CHAMBER OF COMMERCE JOINS IN CITY-INSTITUTED FIGHT

FARM BOARD TO BE ASKED TO GIVE AID

Uneconomic Spread Decried in Wire To Sheppard

A telegram was received this morning from Senator Morris Sheppard who said he would act immediately in the line of procedure suggested by the chamber of commerce here relative to presenting the claims of beef producers here of an unfair economic spread in the cattle producing industry. He will go before the farm board with the Midland idea.

Appeals for government aid in stabilizing the beef cattle market were made Thursday by the Midland chamber of commerce through its president. Telegrams were sent government officials asking that cattle growers be given as much consideration as wheat growers and producers of other commodities.

Following is the telegram sent to Senator Morris Sheppard and Tom Connally, Arthur H. Hyde, secretary of agriculture; C. B. Denman of the Federal farm board; and E. B. Spiller, head of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers association:

"Through consistent declines in the past ninety days livestock prices have reached ruinous levels occasioned by packers' contentions of oversupply on all meat animals. If the farm board has power to purchase wheat, cotton, and other commodities to stabilize markets and care for oversupply, then livestock growers are entitled to some protection. We urge you to aid livestock producers by seeing they secure the same protection as other producers through the farm board. A comparatively small amount of money efficiently expended by the government at this time in purchase of meat products would stabilize markets and save thousands who face certain ruin under existing conditions."

LUFTHANSA REPORTS

AERIAL ASSOCIATION

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Copied somewhat after the American Automobile Association, the "Motor Club of the Air" has been formed by the National Air Travelers Association. Such air personages as Eddie Rickenbacker, Stinson, Schlee, Brock and others are at the head of the club.

PLANE CAUSES SHOCK

PAPILLON, Neb.—Last January a plane crashed onto the roof of the home of Mrs. Esther Watson near Fort Crook airport. She has been awarded $500 damages which she claimed were caused to her by the shock of the plane. Her husband is suing for $3000 damages to his property.

FORM BALLOON CLUB

Just a Little Hint for Hot Weather

NEA Cincinnati Bureau Any "tired business man" would really enjoy dictating letters to dissatisfied customers if his stenographer followed the example of Mary Belle Smith of Cincinnati, and donned a bathing suit when the mercury flared around the 100-degree mark. Her boss, William Danziger, is shown catching up with a lot of correspondence and Mary Belle, of course, is trying to keep her notes in shape. And who says it isn't a good idea during hot weather?

THOMASON STATES ISSUES IN SPEECH GIVEN THURSDAY

MERTZON, Tex.—More effective relief for farms and ranches, and prompt steps to solve the present problem of unemployment and the promise that, if elected, he will be actively representative of the entire sixteenth district rather than of El Paso alone, as charged by a rival candidate, were emphasized here Friday by Mayor R. E. Thomason of El Paso, speaking in the interests of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for congress.

"I believe the federal farm board act was a step in the right direction," Thomason said, "but it has not gone far enough."

One additional piece of legislation he advocated is to curb cotton exchanges in market gambling. He favored a tariff on such West Texas products as sheep, wool, goats, cattle, hides, crude oil and long staple cotton; but he insisted that the newly enacted tariff law doesn't make anything like an equitable adjustment of the difference between farm products and the products of eastern manufacturers.

Thomason promised to work for reorganization of the federal employment service so that, cooperating with state bureaus, it will be an effective force in connecting the jobless man with the manless job. He favored restriction of Mexican immigration, prompt relief of disabled war veterans, retention of federal prohibition and immediate steps to readjust the freight rates structure so as to eliminate the unfair (See THOMASON page 6)

Ashes of Lost Pilot to Ride Mail Plane Today

LOS ANGELES, July 18. (UP)—Maury Graham will ride the air mail again tonight. Out in the cool summer air of the mountains where six months ago a raging blizzard claimed his life, friendly hands will spread his ashes to the four winds he rode so many years as a skilled air mail pilot.

New Taxi Fare Here Is Only Ten Cents

The most remarkable announcement in months here is thought to be that of the Ford Cab company, which today said it would take passengers anywhere in the city limits of Midland for one dime.

Simultaneous with the announcement were others that provided for 10 cents-a-mile cab fare on trips over any distance into the country and surrounding towns.

The company announced that volume of business would be necessary in maintaining this decision but that it was felt that the public would react to the new prices so favorably that not only could the prices be maintained, but that additional cabs may probably have to be placed on the streets.

The trip to the airport will be 75 cents, the company announced. "It is the purpose of the company to maintain faster service than street cars could give, yet to charge approximately the same price," an official of the company said.

Minister Has Day Virtually to Self

The Rev. George F. Brown, pastor of the First Baptist church, will have the town almost "to himself" Sunday, as three other ministers are away from the pulpits and have not arranged to have them filled.

The Church of Christ, however, is having services, a revival beginning with the Rev. Thornton Crews as speaker.

Mr. Brown will speak at the morning service on "The Holy Spirit," and in the evening on "Jesus, the Healer."

WOMAN IS WITNESS, ADMITTED

Identification Is Held Up Pending More Information

CHICAGO, July 18. (UP)—State's Attorney John A. Swanson announced today that the solution to the murder of Alfred Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, had been obtained through an unnamed woman eye witness.

"She saw the killer shoot Lingle," Swanson said. The experience caused the woman to suffer a nervous breakdown and she is under the care of a physician, Swanson said.

"We regard her as the key to the Lingle killing. It is the first tangible progress that has been made toward solving the mystery," Swanson said.

He would not say whether the slayer had been identified as he feared it might hamper investigation, nor would he give details of the witness' story.

Chicago Killing

CHICAGO, July 18. (UP)—Two bandits, captured holding up a garage and being held awaiting a patrol wagon, suddenly drew guns today and shot down two policemen arresting them. The bandits killed one, seriously wounded another, and escaped.

Policeman John Guiltanane was shot through the head and killed. Anthony Wistort was shot through the abdomen and it is feared the wound will be fatal. The bandits held up an oil station and were traced to the garage and arrested. In an abandoned auto a license card bearing the name of Andrew Vansky and another card indicating Vansky had recently been paroled from prison were found.

BARGAIN DAY IS STIMULATION TO BUSINESS, SAID

Some new business was created by the Political Bargain day, but the principal benefits from this day staged by the Midland chamber of commerce under the direction of Homer W. Rowe, was in pepping things up and keeping Midland in the forefront in this area of West Texas, business men declared Friday.

Here are some comments: T. S. Patterson said the day actually made new business for Everybody's Store; C. Y. Barron of Grissom-Robertson; Tommie Wilson of Wilson-Adams; Ily Pratt of Hasen's; A. Harris of Harris', declared that while business was slightly stimulated, the day nevertheless, was worthwhile, as it kept the people busy, gave everybody something to think about and was beneficial to the public feeling, as well as bringing some out of town customers to their stores. Their principal interest, however, was in a stimulated feeling.

T. A. Fannin of the City Drug Store, and Petroleum Pharmacy; J. L. Mayes of Mayes-Young; Louie Arrington of Midland Drug; Miss Fanny Bess Taylor of Taylor's Drug, and L. D. Alexander of Hotel Pharmacy enjoyed some increase in business, and liked the idea of the Political Bargain day.

George D. McCormick of the Midland Hardware and Allen Tolbert of the Nobles-Tolbert store, couldn't see any tangible results, but approved the plan of keeping things stirred up and having something doing in Midland.

Odessa Crash Victim Dead Others Seriously Injured

Mrs. J. L. Dutton of Wink, one of nine victims of an automobile accident near Odessa on the Bankhead highway Thursday morning, succumbed to injuries at noon today and Odessa information says Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hemphill and their 11-year-old daughter, Francis, have serious injuries.

Mrs. Dutton was said by physicians early this morning to have a probably fracture of the skull, and other injuries. Her body is being held pending funeral arrangements.

The accident happened at 10 o'clock, three miles this side of the neighboring town. The Hemphill and Dutton automobiles met head on, running about 40 miles an hour each, which made a combined velocity of 80 miles. The cars were crumpled into shapeless masses of metal and the victims were trapped inside.

It was A. E. Maroney and Mrs. Maroney of the Magnolia tank farm here who got to the victims first. Maroney is a lineman and he climbed the Magnolia line and called the farms here for aid. His prompt service is thought to have possibly saved several lives. Maroney pulled one of the victims of the crash from the wreck while her husband was calling over the line with his test set. Maroney had previously aided three victims to get out.

Two children of Mrs. Dutton, her sister, Mrs. Barby Barnett of Oil City, La., and Ralph Bunkley, also of Oil City, escaped with minor injuries, as did two younger daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Hemphill.

Murder-Farm Fiend Found By Police, It Is Thought

GULFPORT, Miss., July 18. (P)—The sheriff's office here today reported a woman believed to be Mrs. Bell Guinness, charged with operating a murder farm near Laporte, Indiana 22 years ago, recently left her Wolf river home near here, and the state.

She was identified as living under an assumed name, by a former man acquaintance in Laporte. The press and law had called her the most notorious murderess of the century. Her home burned in 1903 and the bodies of three children and another, tentatively identified as Mrs. Guinness, were found. Authorities never were satisfied with her identification.

Investigation at her farm revealed a private burial ground with fifteen bodies. Some were identified. She had inserted matrimonial advertisements in Scandinavian papers and authorities believe all were victims who disappeared one by one after arriving at Laporte.

SPEECHES AFTERNOON AND NIGHT

Day Pronounced Big Success by All Who Attend

Candidates for congressional, state, district, county and precinct offices spoke to two crowds which were estimated at 1,800 persons Thursday.

The occasion was Political Bargain day and was marked by the real jubilee spirit that comes to this cattle and oil region when natives and new-comers gather.

Homer W. Rowe, county democratic executive chairman and the originator of plans for Political Bargain day, presided and introduced speakers throughout the afternoon and evening. Practically every local candidate spoke, but representatives who were to speak for gubernatorial candidates were few, Jewell Lightfoot and Judge McGee being ill, and having illness in their families.

Thomas Christopher of Lamesa opened the shelling by laying down a barrage for James V. Alfred of Wichita Falls, candidate for attorney general. He predicted a 35,000-vote margin victory for his candidate.

About 400 people were gathered on Main street before the Midland National bank, surrounding the truck with the sweet gum stump on top for a platform.

His Big Interests The finger of prejudicial favoring of big interests, especially as applied to major oil companies and filers on vacancy strips, was pointed at the attorney general's office by the speaker, who attempted to prove his prejudicial remarks by citing "matters of court record."

W. R. Smith, district attorney and candidate for re-election, was the next speaker. He outlined the dangerous and helpful influence of his office on the carrying out of justice, depending upon the stamp of the candidate in office. Smith pointed out that his candidacy might have suffered through his failure to canvass the district, as much as he might; but explained that his duties were first of all to the public and that he felt it necessary to wait until court sessions were over before starting actively his campaign. He explained his political beliefs and briefly touched his record from the time he finished law school, went to the legislature as a representative of the El Paso district, to his appointment to the office of district attorney here.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

He then spoke of the consequences of resisting the Spirit or quenching the Spirit. "It results in: darkness of mind, coldness and stupidity in regard to religion generally, falling into divers errors in infidelity, great hardness of heart, delusions in regard to one's spiritual state."

"If the Christian world will but yield to the leadership and influence of the Spirit of God, their lives will unfold like a beautiful flower and we will enter into the deeper life of holiness. The fundamentalists have gone to seed in their battle in defense of the truth. They deal in bitter and cruel personalities until they have grieved the great heart of God. I am a believer in the fundamentals of our faith. Indeed I am so orthodox, I have moss growing up my backbone, but I refuse to participate in the hateful, ironical battle against individuals who are deluded by modernism. I will fight for principle and truth. I will stand for the gospel and the (See REVIVAL page 6)

A BREAK FOR ALL OF US

John McDonald, missing witness in the Mooney case, has been found at last; and in that fact lies a bit of great good luck, not only for Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings, but for the nation as a whole.

His sudden appearance makes it probable that Mooney and Billings will at last be released from prison. That will not only be a good thing for them, it will be wholesome for all of us, whether we like it or not.

San Francisco held a preparedness parade in 1916. A bomb left in a suitcase at the corner of Stuart and Market streets, exploded, killing a number of people.

Mooney and Billings, labor agitators, were arrested and charged with the crime. McDonald was the star witness. He swore he had seen Billings leave the suitcase on the corner, join Mooney and talk with him and then walk away. Chiefly on the strength of his testimony, the two men were convicted and imprisoned.

Five years later McDonald appeared in New York and swore that he had lied. He had never seen Mooney and Billings at all, he said; he would not have been able to identify them if the police had not pointed them out to him in jail. He prepared to go back and tell his story; but when he learned that he would be prosecuted for perjury he vanished.

Now he has turned up again, and it is hard to see how Mooney and Billings can be kept in prison any longer. F. C. Oxman, the only other important witness against them, has been proved to be a liar. The judge who tried Mooney and nine of the ten surviving jurors who convicted him have asked that the men be freed, saying that they are now convinced of their innocence. McDonald's final appearance ought to settle things.

This, we repeat, is good luck for the whole country. California's supreme court refused to free the two men—offering the perfectly amazing reason that even if they weren't guilty they at least probably knew something about it, and so ought to stay in prison.

That is a perfect sample of the way the whole country has reacted. It had been demonstrated, before McDonald's reappearance, that the case against Mooney and Billings had utterly collapsed; but we all said, in effect, "Well, they're bad actors anyhow; why worry about them?"

Because of this prejudiced attitude the California supreme court was able to make its absurd remark—forgetting, apparently, that Mooney and Billings weren't accused of having knowledge of the bombing, or of being bad actors generally, but solely of having planted the bomb.

If, at this late date, we are compelled to admit that we have made a terrible mistake; if we are compelled to admit that our prejudices have made us commit a tragic injustice; if all of us, from the California supreme court on down, are compelled to realize that this "well-anyhow-they-knew-something-about-it" reasoning is utter nonsense—then, as a nation, we shall be much better off. We shall have purged ourselves of something that has been very bad for us. We shall have ended a dishonest, wilfully blind mental attitude.

It is our good luck, as well as Mooney's and Billings', that McDonald has turned up.

The Culprit!

How Chicago Breeds Its Gangsters

By BRUCE CATTON NEA Service Writer.

CHICAGO, July 17.—While policemen, detectives and private investigators by the dozen scurry around in a desperate effort to get Chicago's amazing crime situation in hand, a gray-haired little Scotchman sits in his office in Northwestern University's Law School and coolly remarks that gangland is never going to be suppressed that way.

This man is Judge Andrew Bruce, professor of constitutional and criminal law at Northwestern, president of the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology, and one of the foremost authorities in the nation on gangs and the reasons for them.

Judge Bruce peers out from behind his glasses with eyes that see beyond the present, into the future, beyond the gleaming spires of Michigan boulevard and to the sodden slums back o' the yards; beyond the hysterical flurry of the moment, provoked by the latest gang murder to the long years of patient, intelligent study and hard work that must come before Chicago's gangs will die.

"The whole thing," said Judge Bruce, "is a question of environment and example. It is an incident in the migratory nature of our population; an incident in enormous and sudden growth of our cities; an incident in the fact that we have a very large number of foreign-born citizens whose children are largely unable to adapt themselves to their new environment."

Poverty and Congestion "Gangs are chiefly to be found in the tumble-down, changing areas of the city, where on account of poverty and perhaps in order to be near his work—which is an incident of poverty, since he can't pay railroad or street car fare—the newly arrived immigrant centers. And it isn't only the immigrant who settles there, but also the men who wander from city to city for work, and the down and outs of our American civilization.

"There is one district in Chicago where there are 1600 boys between 10 and 17, of whom from 450 to 500 are delinquent every year. The crime of Chicago will be found largely centered in certain areas—the down and out, or changing areas.

"The youngsters have no associates except those whom they find on the streets. They live in tenements; their parents often cannot speak English, and at any rate are hard at work most of the time, and it is the prevailing sentiment of the street that influences the children. In many of these districts this sentiment is criminal. It looks on crime as an avenue to success.

"The children see the gambler, the bootlegger and the owner of a house of prostitution riding in expensive cars; they see men who are notoriously corrupt in public office; they see the police conniving with the bootlegger, and they come to look with contempt on their hard-working parents and to respect those who have made money by crime and corruption.

"For years, through our public indifference, Chicagoans have encouraged corrupt politics. We have shut our eyes to the prevalence of vice and to the violation of the liquor laws and have allowed the criminal element to become influential in politics—and now vice and crime have us by the throat.

"And the trouble with the youngster is that he has lost all respect for law and for government, on account of seeing violators of the law go unpunished—not only unpunished, but actually rewarded—and also on account of seeing so many public officials and police officers themselves partners in crime.

Police Don't Prevent Crime "The Chicago policeman is not a preventer of crime. Perhaps he cannot be, on account of the fewness of his numbers. He merely makes arrests after crimes have been committed. He exercises no moral leadership over the youngsters. "The youngster first starts as a member of a local gang. At first he is merely a rowdy. Then he becomes a thief, then a burglar, then a bootlegger or a gambler—and there you have another gangster. "The kid is just a part of the system. He isn't going to obey laws he doesn't believe in when he sees men in high authority picking and choosing, and disobeying the laws they don't like—especially when he sees those very men become rich and powerful and even rewarded by public office. "Put a child in the right kind of community, with the right kind of community sentiment, and he won't be a criminal. Every gangster had his beginning. He started, invariably, as a petty juvenile rowdy. The Real Solution "The solution of the gang murders in this city is to kill the goose that lays the golden egg. The gangsters are killing each other for the control of the liquor business, the vice business and the gambling business, etc. If we persistently raided these establishments and suppressed them we'd take the profit out of the business and there'd be nothing for the gangster to fight over. Until we do that we'll have crime. As long as our dry laws, our anti-gambling laws and our prostitution laws go unenforced, we'll have gangsters. Judge Bruce paused. "Do you realize," he continued, "that there are 60,000 boys arrested in Chicago each year? That 85 per cent of all criminals are between the ages of 17 and 26? Kids!

Daily Washington Letter By Rodney Dutcher

Organized Labor Has a Few Friends in the Senate, but It Lost Every Item on Its Program in the House—Progressives Also Got the Cold Shoulder

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Congress in the session just closed ditched nearly all important measures sponsored by labor organizations or championed by the Senate's Republican progressives. "The Senate was fairly kind to such measures, but the House in one way or another, strangled about every one that came along. Labor and the progressives may take credit for one big victory during the session, but they shouldn't take very much. One refers to the Senate's rejection of the nomination of Judge John J. Parker to be a justice of the U. S. Supreme Court. The American Federation of Labor really started the fight on Parker, but what licked him was the votes of certain regular Republicans who became frightened by the spectre of a menacing negro vote at the last minute.

Lost Its Whole Program With more than 20 per cent of union men out of work, labor might have expected to do a little better. But it lost out on legislation dear to its heart—unemployment, anti-injunction and immigration measures.

The House passed one of the three Wagner unemployment bills, the one authorizing the Labor Department to obtain more comprehensive figures on the number of jobless. That was the least important of the three. The one which would have set up a board to plan public works for unemployment emergencies was first emasculated almost completely and then shoved off to a committee room whence it may emerge next year. The third, which would have set up a system of federal and state-controlled employment agencies, was entirely shelved at the request of lobbyists for the National Manufacturers' Association.

The Norris anti-injunction bill, containing in final form a clause forbidding "Yellow Dog" contracts, was reported unfavorably by the Senate Judiciary Committee, although the committee's best lawyers—Borah, Norris and Tom Walsh—supported it. The bill never even came to a vote, indicating that the Parker vote was by no means a defeat of "Yellow Dog" as labor enthusiasts contended at the time.

The Harris bill curtailing immigration of Mexican peons, also strongly supported by labor, was choked off in the House.

The Couzens resolution directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to delay railroad consolidations until Congress could safeguard interests of the public and the employees, was backed by the railroad brotherhoods and passed by the Senate. But a House committee worked out a substitute entirely unsatisfactory to labor and neither that nor the Couzens measure came to a vote in the House.

As for the "progressive" measures, outstanding instances of what happened were the Norris Muscle Shoals bill and the Norris lame duck amendment. The first, passed by the Senate and providing government operation of the $150,000,000 Muscle Shoals development, for power and fertilizer production,

I am in favor of starting a home for disabled, dishonest and useless politicians. To begin with, it will take an endowment of about $50,000,000,000 to get the home started and keep it in operation for approximately one month. Along with the endowment would be needed a gift of about 1,000 acres of land on which to build the first unit of the building. I would be president and general manager of the home at a salary of $10,000,000 a year, with traveling expenses thrown in.

was blocked in the House when a committee presented a bill of its own providing for private operation. There was no House vote.

House Fails to Act The lame duck amendment was passed for the fifth time by the Senate early in the session. This would abolish short sessions, convening new congresses in January following elections and prevent members repudiated by the voters from "selling out" in the hope of future reward from other interests. Speaker Longworth held the amendment ten months on his desk this time, without referring it to a committee, and it never reached a vote.

Most of the legislation referred to will be pushed again after Congress reconvenes in December. But it is comparatively easy to kill it off in a short session and the first regular session demonstrated that the labor-progressive combination simply isn't strong enough to get what it wants, even with elections looming ahead.

Mexico's petroleum production in 1929 was 44,687,879 barrels.

Terms Applied to Silver May Be Misleading

By WILLIAM H. BALDWIN
Author of "The Shopping Book"
Written for NEA Service

The shopper who is interested in silver should acquaint herself with its trade names.

Sterling silver is an alloy of pure silver and copper. 925 parts silver and 75 parts copper. Anything marked "Sterling" is an assurance of quality, but not of quantity because sterling silver can be made as thin as paper.

There is no such thing as Sheffield Plate today, except in antiques, and federal legislation prohibits that term as a description of any modern silver. Triple and Quadruple Plate mean nothing because silver is electroplated, and one manufacturer's Quadruple Plate may be no thicker than another's plain honest plate.

Dutch silver is 800 fine, as compared with 925 for sterling. The so-called Dutch Silver of American manufacture may be sterling—in which case it is sure to be so marked—but generally it is an inferior product of silver plating.

German Silver is an alloy of nickel, copper and zinc, without a trace of silver.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

Text: Exod. 3:1-12

Now Moses kept the flock of Pharaoh his father in law, the priest of Midian; and he led the flock to the back side of the desert, and came to the mountain of God, even to Horeb.

And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush; and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.

And Moses said, I will not turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt.

And when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I.

And he said, Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet: for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.

Moreover he said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God.

And the Lord said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their taskmasters; for I know their sorrows; and I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

Now therefore, behold, the cry of the children of Israel is come unto me; and I have also seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them.

Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt.

And Moses said unto God, Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?

And he said, Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for July 20. Leader, Liberator and Lawgiver. Exod. 3:1-12.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Pastor of the Congregationalist
The three-fold title of our lesson describes one of the great heroic figures of history—a man whom the whole world has united with the Jewish race in revering for his supremacy.

The story of Moses is so picturesque and romantic that the little child may thrill to it. The picture of the babe abandoned in the ark of bullrushes, and of the adopted son of Pharaoh's daughter in honor and distinction in the palace, coming to the consciousness of his oneness with his people, is such as to entrance the child and to inspire flaming youth. And at the same time the strength and power of his leadership in revolt and the capacity and vision of Moses as a law-giver make him a figure whom the world's great leaders may revere, and to whom they have, as a matter of fact, always given their great admiration.

Felt a Divine Call
As in the case of Abraham, the chief interest in Moses, is after all, the religious interest. He was a man with a sense of the divine call, responsive to spiritual emotions and incentives, a thoughtful man feeling his own weakness and inadequacies in relation to the world of hope and aspiration that opened before him and a man evidently of limited power of verbal expression as so many men of action have often been. The greatness of Moses was that in his weakness he was capable of becoming a medium of divine strength. In his humility he could so devote himself to a cause that the cause gave him courage and power.

Deepest of all in the men was the moral vision that created his sympathy, his love for his own people, and his intense championing of them against wrong. The task of freeing that people from their strong and powerful oppressors, and of leading them forth, surely must have seemed to him hopeless had it not been for a deep sense in his soul that the man of spiritual courage must attempt the thing that is given him to do, leaving the rest to a power greater than himself.

Above Self-Interest
Moses stands not only as a greatness of Moses. They ask "Who am

French Demand Cochet and Kozeluh in Tennis Match

By MINOTT SAUNDERS
NEA Service Writer
PARIS, July 18.—A persistent demand for an open tennis championship is being made here following the fine play in tournaments this year of Karl Kozeluh, the Czechoslovakian professional, and his desire to meet Henri Cochet, as the best of the amateurs, in a sporting duel for the benefit of charity. Kozeluh recently won the European professional championship at Roland Garros stadium in play that attracted good crowds.

Karl Kozeluh

Henri Cochet

Cochet is very sympathetic with Kozeluh's suggestion and believes that he has as much right to meet professionals as Bobby Jones has in his department of sport. Cochet has publicly announced that he will be glad to play with Kozeluh if the match is sanctioned by the French Tennis Federation. So far this body is not inclined to agree, but pressure is being brought to gain consent. The French Federation is asked to allow the match to be held and thereby establish precedent which, it is believed, would be welcomed in all countries.

"Why not?" asks L'Auto, influential sporting daily, in an appeal to the French Tennis Federation to sanction the match. "On what principle should a tennis amateur be forbidden to play a professional, when a golf amateur is allowed to play against professional golfers? All true sportsmen want to see an end of this tennis snobbery. Cochet and Kozeluh are ready to play and their match would be a magnificent spectacle, so what moral right has the federation to refuse to authorize it? The governing bodies of amateur tennis should play the game."

"I would be very happy to meet Cochet," said Kozeluh. "I am not challenging him, because that would be unfair, since he is restrained by amateur regulations, but I think we could put on an interesting match. I am talking only of a sporting proposition. I want nothing for myself, and would accept nothing as a prize but I suggest the proceeds be given to a worthy charity. I wish only to be useful as far as possible and to meet a formidable adversary."

Kozeluh suggests two matches, if permission is granted, one to be held in Paris and the other in Prague. He believes this would be more fair to both to determine which is the better player. Cochet is agreeable and believes that such a match would be good sport and draw a big gate.

LAMESA'S $200,000 MILK PLANT IS READY TO START OPERATION—COUNTY MAN ENGAGED AS THE FIELD MANAGER

By VIC LAMB
LAMESA, July 18.—Lamesa's new $200,000 powdered milk factory will begin operation here Tuesday, July 22, according to Wm. Whittkamp, manager. A formal opening in the form of a banquet will be held about two weeks after it begins manufacturing products. Whittkamp said.

Arrangements are under way now to secure several noted Texas speakers to address the huge crowd expected when the plant is officially opened.

Products to be manufactured during the first month will include powdered milk and sweet cream butter. Later in the season other dairy products will be turned out by the new factory. These products will be distributed locally as much as possible and all surplus will be sent to foreign markets.

J. M. Peterson, well-known Dawson county farmer, has been named as field manager for the factory. This industry is the only one of its kind in West Texas and is expected to serve a territory of nine counties. Farmers are getting ready to send their milk to the plant over six routes now mapped out. Peterson says he is planning to add several other routes in the county to his present list.

An intensive campaign to acquaint dairymen in the manner of feeding and taking care of dairy cattle has been conducted in this county during the last six months by various business men and organizations in the county.

A dairy short course was held here in April which was attended by over 3,500 farmers of this section. The chamber of commerce has secured several U. S. Department of Agriculture bulletins on dairying which it is distributing among the farmers free of charge.

The $200,000 factory was established in Lamesa after two years of hard work on the part of several Lamesa business men and farmers of this section who conducted surveys to find if establishing the plant here was feasible. Their surveys revealed that Lamesa is an excellent site for a plant of this type, since it is centrally located in a territory of nine counties. Routes will come into Lamesa from a distance of 35 miles, Peterson says. Cooling stations are to be located some fifty miles away from Lamesa.

Over 100 stockholders own the Lamesa plant. The Douthitt Engineering company of Chicago furnished $100,000 of the funds to build the factory, and this sum was coupled with $100,000 raised by Lamesa business men, Dawson county farmers, O'Donnell business men and Lynn county farmers. Officers and directors of the plant were elected recently. O. B. Norman, prominent Lamesa banker, was elected president of the West Texas Milk Products company. J. L. Shumaker of O'Donnell was elected vice-president. J. E. Barron of Lamesa was named secretary, and S. L. Forrest of Lamesa, treasurer.

Counties that are expected to produce milk to be consumed by the factory are Dawson, Lynn, Howard, Gaines, Borden, Terry, Andrews, Martin and Lubbock. Dairymen in this section are preparing to furnish the plant's capacity of 100,000 pounds a day. The manager states that the equipment installed in the plant is speeded to receive and to manufacture 100,000 pounds of milk in 20 hours.

The opening ceremony will probably be held in the large store room on the second floor of the factory. It is over fifty yards long and can easily house a crowd of 2,000 people. The formal opening will probably draw some 4,000 farmers and business men of neighboring cities. The factory is to be run for two weeks before the banquet so that its employees will be acquainted with the work during the visitors' inspection.

The South Plains is noted as a stomping ground for cow punchers in years gone by when great ranches were found in this section. These great ranches produced thousands of head of beef cattle that grazed on the excellent grass that grew in the soil which was most suitable for its growth. This same soil that grew grass for grazing is now producing hundreds of acres of feed such as sudan, milo maize, kaffir corn and other grain crops. Since cattle feed can be grown so easily, it will be no trouble for the owners of great dairy herds in this section to grow their own feed.

Dawson county farmers have already begun increasing their herds with better grade of dairy cattle. The type that is most favored is the Jersey milk cow. Several dozen head have been shipped into this section within the last four or five months. Farmers are also interested in bull circle work, since there are 100 pure bred bulls in the county and 32 registered pure bred bulls doing bull circle work. These figures were given out by W. W. Evans, county agricultural agent. Evans estimates there are 7,500 head of dairy cattle in Dawson county.

The machinery installed in the milk factory was being tested last week under the direction of the new manager, Whittkamp, who was formerly manager of the Eau Claire Milk Products company plant in Eau Claire, Wisconsin, and he states that everything is in readiness for the first day of production Tuesday, and that all employees have been hired.

"We are going to pay forty cents a pound of butterfat for milk that is brought to our factory," Whittkamp said. This price is considerably higher than the present market for milk in Dawson county. Farmers may dispose of their whole milk at this price, he said.

Martin Old Timers Have Good Time as They Meet; Day Seems Like Revival of Old Times

By SCOTT ROBERTSON

On Monday evening, July 14, at seven o'clock, there gathered on the spacious lawn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Hamilton, in Stanton, Texas, a crowd of Martin county citizens—250 men, women and children, many of them being early pioneers of Stanton, the occasion being in honor of Judge Turner Vance, formerly of Stanton, but now residing in Refugio, Texas.

Mrs. Beulah Mae Hall presided over the book in which each guest registered. Each guest also put the date of his arrival in Martin county when he signed his name.

An old-fashioned basket picnic was spread and when we looked at the tables with all the good things to eat, it carried us back to our childhood days—with ice-cold watermelons, plenty of lemonade, fried chicken, pies, cakes, and in fact, everything anyone could desire, and with a bunch of "Old Timers" like these, what more could one wish?

A huge circle was formed which reached around almost the entire edge of the lawn. A good old hand-shake and "get-together" was begun and when this was finished, everyone present had shaken hands with each other and many friendships were renewed and unnumbered happy memories recalled.

After such a bountiful feast of good things to eat, such as is seldom seen in these days, the meeting was called to order by Judge Vance, who presided as master of ceremonies. The first speaker was little Jerry Hall, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Hall, and great grandson of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Houston, Sr., Martin county pioneers.

Joe Mundloch, now of St. Louis, the first baby born in Martin county in 1884, was then introduced. Mr. Mundloch responded with an interesting and snappy speech.

Adam Konz, the oldest settler of Martin county was then introduced. He came to Martin county in 1881, when there were only a section house and water tank here. Mr. Konz said the first name of the town was Greiton. It was soon changed to Marienfield and was known by that name until 1895, when it was changed to Stanton. Mr. Konz was the first postmaster. The early struggles and privations of the early pioneers were told, the first settlers, when antelope and buffalo roamed the (now) streets of Stanton and when it really used to rain in Martin county.

Plenty of good music was furnished by R. H. Kelly, and Bill Storey, old time fiddlers, with Miss Eleanor Cornell at the piano. Special numbers such as "Arkansas Traveler," and "Turkey in the Straw," were rendered. Mesdames Beulah Sale, Opal Jones, Misses Ida Belle Mashburn and Willie Epley, with Mrs. Claude Houston at the piano, sang "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," and "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," which was highly appreciated and enjoyed by all.

After several speeches by old-timers, Charles Ebersol told one of "one rain" we had in Stanton; Tink Houston and Turner Vance recalled old school days and the first Parent-Teacher association formed in Stanton, when their mothers were the "parent" and with their "teacher" they (Tink and Turner) were the "association" and charter members. Other old-time memories and stories were told by Clark Brothers, Ira Cochran, J. L. Hall and others. A Martin County Old-Timers club was organized with 165 members—those who have resided in Martin county for 20 years being eligible for membership. It was decided to meet once a year. The charter members are expected to reach more than 250.

The following officers were duly elected: S. C. Houston, president; Mrs. Beulah Mae Hall, secretary and treasurer, E. P. Woodard, W. T. Epley, and H. Hamilton vice presidents, and also to serve as a committee to assist in perfecting the organization.

This "get-together" meeting means much in the history of our fair little city and in the lives of our people. As every one present entered into the spirit of the occasion, every minute was thoroughly enjoyed and a nearer, dearer feeling for the old home town and dear old friends was rekindled and will be kept burning on down through the ages.

At a late hour the guests departed, each expressing their appreciation of the occasion and a sincere desire in their hearts to meet again next year. Many out of town guests were present.

EXPLORER "UNMADE"

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UP).—All archaeological aspirations have departed from Edgar B. Roberts, he confessed upon his return home here recently from an African expedition sent out by Beloit college. Roberts admitted the trip was valuable experience, but said three months in the Algerian desert took most of the romance out of exploring. "I'm fed up," he said, "on a country where water freezes at night and the sun scorches at noon."

GOWL QUALIFIED FOR OFFICE, HE STRESSES

Qualification is the basis for the asking of James V. Gowl for the office of county treasurer.

"In putting before you my candidacy for this office, I seek public office at your hands for the first time. I am making this race now because I believe I am qualified for the job and because I desire to serve you in that office."

"Twenty-one years in West Texas, the past seven of which have been spent in the capacity of bookkeeper for a leading transfer concern of the city of Midland, have given me the all-around business training and practical experience needed by your county treasurer."

"While it is my earnest desire to see each voter individually, please consider this as a personal appeal for your vote and support."

MOUNT PELE TO BE EQUIPPED WITH WARNING

PARIS, July 18. (UP)—The inhabitants of the island of Martinique need no longer live in constant fear of Mount Pele, whose eruption in 1902 virtually swept them all into the sea. The French Minister of Colonies has decided, upon the recommendation of a committee, to install a "volcanometre" in the crater itself, the thermostat attachment of which will warn of approaching danger months before the eruption actually occurs.

The committee of famous volcanologists which, despite the fact that Pele has not been a menace for years, began its studies two years ago, attacked the problem from a basis of the known facts concerning lava formations. It is known, for example, that during periods of inertia volcanic peaks accumulate lava from within and below the actual craters, and that as this accumulation grows the heat within sends the mass temperature up, forming gases which eventually explode and force the molten lava from the crater.

Thus it was thought by the committee that if this heat, as well as other developments, might be observed and checked continuously, the mountain itself would give sufficient warning to permit the inhabitants to remove themselves from the old lava paths and seek refuge.

Since the sum involved—2,500,000 francs—is small enough to be furnished from the Ministry of Interior budget it will not be necessary for the Chamber of Deputies to pass on the merits of the plan, and it is the intention of the Ministry to install the "volcanometre" immediately, together with one or two technical observers.

was another "Piers Plowman" that he was running on a strict honesty platform, that he believed he would make a good county judge.

Bill Arnett, candidate for county clerk, stated he knew the method of handling the county records and, "The Brevant, was running on a platform noted chiefly for the honesty its planks would support.

Lee Satterwhite, former speaker of the house of representatives, candidate for representative from this district and the state campaign manager for Clint Small, gubernatorial candidate, was killing two birds with one stone Thursday. He was espousing his own candidacy and, at the same time, that of Small. He formerly was representative of the Amarillo district for 10 years. He promised, if elected, to reimburse the farmers of the so-called pink boll worm infested area for costs paid out in sterilization and fumigation of their products. He said there are 20,000 more potential voters in Small's district than in any other district of the state and that these will be "solid" for Small. He said that West Texas will give the Wellington candidate a big vote, as well as East Texas.

Ansley Entertains

"Whispering Henry" Ansley, managing editor of the El Paso Herald, mounted the stump literally. Known as the "Will Rogers" of West Texas, he started talking in the accepted brogue of the cow hand. It was not long until he had the crowd roaring at his jokes and humorous allusions to other candidates that the one he represented, Clint Small. He struck particularly hard at Ross ("Standard Oil") Sterling, the "old he coon" of the gubernatorial race. His indictment of the reported 22 bathtubs and nine pianos in the home of Sterling was received with much applause, after the candidate humorously wanted to know what puncher would vote for a man that addicted to bath-taking. He hit at the big interests of Sterling's association.

Paul Rountree, candidate for county and district clerk thanked the people for their support and pledged an honest administration of his duties in case of election.

W. T. Blakeway stated his belief in good, clean government, and in administration of an "impartial justice."

Blakeway, who has been a peace officer here for a year and a half, is running for sheriff.

W. H. Pelfrey, candidate for reelection to the court of civil appeals, thanked the public for giving him the election without having an opponent out against him. He was elected over Judge Gibbs of San Angelo six years ago. He asked that his record be watched, as well as that of all other officials, saying that "the price of political freedom is eternal vigilance."

Mrs. Susie Graves Noble stated that efficiency is her offer to the public in requesting the office of county and district court, that she has worked with records and knows how to handle them. She mentioned that monetary consideration was connected with her desire to serve the public only as a contrasted incident.

Sam K. Wasaff, candidate for district attorney, cited his age and years of practice in the law particularly equips him for the office. He said that both prosecution and defense argument has given him the fine shade of sympathy that would allow him to argue cases right. He promises a vigorous execution of duties bound up in the office.

E. E. (Pat) Murphy, for congress from the sixteenth district of Texas, showed the great size of this district and its commensurate wealth and need for good representation. He said he had been in Washington long enough to know how to obtain the relief "this section needs." He said he would fight monopolistic tendencies of the government, sectionalism and other tendencies that atrophy business conditions. He hit the tariff problem and directed a shaft at the El Paso Post, newspaper that he says is fighting his candidacy, for its editorials on free trade. He spoke of the need for tariff equalization, better labor conditions through restricted immigration and the giving of periodic, true reports by the farm board, or remuneration to the farmer for costs incurred through the plink bollworm campaign through the government matching the state dollar for dollar, abolishment of cattle and wool exchanges "where brokers take the money the producer should receive," of support of the prohibition laws, legislative aid for the Red Bluff dam project, the need for a strong navy and air force so that national defense would be adequate and wars thus averted, of legislation aimed at relief of conditions existing among ex-service men.

This speech ended the afternoon's program, but the evening crowds gathered early and District Judge Charles L. Klapproth, candidate for reelection without opposition, opened the speaking in front of the jail on Lorraine street at 8 o'clock.

Judge Klapproth spoke of the value of intelligent casting of votes and of the necessity for citizens realizing their duty towards going to the polls. He was warmly applauded when he left the platform.

Neal Stator, for the office of tax assessor, stated his thanks at the support of the public and promised, if elected, to continue honest execution of the duties imposed upon him by his office.

T. D. Kimbrough, one of the few candidates unopposed, spoke on the value of his office. He pointed out the fact that his office is at the disposal of the district attorney, who may ask him to assist that office at any time. His duty in ad-ended his address by stating his qualification for the office, having been an attorney before taking up editorial work. He explained he was county attorney in Midland and attached counties in 1902-03. He promised to keep the "scale of equity" well balanced.

W. Edward Lee, candidate for county judge and, as he expressed it called the "kid in the race," stated that, of necessity, a county judge should be an attorney and attempted to prove that such a county judge is more qualified for serving the public than one who had not had legal training to the extent of passing the bar association.

Lee showed the calls that would be made on a county judge and stated that the office is a valuable one. He stated his desire to maintain the excellent school system of the county, mentioning that his degree from a teachers college made him understand the problems of a school man. His labor stand was similar to that advanced as an idea by Watson. He said he would vigorously uphold the law and that he felt his age was no bar towards gaining the position of trust sought.

Former County Judge J. C. Hunter of Van Horn, now of Abilene, spoke strongly in support of Ross Sterling for governor, citing the fact that the man grew from humble birth to the place of vantage he now holds as a multi-millionaire and head of the Humble company that he organized. He said Sterling is a man who has combated the same problems that West Texans face daily, that he is an oil man, a cattleman, producer in other respects, and, in general, a "West Texas candidate because he feels like a West Texan." He defined the Sterling road plan, saying as a conclusion that more money is not necessary, but more economic spending.

Pat Murphy returned to the platform for a brief statement of the planks in his platform, reiterating some of the points he made during the day.

He asked Midland to aid San Angelo in electing a representative from this end of the district, saying El Paso had elected representatives enough in the past. He took issue with Mayor Thomason, his opponent, on several issues.

Mayor Leon Goodman of Midland took the stump in the interest of the candidacy of Mayor Thomason immediately afterward. Branding reports about Thomason's alleged unfavorable stand on the tariff, labor, prohibition and other factors that make the issue in the race, Goodman answered each in brief, forceful language. He cited opponents to the Midland speech of the El Paso mayor, when Thomason stated his belief in restricted immigration—"Mexicans as well as others." As to the tariff matter, "every democrat feels the same as Murphy, Thomason included," the mayor said. "There is no issue involved in that matter." Answering Murphy's contention that Thomason had compromised his reputation for honest statesmanship through voting against prohibition while in his first years in the legislature and then turning about and voting for it when it became popular, Goodman pointed out that honesty required that he vote as he did since a referendum vote of his district informed him that such a procedure was what it wanted. When the district changed, so did Thomason, Goodman said. As to Thomason trying to build up a political machine, Goodman was sarcastic, mentioning that he himself, if part of the machine, had never received any "grease."

Mayor Goodman said that Thomason's opponent is not qualified for congress because of his war record, that what is needed in congress is a congressman. He qualified the statement by saying that now is the time when representation is needed more than ever before. He referred briefly to the need for the government appropriation being expended for buying the over supply of beef, just as it is cotton, grain, tobacco and other products.

differentials which hit at West Texas shipping.

As an evidence of good faith in his promise that he will not be a sectional representative, Mayor Thomason reminded his hearers that, although they were not in his legislative district, while a member of the state legislature he actively helped to push through state appropriations establishing Sul Ross normal college at Alpine and to push through the first big appropriation for Carlsbad sanatorium. He also cited a long list of legislation benefiting West Texas ranchmen which he supported as a member of the state legislature.
