American Warships Are Sent to Protect American Lives

MARTIAL LAW NOW RULING

Several Engagements Reported in the Interior

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, April 21. (UP).—The Honduras government today declared martial law throughout the nation in an effort to suppress the revolutionary movement in northern Honduras.

Loyalist reinforcements will be led to the affected region centering around the cities of Progreso, Ceiba, Tela and Truxillo.

Reports stated that rebels expected to seize Tegucigalpa not later than today. The United States government has sent seven warships to the region to protect American lives.

Engagements were reported in isolated towns.

Sandino Branded

WASHINGTON, April 21. (UP).—President Hoover announced today that the Nicaraguan insurgent, General Augusto Sandino, as "having placed himself outside the civilized pale by cold blooded murder of eight or nine Americans."

The president said he was confident that Sandino would be brought to justice soon. He said that a force several times larger than Sandino's was operating against the insurgents.

The total number of deaths in Nicaragua was reported to be 16.

CHARGES FORGED WIRES ARE SENT HOUSE MEMBERS

AUSTIN, April 21. (UP).—Forged telegrams are being sent to the legislature in an effort to influence votes on bills, representatives Jack Kellor of Dallas charged on the floor of the house today.

He exhibited such telegrams and letters from an individual saying that he did not send them.

EMERGENCY OPERATION

Mrs. R. M. Barron was taken to the hospital-clinic early this afternoon for an emergency operation.

MIDLAND BID FOR 41ST ROTARY DISTRICT MEET IN '32 IS MADE

PLAINVIEW, April 21.—Midland's invitation to Forty-first District Rotarians for the 1932 conference was presented at 1:30 today by T. Paul Barron, president of the Midland Rotary club.

In a five-minute talk, Barron stressed the city's accessibility, using a blackboard to show how the Texas & Pacific railroad and Bankhead highway split the district through the center, with lateral roads swinging to the pavement from the north and south.

Hotel accommodations, entertainment advantages and the fact that Midland is sincere in the desire to be host to Rotarians in 1932 were brought out in the speech.

The Plainview conference, with more than 800 in attendance, adjourns this afternoon.

Nominations of T. D. Brooks of Waco and Ed McLaughlin of Falls for district governor were made shortly before noon and results of the balloting were expected at 2:30. Midland's 21 delegates were preparing for the homeward trip this afternoon.

INJURED WOMAN LIVED HERE FOR SEVERAL YEARS

Mrs. George Leach, 46, former Midland woman who was seriously injured at Houston Monday by a negro, Sonny Reed, was reported in a serious condition today, a wire received by Mrs. W. E. Wallace said.

Mrs. Leach was hurt when the negro awoke from sleep, killed his wife and wounded David Harris, an attorney; Mrs. Leach and Miss Janet Arendale, 25. He was in a maniacal frenzy.

The negro was killed when he attempted to grab an officer's gun at the hospital where he had been taken after attempting to commit suicide.

The wire to Mrs. Wallace said Harris, the attorney, had succumbed from injuries and that Miss Arendale might recover.

Mrs. Leach is a daughter of the late Schuyler Lewis, well known here; and a sister to "Texas" Jack Lewis, show rider. The family owned a ranch near Midland until about five years ago, when it sold out to O. P. Buchanan, except for one section.

The family has been returning each summer for visits with friends. The Leaches bought a chicken and produce business near Bay City when they moved from Midland. Lately they have lived in Houston.

No details of the trouble with the negro have been received by friends here.

School Hearing Deferred Monday

The hearing announced Monday evening in district court to decide the controversy of public school district No. 4 Warfield, was deferred.

An injunction against building a new building south of the railroad was granted a few days ago.

Look Forward Says Co. Health Nurse

May day—National Child Health day, which has been observed now for eight years, is a national holiday of distinct significance, in the opinion of Miss Martha Bredemeier, county health nurse.

"It is practically the only day set aside especially by congress when we as a nation look unitedly to the future instead of the past," she says. "It is a day when our citizens should ponder on what the country is going to be like twenty-five or fifty years from now, on whether our sons and daughters when they grow up will represent strength or weakness."

"The ideal is that every child should be given the chance to be everything that he would wish to be were he responsible for his own well being from boyhood. In America there is no excuse for the physical and educational handicaps that still prevent the full development of many of our children. We could, if we wish, swing the doors of opportunity wide before all the children of our people."

"National Child Health day is a symbol of this ideal," she said.

TAYLOR RESTING

C. A. Taylor, who suffered from a fractured hip Monday morning, was reported to be resting quietly at his home on Illinois street today.

RIVER BILL PASSED

AUSTIN, April 21. (UP).—The house today passed the Trinity river navigation bill. It now goes to the senate.

Mexican Faces Assault Charges

Julio Hernandez, Mexican, is in the county jail, charged with assault of Tomasa Mejia, 17, Mexican girl.

He was bound over to the grand jury Thursday and indicted Monday, when the grand jury reported late in the afternoon, returning four bills of indictment.

The damage case of Sam R. Preston against the Pure Oil company was expected to go to the jury early this afternoon. Arguments were to begin at 1 o'clock.

PRESBYTERY IS OFF ON A 3-DAY SESSION IN CITY

A meeting of the home mission board of the El Paso Presbytery at the First Presbyterian church this afternoon was the first session of the spring assembly of the organization in Midland for a three-day program.

All Midland people are invited to hear Dr. W. F. Junkin, missionary of China, speak of his experiences at foreign stations during 34 years. Business meetings will take up most of the day Wednesday with another open meeting at the evening hour.

Adequate provisions were made early in the week to entertain delegates which were expected to number around 40.

Meals are being served in the church dining room to visitors by the church auxiliary.

WEALTHY DOCTOR BELIEVED HELD; WIFE AN HEIRESS

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 21. (UP).—Dr. Isaac E. Kelley Jr., 44, prominent wealthy physician, was believed to be kidnaped today.

The doctor failed to return to his home last night after he answered a call to an outlying district town. His wife is heiress to several million dollars.

Haight Writes of Lubbock Meeting

The cause is already won, if enthusiasm is a safe omen, Harry L. Haight writes as he speeds towards Hot Springs with the Boardway of America motorcade.

Big Spring, Colorado, Abilene, Cisco, Eastland, Ranger and Fort Worth turned out with bands and mayors and aldermen and banquets and speeches to meet the caravan, and expressions of support were made, Haight writes.

Two motorcycle cops led the procession along at a 55-mile-an-hour clip, and no blow-outs and casualties had been reported.

Mrs. Haight is with her husband. Both represent Midland at the important highway conference in Hot Springs.

RECEIVES INJURIES

Pat Barber received treatment at the hospital Monday afternoon for painful though not serious injuries received when the tip of a finger was jerked off while working at his farm north of the city.

BUIE IS ELECTED

MARLIN, April 21. (UP).—Dr. N. D. Buie of Marlin was elected president of the East Texas chamber of commerce today.

PRORATION IS FAVORED BY E. TEXAS CHAMBER

MARLIN, April 21. (UP).—A resolution favoring proration of the East Texas oil fields was adopted by the East Texas chamber of commerce in the annual meeting here today.

"The present unregulated proration is folly and ruinous to East Texas land owners," the resolution said.

Dr. N. D. Buie of Marlin was elected president of the chamber.

Railroad Traffic Resumed Today

GRAPELAND, April 21. (UP).—Traffic on the Missouri Pacific was resumed this morning after it had been tied up when two engines and cars crashed at midnight, painfully burning Webb Williamson, 40, railroad engineer.

Damage to the engines was estimated at $7,000. Five oil cars and car of cross ties were burned.

Total damages were estimated at $75,000.

Fred Cowden Resting Better

Reports from Temple concerning the condition of Fred Cowden who underwent a major operation Monday morning, state he is resting easily today and will probably be out of danger within the next few days.

Mrs. Clarence Scharbauer, Mrs. Homer Rowe, Frank and Ellis Cowden, of Midland, and Mrs. Whit Stafford of Dallas, all children of Mr. Cowden, and Mrs. Cowden were at the hospital at the time of the operation.

Julian Extortion Case Is Continued

LAREDO, April 21. (UP).—The trial of C. C. Julian, C. C. Boren and Clay Mann on charges of attempting to kidnap L. S. Bolling and extort $50,000 from him was continued today until June 1 on a motion by defense attorneys who said they did not have the time to properly prepare the cases.

Bad Health in Drought Areas

FORT WORTH, April 21. (UP).—Health authorities are concerned about the health condition of the eastern part of Texas and several counties adjacent to Tarrant, it was announced today.

A telegram sent to the United States Public Health Service in Washington recently said disease was spreading in the drought stricken counties and eastern and northern Texas.

Plans are being started for a health campaign.

SAN DIEGO SELECTED

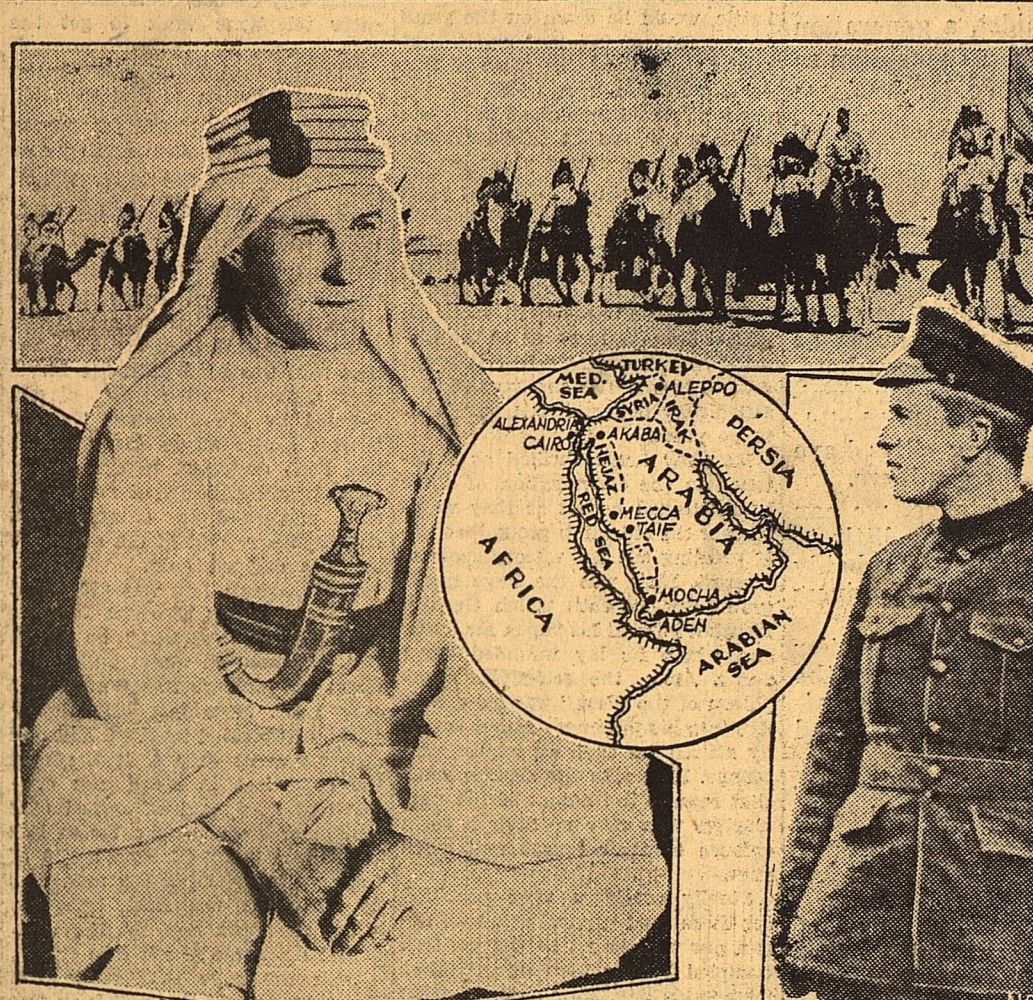

San Diego was selected as the convention city of 1932 for the Broadway of America at the 1931 meeting in Hot Springs, Ark., today.

The motorcade of cars en route to Hot Springs passed through Midland last Friday afternoon.

IN WICHITA FALLS

J. G. Gossett and son, Harry, are in Wichita Falls this week visiting in the home of J. G. Gossett Jr. They will return the last of the week.

"Lawrence of Arabia" Happy Now as Mere Private Wary of politics and all that goes with it, tired of responsibility and seeking relaxation by working with his hands—that explains why Colonel T. E. Lawrence, famous in the World War as "Lawrence of Arabia," is now a private in Britain's royal aircraft service, according to his story just obtained by United Press. Lawrence is shown above as he appeared when he was "the uncrowned king of Arabia," organizing and leading thousands of Arabs against the Turks for the Allied cause and, right, as he appears now as a British private. Some of the desert tribesmen that he led in battle and a map of the scene of his exploits are also shown. This newspaper is running a great "scoop" on the story.

Smashing Story of the Year--Col. T. E. Lawrence

A "contented man," seeking nothing, wanting nothing, happy at tinkering with a piece of machinery; a man devoid of all ambition "which is the cause of most of the evils of mankind"—that is the former Col. T. E. Lawrence, now plain aircraftsman Shaw, once detestor of Arabia and today, by his own choice, a humbled mechanic in the British air force.

Following is the second of a series of articles by Henry I. Russell, of the United Press London bureau, obtained by him through frank conversation with this "man of mystery."

By HENRY T. RUSSELL, United Press Staff Correspondent. Copyright 1931 in all countries by United Press. All rights reserved.

PLYMOUTH, Eng., April 21. (UP).—Aircraftsman T. E. Shaw, once that romantic "Lawrence of Arabia" whose word was law from Aleppo to Mocha, who welded Arabian princes and potentates and tribesmen into a steel force and swept the Turkish armies from the desert; who built an empire and lived as a dictator, has but two small ambitions.

Perhaps Aircraftsman Shaw would prefer to call them desires rather than ambitions, for "ambition," to him, is "the cause of most of mankind's evils."

His two desires are merely to experience the thrill of leaping from an airplane with a parachute; to write for a living without traing upon the romance of his name.

"You are up against a contented being," he wrote in one of his several letters to me before he agreed to break his long silence. And he added that he was "only a very ordinary and pleased creature, whose position in the R. A. F. forbids him to give interviews for publication." Nevertheless, there was no ban on "conversations."

"You will recognize me easily," he wrote when he finally agreed to meet me. "The R. A. F. wear a dull grey-blue-green uniform like soldiers, but more scruffy. In this I am an inconspicuous and unimpressive figure about five and a half feet high, with a face the color of a boiled lobster."

Actually, when he met me, grinning broadly, at the top of the steps from which the pilgrim rather embarked on the Mayflower 300 years ago, he wore over his "scruffy" uniform a black rubber coat.

"I'm Shaw," he said simply, and under his guidance we descended the steps to water level and entered his American speed boat for the trip across the sound.

"She's the nicest thing in these waters," he said proudly. "The late Henry Segrave brought her back from the makers, Purdy of Port Washington, Long Island. She was bought by Colin Cooper of London, and given to me. We English can't make anything that can touch her."

So he dashed across the sound at 40 miles an hour—and I understood the reason for the rubber coat. And there he described to me the philosophy that enabled him to live happily on 80 cents a day, his soldier's pay.

Ambition, first of all, seems to him "the cause of most of mankind's evils." This applies both to personal ambition and the ambition of nations—commercial rivalry, the spirit of aggrandizement.

If the Egyptians had ambition, he says, they could probably rid their land of British occupational forces in a decade. If Mussolini had not inspired the Italians with ambition, he adds, Italy probably would revert to its pre-war status as a nation in a decade. Ten years, in his opinion, is sufficient time in which to make or break a nation—or a man.

And there are various kinds of personal ambitions which Lawrence cannot comprehend. Why should he receive letters—a dozen a day—asking for his autograph? Strange ambition, that, to have a man's signature.

And these women who wrote to him proposing marriage? Another strange ambition!

"A recent letter came from a woman who wrote that she was 'attractive,' and that I was 'just the type of he-man' she had always longed for. Well, I'm not. I stuck her letter on the walls of our hut that night before the men went to bed."

"They read about the 'he-man' and roared. They've sagged me ever since. For God's sake, tell these women to stop proposing. You will save them postage stamps. Tell them I never answer letters any more."

Yet Aircraftsman Shaw has two small ambitions, as I said.

"I want," he told me, "to experience the thrill of dropping from a great height in a parachute. I imagine the feeling must be—remarkable. I want to experience that moment of indecision which is bound to occur on the verge of jumping.

And I don't care if the parachute fails to open, either."

There spoke something of the fatalist, perhaps.

The other desire is "to live to see the day when I can write for a living." Yet, stubbornly, he will not write if his product is sold by his name alone.

"If they won't take what I write unless I sell my name with it," he said, "then I don't want to write for them. If what I write is not good enough for publication unless it is signed by me, then it isn't worth publishing. I'm not going to trade on my reputation. Furthermore, writing should be so individual that a signature should not be necessary. Like Bernard Shaw's."

Back again to the theme of ambition—the reason "Shaw" is here in the air force, his hands grimy with motor oil, his face blackened by grit and grease, "shaw," once counsellor of kings and princes!

"I am far more contented than any man of my rank at Mount Batten," he said. "Most of these others want something. Some want riches. Some want women. Some want rank. I want nothing. I have had almost everything worth trying in life. I have had wealth. I have had power. I am sick and tired of it all. You must have had all this to know what it is."

"I have no friends—only millions of acquaintances. I have no interest in women. To me, all food is alike except oysters and parsley. I don't like oysters. I'm not fond of parsley—tastes like a grave! In short, I've tried practically everything and had enough, so now I'm a perfectly contented human being, with no desires and no ambitions worth mentioning."

He told me, this amazing man, how it felt to be subordinate to a corporal—this Col. T. E. Lawrence who dared to countermand the orders to field marshals when he commanded the Arabian desert. It is enjoyable, after having unlimited power, to have no responsibility at all. And that led to a discussion of his future plans.

"I have four more years to serve," he said, "then I shall retire to my cottage. I intend to write, but I probably won't make much out of it. I shall make what I need by translating. All I want is three pounds ($15) a week, which I have

HUMBLE POSTS A SCHEDULE

"Stabilization of Oil Market E. Texas" Expected

AUSTIN, April 21. (UP).—Terms of the East Texas oil proration truce made last night subject to the approval of the state railroad commission were announced today by R. D. Parker, chief of the commission's oil and gas division.

They provide for proration to begin May 1 under a committee of eleven acceptable to both sides of the controversy.

Initial allowable production will be 130,000 barrels. There would be an increase to 140,000 barrels on May 15, and 150,000 barrels daily on June 15.

The court battle against proration would be resumed on July 1.

AUSTIN, April 21. (UP).—A 60-day truce in the East Texas war against oil proration and immediate increase in the price of East Texas oil will take place concurrently today.

Leaders of the fight on both sides have come to terms.

Formal approval of District Judge J. D. Moore, who issued the injunction against proration and of the railroad committee was awaited to make the agreement binding. The approval is expected today.

HOUSTON, April 21.—Price reductions ranging from 5 to 20 cents a barrel, and posting of prices for East Texas crude, were announced by Humble Oil and Refining company to become effective at 7 o'clock this morning.

At the same time the Humble Pipe Line company announced that it is reducing its tariff and delivery costs by approximately 20 per cent.

In posting new prices for crude and reducing tariff and delivery costs, the Humble Oil and Refining company is attempting to equalize all crudes at seaboard, W. S. Farris, president of Humble Oil and Refining company, announced in a prepared statement.

Prices for East Texas, which go into effect Tuesday, are those quoted for the Midcontinent, calling for 7 cents per barrel for 40 degree gravity and above. The price scale has a 2-cent differential downward to 43 cents for below 29 degree gravity.

An average cut of 10 cents per barrel for Ranger, North Texas, Moran and Cooke crudes, starting at 33 cents per barrel for below 29 degree gravity, was posted. A 2-cent upward differential is followed, reaching its maximum at 57 cents for 40 and above. The old prices started at 43 cents and ranged up to 67 cents.

Gray county and Carson and Hutchinson counties in the Panhandle are reduced about 10 cents per barrel. Gray county starts at 33 cents for below 35-degree gravity and has a 2-cent spread upward to

BEAUTY IN BUSINESS

A few years hence, according to a writer in the current issue of The American Architect, every business man will be an artist.

This, it seems, will not be because of any sudden flowering of a latent creative impulse. Rather it will be because business is learning that beauty has a high sales value. Beautiful things sell better than ugly things. Everybody is going to have to fall in line.

"This by all means," says the magazine writer, "that soon a new generation will be in our midst, a generation with a fine conception of art and beauty, a conception so fine that it will pervade all business. And so, the business man brought up in this atmosphere must of necessity be himself an artist if he is to survive the stern competition of a business world actuated by beauty."

It is at least encouraging to realize that beauty, in America, does have a high sales value nowadays. In the past—even the recent past—this has not always been quite true. Certain real estate developments on the edges of great cities, for example, have contained houses as supremely ugly as anything man ever made anywhere. There have been times when Americans went in for furniture that was frankly hideous. Some of the proudest buildings and monuments in some of our leading cities have been of a kind to give an artistic person the shudders.

So, if a new order is coming into existence, we can only be thankful. It is, of course, overdoing it a little to say that every business man will be an artist. Probably it would be nearer the mark to say that every big business man will take pains to hire artists.

All of this is just another indication that the frontier period in American life is passing. Until very recently, the entire nation was under the dominance of a frontier atmosphere, even though the actual, physical frontier had long since passed out of existence.

A frontier society values deeds above all else. It puts the doer on a pedestal, and either refuses altogether to put up with the artist and the thinker or, at best, barely tolerates them. It is bound to display that attitude. It has too much work to do to display any other.

Today America is just emerging from that frame of mind. The actual hostility to beautiful things which critics of American life observed in the past is disappearing. The artist, along with other creative workers, is getting a better break.

THE BEAUTY OF FORGIVENESS

More wonderful than the beginning of a beautiful friendship is the mending of a broken one. To forget and to forgive is still the noblest concession man can make; it inspires in him, in our opinion, his most heroic quality.

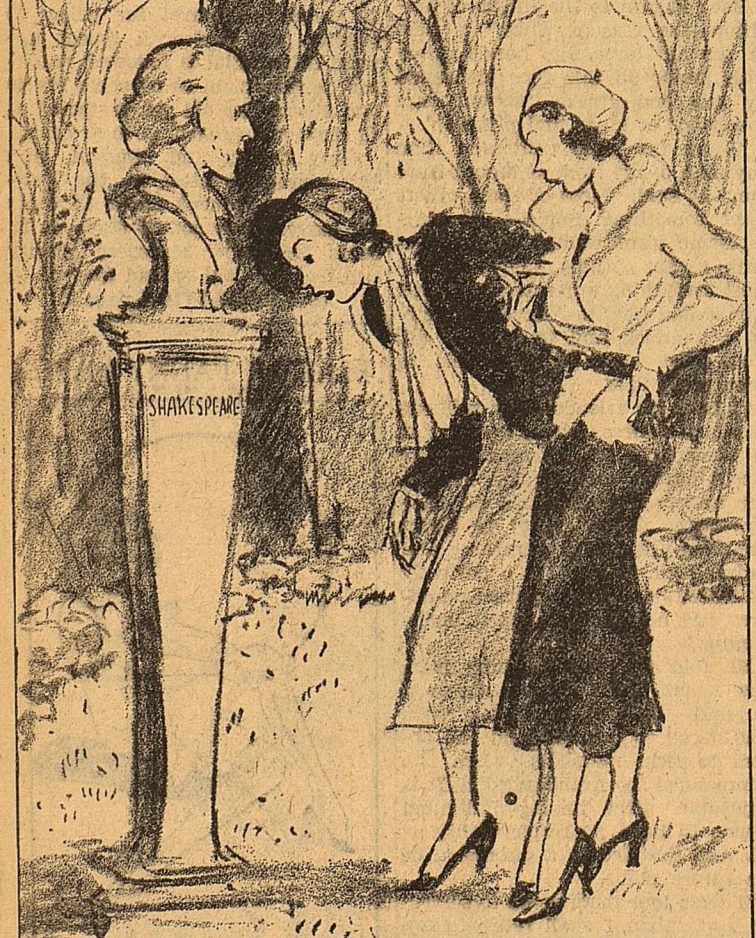

Quite casually the other day it was reported, and with not too much emphasis, that David Belasco, famed producer and Mrs. Leslie Carter, his renowned first "star," had become friends again after a feud which separated them for more than 25 years.

It was a bitter feud, as every drama lover of the time will recall. Mrs. Carter, at the height of her dramatic fame after successes in "The Heart of Maryland," "Zaza" and "Dubarry," violated a Belasco precept by her secret marriage. The producer vowed never to speak to her again.

Now, a quarter of a century later, Mrs. Carter confides from her Hollywood home that she is preparing once again to appear under Belasco's management. "We are good friends now," she declares.

However you regard this historic episode, you must admit it presents its moral. It is that no breach is so bitter but what Time, that sweeter healer, can mend it again. The world would be a sweeter place to live in if differences which keep people and nations at odds could be settled with the same spirit that Belasco and Mrs. Carter have ended their breach.

First Celebration of San Jacinto Day Recounted

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Today, anniversary of San Jacinto day, well known in history for the signal victory of the Texas state against Imperial Mexico, recalls the first anniversary of the date that was celebrated. Will Midkiff, who was on the battlefield at the first observation of the date, writes of that celebration.)

BY WILL M. MIDKIFF

In the early springtime of 1894 I took up my residence in a farmhouse, just north of Lynchburg and overlooking the historic battlefield of San Jacinto, which lies just across the river, south of Lynchburg. I spent many hours rambling over this field, so sacred to every Texan, studying carefully every detail of the landscape, and after reading the most vivid accounts of the battle, would lie down on the grass at the foot of the monument that marks the last resting place of San Jacinto's fallen heroes and, closing my eyes, would mentally picture the thrilling scenes that had transpired there nearly sixty years before.

and ask Clude myself. I'll report in this column when I get the desired information.

It is a delightful situation when another person knows more about yourself than you do. Some people do not know how to conduct themselves under stressing moments of that nature.

The Town Quack knows the intricate problems that have to do with such and he is not at a loss to understand the whole business.

My question now is what it is that has four legs and when you put it in a barn it can see from one end as well as it can from another?

Now let's think hard and long before we give it up.

My answer is that it is a blind horse. What is yours?

Personals

Mrs. W. N. Connell left yesterday for Abilene where she was called because of the illness of her sister, Mrs. J. Garrison, who is suffering from an attack of pneumonia.

Fred E. Brown returned to Dallas Sunday evening after spending the week end in Midland with Mrs. Brown. Mr. Brown was recently transferred to the California Oil company office in Dallas.

Kurt Ritzau of Andrews is a business visitor here today.

H. M. Ford of Big Spring is transacting business here today.

Otto Theis, cattleman of Dodge City, Kans., is here for a few days.

W. A. Hutchinson is in from his ranch southwest of the city today.

Mr. and Mrs. George Woodward, who have been located in Odessa for the past few months, visited friends in Midland this morning en route to their home in Houston.

Burkwell Stevens, Houston, is here transacting business at district court this week.

Clifford M. Johnson of Dallas is here for a few days on business.

W. A. Grieves, government employe of Washington, who has been here for the past three weeks, left Midland this morning for Roswell.

Dr. A. M. Gantt and daughter, Eula Gee, have returned from Roswell where they spent a few days on business.

Recipes From the Cooking School

Grapefruit Basket Salad
 Cut a small grapefruit in basket shape. Fill with wedge shaped pieces of grapefruit, pineapple and halved cherries. Lay a spray of glossy leaves on the plate and serve with Bar-le-Duc dressing.

Beat together six tablespoons of Wesson Oil, two tablespoons of lemon juice, a teaspoon of salt and 1-4 teaspoon of paprika. And into this mix six tablespoons of red Bar-le-Duc or currant jelly.

Cole Slaw
 Pour hot marinade (French Dressing) over shredded cabbage. While hot, stir generous sprinkling of caraway seeds. Chill, and serve in a lettuce lined bowl with Austrian dressing.

Mash two cooked egg yolks smooth and blend with two tablespoons of Wesson Oil, then add two tablespoons of cream, one and one-half tablespoons of vinegar and seasoning of salt, paprika and onion juice. Beat vigorously and pour over salad.

Some interested person has been asking why Claude Crane does such queer telephone work to get the time of day.

I believe that I had better make a personal matter of this situation.

Mexicans fired as soon as they saw the Texans, but the latter waited until they were at close range, where the deadly precision of their fire threw the Mexicans into irremediable confusion. Some of the veterans told me that only eighteen minutes elapsed from the time the first shot was fired until the Mexicans were in full retreat, closely pursued by the victorious Texans.

Vince's bridge across Sim's Bayou had been destroyed to cut off all retreat, and although a few Mexicans succeeded in crossing this stream, the retreat of the main army was stopped here.

The Mexican loss was 630 killed and 730 prisoners, of whom 208 were wounded, or "crippled," as J. M. Hill expressed it. Some authorities claim the Mexican forces numbered only 1,250. Houston's official report, corroborated by J. M. Hill and others present July 4, 1894, placed the total loss in killed and captured at 1,360, and all agreed that a number escaped. The Texan loss was 2 killed and 23 wounded, 6 of them mortally, Of the 9 men who lie buried in the field, one was killed the next day by the accidental discharge of his own rifle.

With the hope that every true Texan who reads this will keep this list, the names of the fallen heroes are herewith given: B. R. Brigham, Lemuel S. Blakey, Matthias Cooper, Thomas P. Fowle, J. G. Hale, George A. Lamb, Dr. William Motley, A. R. Stevens and Olwyn J. Trask.

Returning to the grave that marks the site of Houston's camp, dinner was served. In the afternoon we had the pleasure of listening to an eloquent address by General Richard M. Gano, under whom my father acted as scout during the Civil War. As the steam yacht of Major Converse left with the San Jacinto veterans on board, General Gano proposed three rousing cheers, which were given with free good will and were responded to by three thrill blasts from the siren of the yacht.

After the throng had dispersed I copied the inscriptions on the monument and then, thrilling with emotions aroused by the day's events, with no company but the illustrious deed, I sat at the foot of the monument and wrote the following verses:

Battle of San Jacinto
 Shone the sun in rising crimson,
 Whence the shades of night had fled,
 Soon to change from peaceful slumbers
 To the bivouac of the dead.
 Calmly, in a shelving woodland
 That overtopped the prairie's crest,
 Lay the hosts of Santa Anna—
 The "Napoleon of the West."

On the margin of the river
 Lay the little Texas band,
 Fearing not the servile minions,
 Only waiting the command.
 'Tis evening and the sun's declining,
 And the weary Mexic' host,
 Deeming safety lies in numbers,
 Dare to clumber at their post.

Now the time is ripe for action
 And in every flashing eye
 One could read the firm decision:
 "Here we conquer or we die!"
 "Forward!" then cried brave Sam
 Houston.

Forward! let you recreate foe
 Feel the weight of arms of freedom
 Nerved to strike a telling blow!

Onward swept the seven hundred
 Till they sighted the cruel foe:
 From their lips then bursts the war-cry,
 "Remember the Alamo!"
 Onward still, like angry tempest,
 Rolls that small heroic band,
 Dealing death-blows to their foe-men—
 Fighting for their native land.

Not at Salamis nor Marathon
 Ever did foemen braver wield
 Arms to defend homes and loved ones
 Than on San Jacinto's field.
 While the cannon round them vol-
 leyed,
 Furious still they charge the foe,
 With the shout for vengeance ringing:
 "Goliath and the Alamo."

Now the craven hosts are fleeing
 Amid the sinking of the sun,
 Views the work of freedom finished,
 That so bravely was begun.
 And the mighty Santa Anna
 Speeds away in full retreat,
 With his laurels drooping, covered
 With the sad gloom of defeat.

Thus in brief, we tell the story
 Of the glory of that day,
 When the clouds of doubt and sorrow
 Had forever passed away.
 And in memory still we treasure
 Sacred that heroic band,
 Who exposed their lives to purchase
 Freedom for our Texas land.

It is a delightful situation when another person knows more about yourself than you do. Some people do not know how to conduct themselves under stressing moments of that nature.

The Town Quack knows the intricate problems that have to do with such and he is not at a loss to understand the whole business.

My question now is what it is that has four legs and when you put it in a barn it can see from one end as well as it can from another?

Now let's think hard and long before we give it up.

My answer is that it is a blind horse. What is yours?

VOIGHT GOES AFTER GOLF CUPS THAT JONES SHIPS BACK IN MAY

LOST TO JONES LAST YEAR ON FINAL HOLE

BY WILLIAM BRAUCHER
NEA Service Writer
NEW YORK, April 21.—The two cups that Bobby Jones fought to bring to America last year—the British Open and British Amateur—have been taken from the trophy table at the Atlanta Athletic Club and sent back to England. But that isn't saying they are going to stay.

George Voigt will sail May 5 in the effort to bring at least one of them back. Rating George off his great battle against Jones at St. Andrews last year, the calm fellow from Winged Foot has a great chance. In last year's British Amateur, the first in which Voigt ever competed, Voigt led Jones 2 up at the 13th hole of their semi-final match, and lost to the Georgian only on the final green.

George will be on the fairways

SPORTS REPORTS

A cold wind blowing out of an igloo near one of the pines caused our sense of humor to shrink this morning, so much so that our English appreciation of jokes was more dense than usual. For instance, what did the radio announcer expect to get from us except a sigh when he remarked on seeing a sign on a garage reading: "Cars Washed $2; Austins Dunked 35 Cents?"

See a report on our desk saying Bob Scruggs and his Buick organization have taken over the play-at Westward Ho, scene of this year's tournament, a few days before the event gets under way May 18. If he gets a good start he will be a hard man to stop, for he is a young man who keeps gaining headway as he goes along. Bearing this out is his great record of 63 consecutive victories in tournaments during 1926-28.

The imperturbable George is one of the boys who grew up on the public links. Before the World War he was a caddy in Washington. In 1914 he took a job in a government office in Washington and had to forget all about golf because he couldn't afford the greens fees. Eight years later, with the opening of the municipal links at East Potomac, George came back to the game. Playing daily, he soon was bruising Old Man Par, and won the district municipal links championship for two years.

George is a great competitor and is at his best in match play. He had to fight to learn his game, and by fighting he has carried himself to his present high ranking among the big shots of the fairways.

Mac Smith already is at Carnoustie, practicing for the British Open over the course where it will be played. He soon will be joined by Joe Turnesa and Tony Manero, representing America professionally and Benito Mussolini by descent.

Before going to Carnoustie, Turnesa and Manero will stop off at Southport, May 11, and at Leeds, May 19. There are money tournaments there on those dates, and money, after all, is what buys the babies' sandals. Turnesa won at Leeds two years ago.

Maureen Orcutt, the lady home runner hitter of Englewood, and second ranking golfer in America, says she will go over and find out how the British women manage to keep the championship trophy off the boats.

Glenna Collett almost found out about that last year, only to fall in the final match with Diana Fishwick. The British women's championship never has been won by an American invader, but there's a first time. Our young women in other years have given the women over there extreme nervousness, and if Maureen gets her putter to working, the home girls may be driven frantic. Certainly Maureen will make most of them watch and listen when she lays a singing brassie against the pellet.

The British women's championship is to be played at Portmarnock, Ireland. Maureen says she thinks she will like the course—it's Irish and Maureen has a little Irish in her, too.

ground ball club of the Golf Pipeline company, or expects to do so. In other words, the franchise appears to be changing hands. Don't let Bob whisper around that his company has absorbed the Gulf Production company, though. Bob tried to get into the playground ball league from the first, but he missed entering his club at the last minute and found himself automatically out of the running. Absorption of the Gulf club will give him his chance to follow out his early season lurch; i. e., that he can beat any club in the running. Power to his gang.

Glad most of the fellows about town are easier to find than Dick Graves. Dick went to the Rio Grande a few days ago and was chased away by Mexican and American troops when he was way off fishing the stream fishless, so the report goes. Dick and party had caught more than 100 pounds of fish in practically no time. Members of the oyster, fish and game commission were expected to file a special report before the special committee. The only trouble is, the commission couldn't find Dick. This department couldn't, even though it called every phone number available. Dick cuts interviews with cub reporters just as he did classes in TCU, or like we suspect he did, being a modern student. They tell one on the campus about Carlos Ashley and Dick Gaines, two lively rakes with the mitts and with an orchestra, asking Dick Graves whether he went "with your meat ax," and of Dick answering, "Forsooth, but to cut my classes."

Football season coming on gradually. Spring training on Rocks on the training ground. No assistant coach in prospect, so we'd suppose as no announcement has been forthcoming. Midland bucking Class A teams. Looks like someone ought to grow more imaginative. We'd like to see the Bulldoggers slit some Longhorn, Mustang and Bobcat through their pointed fangs, but can't get too enthusiastic if one good coach has to do the work of two—and on a practice ground that is good enough for working out the intricacies of a figure eight, but worth little more.

We must say, however, there's little griping heard. Talked with some of the boys a little while on their night and found them on their toes for "come what come may." Burriss looking in fine fettle and trim as a rake. Tells us he will weigh 170 after another year. All we can say is, if he keeps his speed and shiftiness and increases his weight to 170 all Midland would have to do would be line up in scrimmage and let the Midland quarter address the rival quarter of Whatsis high school: "Pull in your ears, were sending three plays over your blinkin center!"

The other boys look good, too. Talked with Straughan, Johnson, Sherrod, Murphy, Pinnell and a few of the others. All look heavier and stronger. Coach Barry, the Little Napoleon on the cherub's chassis, is too busy to say much, but we caught him talking on his fingers, the other afternoon, and asked for a bit of dope. He deftly, for his size, turned on the practice field boulder where he sat and began wig-wagging at us on his fingers.

"What's it about?" we asked him sociably.

"Just a manner of speaking to those members of my squad who can't understand English," he said, never cracking a grin. "Thought you were another of 'em." Sounded a bit ironic, to us, so we ducked into the dressing room and brought out a volume of English grammar and sat on the other end of the rock and read during the afternoon while the coach cracked the whip over his chargers. "Say, ain't you afraid you'll grow into that shape?" "Charge in straight, you lummox!" "That's right, block with yer ribs, and you'll be another canary bird in Dr. Thomas' ward!" And so on. We looked for the word "bird" and, falling to find it, decided it was just another football term Rockney used in his heyday and therefore just "shibboleth" to us. Someday we'll freight up an all-day sucker to the coach and see if he'll let us in on the secret.

And here's Dr. Lackey, telling us something about Normer Shearer being a good actress. We were thinking of sports at the moment, but didn't have to stretch much of a sporting chance when we named her for a winner. She just finished making the boys breathe faster last night, in a photoplay at the local screen emporium.

GOLF as the STARS play it by ART KRENZ

ABOUT REACHING

Should one reach for the ball at address?

NOTE—HOW BOBBY JONES AVOIDS ANY TENSION, IS LOOSE AND KEEPS HIS HANDS CLOSE TO THE BODY

Reaching for the ball causes a tension in the spinal column which must be avoided in the golf swing. One is more apt to slice with this stance due to the flat swing.

No doubt you have often noticed how much straighter you can shoot with the shorter sticks, due to a round and compact swing. To achieve a nice round swing one must keep the hands close to the body which is impossible by reaching or using the flat swing. Reaching also throws one off balance causing you to fall into the shot which in turn causes you to heel the shot, hit the ground, or miss the ball entirely.

The illustration of Bobby Jones is the proper stance to take at address. Note how he avoids any tension, is loose and keeps his hands close to the body.

saved already, and one pound ($5) additional, for little luxuries. It is far too much trouble to work for more."

Before becoming "Lawrence of Arabia," he was an archeologist. He is an expert linguist, and his knowledge of Arabian dialects was responsible for much of his success in the desert during the war. But he scoffed at stories saying that he was many times "mistaken for an Arab."

"I never tried to pass for one," he said. "On the contrary, my game was to be spotted a mile away as 'Lawrence.' In those days I lived on my reputation. I succeeded by being the only smooth-shaven European in Arab dress in the entire desert."

Thus I left him the "contented" Aircraftman, assigned to whatever work his superiors determine he should do, from typing letters to repairing machines, living as a private, accepting what comes his way, and taking his amusement in long motorcycle rides on trips in his speedboat. His spare money—from an occasional bit of translation—goes for music, classical music played on a gramophone.

Beyond that he asks for nothing.

HELPED MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

Cardui Used For a Weak, Painful Condition, Writes South Carolina Lady.

"About six years ago, I took Cardui for a weak condition," writes Mrs. U. S. Ard, of 209 West Hall Street, Savannah, Ga. "I suffered a great deal with my back. I was hardly able to go. I did not feel able to do my work. I thought I was going to get down in bed."

"This worried me a great deal. My husband saw Cardui advertised, and told me that I had better take it."

"I am glad that I did, for it built me up. I took six bottles and felt just fine."

"Since that time I have given it to my daughter, and she was helped. I am glad to recommend Cardui."

"The confidence of thousands of women, in the value of Cardui, has been demonstrated by the fact that they have given it or recommended it to their daughters, after having learned from their own use of Cardui how helpful it is in the relief of many simple disorders, when due to a weak, run-down condition."

Like a Symphony . . . the best Gasoline is Blended

IT'S primer knowledge to the orchestra conductor that each group of instruments in the ensemble brings a necessary influence into the symphony's finished blend of tone. In the unaccompanied "oompah" of the bass horns the overlay of melody provided by singing violins and mellow woodwinds is lacking. All must be blended by the baton of the conductor according to the expert formula of the composer before the perfection of the symphony is achieved.

CONOCO long has realized that harmony is as necessary to gasoline as to music. So CONOCO gasoline is blended—and balanced. One type of gasoline is no more satisfactory than is an orchestra of bass horns. So CONOCO refiners take the three types containing the elements of the perfect fuel and deftly combine them until they blend in absolute harmony.

That's why CONOCO contains: Natural Gasoline, for quick starting . . . Straight-run Gasoline, for power and long mileage . . . Cracked Gasoline, for its anti-knock qualities. No single type of gasoline can contain all these qualities. They are present, though, in CONOCO Gasoline . . . blended there into a symphonic, harmonious whole, with CONOCO'S master refiners wielding the baton. For, after all, it's in knowing how. That's why some musical directors, as well as some refiners, achieve fame.

You'll find this triple-test gasoline with the balanced blend wherever you see the CONOCO Red Triangle.
