OVER-TAXATION OF CAPITAL FOUGHT BY WEBB IN NEW MOVE

PRESS OF STATE IS ENLISTED

Claims Future of the Western Section Threatened

There have been various trusts and so-called political machinations that have wielded prodigious, dangerous power given them as representatives by the people, but the "goose that lays the golden eggs" in West Texas is about to be killed by the legislative juggernaut of this state, according to Hon. Henry E. Webb of Odessa, who says he is about to launch an educational campaign through the West Texas press within a short time.

Webb decries the tactics of legislators of "swamp infested East Texas" who "are possibly unwittingly about to discourage northern and eastern capital from exploiting the hidden wealth of West Texas—through taxing recovered products unjustly."

The representatives referred to attempted legislation of a $1.50 sulphur tax at the last session of the legislature and to the probability that the same problem will face potash production in Midland and Ector counties in the future, if something is not done immediately to obtain relief from what Webb believes is a veritable bugaboo of pending legislation.

Says Campaign Coming

He stated some of his plans to a staff writer of The Reporter-Telegram as the two returned from the press banquet at Abilene. He said he had enlisted strong support from state newspapers and that he felt certain one of these dailies would send a staff writer to this section to gather information to be used in the campaign to be conducted by that newspaper.

"Legislation seemingly attempted to ruin the independent oil operator," Webb stated. "It could almost be said that production costs and taxation totalled more than the market price. What good would it do to take added quantities of mineral deposits from the strata of the earth if this uneconomic tax system should obtain? Production of established companies would inevitably be brought down to a minimum; and the prospective new companies would become discouraged (See OVER-TAXATION page 5)

Indian Remains on Ranch Are Studied

Ideographs and hieroglyphics the Red Man left in Winkler county many moons ago will be studied today by Professor Watts and three chemical students of Simmons university.

The men arrived in Midland Saturday evening, and almost immediately left for the scene of their studies, a semi-arid district that is thought to be rich in undeciphered lore. This is the Jim Waddel ranch.

The chemists and, in the case of Professor Watts, archeologists will have unusual chance to collect strangely formed relics of the stone era and to observe symbolic writing on the face of a low cliff that adjusts as an outcropping of what appears to be sedimentary rock.

The scientist and his corps hope to find enough relics to take with them to the Simmons museum, where they can be studied at leisure.

They are engaged in the study through invitation of the Midland chamber of commerce, which was prompted through observation of the singular form of the pestles and other rough implements, and to the peculiar script employed by the tribes or tribes in written communication.

Quick Replies Received in Economic Movement Which Resulted in City Council

Realism Enters

Startlingly reminiscent of actual war days is this action photo of a British observer leaping for his life from a blazing balloon. The stunt was deliberately planned at a recent Royal Air Force show at Hendon, England. "Enemy" planes attacked the captive bag in realistic fashion as it directed hypothetical fire from behind an imaginary battle line. But there was no fake about the incendiary bullets and the parachute jump.

MIDLAND ASSURED ASSISTANCE; STAR ROUTE IS MOOTED

A pledge that assures Midland of every possible consideration has been received from E. W. Satterwhite, acting superintendent of the division of railroad mail service, following a protest made by the chamber of commerce and others regarding a change of the Star mail route from Midland to Lovington, N. M.

The chamber of commerce is leading a vigorous campaign against the rumored effort to change the route, and has enlisted as aid postmasters who would be effected by such a change. These postmasters would be those between Midland and Seminole, inclusive.

Mexicans Jailed As Stores Robbed

Three Mexicans were in jail last night, two others had been released, and officers were en route to Stanton to overtake another following burglaries of merchandise at Grissom-Robertson Stores, Inc., Wilson-Adams Co., and Noret Bros., prior to closing time last night.

Employees of the stores assisted officers in tracking down the Mexicans as did Therman "Arkar" Ruple of The Reporter-Telegram force.

National and state cognizance of the fight between the big, uneconomic spread between prices paid the producer and those paid by the consumer was taken immediately upon wires received in Washington and Austin from the City of Midland.

A telegram from Congressman Morris Sheppard that pledged continued effort towards affecting remedial action, and one for Governor Dan Moody that expressed sympathy and, at the same time, doubt of influencing change through governmental agencies, were received Saturday by the city council.

The telephone sensorditushar and national officials protested "deplorable reduction" in commodities to the producer while marketing and retail prices remain approximately the same, and asked that the public be given the "benefit of the extreme declines." They furthermore urged that the government "equalize prices or, at least, enforce reasonable, fair, liveable spread between the producer and the consumer."

Sheppard's wire said: "I have carefully noted your wire, and I agree thoroughly with your position. I shall be glad to continue doing everything within my power along the lines you suggest."

Moody was dubious of the jurisdiction of the state to affect a change in prices, but offered the suggestion that the federal farm board might be the one "governmental agency" that might offer aid.

Moody's wire read: "The government has the power to regulate rates of public service corporations, such as transportation lines, including railroads, motor cars, and the like, electric and gas companies, but I do not understand that the government has any power to fix prices on general commodities except where they be those handled by a public service concern."

"I agree with you that necessities in demand by the general public are seemingly at a higher price to the consumer than the present prices of raw products apparently justify and, with the exception of the efforts of the federal farm board to stabilize and advance the prices of farm products, I do not know of anything else that can be done by governmental agencies."

Midland people who saw the wires before they were sent, or read The Reporter-Telegram account of the action taken were in full sympathy with the move.

It was brought out clearly by the city council that the cause behind the action does not lie in local conditions, but in organized business of the metropolitan cities.

It is not through direct reaction to the complaint made here that the city council hopes to see a change affected, but through the effects of (See QUICK REPLIES page 8)

DEATH BY ACCIDENT VERDICT

Third College Star To Drown Within 2-Week Period

The third death by drowning during two weeks for noted university and college athletes resulted when the body of John Henry, 22, track star of Texas university, was found in the Colorado river early today.

A Canyon Teachers College athlete's death was the first of the series, and a famous grid star of the University of New York was second.

AUSTIN, July 12. (P)—Fishermen today found the body of John Henry, 22, Texas University athlete, son of Stanhope Henry of the state board of pardons and paroles, in the Colorado river near here. Henry had been missing for several days.

Investigation revealed that there were no marks of violence on the body. Stanhope Henry said that his son had been missing since Thursday, but that no apprehension was felt as it was believed he had gone to San Antonio on a visit.

The body, apparently in the water for some time, was clad in trousers and undershirt.

John Henry was a member of the Texas University track team.

Cracks up His Speedy Ship

Here is Captain Frank Hawks, last seen here when he landed in his tiny glider, Eaglet, and his high speed monoplane that he cracked up as he tried to land Friday. The motor failed to "take the gun" the flyer said. He narrowly escaped death, but damage to the 250-mile-an-hour monoplane was not thought to be so much.

Midland Scribe Among Those At West Texas Press Dinner To Get Cheated on Address

To speak or not to speak—that was the question pondered by a group of visiting speakers (who turned out to be surprised listeners) at the fifth birthday banquet at Abilene Friday night.

For these men had groomed themselves carefully for days so that they might address the "unseen audience" over the radio mike there in the ballroom of Hotel Wooten, and found the apparatus grabbed away from before their noses at the very instant they were to start their eloquence.

Paul T. Vickers of Midland; Houston Harte, publisher of the San Angelo Standard-Times; Ray Nichols of Vernon, president of the Texas Press association; D. A. Barden, manager of the WTCO; and William C. Edwards, Dallas, director of the Texas Public Service Information Bureau—these were the men who go to their feet with a figurative "Major Hoopie" clearing of the throat, only to see the mike clusively vanish into the oratorical wash of a "double" who had been "tipped off" before hand. This resulted in a barrage of mimicry, distortion of subject matter and a roar of approval from the crowded ballroom that at times grew almost deafening.

Scribes who for years had lived "that additional year" just to pull the bag over the unsuspecting ears of their political enemies or good-natured friends found themselves the butt of their own ilk—and such a butt!

Characteristic of the general trend of the speeches, James P. Stinson, Abilene attorney, reaped to his feet and caught the mike when Houston Harte was about to launch a thousand slips of the tongue on the beauty and superiority of San Angelo, and, speaking as though he were Harte, "admitted" the prevailing logic in the paramount position of Abilene above San Angelo in West Texas!

When Nichols arose to take the mike as master of ceremonies he found himself out of vocal range of the instrument, and sank back in his chair to watch Amon Carter of the Star-Telegram simulate Nichols' best "radio voice" for him.

To Max Bently goes the credit for the clever stunt, pulled for the first time. Other speakers came up and went down in the same order, all of them whiffed in succession, and without the grace of an immediate explanation. In fact, it was at the close of the affair before the most astounding announcement was made—that, all the time, the mike had been "dead." Not a sound had gone outside the hotel ballroom, unless it was the volume of those concerted yells that made up the bedlam of appreciation.

T. N. Carswell did the "quick change" act for Paul T. Vickers. (See PRESS MEET page 8)

PRICES AND BREAD LINES

Action of the local city officials in urging government action on the low prices paid to producers and the high prices charged to consumers is commendable, regardless of what immediate results are accomplished.

Protest after protest from all sections of the country should pour in to all government agencies, just like the protests from Midland city officials.

IS THERE A COMBINE?

In this day of modern merchandising, it is unusual that a business institution, especially a group of business institutions of the same kind, will fail to acquaint the public with prices and policies.

A check of the leading business institutions will show that they seek to acquaint the public with prices and with quality of merchandise, not only through newspaper advertising, but also through direct by mail contact and in window displays.

When a business house does not advertise, it is usually because it is not aggressive or because it does not have incentives to offer the public in extending an invitation to visit the store or place of business.

When a group of business institutions of the same character consistently fails to advertise, whispers of "combinations", price agreements and combinations in restraint of trade are heard.

If business institutions of the same nature do not compete with each other, one wonders is there is really competition.

What follows such a situation? An investigation of "silent competition" in other communities proves interesting. It is found that the public interests itself. Housewives wonder why it is that prices are not advertised, that they have to go to the stores to find what the prices are, and whether they are paying fair prices or perhaps a little above the average.

Housewives mention the situation to each other. In some localities citizens even interest themselves to the extent of visiting neighboring towns to compare prices and merchandising details, and in the end there have been instances of public protest, resulting usually in some enterprising and independent merchant taking advantage of the situation to open a new store or to change the policies of his own, advertising his prices to the whole world and letting his customers know what they will find at his store.

LESS THAN TWO WEEKS

It is less than two weeks until voters will have opportunity to select nominees for offices of the next administration in local, state and national government.

The policy of selecting office holders on the basis of personal friendships, political affiliations or because the candidate happens to need the job should be disregarded. Midland, just as all other sections of the country, has definite needs and definite demands to make upon its officials. Look well into what type of office holders is needed and select the best applicants for the job.

Sarakaw Ruler Only White Man to Hold Title of Rajah

By MINTON BRONNER, NEA Service Writer.

LONDON, July 12.—Wars in Borneo, Dyak head-hunters, Malay pirates, Chinese opium smugglers and all the romance of empire were recalled to the British mind the other day when it was announced by Lord Passfield, British Secretary for the Colonies, that the government had just received a gift of a half million dollars from the Rajah of Sarakaw. The money is to be used for the education of children of British civil servants.

Now Rajah usually means some Oriental in gorgeous eastern costume, but this particular Rajah happens to be an Englishman, Sir Charles Vyner Brooke who is the third of his line to hold the title—the only white family of Rajahs in the world.

An English Rajah. There is no more romantic or film-scenario-like story in all the history of the expansion of Britain's grip on this terrestrial globe. Back in 1803 there was born to an Anglo-Indian merchant, residing in the European section of Benares, a son, James Brooke. The youngster was sent to England to be educated, became an officer in the Indian army, served in the Burmese war of 1826, was severely wounded and sent home. That seemed to end his career at its very beginning.

But James Brooke was not satisfied to sit quietly in a commonplace England. He had felt the call of the East and it would not down. He got out his atlas and the one spot on earth that seemed desirable was the Malay archipelago. Here there were constant tribal wars, conflicts with savage pirates, adventure galore. Having inherited $150,000 from his father, Brooke bought a 120-ton yacht, the Royalist, which he manned with a band of young Englishmen, friends of his, as adventures as himself and intent on some "fun."

They found it in Borneo. Some of the wild tribes were in rebellion against the then Sultan of that big island. Brooke took the Sultan's side and helped give the rebels an everlasting licking. In return, the Sultan presented him with the territory of Sarakaw and made him Rajah, with the inheritance secured to his family.

Ruled Over Great Territory. At 36 he found himself supreme ruler of a territory on the north-west coast of Borneo, with an area of 40,000 square miles—about the size of Kentucky—with 400 miles of sea coast, several big rivers, some mountainous regions whose peaks reach 10,000 feet in height, and a population of 600,000, comprising everything from peaceful Chinese coast traders to head-hunting Dyaks in the mountain fastnesses.

The new Rajah simply revelled in his job. He reformed the laws, put down the Dyaks and fought the Malay pirates to a standstill. He was assisted in this by his nephew, Charles Johnson Brooke, and by some warships the British government sent out. Sarakaw thus became a British protectorate, although Rajah Brooke ruled it as an absolute sovereign. When he died in 1868, his nephew succeeded him and, like his uncle, was knighted by the British sovereign.

The new Rajah had a son, Charles Vyner Brooke, who was educated at Cambridge University and then went back to Sarakaw, where he led a number of expeditions, which finally put an end to all head-hunting proclivities on the part of the Dyaks. He succeeded his father as Rajah in 1897 and was duly knighted. He was considered a great catch in British society, because of his po-

THE TOWN DOCTOR

THIS IS THE "LET DOWN" SEASON

Every year when the month of July rolls around there are certain people and certain businesses that regularly get out the old "off season," "Everybody's on vacation" and "it's too hot" alibi for not doing anything.

There is no "off season" for the man, the business or the community that has the gumption to keep going to get it. The very fact that there are so many people who look for a reason and excuse to "let down", and use every chance to get out of work makes it that much easier for the live wire who really has the "want" to get somewhere, and has it had enough.

Towns and business that talk the most about business being off and times hard are usually the ones that do not actually try to get business. They wish for more business, when they are not getting half there is to get out of the business that they all ready have. No community, no business, no seller can expect business if he does not ask for it.

If a woman wants a new fur coat she asks for it. Not the "give-me, give-me" kind of asking; but she starts selling — she influences toward the getting of the fur coat. And, she usually gets it! Children can teach communities, business people and sellers a lot of good salesmanship. But again it is the case of using that portion of the anatomy referred to as the "nodie," and too many of us look at things we do not see.

Business is based on selling—influencing. If you are going to influence people you have to do more than just leave them to their own alibi. You have first to influence yourself—sell yourself on the idea that if business is off it is your (Continued on Page 3)

Makes Trip "Home" Upon one of her trips "home," George Arliss was showing London the play in which he made such a success in America, "The Green Goddess." Somebody suggested that the country of the play—Rukh—might have been based upon Sarakaw. The Ranece laughingly denied the suggestion. She said Sarakaw had no luxuries such as the stage country. Instead of marble bath-rooms, with all the latest modern fittings, they had a stone-floored room where they threw cold water over themselves from buckets, the while they kept a keen eye for stray scorpions. In her bedroom there was a table whose legs had almost been eaten through by white ants. All the rooms were simple and bare, so they could see the spiders on the walls and the beetles on the floors. But they did have the luxury of electric light and outside they had a golf course, a tennis court and a native band, which even played the latest jazz.

Daily Washington Letter By Rodney Dutcher

Administration's Friends and Enemies Have a Lot to Say About the Hoover Record So Far. But the Verdict Is Up to the Voters—This Fall and in 1932

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The administration's friends and its enemies have tried to outblat each other in the argument at the close of Congress as to whether the record showed the Hoover administration to have been a success to date or whether it proved it a failure. Obviously each side the drum frantically on such occasions because if one did not the other would get all the attention for its end of the argument, but neither group could prove a case for itself.

The months ahead rather than the 16 months behind will determine just what the future's conception will be of the Hoover administration; they will tell whether the president can pull himself out of the mud or whether he is to become even more badly bogged in one morass and another.

It's Up to the Voters Anyway, it is not for newspaper correspondents or for pro-Hoover and anti-Hoover partisans to decide whether this is a successful administration. The only thing in the nature of a verdict on that is the vote that people cast in elections and no one here is forgetting for a minute the fact that there will be a congressional election in November and a presidential election in 1932. In two years Mr. Hoover will know whether he is going to be his party's candidate to succeed himself, he may know, one way or the other, long before that.

There isn't any good whatever in bragging about the acts of Congress or complaining about its omissions until you know how those things react on the country. And when the voters decide whether they are sore or satisfied with the Republicans most of them are likely to be utterly free from any thought about whether or not Hoover got what he wanted from Congress.

If business recovers and farm prices rise appreciably everyone will be happy except Democrats. Hoover will suddenly become the man who pulled the country through its hour of trial and tribulation. If no such developments come along before Congress meets again there will be a general disposition to consider the administration a failure and it will be extremely difficult for the administration to get back on solid ground.

The White House must worry, not only about the voters, but about the hard-headed Republican politicians who are distinctly looking askance at Hoover. It is just possible that those boys so often reiterated the cry that Republicanism was synonymous with prosperity that they came to believe it and now blame Hoover for the depression as do many others who ought to know better. But at any rate the powerful Republican leaders here and out in the states are Republicans long before they are Hoover men and would infinitely rather win without Hoover than lose with him.

Since Taft's 1912 nomination there has been a theory that any president can renominate himself, but Taft had a national machine and the big business interests be-

Coupe pulls itself to-gether, races engine, backs up, bumps truck in front. Truck is hind him and if that faction op-poses Hoover he is simply going to be out of luck.

So far as what Congress did is concerned, only rural and farm re-lief will cut any figure. Prohibition doesn't count as a party issue this year. Individual members cam-paigning for re-election will boast about what they did for veterans, inland waterways and federal high-way legislation.

Farmers May Not Rebel The Hoover agricultural relief program has been in effect for a year, without the export debenture feature that farm bloc members and Democrats tried to keep in. The only yardstick the farmers have to determine its success is the prices they get for their crops—and every-one knows what's been happening in that respect. At this writing the best consolation for the adminis-tration is that farmers are patient, long-suffering and mostly Republi-can, except down south.

Any business pickup between now and November will be attributed to the new tariff act and so will any further slump. Hoover isn't sat-isfied with it, but he will be a lot more than satisfied if it works out all right. As in the case of the farm relief act, the proof of the pudding lies in the digestion or indigestion produced.

Politically speaking, anything may happen and something must.

'Uncle Jake,' 79, Shot His Grandson Because Youth 'Wouldn't Behave'

By E. A. Service

LOURAY, Va., July 12.—A Page county grand jury, called for the last week in July, will be asked to consider the case of "Uncle Jake" Cabbage, 79-year-old mountain patriarch, who broke a long peace in the Blue Hill Mountains when he shot and killed his 19-year-old grandson, Fred.

Behind the killing, and the possible trial for murder, there can be heard the low rumblings of another mountain feud. Mountain families are arrayed one against another over the affair. Members of the younger generation believe "Uncle Jake" was all wrong in shooting young Fred. The older generation, however, take another view of the matter. They feel that the old man had sufficient provocation for his act.

In the meantime, "Uncle Jake" remains behind the bars of the jail in this little town. The authorities are willing to let him out on bail, but they are keeping him here for his own good. They fear he might be slain should he return to the hills.

"I Had to Kill Him"

"Uncle Jake" waits in jail, a little dazed by all that has happened. A quiet man, he never before has been in the hands of the law. To visitors who call on him, the old man says: "Yes, I killed Fred, but I had to do it. He didn't know how to behave himself."

For many years "Uncle Jake" had been recognized as head of the Cabbage clan. They are an unruly people, the Cabbages, always ready for a fight, a dance, or a moonshine party. It was "Uncle Jake's" self-appointed task to preserve law and order among his people.

When Cabbage men got in trouble with the law over moonshine stills or quarrels among themselves, "Uncle Jake" always went with them to court. He gained the title of "The Lawyer of Cabbage Hollow." Personally, he never gave the authorities any trouble. He was recognized as a peaceful man, according to Sheriff E. L. Lucas. "Uncle Jake used to give the Cabbages good advice and they took it," the sheriff said.

But recently it has been different. Some of the younger generation of Cabbages began a revolt against the old order of things. They resented "Uncle Jake's" interference with their affairs and his instruction on how they should behave. And one of the ring-leaders in this rebelling against the old man's authority was Fred, his 19-year-old grandson.

Fred, in his mountain way, was a modern youth. He didn't believe he should sit back and let old Jake tell him how he should live his life.

A "Moonshine Party"

The more or less silent warfare between the younger generation and "Uncle Jake" came to a climax following a little "mountain dew" party of the Cabbage men folks at Trent Cabbages cottage.

"Uncle Jake" Cabbage, right, patriarch of the Cabbage family, didn't understand the ways of the younger generation of mountaineers. When Fred, his 19-year-old grandson, "wouldn't behave," the old man killed him. Witnesses to the crime were Amanda, 16, and Melvin, 10, two of Jake's children, pictured upper center. Lower center, the cabin where the shooting took place. Fred's youthful wife is shown at lower left, and upper left is pictured Sheriff E. L. Lucas.

Moonshine flowed at the party, it was related. The younger men grew noisy and quarrelsome, Fred among them.

Someone stepped on someone's foot. There were curses and flushed faces. Old "Uncle Jake" who never drank much, stepped in and stopped the row. After peace was restored, he left the place and went to his own cottage where he seated himself in the doorway, his head in his hands, thinking, no doubt, of the troublesome younger generation.

And it was there that young Fred, the grandson, flushed with liquor, found the old man. There are conflicting stories as to just what happened. Amanda, 16, Jake's daughter, and Melvin, 10, Jake's son, say that the old man had to shoot in self defense.

"Fred stood there a cussin' pappy and he raised his fist like he was goin' to hit him," Amanda related.

"Pappy stood a lot from him and wouldn't a shot if Fred hadn't a come like he was going to hit him." No matter how the quarrel started, or what young Fred said to "Uncle Jake," the fact remains that the old man shot his grandson. The shot lodged in the youth's leg and he died to death before medical assistance could reach him.

After he fired the fatal shot, the old man started to the village of Stanley to give himself up. Meanwhile, Fred's wife, to whom he had been married four months, heard about the shooting and came to the cabin where her husband lay dying.

There had been trouble between the couple a week before and Mrs. Cabbage was living at the home of her father, a nephew of Jake's.

"When I come up, Fred knew he was dying," his young widow related.

"He said he was a-going and he didn't want to die with his shoes on so he says to me, 'Honey, you're my lawful wedded wife. Take my shoes off.'"

"But he was a bleedin' so and I was feared of hurtin' him more and I couldn't take his shoes off. 'Honey, take them off,' he begged me. 'I ain't a-goin' with my boots on.'"

"Someone else took his shoes off and Fred turned to me again and says, 'Honey, I'm a-goin' cause I can feel my heart a-dyin'. And he died.'"

Fred's widow, who was also a Cabbage before she was married, is expected to aid the state in its prosecution of Jake.

"He had no right to shoot Fred," she said. "He never done nothin' to him."

During the time "Uncle Jake" has been in jail he has been a model prisoner. He has had plenty of time to consider his act, and he still feels that he did his duty.

"UNDER A TEXAS MOON" ALL COLOR OUTDOOR FILM

The feature attraction starting a three day engagement today at the Ritz, is Warner Brothers Vitaphone special "Under A Texas Moon," an all-talking outdoor special. It is the first outdoor all technical production to be brought to the talking screen and is said to be even greater than any of the outdoor talking film attractions released in the past.

An excellent cast assumes the principal roles, including Frank Fay, Raquel Torres, Myrna Loy, Armida, Noah Beery, Fred Kohler, Tully Marshall. Frank Fay is referred to as a new Warner Baxter, and portrays the same type role which made Baxter famous in his first outdoor all-talker, "In Old Arizona." Fay is said to keep the audience fairly guessing at what he will do next, as he plies his trade of love making and banditry. He lies himself into the hearts of women and laughs himself out of consequences.

With Noah Beery and Fred Kohler in the same cast, movie fans will be eager to learn the outcome of their identities in the plot and story.

for either of the famous heavies have in past productions been equal to any occasion that might arise for the undertakings of such hard-boiled characters as they portray. Tully Marshall has played so many important roles in outdoor pictures, commencing a few years back as the guide in "North of 36" that his appearance is always an assurance of a strengthened plot in any picture.

The thrilling action of the play, augmented by the gorgeousness of beautiful natural color from start to finish, should prove an innovation in talking pictures and a genuine treat for local fans. The photography is to play three days, commencing today.

should stop, and then sell them when they do stop.

You who are not in business may say, "that would be fine for the gas station, restaurants and hotels, but where would I get anything out of it?"

In the first place do not be misled into the belief that motorists spend their money only with such firms. Expense accounts of thousands of them tell a different story. But regardless of that, you can't make money unless your neighbor does; and if only $15,000 a month is added to the gross business of the community you will get yours—enough at least to pay you to lend your effort to sell the traveler on Midland.

WHEN the long road dips sweetly down a hill and ends up in a blank and puzzled amazement at a jumble of cross-roads, unless you know your way, you'll push down hard on the brakes! And then look around to see where you're going.

Five roads jutting off in various directions of the compass. One road is yours. But a brief glance—and you're off! On the right road. For a sign was over each road to direct your way!

Just as the directions point out the way in a maze of roads; so does modern advertising guide you in the right direction through the multitude of products in present-day markets.

Advertising points the way, straight and clear, to economical and advantageous marketing. It distinguishes the good product. It directs your way by indicating the article best adapted to your needs.

Read the advertisements every day as carefully as you would the signs above the cross-roads. They point out your buying road as surely and as safely!

Wimbledon Results Compliment To Bike-Riding Greek Professor

By WILLIAM BRAUCHER, NEA Service Sports Editor.

A professor of Greek at the University of Texas, who rides a bicycle to and from work, helped the United States to make a clean sweep of the tennis championships this year at Wimbledon, England.

His name is Dr. D. A. Penick, and his years of coaching without one cent in payment have put the state of Texas on the tennis map in a big way. It was Doc Penick who turned out Wilmer Allison, Berkeley Bell and a score of other net stars from the Panhandle.

It was he who taught young Allison the tricks that vanquished Henri Cochet, the world's greatest tennis player, in the singles at Wimbledon. And Allison, later, as half of the doubles team of Van Ryn and Allison, went on to win the doubles championship on the English court for the second consecutive time.

If the Davis Cup comes back to America this year or the next, it will be pupils tutored by the bicycle-riding professor of Austin who played a great part in America's victory. For teaching Greek, Dr. Penick is paid $6000 a year. He has been offered pay for his sideline of coaching the tennis teams, but has declined. For the last 12 years young men taught tennis by him have swept one championship after another before their triumphant racquets.

The first pair he had that earned national fame were Lewis White and Louis Thalheimer, doubles combination which took the intercollegiate ate doubles in 1924-25. Each also ranked high in singles. A year ago White and Berkeley Bell were finalists in national doubles.

Penick's teams wade through the Southwestern Conference annually like Carnera took his string of setups. He wins doubles and singles men. A young man named Bruce Barnes this spring gave Cliff Sutter, the Tulane terror, a decisive lacing and Sutter went on later to trim the Lehigh lobster. Seligson, in the championship finals in the east.

Sports experts of the southwest say the reason Barnes did not win the intercollegiate championship this year is because he is weak as a grass player, though great on the clay courts.

Penick is one of those soft-voiced fellows you listen to. He frowns upon violent language among his pupils, gently rebukes displays of temper, such as throwing racquets and corrects their faults quietly. He is the sort of man to whom you must reply,

"Yes, sir, thank you, sir."

The doctor's favorite sport, aside from tennis, is bicycle riding. He is often seen taking rides on his wheel around town, even though Austin tennis fans chipped in and bought him an automobile a year ago after Allison and Van Ryn crashed to victory in the Wimbledon doubles.

Three of the amiable doctor's pupils were at Wimbledon this year—Allison, Berkeley Bell and E. O. Mather. Mather is an Oxford student who formerly attended the University of Texas.

Allison is the "big shot" of the doctor's pupils who are in the limelight now. It was his defeat of Cochet, though he later lost to Tilden, that turned the tide at Wimbledon in America's favor.

INDUSTRIALISM MOVING SOUTHWARD—AGRICULTURE STILL DOMINANT BELOW MASON AND DIXON LINE—SOUTH GREAT

UNIVERSITY, Va., July 11. (AP).—Southward moves industrialism, until its teeming center draws downward toward the Dixie outposts of the Ohio and Potomac rivers.

This is the finding of the first sectional study completed by the Institute for Research in the Social Sciences at the University of Virginia. It is devoted to labor in the South, which it covers in all its connections.

Agriculture, still dominant below the Mason and Dixon line, has lost ground before the steady growth of manufacturing, the study revealed, but the most striking comparison was found with the country as a whole. During the 47 years from 1880 to 1927, the value of manufactured products for the entire nation increased 1,170 per cent, but that for the eleven distinctly Southern states grew over 2,300 per cent, more than twice as much.

In less than one-fourth the total number of states, in approximately one-fourth the country's area and with less than one-fourth of its population, the South is producing ten per cent of the country's manufactured output. That, proportioned on the basis of number of states, area and population, would place its value at not far from 40 per cent of the nation's total, the institute estimated.

"Considering how recent this movement toward an industrial civilization has been, this proportion is by no means small," the report said. "If past progress is any indication of what the future is likely to show, the proportion will continue for a considerable time to be a mounting one."

The survey was conducted in the Institute established at the University in 1926 by the Rockefeller Foundation and deals with studies conducted in the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama and Texas.

"The South, while in a process of change, has not as yet been revolutionized as have large sections of the North and West," said the report. "This fact accounts not only for much of the conservatism exhibited in meeting present-day industrial problems, but also the persistence of old standards of living and habits of life."

Cheap labor, it was found, had had its effect in attracting industry southward, but the Institute investigators were inclined to believe that the importance of the labor factor has been exaggerated. Natural resources, they said, were a more powerful influence.

In 1927 there were 12 industries in the eleven Southern states each of which had an output in excess of $100,000,000. Census figures showed that more than 56 per cent of the country's cotton manufacturing is being done in the South; 84 per cent of cottonseed products; 55 per cent of fertilizers; 40 per cent of lumber and lumber products; 27 per cent of refined petroleum; 53 per cent of turpentine and resin; 46 per cent of cigars and cigarettes; and 12 per cent of the nation's knit goods.

The 12 manufacturing industries each of which in 1927 had an output in the South of over $100,000,000 were as follows:

Cottons, $980,805,268; petroleum refining, $580,476,813; cigars and cigarettes, $563,784,310; lumber and timber products not elsewhere specified, $501,854,690; oil cake and cottonseed, $233,050,136; cars, general shop construction and pairs for steam railroads, $208,772,542; knit goods, $142,323,882; flour and other grain mills, $130,833,235; lumber—planing mill products not made in planing mills connected with sawmills, $128,717,098; slaughtering and meat packing, $121,450,605; furniture, $109,961,637; fertilizers, $105,415,387.

The world's registration of motor vehicles in 1929 was 34,700,000, 76 per cent of which were owned in the United States.

VOL. I. Sunday, July 13, 1930 No. 22

Published in the interests of the People of Midland by Wm. Cameron & Co., Inc. A. B. Anderson, editor.

Reports from all over the country are to the effect that girls responded most nobly to the appeal of observance of Pain-Up Week.

No special "appeal" is necessary for people to recognize the merits of our lumber.

Stinger: "Jane, I'm going to take that car out in the yard and fix it or bust it up."

Mrs. Stinger: "Why John, just think of the neighbors—and you baptized only last Sunday."

Mr. Frank Wolcott

is having some repair work done on his home this week, along with a new Richardson's Roof. W. A. McCall is the contractor in charge of the work.

Pessimistic Paul has quit studying history. He says the world was first flat, then it was round and now it's crooked.

Mrs. Ella Youngblood is having her home redecorated this week. C. E. Vaughn is the artist in charge of the work.

A local insurance man says "A smile for the boss in the insurance morning is the best fire."

But no doubt it is a pleasant refer to Paul to know that lumber is always sold on the square.

It must be love

when a boy walks home with a girl knowing he must lick seven tormentors later.

The users of carbolineum say it is the best yet to run the chicken mites and blue bugs.

One of Mr. Wrigley's best customers remarks, "Kissing is about to be carried so far that ladies will get tired of it and it will utterly go out of fashion."

One of the very first things we ever learned about the lumber business was that it PAYS TO PLEASE.

Long faces or smiling ones make all the difference in the world in the spirit of a community. Let's SMILE.

A successful business is built upon the firm foundation of Satisfied customers.
