AIR VISITS ARE PUT FORWARD TWO DAYS—FOULS

Announcement was made today by Brigadier General Benjamin D. Foulois, who will command the First Air division, that the various cross-country schedules of the 670 planes that will take part in the 1931 field exercises of the army air corps have been advanced two days beyond the dates originally fixed.

The concentration at Dayton will thus begin on May 13, when the national guard squadrons will arrive, and on May 15, when the regular air corps units will complete their cross-country flights.

The reason for the change is that in the original plan for the field exercises no provision was made for a demonstration over Chicago which will consume 48 hours of the five days originally set aside for the training period essential in forming an air division of units that have never flown in larger formations than wings.

Amelia Earhart Wins New Laurels in Autogiro Flight

She had just made a new mark in the skies—an altitude record for autogiro planes—when this picture was taken of Amelia Earhart, first trans-Atlantic aviatrix, at Pitecain field, near Philadelphia. She is seen with the heavy sweater and flying suit which protected her against the cold air of high altitudes after she had piloted a "windmill" plane to an approximate height of 19,000.

Amelia Earhart set an altitude record for other autogiro pilots to shoot at when she flew this curious windmill plane an estimated three and one-half miles in the air over Pitecain field, near Philadelphia. Here you see the famed trans-Atlantic aviatrix in the cockpit of the odd plane as she landed after reaching an altitude of 18,500 feet—a record which she bettered by 500 feet on a second flight a few minutes later.

HERO-WORSHIP

This nation seems to have a mania for hero-worship. Ordinarily this is a perfectly harmless trait, and sometimes it does a good deal of good.

Just as present young Bryan Untiedt of Towner, Col., is the goat. Bryan, you know, is the 13-year-old youngster who conducted himself so coolly and courageously when the school bus in which he and other children were riding became stalled in a snow drift, so that five of the children were frozen to death.

According to all accounts, Bryan was a sturdy chap on that tragic occasion. He did what he could to help keep smaller children warm, and he behaved in every way like a boy whose parents could be pretty proud of him.

But Bryan right now is being put through an ordeal that could turn the head of a grown man, leave alone a small boy.

First they had him in front of a talking picture camera. Then he began getting letters and presents from people all over the country. And in a day or so he is to be taken to Washington and introduced to President Hoover.

Now all of this is perfectly natural, of course—but it's terribly unjust to the boy himself.

Being a celebrity in America today, even if it doesn't last very long, is not exactly an enviable experience. The admiring mob creates a lot of pitfalls for his hero to step into, and it takes a pretty level-headed man to avoid them all.

It's all going to be rather tough on Bryan. The chances are that he will come through it unspoiled, and go back to the normal privacy of boyhood to which every lad is entitled.

But it won't be our doing if he does. It will be because he is unusually sensible and sure-footed, and not because we adults have shown that we have any idea of how juvenile heroes should be treated.

By lionizing him as we are doing, we are taking a chance of ruining a fine, upstanding American boy—who happens, incidentally, to be right at the most impressionable age possible.

We have no right at all to take that chance. The kindest thing we could do to this lad would be to let him alone—and, at the same time, to give him a chance to forget about the horrible tragedy through which he has passed.

DO WE NEED A THIRD PARTY?

Some of the most brilliant thinkers along political lines have declared recently that the United States needs a third political party. They assert that new ideas and ideals are needed, that a new outlook backed by platforms radically changed from those of the old line parties is necessary.

That such a tendency is finding favor in some sections, especially in local elections, seems apparent. Groping for a way to solve their problems, many politically-minded individuals have broken away from the old parties and have succeeded in nominating and electing what may best be described as independent candidates.

This at least suggests that there is dissatisfaction with the established parties in certain sections. It doesn't necessarily mean that a new national third party will be the outcome. But it most certainly does mean that the wise Republicans and Democrats have something significant to think about when planning for the future.

Daily Washington Letter By Rodney Dutcher

Payments to Veterans Eventually Are Expected to Total as Much as the War Cost—$35,000,000,000—and It Seems Likely Every Ex-Soldier Will Benefit

WASHINGTON.—There is no reason to suppose that the veterans of the World War will cease their demands on the treasury until the last one has passed to his final reward.

Or that succeeding Congresses will fail to heed their pleas. History already has begun to repeat itself and the assurance that the veterans hope to accelerate that time-honored process has been indicated by the national commander of the American Legion.

Resting not on a noble record of accomplishment, including soldier bonus loans, the beginning of a pension system, the bonus itself and other federal veteran expenditures excluding loans which will cost about $900,000,000 next year, Commander O'Neal has outlined proposals for further measures which will be presented to the next and subsequent sessions of Congress.

Congress Is "Pension-Minded" After each war it has required a shorter period to persuade Congress to grant service pensions and subsequently to liberalize their provisions.

Spanish War veterans of 1898 struggled until 1920 for their first service pensions, but less than 300,000 men were engaged in that war, whereas World War veterans number more than 4,000,000 and consequently are able to bring all the more pressure. So the latter had to wait 12 years before Congress granted him allowance for disabilities whether the disabilities were connected with war service or not.

Commander O'Neal's demands have caused considerable stir but no great surprise because everyone has expected that veterans, already benefiting from legislation which has created the largest single burden on the treasury, would insist upon and receive more and more until further post-war veteran payments run up to or beyond the $35,000,000,000 which the war already has cost.

Pensions for widows and orphans of veterans was one item on the program outlined by O'Neal. These pensions made plenty of progress in the last Congress and are sure to be passed by the next. They are expected to boost the pension bill another $150,000,000.

There are those who already predict that the loans made to veterans on adjusted compensation certificates will eventually be forgiven the borrowers. No such demand has yet come from the veterans themselves and it would be presumptuous to assert here that it will ever be made, but it can be said with some assurance that if the veterans ever do get behind such a movement they will find plenty of eager support in Congress and perhaps enough to jam it through.

Relief for wives and children of veterans now in hospitals and increase in hospital facilities for veterans who will need treatment in the future, also expected by Commander O'Neal, presumably will come right along.

Proposes Increase Then there's the commander's proposal for increasing the disability compensation for World War veterans to the level allowed to veterans of other wars, on the theory that the veteran of one war is entitled to as much money as the veteran of another. Spanish War veterans' monthly service pensions now run up to $60 a month on a scale which took them 22 years to achieve and when the World War veterans achieve a similar scale, disability payments will increase tremendously in cost.

Eventually there will be an ultimate general pension bill for every veteran and Congress will pass it unless it reverses all previous performances. That, presumably, will represent the high watermark of America's post-war expenses.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

Folks, it's a great sight to see between 300 and 400 hairy-chested men gnawing away at delicious barbecue. I was present at the big feed yesterday and enjoyed every bite of Clarence Scharbauer's beef (that which he donated).

I have been making a particular study of great men lately and have been astonished at the many similarities existing among them. There are four great men to my knowledge who like to wear blue shirts. These same men have the rather rustic habit of dropping in on people unexpectedly and demanding iced tea, sweet milk, cake and anything else that pops into their minds.

I happened to be at a place where one of these great men was making his demands recently. It was surprising to see how his greatness faded when he called for sweet milk and got only water. He was offered some delicious iced tea but he would not accept it—just rotten stubbornness. This great man explained that he had been eating cake and drinking milk as a combination for more than a quarter of a century and that he would positively refuse to eat the cake without the milk. In my estimation, that man is not as great as I thought.

I was drifting along on the highway west of town the other night enjoying the night breezes when whiz went a big car around me making about 83 miles an hour. I kicked the old flivver up as fast as it would go in an effort to be one of the first to arrive at the scene. Much to my joy, the scene did not happen.

The big car slowed down after it had gone around a car or two that were making several rods an hour themselves. I felt like stopping the big car and making a little speech to the driver, but my modesty kept me silent. The swift car continued its westward trip and soon disappeared down the historic Bankhead highway.

officer was roundly berated by a noon-day crowd for arresting a man who defied arrest after darting across the street against the signal. The policeman, jostled and jeered, was made a laughing stock. None would have considered it extraordinary if a motorist had been penalized for the same offense. Nor did the crowd seem to realize that the jay-walker might have been hit and that the policeman was acting for his safety.

The pedestrian, for his own security, should consent to be disciplined by the same rules which govern motorists at crossings. There is such a thing as sparing jay-walkers enforcements and spoiling the pedestrian.

The above diagram shows the paper boy's route in four straight lines, going from "A" to "B." This requires him to go out of bounds and consequently is not the shortest route, but it does not violate any conditions of the problem.

BIG SCORE RUNS UP TO CREDIT OF GREASERS

The Midland Oilers completely routed the Pleasant View club Sunday afternoon, touching up with the wharf 21 times while the losers warped in only three times.

Shillett and Pyron allowed only five hits, and the Oilers contributed to their run-making by garnering 18.

Shillett, Pipkin and Neel socked on in the whiskers during the afternoon and turned the four corners while she rode with riding lights ablaze. Each club was erratic in fielding, the winners chalking up five and the losers nine.

Farm Population Gains; One Person in Five Engaged in Raising Food Supplies

BY ALLARD SMITH Executive Vice President, The United Trust Co., Cleveland, O.

For the first time in many years figures published by the United States Department of Agriculture show a gain in farm population for the year just past. The number of persons leaving farms for the cities, which has been steadily increasing since 1926, stood at 1,543,000 and the number arriving at farms from the cities was 1,392,000. These totals, taken in conjunction with the birth and death rates, brought an increase of 208,000 for farm population during the year 1930.

This change may mark the beginning of a movement of population back to the farms but on the other hand it may be a temporary expression of employment conditions during the past year. In support of the former theory is the fact that the exodus from the farms to the cities has been slowing up for several years. Census and agricultural department figures show that practically one-fifth of the population of the country, or 27,430,000 people, live on the farms and are consequently engaged in the raising of food supplies and such of the textile raw materials as are agricultural crops in this country. The nation's food supply is assured.

What will be the effect on prices of farm produce of this increased farm population it is hard to forecast. It must be borne in mind that the farmers of the country, and particularly those who are returning to the farms from the cities, are well in step with the present age of mechanical efficiency and are not so easily disturbed by new ideas as were the older generation of farmers. We have, too, a leaven of expert knowledge supplied by the work of the country's many excellent agricultural schools.

Diversification of farm crops and new and more efficient methods of farm production may well be the result of our shifts of population from the farms to the cities and now from the cities to the farms.

DOUG FAIRBANKS HERE IN COMEDY; DOES NOT PRODUCE OWN PICTURE; RETURNS TO ROLE OF FORMER YEN

A new Douglas, or better, the Douglas the world knows in his zippiest mood, a laughing, up-and-go-ing actor-athlete brimming with enthusiasm, pep and bon-hommie is to be found out at the United Artists Studios these days. It is the same Doug who brought a boundless energy and a desire to know things onto the old Triangle lot when he was making his motion picture debut in such high-tension entertainments as "The Lamb" and "His Picture in the Papers."

The man who has immortalized dynamic force in the movies and is a symbol of the phrase, "perpetual motion" feels that he is once again at the beginning of a career. The attitude of Douglas Fairbanks the first, is that there is plenty to learn about the new medium, talking pictures, which he claims is unlike either the stage or the silent screen.

Doug has just completed "Reaching for the Moon" which is at the Ritz theatre. It is the first picture he has made in years in which he does not officiate as producer.

His sole responsibility is as star and actor of the piece which was made by Joseph M. Schenck, president of the United Artists corporation of which Doug is a director and through which all his pictures of the last several years have been released.

Rumor had it that Fairbanks was going to give up the films. He gave some credence to the story by taking a trip to Europe to attend the golf tournament. For the first time in ten years of their married life he was separated from Mary Pickford. Whether he would ever appear on the screen again was problematic, as much to Doug himself as anyone else.

Then overnight came the word of Doug's snap decision to star in "Reaching for the Moon." He had examined the script hastily. It called to mind the pictures he had made early in his career, such modern, fast-moving comedy-dramas as "When the Clouds Roll By," "He Comes Up Smiling" and "Manhattan Madness." It certainly looked promising. When Edmund Goulding, author and director of "The Trespasser" and "The Devil's Holiday," was engaged to handle the production, Fairbanks capitulated.

That Doug was enthused about his new role, there could be no doubt. An hour of two on the "Ship-set" of "Reaching for the Moon" would have convinced anyone that Douglas Fairbanks had made up his mind and had a definite objective in mind. He was in every sense a different individual.

In the silent days, before sound tamed things topsy-turvy, Fairbanks went about the making of pictures as though it were play. But the talkies were a puzzle to himself and everyone else. The seemingly endless preparations they required, made him restless. It was apparent from the way he consumed one cup of black tea after another and smoked cigarettes endlessly.

And then the sun shone. Producer Schenck proposed that Doug star in his picture. Production worries, cutting room grief and directorial headaches flew out of the window. Handsomely recompensed for his services, Doug could forget all about box-office troubles and everything that went with them. Presto, change. The effect was miraculous.

His exuberance and infectious good spirits colored the entire production. Hours and hours were spent in tireless rehearsals. A rough and tumble chase in which he leads a dozen "stewards" a merry chase was repeated over and over again until it was found to be just right. Doug tumbled and rolled and jumped, pausing only long enough to laugh at the capers of Edward Horton, his valet in the story.

Cigarette smoking was cut down to almost nothing, the sure sign that he was happy and mentally free.

"I limit myself to one every hour," he would say.

Up until this time it was quite a mystery as to just how he felt about his new venture and his future. Interviews had been few and without much information. Now the truth came out, Doug felt it was not for him to speak.

"Interviews are for the new people with new ideas and new thing to say and give. After all, I have been giving out stories for many years. Everything I could have said and thought on any situation has been printed hundreds of times. The people, the magazines and newspapers should look for statements to me like Edmund Goulding who are bringing new life and color to this business."

For Goulding he has the greatest admiration. So high is his regard, that for the first time in years he has taken direction. Though he always employed able directors, Doug invariably staged his own "business." He has a different attitude toward Goulding. He focuses upon him the interest of the learner. An hour before the other members of the cast arrive, he would be on the set discussing with Goulding the work of the day.

To Fairbanks, Goulding is one of the three important exponents of the talking screen. The other two are Will Rogers and Mickey Mouse.

Fairbanks says, "Edmund Goulding is more than a genius—he is a genius. He pulls tricks out of hats and camera effects from his sweater sleeve. He is a young, new master of a new technique."

BASEBALL SEASON STARTS; RADIO IS TO BRING HACK

The opening day of Big League baseball, April 14, brings Hack Wilson, famed home run slugger, as the guest of Richey Craig, Jr., the Blue Ribbon Malt Jester, over the Columbia Broadcasting System at 10:15 p. m. Eastern Standard Time. He will be interviewed by Pat Flanagan, the well-known baseball and sports announcer. The vested choir of the First Methodist church attracted an audience of more than 600 Sunday evening when it sang in the First Methodist church of Big Spring.

The cantata which was sung in Midland Easter Sunday evening was sung in Big Spring, and brought considerable praise. Mrs. Marion F. Peters is director.

BIG SPRING IS OFF, AND LOSES TO LAMESANS

Midland's golf team dropped its first match in the Sand Belt Golf association Sunday, to Texon.

The score could not be learned this morning.

Big Spring lost its initial match to Lamesa, 24-20, according to Bobby Campbell, Big Spring Herald sports writer.

Midland plays Big Spring in Big Spring on April 25.

The Texon course was described as being fast, with the greens hard to play due to being so hard.

"Nothing but a high pitch shot would stick," as one golfer said.

The Midland team was composed of Ellis Cowden, H. S. Forgeron, Frank Day, Billy Moran, Billy Hoey, Delo Douglas, Bill Lake and John Howe.

Money Needed for Robison Memorial

Completion of plans for erecting a memorial to the late J. T. Robison, "grand old land man of Texas," are shaping, according to a letter from Land Commissioner J. H. Walker to W. F. Scarborough of Midland.

He says, in part: "The committee you appointed to select a memorial for Mr. Robison met here yesterday and made a tentative agreement with Mr. Frank Teich of Llano to place a bust on a suitable pedestal in this office for $3000. He is to make a sketch which will be sent to you as the committee would like to have the benefit of your judgment in the matter. You may know Mr. Teich, or know of him. He is one of the leading artists in his line in this country. As soon as the sketch is completed, I will forward it to you."

The committee referred to is composed of Walker, W. N. Waddell, Fort Worth, and Coke Stephenson, legislator, Junction.

"We have approximately $1500 in the treasury at present, and would be glad to receive donations immediately from friends of the late commissioner," Scarborough said.

He said checks may be mailed to the treasurer of the memorial fund, Roy A. Aldwell, cashier of the First National bank of Sonora, or to himself.

"There is a debt involved in placing the monument to Robison," Scarborough said. "He did much for us here."

Sunday School Attendance Same

The first Baptist Sunday school had the same attendance Sunday as the week before, each day registering 602.

Four additions were received at the morning preaching service. The night service had an attendance of 172.

At the First Christian church, 152 registered at Sunday school, 107 at the morning preaching and 187 at the special Pythian sermon in the evening.

Eighty-three attended Sunday School at the Presbyterian and 82 heard the morning sermon.

Antedote Studied By Christ. Science

The lesson-sermon subject was "Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, April 12.

Deuteronomy 7:15 furnished the golden text: "The Lord will take away from three all sickness, and will put none of the evil diseases of Egypt, which thou knowest, upon thee."

The following passages from the Bible (Luke 13:11-13) were included in the lesson-sermon: "And, behold, there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years. . . . And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity. . . . and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God."

The following paragraph from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, was also read: "If sickness is true or the idea of truth, you cannot destroy sickness, and it would be absurd to try. Then classify sickness and error as our Master did, when he spoke of the sick, 'and whom Satan hath bound,' and find a sovereign antidote for error in the life-giving power of truth acting on human belief, a power which opens the prison doors to such as are bound, and sets the captive free physically and morally."

Some idea of the magnitude of the pipe line business may be gained from the fact that the combined length of trunk and gathering lines in the United States, without including gas lines, is more than 100,000 miles. And a large part of this is located in our Southwestern States.

Typical of the several large systems of pipe lines which serve Southwestern petroleum producers as common carriers is that of the Magnolia Pipe Line Company. In this system the original short line at Corsicana has been expanded into a
