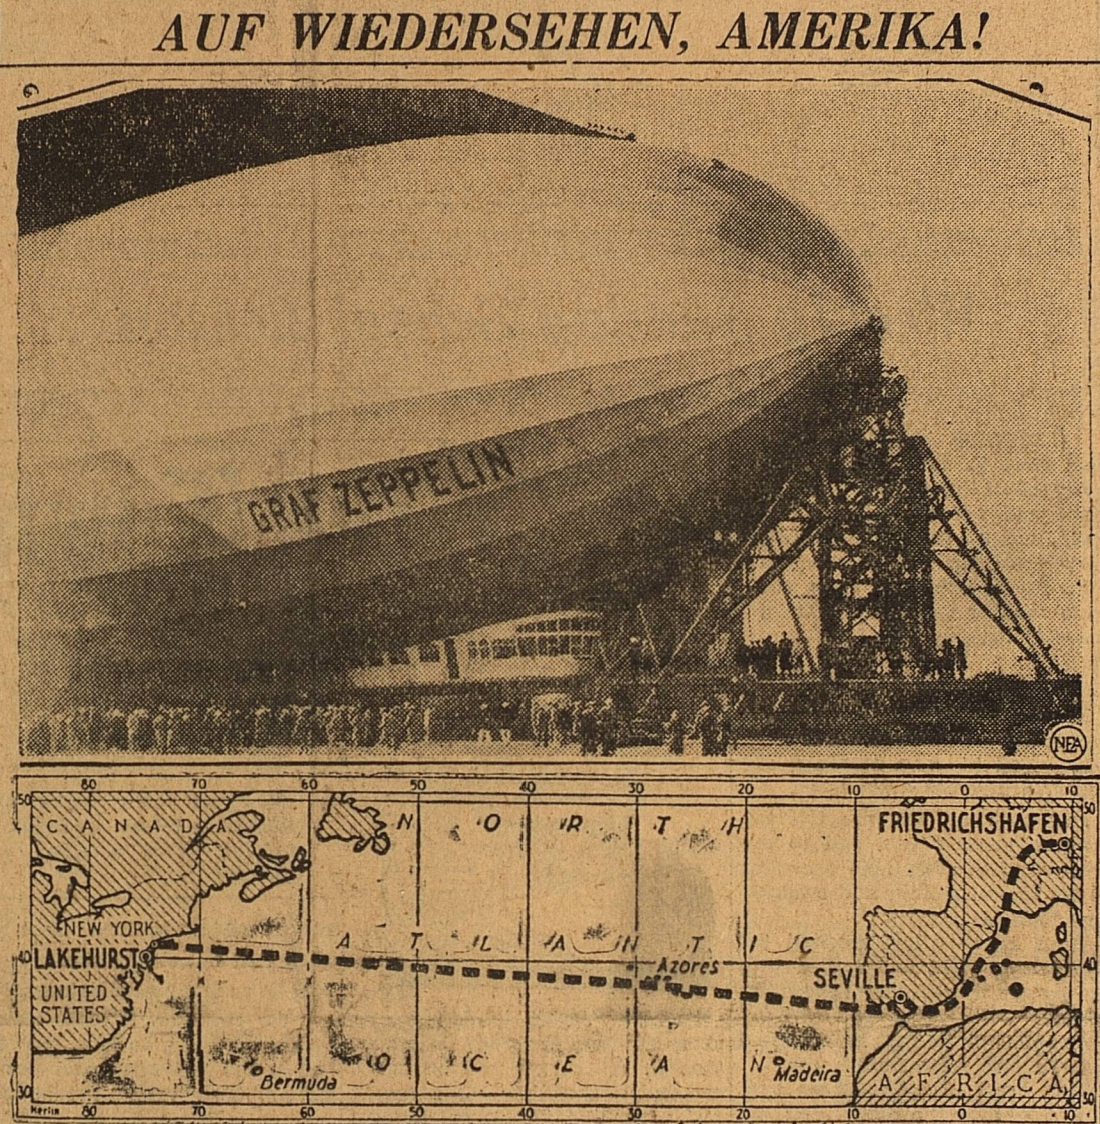

Two city teams are to be in the belt, the Buick Oilers and the Bushers.

Odessa plays in Midland Sunday afternoon, engaging the Oilers at 3 o'clock.

Rain Here Fails To Register on Gauge

Rainfall in Midland Thursday night and Friday morning did not register in the gauge at the weather station here, it was reported to The Reporter-Telegram directly after noon.

Bus drivers reported roads had just been sprinkled by the light shower.

MURPHY STRIKES AT THOMASON AS USING AMERICAN LEGION SUPPORT WHICH IS ALLEGED NOT EXISTENT

The "vicious political machine" of Mayor R. E. Thomason of El Paso, congressional candidate from the 16th district came in for criticism Thursday night when E. E. (Pat) Murphy of San Angelo spoke in the district courtroom.

Most severely criticized was the alleged use by Thomason of American legion support on campaign literature; the speaker reading a copy of a telegram he said has been sent El Paso by "Oroz" Cox, state commander of the legion, protesting the legion supports Murphy, not the El Paso mayor.

Speaking just before Clint C. Small, gubernatorial candidate, Murphy spoke as briefly as possible, on several planks of his platform. Directly after being introduced by the Rev. Howard Peters, pastor of the First Christian church, he launched into discussion of tariff on crude oil freight rate reduction, opposition to branch banking, tariff on wool, hides and other products, as factors in building up a greater West Texas.

The speaker explained he had earned the unqualified support of Claude Hudspeth by his stand on the tariff.

Relief for the ex-service man, prohibition, farm relief, civil service evils, national defense, and other factors were spoken of.

Centering his speech around an attack on the monopolistic tendencies of our government, Murphy stated that the "government was best that lies closest to the people," and that he was making a fight to return to the people the control of their government and to prevent the monopolies and trusts and professional politicians from gaining absolute control.

Murphy strongly advocated a tariff on the raw products of West Texas, including a tariff on crude (See MURPHY page 6)

SCREEN UNHOOKED AND THIEF GETS $115 AND PANTS

Hugh Corrigan, Midland oil man, lost approximately $115 and a pair of pants early this morning when someone unhooked the screen of his bedroom window and removed the trousers which were lying on a trunk. Corrigan lives on north Marientfield. A hat belonging to Mrs. Corrigan was taken from a piece of furniture nearby, but was dropped in the front yard as the early morning visitor departed.

Corrigan said today that the trousers contained also a bunch of keys which are valuable to no one else, and which would "cause him to think more of the burglar" if returned.

Officers were working on the case this morning, but had reported no arrests. Odessa is said by local officers to have had a wave of petty thievery recently, as have other towns in the neighborhood of oil (See BURGLARY page 6)

DALLAS, June 6, (AP)—Secretary Johnson of the state democratic executive committee said today that R. B. Creager's name might not be placed on the ballot because the drafters "neglected to enclose the $100 filing fee." Dallas citizens today regarded the petition as a joke.

POSSIBLY DOZEN POLO TEAMS HERE FOR FOURTH JULY

The possibility of more than a dozen crack polo teams being in Midland on the Fourth of July for games, one of the malleiteer groups coming as far away as Memphis, Tenn., was said favorable Thursday by G. H. Coyle, polo breeder and horse fancier who is here with his son, Carrell.

Memphis, San Antonio, Houston, San Angelo, Abilene, Amarillo, and several small towns and cities have accepted invitations to come here, Coyle said. Three of these places have intimated they will bring more than one team. Each will ship its own horses here, he said.

Varied attractions and entertainment features will be features of the most colorful Fourth of July celebration Midland has attempted, those in charge of plans have announced.

PRUITT CONTENTS IS INNOCENT AS IS ELECTROCUTED

HUNTSVILLE, June 6, (AP)—William "Dagger" Pruitt, electrocuted in the state penitentiary here after midnight for the murder of William Mann, 17-year old high school student of Dallas, denied until the end that he killed Mann.

He criticized the judge's refusal to hear his insanity plea and reiterated he had no fear of dying.

Pruitt was convicted for the murder and the higher court upheld the conviction. Governor Moody refused to intervene after the board of pardons had recommended that Pruitt be granted a reprieve.

Await Caraway To Dispose Of Cannon

WASHINGTON, June 6, (AP)—Awaiting the return of Chairman Caraway from Arkansas, the puzzled senate lobby committee today pondered the disposition of Bishop James Cannon Jr. for refusing to answer questions and walking out on the committee. Senator Walsh, acting chairman, said no action will be taken until Caraway returns.

Long Parade Ends Veteran Reunion

BILOXI, Miss., June 6, (UP)—The army of the confederacy formed ranks today for a grand parade, the supreme event of the fortieth reunion. ENDS TRIP OVER THREE CONTINENTS

After 18,000 Miles, Friedrichshafen Is Reached Today

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, June 6, (AP)—The Graf Zeppelin, home from an 18,000 mile voyage to South America and the United States, landed here at noon today.

A violent storm area descended upon the Rhone valley this morning. The weather bureau warned Dr. Hugo Eckener of the approaching storm, and not hearing of his plans decided that he was maneuvering to find clear sailing. He was not expected to arrive at the home port until about 7 this evening.

Touching three continents, and making the seventh voyage across the Atlantic, the huge Zeppelin made a successful flight from the time of its takeoff from Friedrichshafen.

The takeoff from Lakehurst on the final leg of the flight was made late Monday.

The bedraggled Graf Zeppelin and its storm-shaken group of passengers made port at Seville, Spain, between storms Thursday and in half an hour whirled away toward Friedrichshafen.

W. A. E. Plane Over Midland Last Night

Reports of bad weather in Abilene and tire trouble delayed the Western Air Express plane at Sloan field Thursday evening. The plane took off for the east at 2:30 this morning.

This is the second time a plane on this line has flown over Midland at night since it was established less than two months ago. The plane on the first flight was testing night flying conditions over this route.

Thursday night's plane occasioned considerable curiosity as the roar of its three motors were heard, and its riding and navigation lights were seen in the sky.

LANDING FIELD IS "PERFECT"

"Sloan field is the best landing field I ever saw," an army officer remarked here this week when questioned about the local port. He added that with its expanse of level terrain, its ease of approach from any direction or angle without danger of striking obstacles that often serve as a menace to safe landing, the field could accommodate almost any number of ships at a time, and that, in short, it is perfect.

This opinion from seasoned army flyers has been expressed by some of the outstanding aviators of the nation. Chas. A. Lindbergh said "You have a wonderful field here," which was quite a statement from one as conservative as he.

Not only is the landing field perfect, but new airport equipment is being added daily by the owners and by the army, making of Sloan field one of the most important air terminals of the nation.

CRIME IN THE MONTH'S NEWS

Crime played too prominent a part in Texas during the month of May. Mob outrages at Sherman and Honey Grove vied with the Brady trial at Dallas for prominence in the Texas press.

These incidents had barely lost front page position when from Houston came the news that a more or less notorious aviator had been "taken for a ride" in the approved Chicago style.

Municipal and county authorities at Houston have displayed commendable energy in prosecuting the search for the murderer or murderers of Aviator Edwards. The hunt has been extended to cover the entire continent. Indictments have been returned. As yet, however, it is not known that the guilty parties are confined behind steel bars.

Altogether these incidents would make it appear that Texas is inundated by a tidal wave of crime.

It is an unsavory reputation which Texas is acquiring over the whole world. The peace and dignity of the state so often has been outraged that Texas newspapers afford every evidence that the people have determined to do something about it.

The remedy seems to be the adoption of a new and more modern code of criminal law and procedure, together with the reorganization of the police along newer and more efficient lines. Some such plan will be offered the 42nd legislature when it convenes in Austin, and recent experience within the state insures that the plan will receive careful consideration.

Texas seems to be preparing for a general housecleaning.—The Editorial Digest.

DIVIDE TEXAS INTO 5 STATES?

As Texas now stands we have the greatest state in the Union. Greatest in size, in agriculture, in cattle, in oil, and fast becoming the greatest in education, finance, exports, minerals, population and a dozen other things.

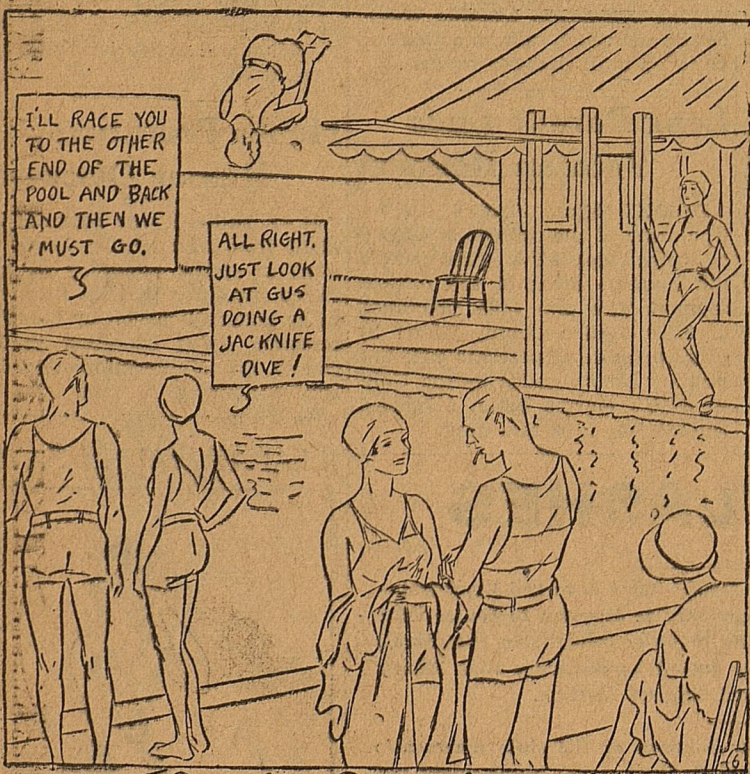

Representative John M. Garner evidently did not give much thought to the reaction his proposal would have on the people or else he would have hesitated to bring up such an issue.

Texas cannot forget the Alamo, Goliad and San Jacinto. These names are dear to the hearts of every citizen of the Lone Star State. The freedom of Texas was won through the efforts of all sections and together all sections will remain.

Let's hear nothing more about this. We do not need any more politicians. More thought about the welfare of the State and less about creating more political jobs and Mr. Garner's chances of remaining in the House of Representatives will be greatly enhanced.

Text: Matt. 25:14-30.

For the kingdom of heaven is as a man travelling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods.

And unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey.

Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents.

And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two.

But he that had received one went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money.

After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them.

And so he that had received five talents came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents: behold, I have gained beside them five talents more.

His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

He also that had received two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents beside them.

His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

Then he which had received the one talent came and said, Lord, I knew thee that thou art a hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown; and gathering where thou hast not sowed:

And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast that is thine.

His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not sowed:

Thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury.

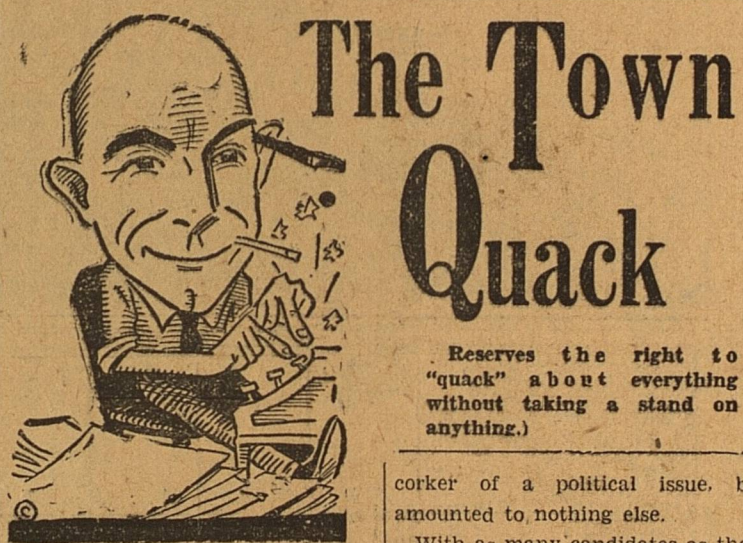

Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents.

For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.

And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Mosley's Resignation from Cabinet Is Blow to Britain's Labor Government

By MILTON BRONNER, NEA Service Writer.

LONDON, June 5.—Great Britain's highly vulnerable Labor Party has received one of its most serious blows from the most unexpected quarter—within its own ranks. And Sir Oswald Mosley, 33-year-old M. P., has taken the most sensational steps adopted by any ambitious politician in many a decade—he resigned his position in the MacDonald cabinet because, in his opinion, it was not doing enough for the workers and unemployed who form such a large part of the Labor party's vote.

Mosley was Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, a post given him so he could assist J. H. Thomas, Lord Privy Seal, in tackling the ominous unemployment problem. But he wasn't permitted to tackle it hard enough, so quit his job in protest against the government's "muddling methods."

The young M. P. thinks Thomas and the MacDonald cabinet back of him have been too slow and too cautious in dealing with the labor situation. He has been for a movement that was starting in its extent and implications. He was willing to spend nearly a billion dollars to put great public works under construction. He wanted to raise the school age so that more children would be shut out of the factories, and to pension working people over 60. In that way, by cutting out the young and providing for the old, jobs could be found for the younger men and women who now are out of employment.

Cabinet Opposes Him

But his proposals were turned down by the very cabinet to which he belonged. The ordinary politician would have held on to his job and to the judgment of his elders. He would have followed his ambition rather than his convictions. For it is a dangerous thing in Britain for a man to resign an important government post because he disagrees with his party leaders. Precedent says that a man who takes such a step seldom gets a chance to come back.

Aside from that, it was no easy decision for him to make, for Mosley has been one of the very few intimates of that eminently lonely man, Premier MacDonald. Lady Cynthia Mosley, also an M. P. with her wealth, her beauty, her social connections, has been the only member of the Labor party to hold veritable salons for the government.

But one of the biggest things about the young Mosleys is courage. They are unafraid.

Sir Oswald, for instance. Like many young Englishmen of his standing, he was educated at a great private school and then at the military academy of Sandhurst.

He served as an officer during the World War. Returned home, he entered politics and was elected to Parliament as a Tory. Then he made one of the greatest matches of the year. He married Layd Cynthia Curzon, daughter of the Marquess of Curzon, one of the very pillars of British aristocracy and Toryism. And his wife, through her late mother, had a big part of the many millions left by Levi Z. Leiter, Chicago department store magnate.

With his good looks, his heirloom to a baronetcy, his oratorical powers, plus the help of his lovely young wife, Mosley's path seemed all marked out for him. All he had to do was to be a good party man and he would climb to the top. But the smug complacency of the Tories irritated and then angered him.

First from his position as a young back-bencher he boldly criticized them. Then he went a step farther, ran as an independent and was elected. Finally he rejected them and all their works, joined the Socialist party and ran as such. Many society people cut him because he had "betrayed his class," as the jargon goes. The opposition papers at first ignored him, finding he could not be ignored, they then devoted space, to pounding him.

Even his father, the Mosley baronet then still living, was brought into the fray with a sneering interview in which he asked why his Socialist son and daughter-in-law did not give up some of their wealth. It was the half-American Lady Cynthia who gave the most effective answer:

"I am one of the lucky ones. I have had all the good things of life because I am my father's daughter. My husband is one of the lucky ones because he is his father's son. Our children will have a fair chance in life. My husband and I are in the Labor movement because we want other people's children to have as fair a chance as ourselves."

Both Went to Parliament

Mosley was elected to Parliament, and so was his wife. The Socialists did not make the young convert sit on the mourner's bench. He was made Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. Once more the path seemed all smooth for him. But once more his Mosley asserted his independence and risked his political future. As a Labor back-bencher he will be free to speak and vote as he pleases.

Since his resignation, Mosley has had one hard knock. The Parliamentary Labor Party, by 210 to 29, defeated his motion criticizing the party leaders for their unemployment policy. Even the 29 votes that he mustered, however, show startling evidence of growing revolt within the already weak Labor ranks.

Meanwhile his quondam society friends, now his enemies, get a great kick out of his present position. The tone of it is best illustrated by an editorial from the Morning Post, organ of the "upper classes":

"The politician who is making a career is like another little animal which shall be nameless, he must know when to jump. Sir Oswald Mosley's whole progress has been a series of leaps at carefully chosen moments. He jumped out of the Conservative party; he jumped into the Labor party; and now he has jumped out of his office. He tried to jump out of his own class and family, and would jump out of his own skin if he found it inconvenient."

The organ of the elegants, comparing him to a flea because he follows the dictates of his conscience, has not perturbed him. He knows he has a lot of time ahead of him, and things are moving fast in Great Britain—politically.

Sheppard-Towner Maternity and Infancy Act Seems in Danger of Staying Dead.—Congress and White House Can't Seem to Agree on Its Revision, Despite Agreement on Principle

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The Sheppard-Towner Maternity and Infancy Act, a piece of legislation which always seemed to interest the women of the country more than any other, is likely to stay dead indefinitely as the result of a misunderstanding or something between Congress and the White House.

That is the law under which the government appropriated more than a million dollars a year to cooperate with the states in welfare and hygiene work for mothers and babies, under the administration of the Children's Bureau. The act ran for seven years and everyone seemed to agree that the work was a great success, striking at the mother and infant mortality rates, but it stopped on July 1 of last year when Congress failed to appropriate the money to keep it going.

Not Getting Anywhere

Women's organizations thought it was fine business to have a "child welfare president" like Mr. Hoover. Now some of their officers are complaining privately that the president has taken such an active interest in the problem that things are getting all balled up without any progress.

After he had announced his White House Conference on Child Health and Child Protection the word went to Capitol Hill that the president didn't want any action on the Sheppard-Towner measure before the conference made a report, which would take a year or more.

Nevertheless, in his message to the regular session of Congress Mr. Hoover declared himself in favor of continuing the Sheppard-Towner Act under the Children's Bureau for a limited period of years and Congressman Cooper of Ohio and Senator Jones of Washington introduced bills which would provide money to start the thing going again.

But Cooper says Mr. Hoover made subsequent demands concerning the legislation and he introduced a second bill to square with the presidential ideas. This bill would transfer maternity and infant hygiene work to the U. S. Public Health Service. The women complain, however, that it gives no assurance that real practical work would be carried on. The Public Health Service has never done any maternity work, whereas the Children's Bureau has been engaged in it for many years.

And the theory of those who will have none of the second Cooper bill is that in order to reduce the baby death rate the mothers who need education must receive it.

During the flood relief work the president became very fond of the county health units and his idea lately has been that these should be used in future administration of the Sheppard-Towner Act. There are, however, goodness knows, how many counties which have no such units. Minnesota, for instance, is said to have but one county health unit.

Under the second Cooper bill the Children's Bureau would have money to carry on welfare work, but the nature of such work is not defined.

Besides representatives of women's organizations, those of organized labor and the American Farm Bureau Federation have joined in opposing the bill which was inspired by the president. They are all supporting a bill recently submitted by Congressman Goodwin of Minnesota which would simply reenact the Sheppard-Towner law and provide some money.

Delay in the House

Leaders in the House of Representatives have been consistently complaining that the House had nothing to do. The baby measure is only one of various welfare or reform measures which it has held up. The committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, of which Congressman Parker of New York is chairman, gets credit for holding up the Cooper and Goodwin bill. In the Senate the Jones bill was reported favorably without amendment and has been on the Senate calendar since April 9. Either house could pass a bill in a day or two, as there is little opposition.

Mr. Hoover has been telling voters that there would have to be a compromise, but that some kind of a maternity bill will come out of this session. It appears that he doesn't want anything but the second Cooper bill. Meanwhile the session draws to its close and it looks as if the mothers and babies were again going to be out of luck.

HOW TO SHOP

Shower Curtains Are Shown in Gay Class

By WILLIAM H. BALDWIN, Author of "The Shopping Book"

SHOWER curtains come in colors in the more desirable fabrics such as silk, cretonne, satin and moire; in flowered, striped or solid hues with a great diversity of designs and patterns.

They may be broadly divided by the waterproofing into the rubberized and oiled silk curtains, the latter being on the average about twice as expensive as the former. In buying the rubberized article, the shopper is advised to demand a year's guarantee of serviceable wear.

The oiled-silk curtain is generally considered the best curtain on the market.

Whatever the type of shower curtain selected, make sure that it is an honest cut, the standard being 70 by 70 inches.

DIZZY SPELLS AND HEADACHE

Quick Relief Found by Georgia Lady Who Took Thedford's Black-Draught.

Atlanta, Ga.—"I have been a user of Thedford's Black-Draught for about forty-five years," writes Mrs. Sarah L. Thomas, of 449 Bedford Place, this city. "I wouldn't know how to keep house without it."

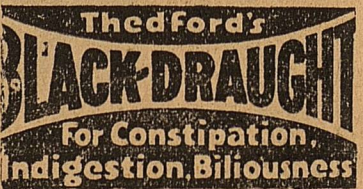

"I gave it to my children, while they were growing up, for headaches, colds and other childish ailments."

"I was subject to headaches and dizzy spells that caused me to spend a day or so at a time in bed, and made me feel weak and shaky."

"My step-mother advised me to take Black-Draught, and finding it so helpful and quick to relieve me, I have used it, when I needed a laxative, ever since. It is splendid for constipation and indigestion. Whenever I eat anything that disagrees with me, I take a pinch of Black-Draught and get relief. I have never used anything that helped me more."

"I have recommended Black-Draught to my friends and they tell me they find it good."

STORY OF ORIGIN OF PROHIBITION TOLD BY W. C. T. U. VICE-PRESIDENT

The first birthday of the Midland chapter of the Women's Christian Temperance Union is to be celebrated in here next week.

A part of the study at this institute will be on Christian citizenship and under this head comes the origin of Prohibition. Questions will be asked members of the organization taken from the following article which is being published through the courtesy of the local organization. The story was written by Ida B. Wise Smith, vice-president of the national organization.

How Prohibition Came

The story of prohibition reform is a thrilling one—not one of modern times—not war hysteria—but one that began with man's use of the fruits of the earth.

When Noah, just after the flood, made wine, he became drunken, as is the usual result. Others learned the sad lesson that any liquor containing alcohol weakens the body, enervates mentality and lowers spiritual standards.

The years passed, God continued to warn and the groups of people listened, but many more gave themselves up to convivial pleasures. Daniel demonstrated how abstinence could bring a better physique. Then came Christ, teaching the Golden Rule. Slowly there came to the consciousness of men and women a conviction that the liquor habit must be destroyed.

By the time the thirteen colonies had formed the new government, a well-defined movement toward total abstinence was under way.

George Washington was still president when Dr. Benjamin Rush started what was probably the first medical inquiry into the effect of liquor on the human body. The first movement against drink was noted for the fact that it left out all consideration beer and light wine, and it was a long time before it was known that beer and wine are to be avoided for the same reason that whisky is shunned.

The outstanding feature of the fight between the public and liquor in Washington's administration was the famous Whisky Rebellion in western Pennsylvania. The farmers refused to pay a federal tax on the whisky they distilled from their own grain and it required the United States Army to bring them into line.

Temperance orators began to arouse the people and temperance societies were formed. One of these historic organizations was the Congressional Temperance Society, composed of officials of the government and members of both houses of Congress. The Washington Society organized in Baltimore in 1840, assumed great importance in this period and long before the Civil war, 1,250,000 people were organized into 5,000 societies. Father Mathew began a pledge-signing crusade which attracted much attention in the national government.

One stormy evening, a despairing wife of a drunkard went to Neal Dow, a rising young lawyer in Portland, Maine, pleading for help. He went to a saloon where the husband drank and requested the proprietor no longer to sell to this man. The saloon-keeper pointed to his license on the wall and said that so long as the state permitted him to sell he would sell. Stirred to his soul, Neal Dow declared his fight against saloons and came to be known as "The Father of Prohibition."

Christian womanhood was the next step into the fight against saloons. This was organized into the Women's Christian Temperance Union of which Francis E. Willard was the great moving force.

Scientific temperance instruction in the public schools was doing its work; Rule 'G' of the railroads staled thinging people; pulpit and platform were energized to aid sobriety and prohibition. The Young People's Society of the Christian Endeavor, in 1910, sounded a slogan. "Saloonless Nation by 1920," and on Sept. 10, 1911 the president of the National W. C. T. U. issued a proclamation for National Constitutional prohibition with a decade.

In 1869, Maine led the procession of the states, and year after year others fell in line, until there were thirty-three prohibition states in 1920, when National Constitutional Prohibition became the policy of the United States.

A. K. Riddle of Cushing Okla., Carl Marquis and C. E. Ingram of Austin and E. A. Dierdorff of Colorado have been in Midland the last few days transacting business. These men are officials of the Shell Pipe Line company.

"I'll Show 'Em Who's Like Dempsey!" Says Sailor Jack

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Writer.

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., June 6.—If you'll take the world of everybody at Gus Wilson's training camp, Jack Sharkey not only has all the physical requisites of the next world heavyweight champion, but has overcome the mental hazards that so long have clouded his ring career. And all without benefit of psycho-analysis.

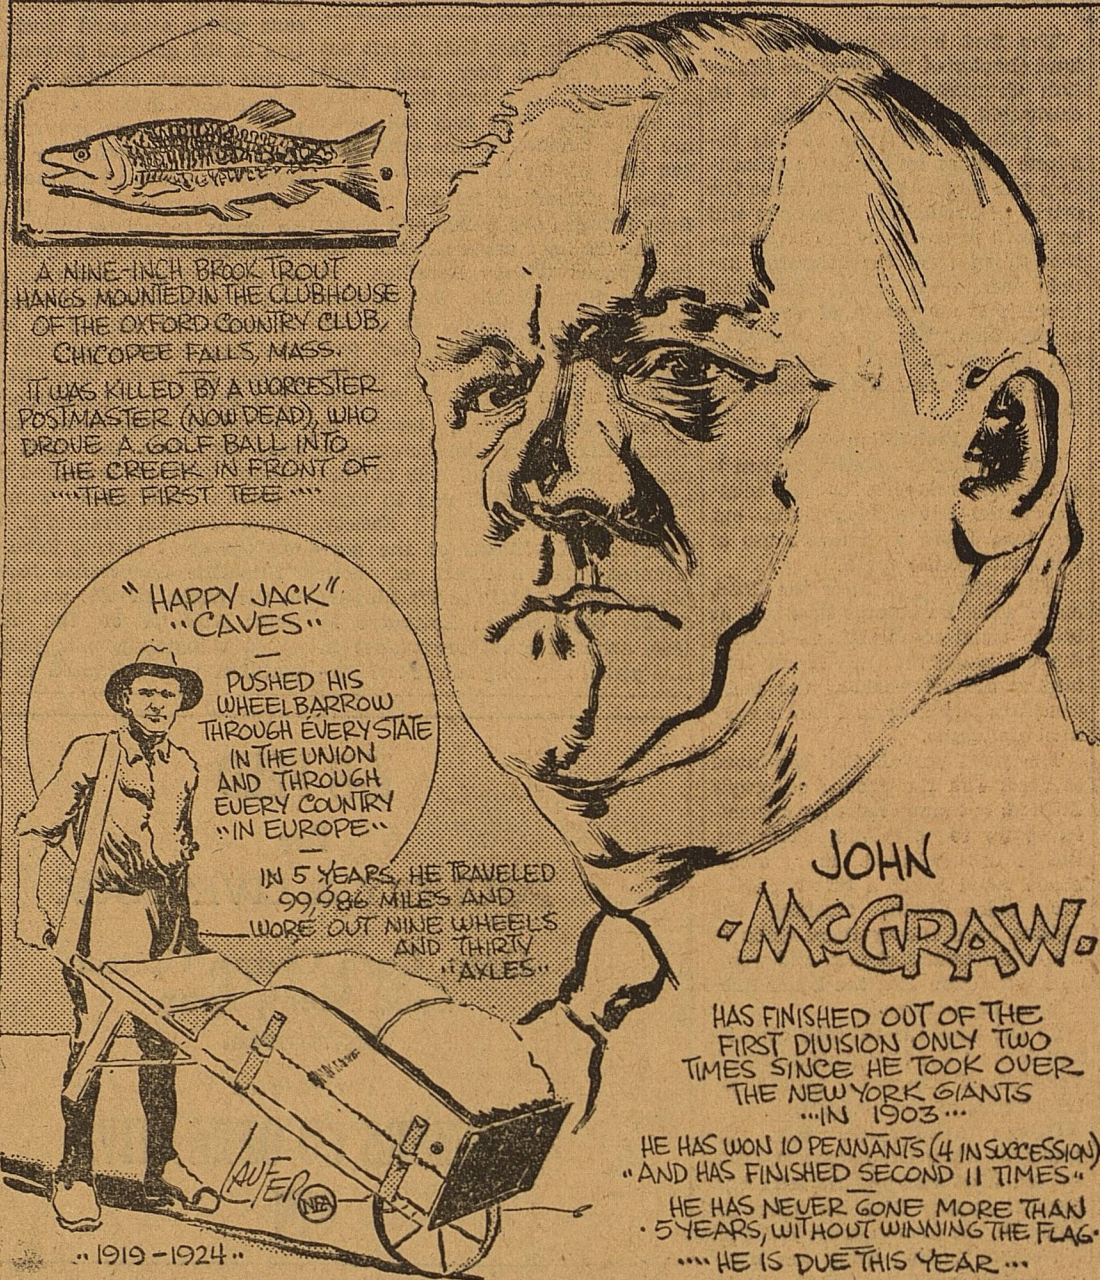

He has, if you still believe, become an enthusiastic student of boxing, acquired a particularly grim determination to win from Max Schmeling on June 12, and suppressed much of his cocky and in judicious hot-headedness.

On Wilson's 12-acre farm near here, under the vigilant care of Manager Johnny Buckley and Trainers Al Lacey and Tony Polozolo, Sharkey is training more carefully than he ever did in his life. Not harder, for he's in fine shape now. All his handlers have to worry about is to keep him that way, and to nip as diplomatically as possible any fresh signs of overconfidence. The Scott fiasco in Miami taught them just as big a lesson as it did their protegee. And it taught him plenty.

Jack isn't making predictions this time. "And if you see any with my name on 'em, don't believe 'em," he said. "I'm in good shape now, and have been for some time. I'm going to be in great shape for the fight. I believe I can win."

That sounded like a strange and humble Sharkey. But he showed a flare of spirited as he added: "As for Schmeling"—here he pantomimed a series of savage left hooks—"phooey!"

Al Lacey, already delighted with the afternoon's workout, was further pleased with Sharkey's attitude.

"It's finally become a serious business for him," said Al. "He isn't underestimating Schmeling a bit, like he and everybody did Scott. When Scott didn't flop under a couple of punches, Jack went all to pieces."

"But in this next fight, he expects to have his hands plenty full as long as it lasts. That's why he won't lose his head, or his temper, or the championship. For that matter, if you remember, all his well-fought battles have been the important ones."

The Boston battler plays better golf than Schmeling, which isn't saying much. Despite reports that his game is consistently in the 80's, Jack is well satisfied to break 100. Lacey doesn't care if he never improves, considering 18 holes of "tough luck" a good workout for the job's tempo.

Four or five rounds of boxing a day have been enough for the finely-trained Sharkey, many of them spent in clowning with King Solomon, his battered court jester. Johnny Grosso furnished the bulk of his early opposition, with the clever Paul Cavalier ready for the final sparring jousts which will put him into shape. Lacey even declared that Cavalier could whip Schmeling. Sharkey worries the big bag, performs an elaborate series of bending exercises, and shadow-boxes a few rounds. Manager Buckley will assure you that the fighter's mind is very active during this shadow work, that "every punch he throws is part of his strategy."

"Jack skips the shortest rope ever used by a big man," said Tony Polozolo. "It makes him keep his head down. And boy, what style he's got! No big buy was ever faster. He's hittin' harder now than he hit Scott, an' he clipped Scott a lot harder than Stribbling. He oughta; he's about eight or nine pounds heavier in his chest and shoulders than he was six months ago."

"Jack weighed only 203 when he got here March 12, an' he'll go in against Schmeling weighing 197— heavier than he ever was before. "Sharkey will knock out Schmeling in seven rounds. He'll box him, and chop with that left till the opening he wants comes. If Jack don't K. O. him, Max will be cut up so much the fight will be stopped."

It is said that Sharkey no longer feels his old resentment against Dempsey, although he still believes he was fouled by the Manassa Mauler. In fact, Sharkey bitterly resents the comparisons now being made between Schmeling and Dempsey.

"I'm more like Dempsey than Schmeling is," grumbled the Bostonian. "Schmeling hasn't got any left hook like Dempsey had, and he don't know how to weave. I'll show 'em who's like Dempsey."

Buckley, who has managed Sharkey since the days when neither of them had a dime, now is worried only about the size of the gate at the Milk Fund fight in Yankee Stadium.

"Schmeling," said he, "is dumb, Jack's smart. That's the story of the fight, Jack'll outthink and outbox him all the way."

"Jack's working for me like he never worked before. Got himself well under control. I never had to humor him, or baby him—"

"Talking about me, are you?" sneered Sharkey, who had just arrived in kittenish mood. He ploughed a stiff right into the manager's fleshy shoulder.

"Ha-ha," croaked Buckley, his face lined with pain. "Good old Jack!"

ALL ABOARD FOR A TRIP TO THE MOON!

By MINOTT SAUNDERS, NEA Service Writer.

PARIS, June 6.—A Journey to the moon is no longer a flight of fancy, at least to Robert Esnault-Pelterie, brilliant young French scientist who is president of the Society of Savants and Inventors of France. It is near-possibility, he says, as he says, as he occupies himself with making the necessary plans and minimizing the risks.

Esnault-Pelterie favors the rocket vehicle for the lunar expedition and he prophesied before a large audience at the Sorbonne University that with the development of rockets now being experimented with the development of rockets now being experimented with, a monster rocket should be able to reach the moon within 15 years or so.

The rocket would be propelled by the force of its own combustion and it should be able to travel nine miles a second. It must quickly get into the ether, out of the reach of the earth's gravity, and would, if all went according to calculation, hit the moon within three or four days. The French scientist supports the German plan of a series of charges, detonated automatically to carry the rocket along its stages.

Demonstrates in Model The lecturer took his place in a rough model of the aerial rocket. He has designed and demonstrated how he believed all this could be done. The scenery of the moon's surface was described along broad lines for the audience, giving a picture of plans of infinite extent, mountains in formation, lava-like soil and no water.

"We shall, of course, feel some physical discomfort during our passage," he said. "But we shall come to make the trip without great difficulty. We shall fly higher and higher, at a speed heretofore regarded as fantastic. We shall make great jumps into space. Then, of course, we shall become accustomed to the change in temperature, and all that."

"We shall find a blinding solar light, and at night a sky copiously sprayed with stars will be likely. As there is no atmosphere surrounding the moon, travelers would have to be supplied with special apparatus for breathing, much in the same way as a diver."

Landing on the Moon

Landing on the moon without crushing everything and everybody would be simple, according to the scientist—merely a matter of mechanics. He said that anybody who had been shot to the moon in Jules Verne's famous cannon would not only have been reduced to pulp, but would have "run like a liquid." To avert this fate he said it would be necessary to control the rocket so that it would turn in space and could be guided.

Getting back to earth, in case any of the passengers wanted to get back, was a subject to be taken up in a subsequent lecture.

LUCKY BREAK?

LONDON.—Sidney Fox, recently executed for the murder of his mother, got a lucky break. The day after he paid with his life, he was cited to appear as a co-respondent in a divorce suit. At least he was spared the scandal of a divorce suit even though he did suffer the penalty of death for murder.

LEARNED FLYING FAST

LONDON, June 6.—The gunner riding with Flight Lt. Hillman at Basra recently, although knowing nothing about flying a plane, learned in one lesson. While high in the air, the plane the two men were in took a sudden dip and Lieut. Hillman was thrown out and forced to make a parachute landing. The gunner climbed into the cockpit and succeeded in bringing the ship to a safe landing.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY BY BEATING OLD RECORD; SAN ANGELO GROWS A REAL TRACK TEAM; NEW HALF-MILER

DALLAS, June 6. (AP)—Setting a new world's track record should be an ideal way to celebrate one's birthday. It has cakes and candles beat forty ways.

Charley Casper, the 162-pound Harlandale (San Antonio) hurdler, chose that means of observing his natal day. Casper was 18 on May 31, the day he topped the high timbers in 15.1 at Chicago to lead the country's crack interscholastic athletes to the tape and set a new mark. It was, he observed, a birthday party to his taste.

Casper, who graduated this term, has not yet decided what university or college he will attend, but he has his mind set on the Olympic meet at Los Angeles in 1932. Ben Britte, a former star dash man at Southwest Texas Teachers College, who taught Casper the hurdling racket, believes his protégé will be one of the world's best in two more years.

While on the subject, Bill Bissett, blonde San Angelo high school coach, is due a world of credit for the showing his Bobcat speedsters have made the last two years. Although they failed to retain their state track title, the Bobcats made a great showing at Chicago, setting a new interscholastic record for the mile relay and scoring 16 points in all. Their record time was 3:29.7.

Members of the championship relay team were Captain Ramon Jones, Louis Brothers, T. B. Odum and Henry Orr. The remarkable part of it was that only two of them, Brothers and Jones, were on the quartet that won the mile relay a year ago. Minus two of his stars, Bissett started the season with slight hopes of repeating his triumph. But he knows how to coach a relay team, and by time for the state meet he had the fastest crew in the state. A month later he had the fastest in the country. Either there is a "slight" to this relay business that Bissett is keeping to himself, or they just naturally grow 'em fast out on the Concho.

Ernie Hjerberg, world famous track mentor, believes he has a world champion half-miler coming up at Rice Institute. Ray Harbour, a freshman from Dayton, Texas, is the lad, and Hjerberg believes he will become as outstanding in his specialty as has Claude Bracey in the century. Paced by Nelson Greer, former Rice captain and a crack half-miler, Harbour recently did the distance in one minute, 55.3 seconds, probably the fastest 880 yards ever run in the south and about two seconds faster than the Southwest Conference record.

Even with Bracey gone, the Owls expect to have one of their greatest track units next spring.

oil, and said he would vote for a tariff bill on final passage; state rights, and the return of the control of our own railroads to our state railroad commission; he advocated curbing or abolishing the cotton exchanges as a remedy for farmers' troubles; restricted immigration, and apply it to all nations alike including Mexico; world peace by taking the profits out of war; a square deal for disabled ex-service men, he favored changing the date of the adjusted service certificate of the ex-service men from 1925 to 1918, thereby enabling the veterans to borrow about 50 per cent on these policies without an additional cost to the government; he arraigned his opponent for allegedly using the name of an ex-service man's organization on his campaign literature and accused him of trying to trick the ex-service men into thinking L. E. Thompson was endorsed by that organization; Murphy also attacked the political ring in El Paso and accused them of forming a little Tammany whose purpose it was to gain control of power in the 16th district.

Murphy said that he was against any change in the 18th amendment and accused both of his opponents of being wet. One opponent, he said had double crossed both the prohibitionist and the anti's while he was in the state legislature and was only dry now because it was popular, and his other opponent was running on a wet platform.

Murphy said prohibition was a settled issue in this country, but if his opponents wanted to make that an issue he was willing, because he was the only prohibitionist in the race. Murphy recently completed a 700-mile speaking tour through Mason, Gillespie, Kerr, Bandera, Real, Edwards, Kimble and Menard counties. This is the second tour of the district within the past three months. Murphy said today he was well satisfied with the warm reception given his candidacy at every place visited and that he intended to continue an intensive drive until July 26th and would speak in every town regardless of size and location.

Poll Shows Papers Favor Enforcement

PITTSBURGH, June 6. (UP)—Continuance and strict enforcement of the eighteenth amendment is the editorial policy of the majority of 320 daily American newspapers, according to results of a poll conducted by students of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, made public today. However, the circulation represented by papers favoring repeal outnumbered that of dailies favoring enforcement or modification. There were 188 favoring enforcement, 52 for modification, and 80 for repeal.

Address Is Impersonal

The senator severely criticized plans of another of the candidates to secure support of his state road bond issue. He told his audience that the state is now receiving approximately $40,000,000 annually from gasoline and automobile taxes and government aid for the building of highways.

"It is my opinion," he said "that three men spending this sum wisely and economically for highways will be kept very busy. Producing several hundred millions of dollars for immediate road expansion would place in the hands of a few persons too great a sum for careful expenditure."

The candidate said that economic anemia would result if Texas is kept on its diet of political promises and asked voters to investigate "catchall" promises of political aspirants before casting their ballots. "The people have come to the realization that the same old political hokum year after year has resulted in nothing good for Texas. For a man to deliberately make fanciful statements merely to corral a few votes is for him to place himself in the category of a professional politician."

Taking the initiative to instill sincere voter interest in the gubernatorial contest, Senator Small has consistently followed his plan of advocating a cessation of political hostilities and institution of sound business principles in state government.

Plan on Tax Matters

Declaring that the day is here when candidates should have the nerve to tell the truth about taxes, Senator Small said that the man who can do the most for Texas is the one who can equally distribute the tax burden over the entire state. He advocated a plan whereby the next legislature should seek out untaxed property for raising revenue, thus spreading the burden over a greater area.

He has recently accused the highway department of discriminating against small towns in routing main highways and declared that issuance of state bonds for building roads would prove ruinous over a period of time. He told The Reporter-Telegram, however, that he was in favor of the state taking up county road bonds.

Attacking candidates whom he described as "profession politicians" Senator Small said:

"Any man who promises to build better roads and better schools and at the same time remove the ad valorem tax is working on a shingle platform and he should have it knocked from under him."

"The candidate who would encourage bootlegging and home brew making will get little consideration from sincere Texas voters," he said.

watermelon patch."

Decides on Method

"Eventually, Rose caught on to the coup and determined to stop the practice. To do this, he adopted a convenient method, one that showed his resourcefulness. He set out to accomplish his purpose without attendant loss of divine instruction. In other words, he decided to set a trap that would work while he was sitting in the church, listening to the sermon of the preacher.

"He picked a night for the time. Chuckling as he worked, he hitched his mules to the wagon, loaded his young army of children into it, and drove off for meetin' house. But he omitted the formality of including one of his tribe, a 10-year-old boy who knew how to use a gun, as later incidents will show.

"With the regularity that comes from cockiness at having been successful in the past, and no doubt restive until the moment when they could break open the hearts of the large melons, the picaresque followers of Paul made their appearance at the window of the church, their noses pressed tight against the panes to give them a semblance of Romans, and sought to find out whether Rose and his family were present.

"Not being gifted at that early age with census facilities now used for such emergencies, the boys failed to notice the absence of one of the boys. They headed for the patch.

Sniper Gets Set

"In the meantime, the boy who had been left at home was showing early precocity for future sniping in case he should be caught in trench warfare. He got out a double barrel shot gun, loaded it with buck shot, and went outside to a salient where he could command the patch. Said salient happened in this instance to be a water barrel.

"It grew quite dark. The boy behind the barrel was about to give up in disgust, not seeing stealthy figures slipping through the gloom across the patch. But a young calf in the patch did, and made a dash for the opposite side of the plot. The sharpshooter, thinking the animal was an expected raider, cracked down on the calf, killing it outright.

"That started things, right then. There was no dallying about who should go first. Boys were running over vines, falling over watermelons and butting into fence posts around there for several seconds. It was here that 'Paul Revere' Rountree made his famous mistake in attempting to ride the fence to safety.

"Approaching the hurdle at a furious pace, he decided to save the time of climbing it. The sound of the gun had been like a spur to him. He did not know that it was a calf that had drawn the fire. Real noble was his attempt to clear the barbed wire, but he was not destined to get over without a brief but well remembered preliminary.

Coat Tail 'Amputated' "The boys in those days wore frock tailed coats, and Paul's caught on a strand. There he was on the other side of the fence, wanting to run, yet tied there by his own coat tail!

"He was not long in pondering the possibilities of the case, however, for the urchin behind the barrel cut loose with another volley that sheared the coat tail off, too close to the young man's body for any manner of comfort. I heard Paul hasn't ever bought a watermelon since that time."

The old timer newspaperman had a farm out in Toad Loop. He was the first one to plant cotton in the country. He was termed a visionary and it has been said that he was laughed at in those early days because he predicted a future with electric lines, telephone service, highways, agricultural dominance, and such things. Virgil Ray and Timberline Floyd say he was the first man to advocate the use of barbed wire fences for utilization in telephone service, even ahead of the Bell and Edison laboratories.

He had a tank reservoir he had built of old packing boxes. While he was free for a moment from farm labor, he would get a chisel and hammer and try to plug holes in his water unit. One day he hit the tank too hard with the hammer, and the wall broke and the water rushed out and nearly drowned him. He was carried several feet by the flow.

Negro Eludes Net Of Sherman Posse

SHERMAN, June 6. (AP)—Officers continued to search today for the unidentified negro who yesterday attempted to kidnap a baby from the farm home of L. E. Elliott near here. Three children, the oldest 10 years, were alone while the parents were working nearby. A posse of 20 officers and citizens thought they had the negro surrounded in a thicket several hours afterward, but the negro eluded them. He was believed to be a tramp.

Cox, visited his mother's grave near O'Donnell this week under guard of Deputy Sheriffs A. M. Bennett and Granville Wyatt. Aiken, with three other Dawson county prisoners, will be sent to the state penitentiary at Huntsville as soon as the local sheriff's office is notified that there is room for them. The sentence of fifty years passed on Aiken is the highest ever given in Dawson county, according to court records.

Delegates to Tulsa To See Improvements

Midland oil men who attend will see more than $200,000 which is being spent at the plant of the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa to make room for the new equipment and products of the oil and gas industry which have made their appearance in the past year, according to W. G. Skelly, president of the oil show.

Skelly in a letter to The Reporter-Telegram said the larger portion of this investment will be represented by two huge steel structures. One of these will be devoted to refiners' and marketers' exhibits, exclusively, and the other will be dedicated to the interests of California oil men and will bear the name of that state.

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers, petroleum division, is installing an automatic pump station exhibit at a cost of $90,000. This display, which will demonstrate the society's solution for the problem of completely controlling the large tank farms from a "nerve center," is said to be one of the petroleum industry's latest and most outstanding achievements.

With a "heavy" program of educational items on schedule, General Manager William B. Way, whose innovations last year met with the full approval of visitors, announces that special attention will be paid to entertainment features which have a bearing on the industry.

The Exposition and Congress dates are October 4-11. The Midland chamber of commerce will have another Midland oil exhibit there.
