Theatre Robbery Here Fails; Notorious Suspect Is Held

MIDLAND BOY KILLED AS FRIENDS' PLANE CRASHES IN TREE

PILOT IS EVIDENTLY CONFUSED

Two Others Die; No Funeral Plans Announced

TYLER, Jan. 5. (AP).—Funeral arrangements were completed today for the three Dallas men who were killed yesterday when their airplane struck a tree in a fog near Overton.

The body of Pilot H. Addison Noever, 26, was sent to Kansas City where his mother lives. Horace Clark, 40, will be buried in Dover, Delaware. Thomas Holcombe, 21, will be buried in Midland.

Tom Holcombe, 21, son of Mrs. J. S. Holcombe of Midland, was killed with two of his friends when a plane in which they were returning from Shreveport to Dallas banked into a pine near Overton when trying to find a landing place in the mist and fog.

Addison Noever, pilot of the plane, and Horace Clark, Dallas business man, were the others who died their lives.

The pilot had taken Clark to Shreveport to make an address before a luncheon club and the former Midland boy was invited to go along as a week-end guest. The plane, which had been taken from its hangar without permission, according to report of its owner, a Dallas automobile concern official, must have taken the wrong route out of Longview or had gone by way of the Henderson oil field. The mist and fog possibly contributed to the pilot losing his bearings.

T. C. Bradberry of Overton and several negroes saw the plane circling low over a pine forest. Just as it seemed the pilot was about to bring up the nose of the craft, as though he had found the landing terrain ill adapted to a landing, the nose of the ship struck the top of a tall pine with a noise that could be heard for more than a mile, and the torn fabric and splintered wood hurtled to the ground, the engine of the plane piercing the earth to a depth of several feet.

Mrs. Holcombe had not learned the particulars of the death of her son early this morning, having received only a sketchy telegram Sunday from Dallas, saying young Holcombe had been killed in a plane crash.

The mother lives at the home of Jim Waddell, a son Carroll, 12, and a daughter, Betty Dale, 7, live with her here. There are three other children: W. E. Holcombe of Dallas, Miss Louise Holcombe of Dallas, and Miss Annie Holcombe of Tulsa. W. C. Holcombe of Midland is an uncle. Mrs. E. W. Cowden of Midland an aunt and Mrs. B. A. Wall and Jim Waddell of Midland cousins.

Young Holcombe lived in Midland when a child, moving with his parents to Plainview and Dallas about 10 years ago. The family at the time of departure lived north of town. He never married.

The body will arrive in Midland tonight or in the morning, relatives said. Funeral arrangements were pending arrival of relatives.

Business Men and Newspaper Thanked

In the regular monthly business session of the pastors' association held this morning in the Presbyterian church a motion was passed thanking The Reporter-Telegram for the splendid church display in yesterday's paper. The pastors agreed that advertising pays, for more people were present in the services yesterday than would have come otherwise under prevailing weather conditions.

A motion was also passed thanking the business houses in Midland that made this church page possible.

$1800 IN SAFE; IT IS LEFT

Authorities Coming To Identify Man Taken Here

Knob-knockers were foiled in an attempt to crack the safe of the Ritz theatre early Sunday morning, even though they removed the safe to a balcony on the front of the building and succeeded in knocking off the combination.

The safe resisted their efforts and it had to be left on the balcony. About $1800 was locked in it.

Entrance to the theatre was gained through use of a pinch bar on front doors. The robbers worked their way to Manager Bonner's office, took the safe and rolled it through a door to an ante room opening onto the projection room and thence through a window opening on to the balcony.

Death resulted from a system weakened by old age not being able to throw off a lingering illness brought about by a fall that injured his hip. He has visited in Midland several times and was well known here.

Survivors in the immediate family are: the son in Midland; R. L. Walker of Elkhart, Kans.; Mrs. G. W. Ross and Mrs. S. P. Taylor of San Angelo.

The white men are reported to have picked the locks.

Reservations are being made for the annual banquet and business meeting of the Midland chamber of commerce on the night of Jan. 15. Only 200 tickets will be sold. ### Flapper Fanny Says

Some secretaries think that saving exertion is being economical.

The minister pointed out that the general attitude of one answering the commission to be sent for the Lord usually meant that a person is called to go to a foreign field as a missionary, but it was pointed out that "to the vast majority of us, our commissions may be quite ordinary errands." Mr. Calhoun said that "to become a minister of faith, hope and love in the home and in the school and in the business world would mean to supply a helping hand for God to carry on His work in this year of 1931."

REPORTS RECEIVED

FORT WORTH, Jan. 5. (P).—Directors of the Independent Petroleum Association of Texas today received committee reports recommending disintegration of major oil companies, divorcing pipe line, producing and marketing branches.

AN EVENT OF UNUSUAL IMPORTANCE

On January 15 the annual meeting of the chamber of commerce will be held. Although there will be an unusual banquet menu of fried steaks and side dishes, the banquet and social features do not comprise the chief importance of the occasion.

Directors and officers of the chamber for 1931 are to be chosen.

Never before was it more important that Midland's commercial organization maintain its strength, have the complete cooperation of the citizenship and take advantage of the opportunities that are practically sure to arise during 1931 for the advancement of the city and county.

Whether you are a citizen who has been in the organization since it was started, or a member of short duration, or even if you don't belong at all but are a citizen of Midland interested in the welfare of the community, make reservations now and be on hand when the annual meeting is held, ready to voice your opinions as to the needs of Midland.

A successful organization never existed without someone, from time to time, saying that it was run by a few, or that some group or clique was dictating its policies. That goes with any organization that is active.

If you are one with such opinions, this is your opportunity to prove your own mettle, to come and have a voice in the affairs of the chamber of commerce, to help select the right men as leaders. If you don't feel the responsibility of coming and taking a hand, all you may have said about "a few" running the chamber is merely idle talk.

If you are a property owner, a wage earner, or in any degree a citizen, it behooves you to become interested in the affairs of your chamber of commerce. The chamber of commerce truly belongs to the people and is functioning expressly for the advancement of Midland, Midland county and the surrounding trade area.

Make your reservations early and resolve to be an active worker in the chamber of commerce during 1931.

WHERE MORE LIGHT IS NEEDED

Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, recently made a remark in a radio address that comes as a welcome relief after the gush that so many would-be business oracles have been favoring us with in recent months.

Speaking of the business depression, Mr. Sloan said: "No one has as yet been able to explain, to the satisfaction of all, what has caused the conditions which exist. It is to be hoped, however, that through evolution and a better knowledge of the facts we shall be able, in the future, to determine the underlying causes of what we call the business cycle. With the real causes established it is reasonable to suppose that industry, co-operating with government, can devise ways and means . . . to reduce its severity."

It is a wholesome thing to find a big industrialist stating bluntly that we cannot really remedy matters until we give the whole problem more honest study than we have yet given it.

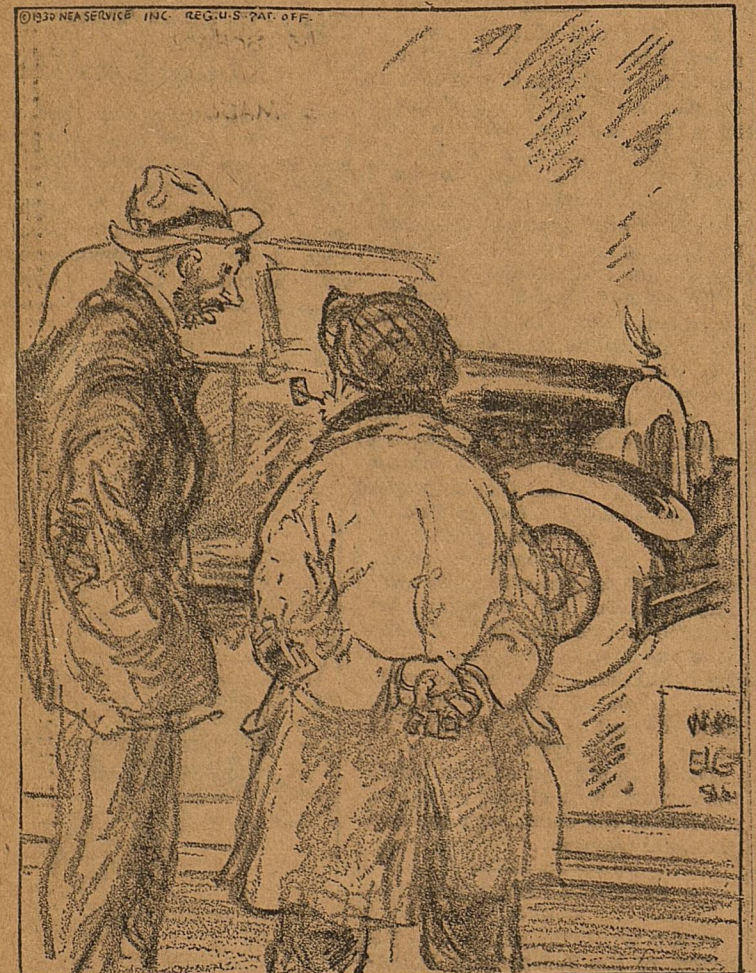

A THIRD PARTY

Senator Norris refuses to lend his support to a third party movement, and thereby doubtless shows his political wisdom. Nevertheless, one is forced to wonder if sooner or later some such movement will not make itself manifest, with a good deal of force.

It is a truism today that there is very little fundamental difference between the two major parties. The divisions within the parties—Senator Norris and Senator Moses, for instance, are technically members of the same party, as are Senators Heflin and Wagner—are far more striking than the contrast between the two parties as a whole.

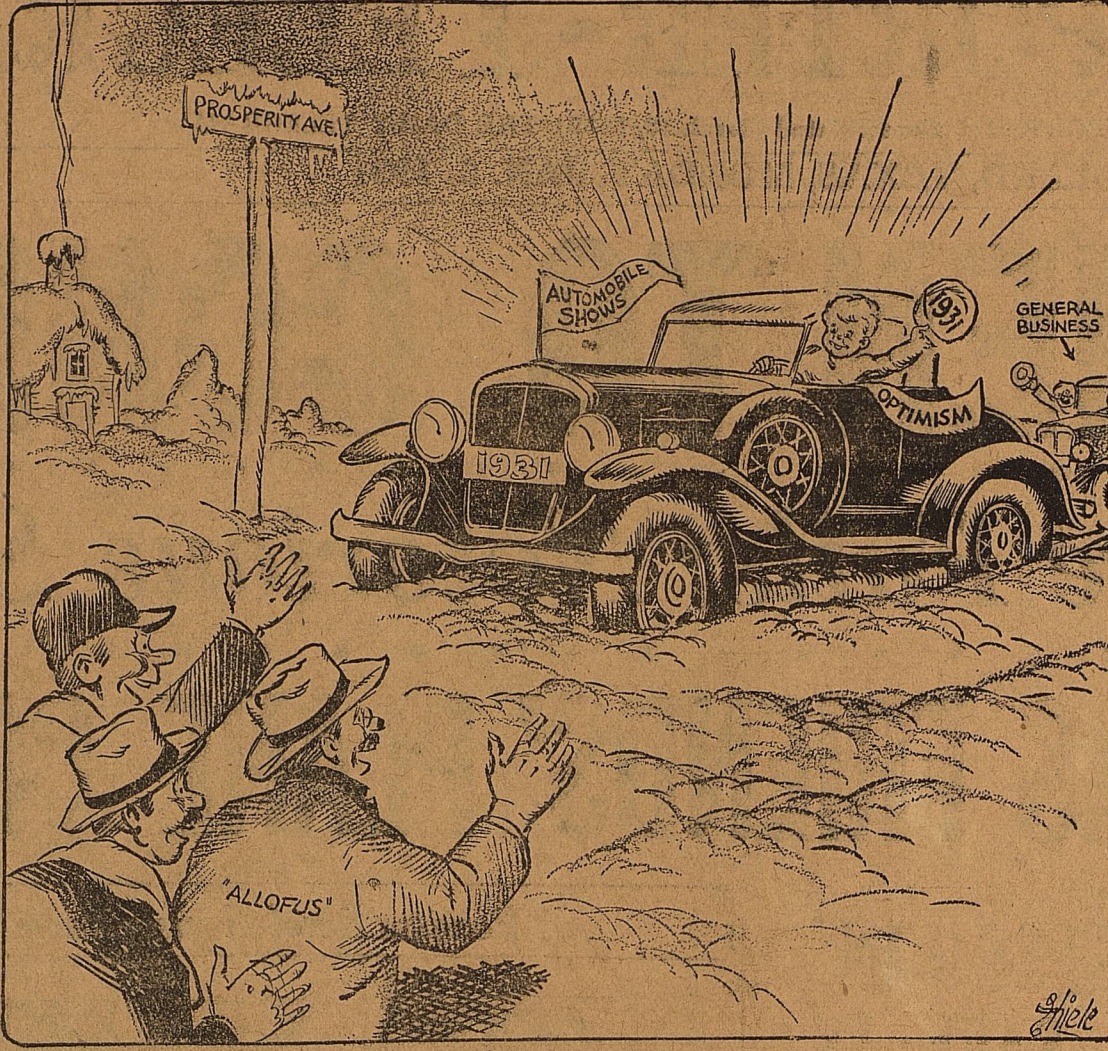

This is hardly a healthy situation. Eventually there must be some sort of realignment. In the past, such realignments have usually been touched off by the appearance of new parties. Will that be the case in this situation? And if so, how far ahead of us is the realignment?

Daily Washington Letter By Rodney Dutcher

Alexander Legge Has Built Up an Unquestioned Reputation as the Hardest-Boiled of All Important Government Officials, but Some People Say He Can't Get Away With It Forever

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Chairman Alexander Legge of the Federal Farm Board has built up for himself an unquestioned reputation as the hardest-boiled guy among important government officials and it has been widely wondered whether he wouldn't eventually qualify as the hardest-boiled guy in the United States.

Mr. Legge has had such excellent luck in disarming his critics by calling them liars or telling them to go to hell, sometimes in those exact words and sometimes not, that some of the mere politicians have been surprised that no one ever tried to feel that Mr. Legge may not be able to get away with it forever, especially if the farm situation—even through through no fault of his—falls to improve.

The first real comeback in kind which the chairman has had from anyone is the report of Mr. John A. Simpson of Oklahoma, the new president of the Farmers' Union which claims 500,000 members.

Mr. Legge directed the expression "unmitigated liar" at Mr. Simpson and Mr. Simpson has come down on Mr. Legge with both feet, not only tossing a few bushels of raspberries at Mr. Legge but also proposing an investigation to determine whether there is more truth and merit in Mr. Legge or Mr. Simpson is turning out to be a hard-boiled guy himself and there is a widespread hope of interesting developments if he keeps right after Mr. Legge's scalp.

Legge Defied Committee Mr. Legge got off to a flying start here when, after President Hoover drafted him from his $100,000-a-year International Harvester job, he told the senators of the agricultural committee—in effect—that if they didn't like him they could go to the devil and he would go back to Chicago. That just about flabbergasted the senators, so accustomed to appointees anxious for confirmation.

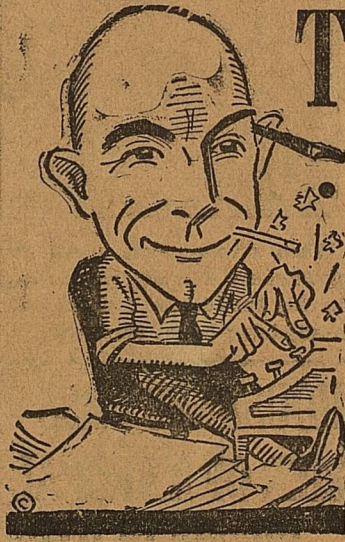

Since that time Mr. Legge has shown more than a willingness to fight all comers. He kicked up a great furor in Kansas when, in his campaign for wheat acreage reduction, he likened the state or its growers to a "hog in a trough." And when a couple of Kansas publishers assailed him he sent word that they could "go to hell!"

In a speech in New York state, he said higher wages for labor and higher prices for manufactured articles were laying heavy burdens on farmers, stirring up angry protest from President Green of the A. F. of L. In the same speech he said fair relief couldn't come through legislation, bringing another report from Governor Roosevelt.

He has engaged in a long, defiant combat with the organized grain trade, participated in a brief set-to with those who charged he had injured prohibition by lending money to growers of wine grapes, had minor arguments with producers' organizations which didn't fall in with Farm Board theories and recently intimated that certain Farm Board critics in the Senate were full of cheap "hot air."

"Regulated" Prices The Legge-Simpson clash centers on the rather startling charge that Mr. Legge admitted to the Senate agricultural committee in secret session that the Farm Board was deliberately holding down the price of wheat and cotton. Senator Thomas, a committee member, told Simpson that Legge had testified the board had stopped the decline of wheat at 69 cents and stopped its rise at 73.

Simpson offers to prove that Legge said he wanted the price of wheat kept low so it would be fed

The Town Quack

Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.

Getting back to football, we've just about hushed up on this subject for some time but I'm not forgetting that Midland has an opportunity to play Class A ball next fall. The other good teams in this section want us in and I'm in favor of giving them their wish. They may look on us as easy marks which is so much the better when we show them otherwise.

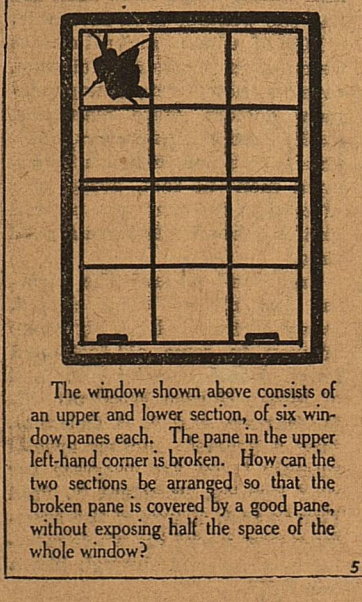

A local doctor had an unusual proposition offered him. A man brought his wife for an examination. The doctor placed a thermometer in her mouth, had her keep her mouth closed for three minutes. On leaving the office, the husband said, "Doc, what will you take for that thing?"

It's reported that when Paul Vickers was teaching the mens' Bible class at Hotel Scharbauer yesterday, someone in the audience shouted "Amen" to one of Vickers' statements and a button jumped from the teacher's vest.

That goes to show that any public speaker likes encouragement. You can sit and look at one like you are half asleep or like you wish he would pass out and it makes it tough for the poor speaker. But just give some evidence that you are enjoying his talk and you will give him more power, and it will result in your enjoyment of his speech.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl R. Peters left yesterday afternoon for Santo, Texas, after a week end visit in the home of his parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Howard Peters. Mrs. Peters, a talented reader, entertained at the Christian S. S. hour yesterday morning with two delightful readings.

Choice Cooks' Corner

A New Kind of Jam Apple Jam is a new one on a great many cooks; if it is novel to you, here's a recipe to help you get acquainted:

Apple Jam 4 lbs. apples 2 lbs. white corn syrup 2 lbs. sugar Rind and juice of 2 lemons 3-4 oz. ground ginger 6 cloves

Peel, core and cut apples into slices. Place in a preserving kettle with sugar and syrup, rind and juice of the lemons, ginger and cloves. Boil for 1 1/2 hours to 2 hours. Put in a stone jar and cover tightly.

Did You Every Try— Adding an apple to vegetable soup to improve its flavor? Using half a cut potato as a spreader in greasing a griddle? Peanut butter mixed with corn syrup for a simple sandwich filling? Or shredded coconut and vanilla mixed with peanut butter and rolled into balls to make "candy marbles"?

Adding 1/2-cup "red hot" or cinnamon drop candies and one cup white corn syrup to water in baking apples.

A little ammonia in the water in which you plan to wash greasy dishes? Serving canned grapefruit with fried fish? A laxative made of dates, bran and honey?

Then do try them!

Daily Health Talk

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Infected Teeth and Tonsils May Cause Rheumatic Pains

Today medical investigators are giving more attention to rheumatism and rheumatic disorders than ever before in the history of medical science. There are clinics in every large medical center for studying and treating this disease.

One of the reasons for this attention, as pointed out by Dr. Ralph Pemberton, is the realization of the fact that pain in the joints and in the muscles and many of the other conditions generally classified as rheumatic are responsible for a tremendous amount of disability in industrial workers and that the cost is a great economic problem.

In true scientific medicine, the method of attack on the disease is first to discover the cause and then to attempt to eliminate the cause rather than to treat the symptoms. Of course, a competent physician can relieve the patient of his pain and give him back the function of his limbs by the use of appropriate remedies while attempts are being made to discover the exact causes.

It is already recognized that a tendency to this disorder may run in families, because certain types of people are more frequently attacked by the disease than others. It is recognized that the condition is not merely inflammation in one joint, but that profound changes take place throughout the human body, affecting the blood, the other fluids in the body, and tissues sometimes far removed from the spot in which the pain is localized.

For years it has been understood that infection in the teeth and in the tonsils might be responsible for setting up inflammations far distant. It is now recognized that these factors are of the greatest importance and should be controlled when present, but that infections may also exist in other parts of the body and be directly related to pains in the joints.

Apparently the blood supply in the rheumatic person is not up to normal standard. The fact that there is a decreased blood flow in the parts of the body affected may explain the added discomfort expressed by people with rheumatism when there are changes in the weather.

Dr. Pemberton has emphasized for many years the relationship which the food intake of the body bears to rheumatic disorders. If gastro-intestinal function is improved, and the burden lowered by cutting down the intake of food, particularly substances which are difficult to digest, there comes not infrequently improvement in the rheumatic condition.

It is thus obvious that there is no single cure for arthritis to be found in a bottle of any kind of medicine, but that every patient with the disease must be studied as a unit and treated according to the condition which exists in him as an individual rather than in all human beings with rheumatism.

BAPTISTS LOSE TO ODESSA BY CLOSE MARGIN

DOUBLE-HEADER HERE TUESDAY TO BRING LEADING METHODISTS INTO CLASH WITH BAPTISTS; OTHER GAMES

The Baptist church cagers lost a closely contested game Saturday night to the Odessa Southern Ice club, 25-22. The game was played in Odessa.

The Baptists, considered the second strongest club in the Inter-Church league here, is planning a series of out-of-town games in order to get its formations clicking with more precision—with the ultimate idea of taking the second half of the Church circuit from the Methodists, who bid fair to sweep the first half without losing a single game.

The Church league plays a double header Tuesday night, the Methodists and Baptists mixing it in the 7:30 game, the Christians and Presbyterians taking the court an hour later.

Sunday School—

Arthur Jury, manager of Hotel Scharbauer, the dining room of which is being donated by Clarence Scharbauer for the meetings. Special arrangements had been made for the convenience and comfort of the big group.

Cotter Hiett, first vice president in charge of attendance, had placed cards about town Saturday which helped to swell attendance. These were arranged for John Bonner.

There was a lot of fellowship, the meeting was short, and went off with a bang, the men present declare. It is already certain the class will be a success, old timers and new men said Sunday, and the goal of 200 men in the class already seems assured. All men of all ages not already in some other Sunday school have been invited.

Officers elected by the class yesterday were as follows: Paul T. Vickers, president; T. Paul Barron, teacher; C. C. Hiett, first vice-president; Elliott H. Barron, second vice-president; J. L. McGraw, third vice-president; David M. Ellis, reporting secretary; A. B. Coleman, recording secretary; J. S. Noland, captain of oil men; Spence Jowell, captain of cowmen; M. D. Johnson, captain of "rheumatics"; Fred Hall, captain of young men; Wallace Wimberly, pianist; Percy J. Mims, spng leader; Claude White, sergeant-at-arms.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The lesson-sermon subject was "GOD" in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, January 4.

The golden text was from Isaiah 12:2, "Behold, God is my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid." Included in the service was the following passage from the Bible: "I know that, whatsoever God doeth, it shall be forever: nothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it; and God doeth it, that men should fear before him"—Ecclesiastes 3:14.

The lesson-sermon also embraced the following citations from the Christian Science text-book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy (pp. 597, 275): "God is one God, infinite and perfect, and cannot become finite and imperfect. . . . All substance, intelligence, wisdom, being, immortality, cause, and effect belong to God. . . . No wisdom is true, no love is lovely, no life is Life but the divine; no good is, but the good God bestows."

New Orleans relatively weaker than local market despite reports stating better demand for actual cotton an inferior spot, advances encouraging.

NEW GEOLOGICAL KNOWLEDGE FROM DEEPER DRILLING

AUSTIN, Texas.—As a result of the deep drilling of recent years, new information has been obtained on the spread of the Paleozoic seas in the Texas region, according to Dr. E. H. Sellards, associate director of the Bureau of Economic Research at The University of Texas. Dr. Sellards recently delivered a paper on "Early Paleozoic Seas of the Texas Region" before the geological Society of America.

"Numerous writers have contributed to a knowledge of the location, character and faunal content of the Texas Paleozoic seas," Dr. Sellards said. "Among these, special acknowledgement should be made to Schuchart whose great publications, Paleogeography of North America, 1910, and Sites and Nature of North American Geosynclines, 1923, are fundamental to this problem. Ulrich and others have also added greatly by their studies of faunas and their relationships."

"In the earlier writings of this subject it was possible to utilize only surface exposures of formations plus their conjectured underground extension. However, as a result of the deep drilling of recent years, new information has been obtained on the spread of the Paleozoic seas. By utilizing these records, it is now possible to add to the information previously available to check at many points the position of deeply buried formations and to more closely delimit the extent of the Paleozoic seas."

"Among the new records obtained in recent years are the following which have been in part reported in the literature: Additional support to the hypothesis advocated by numerous writers that a deep geosyncline existed in Texas at the inner margin of the land mass Llanoria connecting northeastward with the Ouachita geosyncline of Oklahoma and Arkansas and possibly, although less surely, westward with the Marathon geosyncline; the mid-Ordovician sea extended into, probably across, west central Texas having been found under the southern part of the Texas Permian basin; the Upper Ordovician sea extended into, perhaps entirely across, central Texas; Lower and Middle Silurian, Alexandrian and Niagaran, deposits are reported to be present under the southern part of the Texas Permian basin.

"In addition, new data have accumulated by which to check previous mapping on the extent of the Upper Cambrian and Lower Ordovician seas. These seas occupied a broad depression inland from the land mass Llanoria. The facies of deposition in the geosyncline Paleozoic to that of the shallow continental seas which repeatedly spread widely across the foreland. The paper contains a summary of the records now available of the extent of these early Paleozoic seas in the Texas region."

THIRD PARTY PROPONENTS IN TEXAS FACE ROUGH WEATHER

Democratic Party May Split on Reefs of Prohibition; Republicans Ride Safe at Anchor

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN, Jan. 5. (UP)—Prospects for a third party in Texas are not flourishing.

Congressman Harry J. Wurzbach of the Fourteenth Texas district, lone republican congressman from the state, has announced that he will stand by the regular republican organization though he has been opposed by both its national committee-men, Rene Creager, of Brownsville, and by State Republican Chairman Eugene Nolte, who is his townsman at Seguin.

With Wurzbach refusing to lead a bolt, the republican party seems safe from a split in the next campaign.

On the democratic side, a possibility exists of division over prohibition. The last campaign indicated that the dries held that issue superior to party allegiance when they voted for Hoover, who carried the state by 373,822 to Smith's 355,795.

Gov. Dan Moody, who remained in the party last time despite his prohibition views, admitted in recent conversation that nomination of a wet democratic ticket might mean a third party. Jed C. Adams of Dallas, democratic national committeeman from Texas, apparently has the same idea. Recently he declared in favor of Sen. Joe Robinson of Arkansas, the dry wing of the last national democratic ticket, as his choice to lead the democrats in the next campaign.

Former Postmaster General Albert Sidney Burleson, a member of the Wilson cabinet, however, has mentioned Gov. Alfred Ritchie of Maryland, wet, as the logical standard bearer. Gov. Moody has declared his preference for Sen. Walsh of Montana, also mentioning former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker.

Former national committeeman, Thomas B. Love, of Dallas, who openly supported and helped direct the Hoover campaign in Texas, has declared for Gov. Dan Moody for president. That there will be a Texas movement launched in support of Gov. Franklin Roosevelt of New York, shortly, is taken for granted in political circles. Altogether, Texas democrats appear to be getting ready for another bitter fight.

Heretofore third party movements have had little success in the state, even when one, the American party, was started in Texas and had a Texas candidate for president, James E. Ferguson. The year 1912 showed the greatest split up of the Texas vote among parties. Wilson led by approximately 140,000. He had 219,489. For all of Theodore Roosevelt's popularity in Texas and the close linking of the state with the Rough Riders, the progressives had only 28,530 votes. This, however, was 2,000 more than Taft received and 4,000 more than voted the socialist ticket headed by Eugene Debs. Incidentally that was the high water mark for the socialists.

Another party to poll over 20,000 in Texas was the greenback party which got 27,405 votes in 1880. The union labor party in 1888 polled 29,459.

In the democratic split of 1890, Texas stood by William Jennings Bryan giving him 361,224 votes and casting only 4,853 for Palmer and the gold democrats.

McCamey Prospects Good for the Year

McCAMEY.—With all the criticisms thundering at conditions confronted by the people, not a word of objection is being heard against McCamey climate. McCamey has a climate rivaling that of any locality in America. This altitude is where man normally does his very best.

A visitor from the Abilene offices of the West Texas Utilities here recently declared that the resources of this section have never been scratched. He called attention to a salt deposit, 98 per cent pure salt, and on the surface which had been core drilled sixty feet and found to be solid to that depth, located between McCamey and Crane city. The utilities party drove around the deposit, the car registering more than nine miles. Stockmen now go to the deposit and shovel up truck loads of salt as they need it.

McCamey congratulates the outgoing public officials on their past services and welcomes the new regime. New faces are now seen in public pictures.

This year is expected to bring McCamey a new city hall and jail, if her authorities simply go after it. Sentiment is ripe for such development programs as will fill the dinner pail.

PICTOGRAPHS OF LONG AGO PUZZLE SCIENTISTS DELVING INTO HISTORY

EL PASO, Tex. (UP)—A peculiar pictograph found at Hueco Tanks that, among other things, may solve where the Indian's previous address was before he came to this continent, has set El Paso's scientific circles studying—and arguing.

It may prove that Mongolians thought of settling North America long before Columbus did, and it may be the missing link of American and Egyptian pictographs. It may be a lot of things and it may be nothing, puzzled scientists agree.

Part of the drawing, which looks like a parenthesis mark laid on end towards the top of the picture indicates heavens in demotic writing peculiar to ancient Egyptians.

Two four-pointed stars indicate nights, and dashes, which look like a military haircut above the parenthesis, would mean rain if they were on the other side of heavens, pointing down.

Thus Col. M. L. Crimmins and Alford Roos, Vanadium, N. M., archeologists, think the symbol means two rainy nights.

But that is about all they agree on.

A search through old tomes at the public library hasn't helped the argument. The more they mulled, the more they muttered.

They think there is a lot of room for speculation as to the origin of the painted symbols found here in North America. There are symbols for heavens in China.

Whether the American Indian's ancestors were residents of Egypt or Mongolia is something they think they may have a clue towards finding out.

COYOTE TERRORIZES THREE ODESSA MEN WHO MOVE TO TOWN NEXT DAY

Three terror-struck men trapped in a lone house four miles from the nearest neighbor, at night, with a mad wolf prowling outside, hunting men much as he would rabbits—sounds like old-time western fiction, but it happened to three men at the old Pool place, seven miles southeast of Odessa, last Sunday night, according to the following story from The Odessa News-Times.

More than that, the wolf bit two of them when they attempted to get to their car to leave for town, and by rushing the door every time it was opened, he managed to keep them sitting in the cold room until daylight, nearly freezing and cut off from the wood supply a few yards from the door.

L. Self, his son Casey, and Clyde Stringfield, a nephew, were staying in an old house on the Pool place, seven miles southeast of Odessa. Around eleven o'clock Sunday night, the old man heard a noise on the front porch, and going to the door, he struck a match and held it above his head as he peered outside. He saw nothing on the porch, but as the match flickered out, something struck his right hand, still held high above his head. Sharp fangs sank repeatedly into the hand before he could drag it away, and the tips of his fingers touched soft fur.

As he quickly drew his hand inside he listened, but heard no sound as the unknown assailant dropped to the floor or moved away. The hand he drew back into the light, though, was covered with blood, and bore seven distinct wounds from the fangs of the beast.

After examining the wounds, the three decided to come to town at once to find a doctor. The two boys, armed with clubs, walked on each side of the old man, who carried a lantern. As they turned the corner of the house, the old man got between the light and one of the boys, and immediately the wolf attacked the man in the dark, biting him on the thigh.

They retreated to the house again. By this time the men were desperate. He had not seen their assailant, as he attacked only in the dark, and two of them had already been severely bitten. They decided to get to town at all costs.

Wrapping up in heavy bed clothes to ward off the teeth of their foes, they again started out. As they opened the door the wolf charged, almost getting inside before they could beat him off. They pushed the door closed, and sat down to rest. They had seen their assailant and knew it was a mad coyote.

Each time one of them approached the door, front or rear of the house, the wolf would be seen waiting outside. As the door knob moved, he turned his head, watching and waiting like a dog accustomed to being let into the house.

They had no gun, and could do little against the beast with clubs in the dark. The room was growing cold, but the wood was piled outside the house near the back door, and they didn't dare venture into the dark, where the wolf waited for them.

Finally, one of them remembered that they had some strychnine in the house. They cut off a goodly bait of pork, covered it with the poison and flung it out of doors. Waiting until daylight, they ventured outdoors. The bait was gone from the front porch, and the coyote was nowhere to be seen. They found the body of their visitor on the ground a hundred yards or more from the house. The strychnine had done its work.

Cutting off the head of the coyote, they sent it to Austin, where the report was made that it had rabies, as they had suspected. Self, senior and Stringfield are both taking treatment now. Incidentally, they moved into town the next day, permanently, they say.

BURNS BRIDGES

McCAMEY.—The McCamey fire department was called to the home of Sheriff W. C. Fowler, early Tuesday morning, where a little blaze was prevented from becoming a big one by the use of a small fire extinguisher. The sheriff had not then moved to Rankin and he was kidded considerably about "burning his bridges behind him."

GOOD OR BAD?

McCAMEY.—The election of several McCamey citizens to public office in Upton County has caused an exodus of about twenty-five people from here to the county seat this week. They are new ex-McCameytes, having been elected and appointed to Rankin citizenship, assuring that the election issue in 1931 will be as usual, namely "vote for a McCamey man."
