CONTRACTOR OF DALLAS IS LOW BIDDER

CONTRACTOR OF DALLAS IS LOW BIDDER

Expect Construction To Be Started Next Week

General contract for construction of the new post office building has been let to the A. J. Rife Construction company of Dallas, it was announced this morning by Dr. John B. Thomas who was awarded a lease contract last week by the post office department.

Construction will be started early next week, according to plans of the contractors, if materials arrive on schedule time. It is planned to have the building completed and ready for occupancy by December 1.

Post office fixtures of the newest and most modern type will be installed, assuring ample facilities for mail service here. The building will be 30 by 130 feet in size.

The new structure will be of steel skeleton material, with brick and granite to harmonize with the adjoining six story John B. Thomas building. It will be entirely fire proof. Location of the new post office is to be on south Lorain street, adjoining the Thomas building on the south.

The A. J. Rife Construction company made a very satisfactory contract, Dr. Thomas said. They come to Midland well recommended and have recently built post office buildings in other Texas cities.

Fuhrman Deepens Without Change, Standing in Oil; Additional Cowden Storage

Deepened to 4,340 feet on last report today, the Fuhrman Petroleum Corporation No. 1 W. T. Ford well in southern Andrews county, which encountered pay early Sunday, was drilling in a hard lime formation without discovery of the expected second oil strata.

The well was shut down for a short time late Monday at 4,330, the depth at which it had been predicted a second pay would be picked up, while the formation was being studied. Drilling was resumed, making the additional ten feet before this morning.

The first pay was struck at from 4,287-95, after the 26,000,000 cubic feet of gas had been cased off a few days before. Oil rose to 3,500 feet in the hole where it was still standing on last report.

Bottom for a new 55,000-barrel storage tank had been completed at the Southern Crude Oil Purchasing company No. A-1 Cowden, in northern Ector county, it was reported today. About six and a half of the eight 500-barrel tanks had been filled, with approximately 600 barrels of open storage.

Tubing had been run and the well was flowing from 50 to 100 barrels daily on choke.

BRECKENRIDGE, Tex., Sept. 30. MEXICO CITY, Sept. 30. (P).—President Ortiz Rubio today abandoned his scheduled visit to northern Mexico, delegating General Calles to represent him at several ceremonies. Shooting Case Evidence Due To End Today

HOUSTON, Sept. 30. (UP).—Evidence in the case of John W. Blevins, 52 year old stove salesman on trial for murder in the slaying of Frank Knight, oil field worker, is due to end today.

Knight was killed following an argument between Crosby and Dayton on April 30. Blevins told officers he fired in self defense. Jack Hines of Dayton, an eyewitness, told the court that Knight was standing 12 to 15 feet from where Blevins sat in an automobile when the latter fired.

LAMESA, Sept. 30.—L. J. Hancock recently moved to Dawson county with sixty-five dairy cows. He claims he came here to patronize the powdered milk plant, and since he finds it profitable to do so, he is here to stay.

Since coming here he has been able to earn a net profit for his dairy herd, and has been able to place his entire herd among patrons of the plant. According to Hancock there is a large demand here for good milk cows.

DEFENDS 2 NOTORIOUS GANGSTERS

Says No Such Crime As Public Enemy; Flays City

CHICAGO, Sept. 30. (UP).—Clarence Darrow, attorney who defended Loeb and Leopold in a thrilling murder case and engaged in a verbal tilt over evolution with William Jennings Bryan in Scope's case at Dayton, Tenn., emerged from retirement today and entered a bitter fight being waged between Chicago and the underworld. He said the drive against the city's 26 enemies was an outrage.

Darrow returned to the bar to defend two notorious gangsters charged as vagrants under an old law. "If authorities wish to harass lawlessness it should indict, and try on charges of which they are guilty. There is no such crime as being a public enemy," Darrow said.

Market Report

Steadiness prevailed on cotton exchange throughout morning dealings today and prices moved within narrow range of previous closing levels in active trading noon list 7 points higher to 7 points lower with maximum gains distant positions. Good trade demand developed for staples and offset rather heavy hedge selling. Some covering from Wall Street. Sympathetic selling easily absorbed. While steadiness in stocks brought in some buying, advance on improved technical position. An exchange house with Wall Street connection bought between 10,000 and 15,000 bales. Liverpool eased after early firmness and closed unchanged to 2 points lower.

AUSTIN, Sept. 30. (P).—Governor Moody today was undecided about calling a special session of legislation to consider farm relief including cotton acreage reduction law in interest of curtailed production. The governor intimated yesterday that he might convene a special session, believing that the proposed legislation could be finished in a day or two.

The attorney general's office was drafting the cotton acreage reduction bill.

The governor announced in a telegram from the federal growth committee saying that no additional counties would be certified for reduced railroad fares on livestock and feed and that any counties now certified would be withdrawn before October 31.

Nail Machine at Work Near Fasken

Operation of a nail and spike gatherer over the Fasken to Seminole road, a segment in the route to Hobbs, N. M., was started this morning, with the Midland chamber of commerce paying the expense of the big machine.

Special magnets draw tons of iron and scrap metal from roads traveled over by this machine. The cost is nominal as compared with benefits derived from the work, it was said at the chamber office.

It will cost from $50 to $75 to get the road cleaned of nails, tacks and other tire-damagers, whereas hundreds of dollars are lost annually to operators of motor vehicles from tire trouble resulting from the sharp metal imbedded in the road.

The idea of clearing the road was advanced by several oil men and by Jack Hazeltine, chamber of commerce.

Their eyes, sealed when taken from the earth stayed open unblinkingly. One's mouth was slightly open, the others still sealed. Their heads were becoming more round and their skin roughening.

SPEED TYPIST IS BACK FROM MEET IN RICHMOND, VA.

Miss Evelyn Garlington returned this morning from Richmond, Va., where she made an excellent showing in the international typewriting speed tests.

Although she made only 63 words a minute, as compared with 67 1-2 at the state interscholastic meeting at Austin recently, she and the other typists in the interscholastic novice class had to work under decided handicap from the start of the matches to the end.

To begin with, all classes, which ranged from professional championships on down to the novice class, were seated in the same auditorium, with an audience of 6,000 present. The audience cheered World's Champion Hossfield every time he turned a page off his machine and the noise was deafening. This noise caused interscholastic typists to make fewer words than they did in interscholastic meets.

For instance, the champion of Arizona made from 90 to 100 words in a test made abroad train shortly after Miss Garlington boarded it here. In the Richmond meet he made only 48. That Miss Garlington was able to do as well as she did under the handicap was astonishing to Mrs. Clint Myrick, Miss Garlington's instructor here. Even the world's champion made fewer words than his record of last year.

"I am proud of her as I could be if she had won the meet," Mrs. Myrick said. "The nervous strain under the conditions at Richmond would discourage a veteran typist, and would certainly slow up those in the novice class."

Miss Garlington finished about midway in the list of the 35 who entered. She went to Lubbock today to enter the West Texas Technological college.

The attorney general, who has been asked to aid the comptroller in collection of the back tax, holds, on the other hand, the gas is an oil within the construction of the statute, and does not presume to say what was the legislature intent, nor why the tax has not been collected during the twenty odd years the state has collected the gross production tax.

NO "COMIC OPERA" REVOLTS

It had been a good many years since South America had been troubled with revolutionary disturbances. Now, within a few weeks, revolt seems to have broken out on all sides. Supposedly stable governments are overturning almost overnight. Rebellion seems to be the order of the day.

Obviously, something out of the ordinary is resting on the Latin-American mind; but it would be a grave mistake to set the trouble down as nothing more than the traditional Latin-American upheaval. The grasping politician of the old-style revolutions seems to be absent.

Indeed, that is what makes the whole thing so interesting. These revolts, almost without exception, seem to mirror some fundamental popular unrest and dissatisfaction. At this distance it has been hard to say just what the trouble may be; but it is clear that the great masses of the populace feel that they have some profound grievance.

BRIEF YEARS—BUT FULL ONES

Ruth Alexander, the famous young aviatrix who was killed in a crash the other day, was ill with tuberculosis a few years ago. Doctors told her she had perhaps 12 months more to live; but she laughed at them, went west, regained her health and became a successful and famous flyer.

Now, however, she is gone; and there seems an ironic twist in the fact that the sport which helped her to shake off disease should finally have killed her. Yet it may be that the irony is not quite as sharp as it seems.

After all, if she only gained a few years of life, they were full, active and enjoyable years. If to live intensely is the secret of happiness, Miss Alexander got more from her brief life than some of us who will outlive her by two or three decades.

THE NATION'S BEST WISHES

It goes without saying that the whole country joins with President and Mrs. Hoover in wishing a speedy return to robust health for their son, Herbert Hoover, Jr.

Being the son of the president of the United States is something of a handicap for any young man. Like the popular John Coolidge, young Hoover seems to have met the test with more than the ordinary amount of level-headedness. He has shown himself to be both a capable and a likeable chap, and a quick victory over the ill health that has besieged him is the wish of his fellow citizens.

THOSE RUBBER CHECKS

All of this stuff about lovely Clara Bow and the rubber checks she issued to the Nevada gamblers who took her for $13,900 is beginning to go just a little bit stale.

It is very interesting, of course, to learn that Clara went to a gambling house escorted by Will Rogers, that she plunged heavily with the luck against her, and that she stopped payment on the checks she presented. But, after all, the fate of the nation hardly hangs on our proper understanding of the matter. It is hardly worth mulling over any longer.

So we can only hope that the whole business will speedily be forgotten. We have heard just about enough of it. It really isn't very funny any longer.

A Modern Alexander Looking for New Worlds to Conquer!

Big Gambling Syndicates Strike as France 'Raises' Them; Take-off Is Doubled

Many of the big players who try to beat the bank at France's famous resorts are Americans—the more prominent they are, the more advertising they bring to the casino.

The government's tax on baccarat profits, now practically doubled, amounts to 25 per cent of the winnings—and the big gambling syndicates say this is too much.

By MINOTT SAUNDERS NEA Service Writer

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The business of legalized gambling in France has become such a gamble, owing to heavy taxation, that is no longer good business.

As a result, all of the popular resort cities are threatened with a crisis. They don't see how they can make things pay if gambling doesn't pay.

The big gambling syndicates, which in the past were always ready to "back" the bank, are on strike and refuse to play ball or baccarat, until the government reduces its tax levies. The strike has continued for several weeks and seriously hurt prosperity in such places as Deauville, Le Touquet, Juan-les-Pins, and Biarritz.

Unless Parliament acts quickly when it opens in November, with compromising legislation for all concerned—except the sucker, of course—the winter resorts such as Nice and Cannes will be hard hit. Monte Carlo, although not French, has an operating arrangement with France which places it in about the same position.

Tax Is Doubled The strike of the syndicate is aimed to force the government's hand. The tax on baccarat profits was increased last May by approximately 100 per cent, and now amounts to 25 per cent of all winnings. The big gamblers, who have been willing to hold the bank against all comers in fashionable casinos, with no limit on bets, found that this cut down the margin of returns to such an extent that a bad run of luck was not counter-balanced.

In other words, the percentage in favor of the bank was reduced to about 3 per cent, which was not enough. In the long run, the bank is bound to win, but the new taxation so neutralizes profits that the game is no longer a good commercial proposition.

Without the syndicates, open bank baccarat is impossible, because no private person has sufficient capital to hold the bank against all comers with the necessary continuity. And without the open bank game, really high play is impossible, because in chemin-de-fer the stakes are limited and conditioned by the sum which the banker chooses to put in the bank. In chemin-de-fer the tax levied is 5 per cent on the stakes every time the banker wins, and this game doesn't interest the big syndicates.

Many Americans Play The problem has many ramifications. If the big gamblers, the best known of which is the so-called Greek syndicate, headed by M. Zographos, do not hold the baccarat banks, the wealthy plungers cannot play. Many of the familiar figures at baccarat tables in popular casinos have been Americans. Without such a game running the casino, and even the resort itself, does not interest the heavy private players. The resort cities therefore suffer from the other business that these rich visitors bring to hotels, restaurants and other interests. In this business chiefly are the resorts interested, for the smaller tables do not do so well if the "swells" are not bringing publicity to the place.

The syndicates have threatened to operate elsewhere, outside of France, thereby attracting the wealthy players to the injury of French resorts. France is proud of its resorts, with their finely-appointed casinos as attractions. The government position is explained by M. Baque, chief of cabinet of the Ministry of Tourism, as follows:

"This tax on gambling profits does not go into the pockets of the state. The state takes the tax with one hand and forthwith spends it with the other, on the improvements of fine resorts from which it comes. This tax is used as a general fund to make resorts more attractive and up-to-date, to furnish credit to hotel keepers and promoters. By lowering the tax, the state either would have to contribute bate to this fund or curtail improvements." This makes the position of the government very delicate, and a heated parliamentary controversy is anticipated.

All of the summer resorts have done very poorly this year. True, the weather has been bad, but opinion is divided on whether the weather or the strike of the big gambling syndicates has been more to blame. The small volume of business at the tables, however, would indicate that the gambling syndicates hold, with their strike, a high trump card—perhaps the ace.

FRENCH DEFENSE DISRUPTS NATION OF EXCITABLES

PARIS, Sept. 30. (UP).—Hardly had the Tardieu government pushed over its relentless program of national defense when Frenchmen began to fall out over various forms of protection for which the money might best be spent.

Originally intended for frontier fortifications from Basle to the English Channel on the one hand, and a bolstering of the navy from Villefrance to Dunkerque on the other, the program never was intended for specific protection of the capital for example, and it is precisely here that the alarmists find a weakness in the Tardieu program.

Pointing out that the next war will be fought with airplanes capable of destroying, burning, poisoning, gassing, infecting whole cities in a single raid, "Paris-Soir" calls for a considerable diversion of funds to meet this peril, or at least anticipate it intelligently.

The chief and foremost need, that paper insists, "is for a system of underground refuges in Paris, Lille, Lyons, Bordeaux and other congested centers of population. Nor will it suffice to build such a system of subterranean abris, for they must be piped for fresh water, arranged to permit sleeping and carrying on of the normal business against natural moisture on the one hand and poison gases and infectious germ agencies on the other. They must, in short, be cities within cities."

The writer does not go into details of figures, though he does admit that the cost would be staggering. Nor does he see the rather obvious lesson in his own arguments for modern as against ancient (considering the late war already as another history) warfare, which is that every nation is confronted with this question: Will the next war be fought in the air? For if it will, nearly all of the money that is being spent on infantry, artillery, tanks, frontier forts and navies is being thrown away. It is now rather generally recognized that a war might be won or lost without the two armies in the field having fired a shot, for certainly if news came to the trenches that every last man's wife, mother, sweetheart or child had been brutally murdered in an air raid they would throw down their rifles and start a revolution.

Daily Washington Letter By Rodney Dutcher

They Were Only a Couple of "Triangle Shootings," but They Stole the News Spotlight From the Primary Investigation and the Prohibition Fight So Far as Washington Was Concerned

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Perhaps this story is as interesting as the general run of governmental, legislative and political news out of Washington. Perhaps not.

Offhand, it seems at least as interesting as the daily doses of what the Republican press bureau is saying about the Democrats and what the Democratic press bureau is saying about the Republicans.

But any criticism of a possible error in news judgment will be cheerfully accepted.

Mr. Joe Gamble and Mrs. Lula Mae Gamble, his wife, and Mrs. Elsie Davis all lived down in La Plata Md., which is almost a suburb of the capital. They were plain, homely people. Lula Mae Gamble was 45 years old, Joe Gamble was 38 and Mrs. Davis was somewhat younger than Joe Gamble.

Mrs. Gamble has given birth to 10 children.

The other night Mrs. Gamble stepped up to Joe Gamble's automobile and shot Mrs. Davis, who happened to be inside. Mrs. Davis has just died. Mrs. Gamble says she had repeatedly begged Joe Gamble to keep away from Mrs. Davis.

"Judge, he was over at her place before breakfast in the morning—the children knew and they'll tell you how I had to call him," she said. "He would be there half a day at a time. He took her places in his car. Last night I knew he was going out with her. I drove up to her front yard and said, 'Elsie, don't go out with Joe.'"

He Didn't Come Back "She said she'd go if she wanted to. I saw him drive up there in his car. Then they went off together. I waited and waited and waited. He didn't come back. I loaded the gun. The two little boys stayed up with me.

"I don't know what time it was, but it must have been nearly two o'clock when I heard his car coming down the road. I knew it was his car. It was just mooching along—you could hardly see it move. I went across the road and waited where I knew they'd stop. Billy (12 years old) was with me. He can tell you about it.

"I went up to the car and I said: 'Now I've caught you at last. Right's right and wrong's wrong,' and I shot. I didn't shoot at anybody. I didn't want to kill anybody. I just wanted to scare her."

On the day Senator Nye moved his primary investigation to Nebraska, Senator Brookhart was predicting gains for the progressives. General Pershing was addressing the Fidac convention, the Democrats of Maryland were nominating Governor Ritchie and the dregs were razzing wet claims of a gain of 37 congressmen. But none of these things could detract the attention of the people of Washington from the case of Lula Mae Gamble, Joe Gamble and Elsie Davis.

Another Shooting Just a couple of days later we Washingtonians had our own little shooting triangle, indicating that such things happen in the city as well as in the country.

Several hundred persons were sitting in the Earle Theater, a block from the Prohibition Bureau, when a few shots flashed and banged in the audience.

It turned out that Mr. Parker Bowie, 47 years old, had plugged Mr. Sylvester L. Fornwald, 40, who was watching a movie called "May-be It's Love" with none other than Mrs. Bowie, the mother of Mr. Bowie's six children. As in the affair at La Plata, the principals were all of middle age.

Mr. Bowie, too, it appeared, had repeatedly asked his wife to stop going around with Mr. Fornwald.

"Mamma," said Mr. Bowie to Mrs. Bowie immediately after he had stopped shooting Mr. Fornwald, "I didn't intend to shoot him."

INTEREST-ING

SALEM, Mass.—Ninety-one years ago the Salem Banking company issued a note in which it promised to pay to T. Brown or bearer $5 on demand. The note was just recently paid off by Calvin Belden's granddaughters. Lucky for Belden, who was then president of the bank, and his granddaughters, no mention of interest was made in the note.

AFTER MOVIES' MONEY

LONDON.—Royalty is sending a steady stream of its people to the movies to get some of Hollywood's money. The latest is Lady Maureen Stanley, wife of Lord Derby's youngest son, the Hon. Oliver Stanley. She candidly admits that she is going to Hollywood to "make some money," and intends to do so by designing settings for talking pictures.

SAVED LIFE-SAVER

DEAUVILLE.—A professional life-saver on the beach near here owes his life to an amateur life-saver, Capt. the Hon. Jack Stern. A swimmer, buffeted by waves, clutched the side of the life-saver's boat, upsetting it. In the turn-over, the life-saver was thrown into the sea and his head hit the gunwale of the boat, knocking him unconscious. Stern swam to his rescue.

Ingagi?

"I got in the last word that time," a Midland married man said after completing a cross word puzzle.

Doctors used to say that eating late suppers caused us to stay awake. Later the radio got the blame, and now it's night football. You'd be surprised at how many of the local folks who went to El Paso came back in favor of having night games here. I just can't imagine making a practice of starting a game after bedtime, but that's what happened at El Paso when they started at 8 o'clock Mountain time.

I wonder if England gives up? Our polo team won the international contest, the Enterprise won the schooner race and now I hear that an American bridge team defeated the British team in London by nearly 5,000 points. One wise-cracker says that the Americans must have held some swell "hands across the sea."

Midland had a half dozen baseball fans during the summer. We have golf teams, polo teams, football teams, tennis teams, terrapin racing teams and other athletic representatives. I would like to see an old fashioned horse shoe pitching team. You never know who is going to win a horse shoe pitching game. It's just a toss up any time. And you never can gripe at a player for throwing the game.

You know what I said yesterday about Jim Harrison coming back from El Paso talking about how Bob Martin ate such huge amounts? Well, later in the day I heard that Bob had telephoned the boss here to check up on Jim's expense account, that every time Bob saw him on the trip Jim was eating great gobs of grub. After thinking over the situation, I do believe Jim looks all filled up.

A hatless college boy has one advantage. When he comes across the international bridge they can't catch him smuggling anything in his hat.

Here I Am! Ask Me

The Reporter-Telegram has arranged to present a series of weekly articles beginning today giving information concerning the boy scouts of America and of the Buffalo Trail council. Look for these articles if you want to know the facts.

Are you a boy?—were you a boy?—have you a boy? In any of these cases you will find great interest in the boy scout movement in America. The facts will be presented in these articles from week to week.

Boys will be boys, but they don't need to be juvenile delinquents. Boys are not naturally inclined to be bad. But they are naturally inclined to be busy. That being busy may take the course of violating the traditions and conventions of their elders unless their elders see to it that the training is in the direction of right, true, manly ideals. Most juvenile delinquency finds its root in adult thoughtlessness. The boys want to be busy but the older people are too busy to help him.

The tension of the boys and the inattention of the man lead to mistakes on the part of both. The public also suffers. The boy scout movement is the ounce of prevention that is worth the pound of cure.

The boy scout movement is just "boy all over." It takes that original instinct of the boy to be busy and supplies the things to keep him busy. It gives the boy all the liberty compatible with the development of true manhood.

It utilizes the things the boy wants to do. It is built from the ground up on the construction basis. Negatives are turned into positives. The boy is shown the "why" of the things he does. Body, mind and soul are exercised in clean, straight living. The boy wants it. There are practically no deserters among boys who join, if proper leadership is provided to keep them in the movement.

Scouting is based on the ideals of education, which is preeminently an American ideal. It is scientific education, for it begins with the things the boys know and goes from that to things they ought to know. It

IT COMES IN BUNCHES

COLUMBUS, Ohio.—When bad luck comes to Clement I. Amey, it comes in bunches. While repairing a telephone wire at his home, he touched a live wire. As he jumped, a rung of the ladder on which he was standing broke and he fell to the floor. In falling he swallowed a chew of tobacco. He suffered minor injuries in the fall.

HE SAW IT ALL

SYRACUSE, N. Y. (UP).—Getting into the path of a team of runaway horses while bicycling, falling beneath their feet and watching a wagon drawn by the horses passing over him, was the experience of Michael Bianchi, 12. The youth escaped with a few bruises.

mental in scouting, but the movement is absolutely without any sectarian bias. Wherever it is practical troops are organized in connection with churches of all denominations. If a scoutmaster is available in that church he is at once put in charge of the troop. No boy is trained away from the thought of his own religious environment. Scouting pays fair with the church.

Absolutely Non-Militaristic The constitution and by-laws of the boy scouts of America forbid involving the organization in any matter of a political nature. There is no effort or possibility of making any effort to train the boy away from his own political home environment.

The question is often asked as to whether the boy scout movement gives military training. The answer is a decided "no." But there are certain things as necessary to moral integrity as they are to military discipline which are taught. Scouts do not carry guns nor the they taught tactics distinctly military in character. But the scout movement emphasizes the individual responsibility of the boy to obligations which he has voluntarily assumed. He is taught that his oath involves obedience to discipline that he may gain efficiency. Above all the boys are trained to courage, loyalty, truth and manliness. These are things a man needs outside of military life as well as in it.

New Ranges Retain Heat

By WILLIAM H. BALDWIN
Author of "The Shopping Book"
Written for NEA Service

There are gas, kerosene and gasoline ranges. In any range, the things of most importance are its ability to retain heat and also its ability to control the heat in the oven.

Most old-fashioned ranges are lacking in these qualities. Here are the specifications of what might be called an ideal gas range, which should guide the shopper in making her purchase:

The metal frame should be of sufficient weight and thickness to make for a sturdy product. All the joints are rounded. All connections are concealed. There are no rough corners. The range is fitted with a heat control so that the temperature of the oven can be regulated depending upon the heat required in any operation. The oven is insulated so that heat doesn't escape into the kitchen, which would be a waste of heat and would make the kitchen uncomfortably hot.

METAL APARTMENT

CHICAGO—This city is to have the first all-metal apartment house in the United States. A silver-colored alloy of aluminum will cover the outside of the building, and the walls will only be three and one-half inches thick. The building will be 17 stories high. The walls, although extremely thin, are expected to retain heat better than brick walls.

FIND ANCIENT CITY

MEXICO CITY.—Archaeologists have unearthed near Toluca what is thought to be one of the oldest cities in America. It is a pre-Aztec city and is regarded as one of the richest finds in archaeological circles for years. The remains of the city include eleven temples, several pyramids and hundreds of objects of ancient Indian art.

TRAFFIC SAFETY

CINCINNATI.—This city has solved the problem of making automobile drivers go slow at dangerous intersections or railroad crossings. Huge thumb licks are placed in the road near quiet and dangerous zones, and the thoughtless motorists are bumped into keeping their cars at a slow speed until the zone is passed.

Fall and Winter TEMPERATURE CHANGES are DANGER SIGNALS! WHEN you leave food to the mercy of fluctuating winter temperatures—whether it be in the Fall or in the Winter—you are defying every law of refrigeration. Safe, healthful preservation of foods requires the same, even temperatures the whole year 'round. A well-insulated refrigerator with an ample supply of ICE is the best known insurance against food spoilage. Weather bureau statistics prove the fallacy of trusting to outside temperatures. Last winter the daily average temperatures in this territory ranged from 11 to 74 degrees. Those who "economized" on ice suffered food spoilages—in addition to gambling with the health of their families. Heed Nature's warning! Don't let one or two cool days fool you into believing that ice can be temporarily dispensed with. It can't! Always keep your ice compartment more than half full—in winter as well as in summer. Gabby Knows How to Pour Gas and Flame on Boys of the Cardinals

Editor's Note: Gabby Street was a soldier in France. Stories of his World War experiences and his leadership of the National League pennant winners are told in this second and concluding chapter of "The Life of Gabby Street." The Reporter-Telegram printed the first installment yesterday.

By WILLIAM BRUCHER, NEA Service Sports Editor

Two buck privates sat on a log in the Argonne forest Oct. 2, 1918, discussing the discrepancies of the United States Army.

Suddenly overhead there was the roar of an airplane motor. "Let's take a pot shot at that bird," said one of the bucks.

He had no sooner spoken than the rat-a-tat-tat of a machine gun broke through the drone of the engine. One of the bucks went down with a bullet in his leg.

"Guess he beat us to it," said the buck, ripping his mud-caked pants to give himself first aid.

And that was how Charles "Gabby" Street, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, got his wound stripe in the World War.

Yesterday it was told how Gabby Street, a black-eyed Alabama boy, came to the majors in 1908, caught the fireball of Walter Johnson for four years, and incidentally held a ball dropped from the top of the Washington monument.

The Senators traded "the old Sergeant," as he is familiarly called by his associates, to the Yankees in 1912. Gabby was with the Yankees but a short time when he was sent back to the minors, whence he had emerged in 1908.

"The Old Sarge" drifted from place to place in the Southern League. He was at Chattanooga and Nashville. Wherever he went he carried the reputation of being a smart baseball man, full of the tricks and cunning of the trade.

When the United States declared war in 1917, Street was just starting the baseball season. He was torn between two loves, his natural love for

CAPTAINS ARE SCARCE BUT BIG TEN FOOTBALL WILL NOT SUFFER THEREBY -- BURCKY

By CLAIRE BURCKY, NEA Service Sports Writer

ERRETT VAN NICE Chicago halfback

Home from the wars, Street, nearly 26 years old, went back to baseball in the minor leagues. He bobbed up as manager as Suffolk in 1920. He moved on to Joplin, Mo., in 1922, took a mediocre ball club, poured some of his personal "gas and flame" on the boys and won a pennant. Still the "big leagues" failed to give him a tumble.

In 1929 Gabby was signed up to coach the Cardinals. He won the respect and admiration of the players, who found it easy to hustle for him. He was a driver, inasmuch as he demanded a day's honest work out of every man, but he was fair.

In October last year he was notified that he was the choice for the manager's job in 1930.

Almost from the first, the Cardinals ran into hard luck. At one time they batted along without Bottomley, Frisch, Hafey and other stars incapacitated by injuries. But "the old Sarge" kept up the spirits of his crew.

Two months ago the Cardinals were not being spoken of as pennant contenders. Still Gabby kept fighting. There were signs of indifference playing. Gabby lectured the boys until his jaws ached. Some of the players gave evidence of paying no attention to his exhortations, whereupon Gabby began slapping $100 fines here and there. Flint Rhem was one who received the $100 plaster.

Gabby talked so much to his men it was said, that he fell ill of bronchitis July 31, but he came right back a few days later, urging the team on to greater efforts.

OLAF ROBINSON Illinois fullback

Then, with no warning, the big drive began. The Cardinals started rising like a fever in the jungle. They were 12 games behind the leaders when the last long offensive was launched. On August 29 they won a 20-inning game from the Cubs. After that they couldn't be beaten.

They rolled up the amazing total of 36 victories out of 45 starts, and gave the National League the most sensational stretch campaign ever seen.

"The old Sarge" was signed to a 1931 contract, setting a precedent for St. Louis managers, whose tenure of office has been brief.

The new contract doesn't say anything about "gas and flame," but Gabby always has a supply in stock—and he's the boy who knows how to pour it on 'em.

SHIP ELEVATOR

BERLIN.—Nearing completion at Neiderlinow is what is said to be the greatest ship elevator in the world. When finished it will hoist thousand-ton boats 118 feet in five minutes. This giant lift will replace a series of locks in the canal that links Berlin with the port of Stettin and the Baltic Sea. It formerly took ships two hours to make the 118-foot ascent in the series of canals.

A scarcity of captains chosen in the customary manner at the end of the regular season hardly will endanger the quality of football played this fall in the Big Ten. A hasty survey before the season actually begins indicates that the talent as a whole is even better than in past years.

It might seem strange, however, that only six schools in the loop have captains, and two of them weren't chosen until the whistle blew for practice a few weeks ago.

Following the custom of festive banquets terminating the 1929 season, Michigan selected Ducky Simm, a quarterback; Northwestern nominated husky Hank Bruder, a halfback; Chicago named Errett Van Nice, rangy halfback, and Wisconsin honored Milt Gantenbein, a stocky wingman. Recently Illinois selected Olaf Robinson, a fullback, and Win Brockmeyer, Minnesota's quarterback, was the choice of 16 Gopher veterans. A year ago there were eight Big Ten captains, compared with six this fall.

Hurriedly glancing over the Western Conference field, one picks Purdue, 1929 conference champions, and Northwestern as the hardest championship contenders. In another group—one that easily might unsettle the modest plans of Noble Kizer of Purdue or Dick Hanley of Northwestern—are Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin and—yes, of course, Illinois and that inventive Dutchman Bob Zupke.

Purdue lost heavily by graduation, not so much in numbers but in the quality of her players. White, Yulevich, Van Bibber, Steers, Buttner, Risk, Pope and a dozen others are left, however, and Coach Kizer, experienced as Jimmy Phelan's assistant for several years, should handle them wisely.

Hanley has every reason to be optimistic but experience has taught him that optimism doesn't pay, particularly in the Big Ten. Only three veterans of Northwestern's 1929 group are missing. Captain Bruder appears to be as capable as any halfback in the entire circuit.

Fritz Crisler and Tad Wieman, starting fresh at Minnesota, have plenty of letter men, including Captain Brockmeyer. In addition, there is the usual Minnesota coach's heritage of strong reserve and sophomore material.

Opening in her stride of the late 1929 season, Michigan easily might sweep all before her. Coach Kipke has big linemen and fleet backs, headed by tricky little Simrall, the quarterback.

And Thistlethwaite—ol' Gloomy Glenn—may have his Badgers up there at the end of the campaign. Gloomy Glenn has been without a winner since 1926, the year before he left Northwestern. He has a peculiar habit of popping up with a champion every three or four years.

Illinois may do wonders—or accomplish nothing. Zupke admits that only two Illinois squads in his 17 years of tutoring have looked worse than the present one. At the same time, he voiced a preference for working with youngsters, and practically his entire group is untried sophomore material. Robinson, Yanuskus and Hills are his veterans.

Old Amos Alonzo Stagg also has an admission. He declares he has seen better prospects—and much poorer ones, too. He says he'll get along somehow—he's been getting along now for 38 years at the Midway.

Indiana, Ohio State and Iowa are the remaining members of the Big Ten—and that's just about the extent of it. Indiana lost most of her line from last year, Ohio State lost her best backs and some of her star linemen and retains little more than Wesley Fesler, the crack wingman, who may be a fullback this fall. Iowa plays only one game—with Purdue Oct. 18—so her strength or weakness means but little to the remainder of the conference teams.

Over a period of many years there has been a headline reading "Stagg Fears Purdue." I might ask, who doesn't?

With these two rules as bases, they contended that oil, in its common and usual sense, means "crude oil" and that to otherwise hold would be to place the state at an advantage and tax casinghead by implication. Casinghead gas is gas in natural state produced at the mouth of oil wells through a casing head. As early as 1900 gasoline was extracted from casinghead gas, and the industry now amounts to millions of dollars yearly.

Whether the federal government has the right in its enforcement of the national prohibition law to confiscate farm lands on which stills are found is a question that will be up for settlement in the United States district court here next month. The case consists of a libel action started by United States Attorney Walter M. Provine against two farmers in different Illinois counties. The action was launched following seizure of alleged stills on the 230 acre farm of Elmer Flaherty in Bureau county, and the 530 acre farm of Joseph Englehaupt in Putnam county. Tehants of Flaherty and Englehaupt were arrested and charged with conspiracy to violate the prohibition law and then the government invoked an ancient internal revenue law, enacted before prohibition was even seriously thought of, to libel the two farms on the ground that the owners rented no land to bootleggers, knowing the latter intended to manufacture illicit liquor. In addition to possibility of losing their land the two farmers also face possible criminal charges of violating the misprison act which provides for punishment of persons who knowingly permit law violations. Output of one of the seized stills was said to be so great that its constant stream had to be poured into a storage vat, just as is done in bonded distilleries. Provine said the alleged bootleggers, five of whom were arrested, had $75,000 invested in the plants.

VIOLINIST TELLS OF VISIT WITH QUEEN MARIE

CHICAGO, Sept. 30. (UP).—The things Queen Marie of Rumania remembers best about America are its vastness, its railway stations built like temples, the lavish and apparently extravagant system of lighting of the streets of the great cities and the remarkable speed with which Americans pull down buildings and erect gigantic new ones in their places. Milan Lusk, Chicago concert violinist, recently returned from an European tour, tells of an evening in Castle Pellsor at Sinal where he entertained the royal family of Rumania last summer.

MORROW'S RETURN STRANGELY LIKE THAT FROM ELBA

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30. (UP).—The "back from Mexico" move of Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, is getting profound attention from politicians and diplomats here and eventually may have a significance comparable to the famous "Back from Elba" trip of Napoleon or the "Home from Africa" campaign of Roosevelt. Absence abroad, in Ambassador Morrow's case, seems to have made his personality tremendously alluring to the American public and every practical politician is bound to wonder to what extent this interest will be reflected in votes. His fortunes also are a favorite topic of conversation wherever diplomats gather.

Confiscation of Still Land to Be Tested Soon PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 27 (UP).—Whether the federal government has the right in its enforcement of the national prohibition law to confiscate farm lands on which stills are found is a question that will be up for settlement in the United States district court here next month.

Special--at Baker's 5c to $1.00 Store a 35 piece Dinner Set for $3.95.

Then, it is thought, Morrow with his international banking experience and his moderate-tariff views, (already incorporated in senate committee hearings and the Congressional Record), will be a logical personality to undertake leadership of the Republican party.

PAINS IN BACK, PALE AND WEAK Georgia Lady Says That After She Took Cardui Her Health Got Better.

Waycross, Ga.—"About two and a half years ago, I found myself very much in need of a tonic," says Mrs. J. H. Miller, of 1036 Albany Avenue, this city. "I was pale and weak. At times, I suffered a great deal from pains in my head and back. I couldn't do any sweeping, and other housework was very hard on me, feeling as I did. My mother advised me to try Cardui. After my second bottle, I felt better, as I seemed to have more strength, but I was not satisfied to quit taking it. I wanted to get strong. I kept on taking Cardui until I had taken six bottles. I did not have the pains in my back and head after this. So now, I can certainly recommend Cardui, for my health has been good since taking it."
