ROOSEVELT OPENS EAST COAST WAR

200,000 Hear Him in Ringing Charges Against GOP

SEAGIRT, N. J., Aug. 27. (UP)—Governor Roosevelt drove his presidential campaign into the wet republican East today with a vigorous appeal for "true temperance" and state rights, attacking at the same time the republican prohibition policies and republican nominees.

He called the republican policies shifty, evasive and timid, contrasting them with the democratic policies which he called plain, clear and honest.

No Auto Races Likely Today

Plans for auto races at Cowboy park this afternoon evidently had fallen through, B. W. Floyd, owner of the park, told The Reporter-Telegram Saturday afternoon, explaining that he had not heard of the owner of the racing cars since about a week ago.

WILL COTTON SHOW THE WAY?

One of the most hopeful signs on the economic horizon just now is the rising price of cotton, which has shown remarkable recuperative powers of late in the face of heavy selling from the south and heavy profit-taking from the speculators.

Just a few weeks ago, cotton sank to the 50-year low on the New York and New Orleans exchanges. Middling upland was selling at 5 cents per pound, or $25 a bale. That price means that the net to the cotton planter, after picking and shipping charges have been paid, is around $15 per bale.

On Aug. 24, cotton men figured that more than $170,000,000 had been added to the value of this year's cotton crop by the increase in prices. This not only means that $170,000,000 has been added to the nation's buying power, but also that banks in the cotton section are in better condition, that interest on mortgages will be paid, that the outlook for the entire cotton section has been almost immeasurably brightened.

Cotton showed the way out of the depression of 1921. Is it too much to hope for the same thing in 1932?

THE SERVICE OF YOUR NEWSPAPER

What would happen in any city if it should be suddenly deprived of its daily newspaper?

Perhaps the best answer to that question can be found in what actually did happen at Butte, Montana, recently when the town's two daily newspapers suspended publication for several days during a wage scale controversy with printers.

With the public cut off from its authentic sources of news, all sorts of wild rumors began to fill the air—gaining speed—and believers—as they traveled.

Said one rumor: A terrible murder had been committed near the city.

Said another rumor: Bonus rioters had blown up the White House.

Said a third: President Hoover had been assassinated. The city was in a turmoil. Wild stories of every sort were circulated and—human nature being what it is—found eager believers.

There is probably no clearer example of the important part that newspapers play in our daily lives. Butte's experience proves that suspension of newspapers, even for a limited time, can become a calamity of dangerous proportions.

Rumor and falsehood sink in the darkness, but truth loves the light and thrives upon it. All of which helps to explain why newspaper editors, recognizing their public duty, are insistent in their demand for freedom of the press and opposed to censorship of any kind, since censorship is merely a form of suppression of news. Not a few editors, faced with contempt citations by judges who arrogate unto themselves the power to say what the public shall read—and what it shall not—have gone to jail in defense of this principle.

"The truth hurts," says the old adage—but publication of the truth never hurt any community.

HITLER'S COMIC ASPECT

The world outside of Germany has always found something faintly comic in Adolph Hitler; and the developments of the last few days have somehow emphasized that aspect of the Nazi chieftain.

Just at present he seems to resemble a dictator who is all dressed up but who has no place to go.

He scored a great success in the last elections—but it wasn't quite enough. He mustered his "storm troops" and gave the German government a huge scare—but the scare wasn't quite big enough. Then he hurried to Berlin and demanded that President Von Hindenburg give him the powers of a dictator—but his demands weren't quite strong enough.

A man of Mussolini's calibre, given Hitler's opening, would have had his hands on the reins of Germany's government long since.

Broker and Beauty Figure In Great Bigamous Battle

Handsome "Teddy" Spector, 31-year-old stock broker who is described by an ex-wife as "a tall, good looking brute, who certainly has a fast line," had two wives this time last year—but today he hasn't any.

Petite Mrs. Pearl Haworth Spector, operator of a beauty parlor at Buffalo, N. Y., who was only 15 years old when Spector married her after a whirlwind courtship in 1919, has just won her divorce.

Olive Borden, former movie star, whom Spector married in Port Chester, N. Y., last year without going to the trouble to divorce the first Mrs. Spector (according to a grand jury indictment charging him with bigamy), has left him and is seeking annulment of her marriage.

Why did "Teddy" Spector marry two women already had a wife? Pearl Haworth Spector declared "Teddy" had told her that Olive had "threatened to jump off the roof of a 10-story building" if he didn't marry her. Olive, it seems, thought "Teddy" already had his divorce; unfortunately, "Teddy" had overlooked this little detail.

Such is the odd drama that has just been unfolded in the courts at Buffalo and Port Chester, which furnishes one of the most unusual love triangles revealed in 1932.

The recent phase of the three-cornered romance began on March 28, 1931, when "Teddy" married Olive in Port Chester, N. Y., and she would seem, is a town where he has buildings 10 stories high.

"Things rocked along smoothly, more or less, until April 1932, Olive continued to fill her personal appearance, theatrical engagements, while "Teddy" toiled in his brokerage office on Wall street in New York.

Then, last April, came a sudden announcement from Mrs. Pearl Haworth Spector, proprietor of the Rouge Box Beauty Salon on Buffalo's Main street. She said that she was the legal wife of Mr. Spector, that he had left her a dozen years ago and never obtained a divorce.

They were married in Buffalo in 1919, she said, when she was a 15-year-old office girl. Tall, dark and handsome Teddy Spector won her heart at the time—and then left her after 18 months of what might or might not, be called wedding bliss.

Mrs. Spector No. 1 had two big ideas. One was to get a divorce. The other was to tell the prosecuting attorney in Port Chester about "Teddy." Eventually she did both.

"He was a tall, good-looking brute," says Pearl—with a faint suspicion of wisefoolness. "Spector says 'Teddy' left her in 1920 with this announcement: 'I've got plenty of brains and I'm not going to waste them fussing around here.'"

Pearl waited a dozen years for her revenge. At a recent conference between Spector and their attorneys she confronted "Teddy" with this boast and asked him: "How is it that as brainy a man as you would marry a woman while he was still the husband of another?"

Whereupon, Pearl said, "Teddy replied: 'Well, I had to marry Miss Borden. She threatened to jump off a 10-story building if I didn't.'"

In New York, "Teddy" made a statement saying that he had married Miss Borden under the impression that his first wife had divorced him during his absence. He said Pearl called him on the phone and offered to pay for a divorce if she would get it.

Emphatically Pearl denied that she had told him: "If I can't have you, then nobody else can." "He's six feet tall, dark and very handsome," said the first Mrs. Spector in describing how "Teddy's" dash in appearance, his good looks, his gifts of speech had won her hand at 15. "But now I'm through with him. . . . but he certainly had a wonderful line."

Pearl not only filed suit for divorce in Buffalo, but on May 12 she journeyed over to White Plains—seat of Westchester county, in which Port Chester is situated—to testify before the grand jury in support of a bigamy charge against "Teddy."

The grand jury refused to indict. The district attorney said there was not enough evidence to prove that the same Theodore I. Spector had married both women.

Undaunted, Pearl went back to White Plains two weeks later to testify before the grand jury again. And this time, it seems, she had the evidence; the grand jury indicted Spector.

"I'm so glad," said Pearl. "That first trip made me look awful. I'll bet everybody thought I had been bought off."

To cap the climax, just a few weeks ago the attractive Pearl won her divorce in Buffalo. Attired in a fashionable green suit, she took the stand and told the judge all about it. The only other witness was her attorney, John E. Barry, who testified that "Teddy" had admitted to him that he had married Miss Borden while still a husband, claiming that he had been forced to do this by her threat of suicide.

The court took the case under advisement and a few days later handed down a decision granting Pearl's divorce.

Whereupon Miss Pearl Haworth (nee Mrs. Theodore Spector No. 1) went gleefully back to her beauty salon to resume her plucking eyebrows, giving facials and making blonds of brunets.

And what of Olive Borden, the vivacious brunet beauty of the movies of a few years ago who was so very pretty, indeed, that in 1925 she was chosen as one of Hollywood's "Baby Stars" by the Wampas organization?

On May 14 she sued "Teddy" for annulment, and, through her attorney, Frederick Boehm, announced that she intended to press her action, regardless of the outcome of the bigamy charge.

Olive has been appearing in vaudeville recently but her fame as a movie queen of a few years ago prompted one to dig back into the records for the names of some of the pictures in which she had played. This search disclosed "Wedding Kings," "Half Marriage," and "The Eternal Woman"—all of which seems to mean something or other in view of what has happened recently.

Swapping Yarns with Col. True

Col. True maintains a standing invitation to others to write to him and tell of their own extraordinary experiences. No holds barred. Address Col. True, in care of The Reporter-Telegram.

Dear Col. True: My pa used to tell me about how fertile the land was back in Arkansas. He planted some pumpkins there one year, but never got a single one. The vines grew so fast they wore the pumpkins out dragging them over the ground.

Madam: I can vouch for the truth of your father's statement. I ones lived back in Arkansas, a few years after the Civil war was over. I guess I must have farmed the same land your father did.

When I took the place, the man I rented it from told me it was the farm where they raised corn that grew so tall they had to shoot the ears off with a shotgun. With this warning in mind I confined by agricultural efforts to crops which would not be likely to cause so much trouble. The first year I planted peanuts, but when I started to harvest them I found they had grown so large and thick and pressed against each other until all I had was a two-foot layer of peanut butter under the whole field.

But the next year I planted watermelons—just one seed in the center of the field, and hired negroes working two shifts a day, to stand over the vine and cut off all the melons as they appeared excepting one. This one was permitted to get its full growth.

I entered the melon in the county fair that year, but it was so large there was no way to get it to town, so the exhibit buildings, grandstand and race track out to my farm and set them up around the melon.

BLONDIE Of the Follies

By Frances Marion CHAPTER IX Blondie's knees were shaking with excitement as she walked toward the elevator with Lurline. Never in her life had she been in a building like this. When they stepped into the elevator Blondie was filled with awe and felt inconsequential behind the tall, courteous attendant, who silently closed doors and shot them upward with terrific speed.

As they stepped out of the conveyance on the twentieth floor and walked down the spacious hall, Blondie's feet sank comfortably in heavy carpet. They passed in front of an elaborate door which Lurline opened and then stood aside for the tenebrous girl to enter.

Blondie stepped through the doorway and let out a little exclamation of surprise. She was in Lurline's bedroom and was completely bewildered by the exquisite sight that met her startled gaze. Beautiful furniture, richly colored drapes, appointments placed with a lavish hand by someone with perfect taste, made it a luxurious spectacle that was a fairy-land to Blondie.

She stood motionless in the center of the floor, drinking in all of the room's beauty. Her gaze finally centered on the low bed, covered with an elaborate silk spread of soft yellow. She approached it and gingerly tested its softness. Lurline watched her furtively with a superior smile.

"Isn't it a honey? Try it," Lurline invited cordially. "Make yourself at home. I'll be back in a minute."

As Lurline went out, Blondie sank into the softest bed she had ever known.

Lurline hurried down the spacious hallway of her apartment toward the living room. She seemed to glide in the soft, rich carpet. She swung open one of the huge glass doors that closed off the living room from the hall, crossed a low, wide balcony, and stood at the top of three short steps, gazing into the lavishly furnished room.

Lurline saw Larry Belmont and another man seated at a low backgammon table. Intent on their game, Larry had the dice, and Lurline watched him throw. A tall, boyish looking man, with a serious, good-looking face, that became pleasantly humorous when he smiled, Larry was one of Wall street's most successful young brokers. Lurline stepped down into the room, and the other man rose as Larry made his move on the board.

"Hello, boy!" Lurline said, as she kissed the top of Larry's head. "Oh, hello." This is Mortimer Pratt, Lurline.

The introduction acknowledged, both men resumed their seats. "How is your mother?" Larry asked. "Did she like the cake?" "She adored it. Sweet of you to remember. But I'm very cross. Did you hang up or were we out cut?" "Out off," said Larry, a little impatiently. "I was looking up." "You throw, Pratt."

"Pratt!" exclaimed Lurline, manifesting interest. "Oh! The girls were talking about you the other day in the dressing room. We didn't know whether it was twenty or thirty thousand. . . . barrels, isn't it, you get oil in?" "Hissed Larry softly. "Your move now, Double."

"Thirty," Pratt answered Lurline without looking up. "Oh, thirty!" and Lurline started to leave. "I'm so glad to know," she drawled as she walked out. "Nice?" questioned Larry. "Nice," Pratt replied. "Your play." Larry cast the dice and the game was on again. As Lurline went down the hall to her bedroom she undressed on the way. She entered to find Blondie stretched out on her back across the bed, her arms wide above her head, drinking in more luxury than she had ever dreamed of.

"Good-bye!" Lurline greeted, and Blondie turned over to watch her curiously. "Every day the same little game come."

Lurline was addressing quickly now, and the maid entered the room, going to the black-tiled bathroom where she turned on the water.

"Quel parfum pour le bain, mademoiselle?" the maid asked. "Now let me see. . . ." Lurline said. "Your folks like that perfume today, didn't they?" "They sure did," Blondie replied. "Le memo chose." Lurline addressed the maid, who went to the bathroom.

Blondie watched her through the door with deep interest as she sprinkled something in the bath. Curiously getting the better of her, she took a white fox glove and sniffed. "What a smell!" said Blondie, taking a whiff from the bottle.

Lurline entered the bathroom in a satin dressing gown, trimmed with white fox. Blondie stared, fascinated. She was thinking of the old gray flannel bathrobe her mother had made her five years ago, which she was still wearing.

"Vite, vite, je pressais," Lurline was putting it on for Blondie now, taking every advantage of the tenebrous girl's curiosity and her own lavish surroundings. She stepped lightly into the tub, and said: "Just a hurried tub, after the rush of the day. . . . it's such a comfort."

"Oh, sure," and Blondie backed to the door, trying to seem unconcerned.

make arrangements with me prior to that time. Winston F. Borum, preacher.

That's an easy one. The prairie chicken season is from September 1 to 4 and the Preacher Borum has done most of his hunting for quail, grouse, deer and hons. Never having had a touch of prairie chicken hunting, he is ready. I know what you are asking, it's why he doesn't use all four days. Look at your calendar. September 4 is Sunday, and the preacher has already had his vacation.

Have you heard this one? St. Peter: "How did you get up there?" Latest arrival: "Flu."

The absent-minded professor called his biology class to order shortly after the lunch hour. "Our special work this afternoon," he said, "will be cutting up and inspecting the inward workings of a frog. I have a frog here in my pocket to be used as a specimen."

He reached into his pocket and pulled out a paper sack, shook its contents on the table, and over rolled a nice looking ham sandwich. The professor looked at it, perplexed, scratched his head and muttered: "That's funny; I distinctly remember eating my lunch."

DEER HAD 120 POINTS COLUSA, Calif. (UP)—Jim "Cowote" Smith, local cattleman, has found a deer's antlers containing 120 points. Smith found the deer's carcass while looking for cattle. The points on the antlers range from one-half inch to 10 inches.

A LA SIDNEY FRANKLIN BEATRICE, Neb. (UP)—Bert Larson, farmer, was knocked down by an angry bull and was being trampled. The farmer reached up and grabbed the ring in the bull's nose and subdued the animal, thus saving his own life.

Blind dollars! Groping in the dark! Easily lost and seldom found! A sad plight!

When a Midland citizen buys merchandise out of town, he puts blind dollars into operation. He weakens the finances of this city by every cent that he sends out.

Why Buy in Midland?

The outright answer is that it is CHEAPER to buy in Midland!

Comparison will prove that statement. Take a mail order catalog with you and go from store to store—compare!

You'll find that you can buy 100 No. 2 cans for canning for $2.85 in Midland, whereas 96 similar cans from one of the world's largest mail order houses cost $3.50, plus the postage that it takes to get your letter there, and plus the cost of the money order or government tax on your check.

You'll find that you can buy iron porch chairs in Midland for 69 cents, whereas the identical chair, made by the same manufacturer, sells for 98 cents at the mail order house, plus postage, etc.

You'll find that framed pictures can be bought in Midland for 39 cents each, and that similar pictures cost $1 each from the mail order house.

You will find that a 30x6.00-18 6-ply tire costs $10.33 each in pairs in Midland, and that the same tire costs $10.34 each in pairs, freight paid, from the mail order house, but with no allowance for your old tires and you have to put the new ones on.

Hundreds of similar comparisons can be made and will be made in future advertisements being sponsored by the advertising department of The Reporter-Telegram.

TELEPHONE BOYS DRUB TEXAS ELECTRIC IN EXCITING 11 INNING GAME

Colorado, Toughest of Sand Belt Golf Association, Is Here Today

LAST HALF OF THE LEAGUE OVER SEPT. 2

By HERB ROUNTREE
Brothers, when this correspondent broadcasts over his limited wave length that the 11-inning 6-4 upset of Bell Telephone Friday night over Texas Electric was an exciting affair, he means just that—and more.

To begin with, it wasn't just the idea of the Phenomenon taking the air out of the sails of Andy Northington's outfit that created all the ruckus; it was the continual see-saw, with the Electricians scoring in their frame and the Phenomenon coming back in the last half of each inning to knot the count. Eventually it was Parrott's home run with Day on ahead of him that turned the tide and won the game. Burris and Straughan hit homers for Texas Electric. Crawford and Parrott for Bell. The winners both outdid and outfielded the losers.

In the other game of the night Hokus-Pokus beat Petroleum Drug 9-4. The last half of the league season ends the night of Sept. 2. Midland Hardware, winner of both halves, is automatically shunted out of a pennant playoff, although two all-star aggregations are being formed to oppose them in a post-league series. One of these clubs will be made up of brothers, a formidable list of whom play in the nocturne.

McCAMEY READY FOR INVADERS FROM MIDLAND

McCamey is already looking forward to having a big crowd of Midland people attend the Midland-McCamey football game at McCamey this fall. Fans of that city told Midland visitors Saturday, McCamey expects to win against Midland, the McCamey sports lovers said, but they want a lot of Midlanders to see the contest.
Dr. H. A. Steadman, McCamey dentist and chairman of the inter-city relations committee of the Business Men's League and Manager Bone of the Hollywood Shop and president of the league, say McCamey is already looking forward to Midland high school's visit. Midland fans recognize McCamey as an outstanding sports loving town in West Texas and expect a merry time in that place.

"Tonight or Never" At Grand Today

Gloria Swanson in "Tonight or Never," based on the fiery and tempestuous Belasco stage success, comes to the Grand theatre today and Monday. Produced and presented by Samuel Goldwyn, it brings that producer's opulent and lavish hand to a play fashioned by the greatest stage genius of this generation, the late David Belasco, as the last and final effort to his distinguished career.
"Tonight or Never" is a Gloria Swanson returned to the emotional tempo of her first talking picture, "The Trespasser," or the earlier silent "Sadie Thompson." It gives her a warm, fervent, rich and strong in mature, womanly feeling. Melvyn Douglas, who plays the mysterious young hero, is a new figure on the screen, although his performance in the same role in the New York production of "Tonight or Never" has made him famous in the theatrical world. He makes the perfect hero for Miss Swanson's exotic beauty and the love scenes between them are treated for those who believe romance is the essence of moving pictures.
This effect is heightened by the romantic atmosphere of Budapest, the Hungarian capital where most of the action takes place. The throbs of gypsy music, the glamour of the moonlit nights on the Danube and the canals of Venice set exactly the right mood for this story of love.
Ferdinand Gottschalk and Allison Skipworth are excellent in minor supporting roles, and the direction, by Mervyn LeRoy, who did "Little Caesar" and "Five Star Final" is fast and calculated to bring out every detail of the comedy and the emotion of the story. All of it makes a picture few people can afford to miss, and well up to Samuel Goldwyn's standard.

Barbara Stanwyck Sings for the First Time on Screen in Her Role in Sunday And Monday Offering, "Purchase Price"

Barbara Stanwyck, fascinating screen star, will sing for the first time in any picture, in her forthcoming Warner Bros. film, "The Purchase Price," directed by William Wellman, which comes to the Yucca theatre today and Monday.
Playing the role of a night club entertainer whose voice and person beauty are the toast of the city, Barbara Stanwyck finds in the part a strange parallel to the early beginnings of her own career. As a member of the chorus in a revue on the Strand Roof in New York, she sang as well as danced nightly, and later, when she played the feminine lead in "Burlesque," she sang again.
A new song, not yet published and never heard before in any form will be the star's number in "The Purchase Price," with an unusually good motivation because the words are tied in with the theme of the

Court Approves Shots Fired at Trumpet Player

By NEA Service
NEW YORK.—"Bla-a-ahhhh . . . bleated Stephen Jensen's trumpet. "Wham! Bang!" yelled Armon von Borowsky's pistol.
"Entirely justifiable . . . defendant discharged," said Magistrate William C. Dodge.
"Congratulations!" echoed scores of urban noise-sufferers.
And that's how von Borowsky became a hero. For not only did he take the law into his own hands and blaze away at a neighborhood noise nuisance; his action was actually commended in court.
Becomes a Hero
Now that the full significance of the affair has been brought home to him, through deeply grateful letters, and telephone calls, even from total strangers, the handsome young German-American is very proud and happy.
"I never dreamed when I shot at that trumpet player that I was doing a real public service," von Borowsky admitted. "But now it seems, I have established what is called a legal precedent, which maybe will permit other people to shoot horn tooters also. Or yet even bad sopranos, or loud radios. That would be fine."
Von Borowsky, besides being an executive in a textile-dyeing concern, and a pistol inspector in the Ordnance Department of the U. S. Army Reserve corps, is the commander of the Touring Kayak club, a boating organization. Stephen Jensen and his trumpet live right across the street from the club.
Confusion Confounded
"Myself, I am a patient man," declared the commodore. "For instance, there is a Scotchman living near here who plays the bagpipes all day long. And I have never done anything to him.

"But on this night we have some friends at the club and one of the ladies has a headache. The trumpet is tooting right at us from an open window. It plays always the same tunes—'Yes, We Have No Bananas,' 'Home, Sweet Home,' and 'Taps, the bugle call. For four years it has played the same tunes, with the same mistakes.
"The lady's headache is getting worse, so I take up our club's fog horn and turn it on this trumpet player. Maybe he thinks I am trying to join him in a nice duet. Anyway, he toots louder than ever.
"The lady's headache is getting still worse, so I get the pistol I use to start boat races. It shoots only harmless blanks and has a square bore, but it makes a fine noise. I lean out the window and shoot. Every time the trumpet strikes a note I shoot. It is an awful commotion. Finally I have shot seven times and the trumpet is quiet. By this time, though, the lady's headache is very bad indeed.
"Six cars of police and detectives whirled up to the scene within a few minutes. With drawn guns they surrounded the club, seized von Borowsky and vanked him into the night court for disorderly conduct. After hearing the story, Magistrate Dodge refused to accept his plea of guilty. "I think you have been doing somebody a favor," commented the judge. "You had justifiable provocation. Defendant is honorably discharged."
"So now," mused von Borowsky, "I guess I can go gunning for that bagpiper."
The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York has one of the best collections of jade in the world.
Fish, either fresh or salt water, is said to be more digestible than any other form of flesh.

Noted Architect Is Brand Contributor

Just what spark of originality may flare up in the drawing of a Midland county cattle brand is never known until the letter is opened. It is the unexpected personality in the drawing that makes the collecting of the brand drawings so interesting.
The latest addition to the Midland collection of Marion F. Peters, was received from Wyatt C. Hedrick of Forth Worth, noted architect who constructed the Petroleum building here. He is the first architect to receive a request to draw a Midland brand. Hedrick's contribution to the collection is a sheet containing eight blue print sketches of the fa-

Portrait of a woman, likely related to the 'Tonight or Never' article.

Trotter Raced Despite Injured

GOSHEN, N. Y. (UP)—The great heroes of mankind can now move over and make room for a four-legged champion—a horse.
Her name is Nedda Gray, a trotter. Nedda is very much in the limelight now as an outstanding contender for honors in the four-year-old division. You would never know it from the splendid work she is turning in for her trainer, Walter Cox, along the Grand Circuit, but Nedda just escaped a career at the glue factory.
It was on the day of the great $60,000 Hambletonian Stakes race here last year, Nedda was three to five favorite. As the little filly went to the post, both William H. Cane, her owner, and Trainer Cox noted a bad lameness. Probably a strained ligament, just manifesting itself, they thought. Nedda ran the first heat and finished fifth, trotting the mile in 2:05 1/4.
By the time for the second heat Nedda was limping badly. But she wanted to go. Off she trotted and placed second in 2:03 1-2, only a quarter of a second slower than the eventual best time of the winner, Calumet Butler.
Examination disclosed that Nedda was suffering from two fractures of the pelvic bone.
"A horse like that deserves another chance," said Cane. "Get the finest veterinarians and make her sound again. She has to win. She will win."
Nedda Guy is fulfilling her master's prediction this season.

RATED CHOICE TO WIN TITLE OF THE LOOP

The hardest club in the Sand Belt Golf association, Colorado, will be in Midland to play matches this afternoon. The first foursome will tee off at 1:30.
The Colorado lineup includes some of the highest individual scorers in the loop, Bob Scott standing in the number one post in that rating.
It is expected that Colorado will defeat Lamesa for the Sand Belt title this season and Midland's record of having beaten Sweetwater and Big Spring here recently may not extend to taking this afternoon's opponents into camp.
The personnel of the clubs, according to position, follows:
Midland
1. C. L. Jackson
2. Frank Day
3. Delo Douglas
4. Joe Chambers
5. Arch Thomas
6. Billy Moran
7. E. M. Miller
8. Red Knight
Colorado
Scott

Palmer
Richardson
Billingsley
Moesser
Martin
Costin
There was some doubt Saturday afternoon about the fifth position on the Midland lineup, Thomas expecting to be called out of town. In such case, Fred Chapman would play his position, country club golfer said.

London Gangs Divide City

LONDON (UP)—London's criminal gangs are understood to have decided that competition is ruining their business. They are going to combine on a split-the-profit basis.
Scotland Yard is said to have information that a prominent Soho gang leader already has mapped out sections of the West End shopping is by far the most elaborate page contributed to this collection.
The suggestion of sending a Midland brand to the architect came from Miss Celeste Hankins, an acquaintance of Hedrick when a resident of Forth Worth.

A SIX IS MORE ECONOMICAL

Thousands of tests have proved . . . engineers have established . . . owner experience has confirmed THIS FACT: For lowest, all-round motoring costs: SIX CYLINDERS. No more—No less!

With more, you sacrifice the economy for which Chevrolet is so famous. With less, you sacrifice the kind of maintenance cost that Chevrolet gives you—the lowest available in today's low-price market!

SAVE WITH SIX CYLINDERS

Why not strike a happy balance between "too many" and "too few"? Do as the majority of low-priced car buyers have done ever since January, 1931: SAVE—with SIX CYLINDERS. The Chevrolet six-cylinder engine gives you wonderful mileage on gasoline—and oil! Because its smoothness is built-in—the body, chassis and engine are spared the repair costs that result from constant, inherent vibration!

STILL GOOD AFTER 15,000 MILES
And the Chevrolet Six stays young for —10,000, 15,000, 20,000 miles and more—carries on—smoothly, dependably, economically.
Moreover it has every modern feature you're entitled to: Free Wheeling, no car is up-to-date without it. And genuine Syncro-Mesh as originated by General Motors. And big, luxurious Fisher bodies. And four parallel mounted springs.
Remember that you can switch to a 1932 Chevrolet for very little money. In fact, you'll probably find it more economical to buy a new Chevrolet Six than to worry along with the old car.

LONDON (UP)—London's criminal gangs are understood to have decided that competition is ruining their business. They are going to combine on a split-the-profit basis.

The suggestion of sending a Midland brand to the architect came from Miss Celeste Hankins, an acquaintance of Hedrick when a resident of Forth Worth.

You can't get away from the fact that

A SIX IS MORE ECONOMICAL

Thousands of tests have proved . . . engineers have established . . . owner experience has confirmed THIS FACT: For lowest, all-round motoring costs: SIX CYLINDERS. No more—No less!

With more, you sacrifice the economy for which Chevrolet is so famous. With less, you sacrifice the kind of maintenance cost that Chevrolet gives you—the lowest available in today's low-price market!

SAVE WITH SIX CYLINDERS

Why not strike a happy balance between "too many" and "too few"? Do as the majority of low-priced car buyers have done ever since January, 1931: SAVE—with SIX CYLINDERS. The Chevrolet six-cylinder engine gives you wonderful mileage on gasoline—and oil! Because its smoothness is built-in—the body, chassis and engine are spared the repair costs that result from constant, inherent vibration!

STILL GOOD AFTER 15,000 MILES
And the Chevrolet Six stays young for —10,000, 15,000, 20,000 miles and more—carries on—smoothly, dependably, economically.
Moreover it has every modern feature you're entitled to: Free Wheeling, no car is up-to-date without it. And genuine Syncro-Mesh as originated by General Motors. And big, luxurious Fisher bodies. And four parallel mounted springs.
Remember that you can switch to a 1932 Chevrolet for very little money. In fact, you'll probably find it more economical to buy a new Chevrolet Six than to worry along with the old car.

Texas Primates Surgery Users

AUSTIN—Well preserved Indian skeletons, adjudged to be more than two hundred years old, located near Beaumont, will soon be a valuable addition to the already large anthropological museum at the University of Texas. A total of 44 skeletons were recovered by a group of University student anthropologists, along with a wealth of other valuable relics, including flint drills, beads, and pendants. These skeletons, found near Caplan, in the Beaumont region, have been identified as those of the Karawanka cannibal tribe of Indians, one of the most feared bands of marauders which inhabited the beaches of the Gulf of Mexico from Brownsville, extending east to sections of the Louisiana coast.

The bodies were found buried in clam shells, many of them being buried in an upright position. It is thought that the shell covering was used as a protective. There is a possibility that six other skeletons will be unearthed by the excavating party.

The tight shell has kept many of the bodies well preserved. The bodies were laid in opposite directions with the head on one laid to the feet of another and were generally placed with the heads in an upright position. The skulls are of various sizes with pronounced lowness at the back of the head. Eighteen small flint drills have been found buried with the skeletons. Each is about one-eighth of an inch in diameter and from half an inch to an inch and a half in length. These drills were probably used in making beads. Found lying by the side of a baby skeleton was a rattle made of tortoise shells and showing signs of once having a handle. A carved bone pendant with a hole through the top was also found buried by the side of a body. Large lumps of red ochre, which was used as a body paint, have also been found.

A diseased skull showing signs of a trepanning operation shows the tribe had some ideas of surgery. The exterior bone indicates disease, probably sinus trouble. A hole was made to relieve the Indian, and the anthropologists believe that the man lived after his skull was punctured.

ELECTION COUNT FOR COUNTY PREPARED FAST

Establishing a record for fast county here, the Midland county election board turned in a complete count 20 minutes after the polls closed at 7 o'clock. Outlying precincts sent in their counts with a few minutes delay after that of Precinct 1 and Precinct 2 not long afterward.

The dispatch which characterized the election county was attributed to the use of clerks who had familiarized themselves with ballot counting in the elimination primary.

Earl J. Moran was presiding judge of the election.

MARTIN COUNTY GIVES HAAG GOOD MAJORITY

B. Frank Haag, candidate for state representative from the 88th district was given a majority in Martin county, according to Editor James E. Kelly of the Stanton Reporter, who said he did not have the exact figures cast for Haag, but that the Midland man had a good edge in the total of 1094 ballots.

Haag counted on Martin county, one of the three in the 88th district that had not reported earlier in the night, putting the finishing touches on his conceded win over J. B. Cotten of Crane.

BIG CROWD GETS THE RESULTS IN MIDLAND

Election results picked up from radio reports and caulked upon the board at The Reporter-Telegram were seen by a large crowd that stood on the pavement before the office and parked on the vacant lots to the south.

Members of the Ferguson support predominated, mostly farmers, and lusty shouts for "Ma" split the late Saturday and early Sunday air.

The last reports given out by the newspaper were received at 3:10 this morning, the information being almost two hours later than any other morning newspaper circulated in this area.

HOT PRE-ELECTION WAR FOUGHT BY CANDIDATES

So great was the number of ballots in the first primary that Sterling adherents charged many persons ineligible to participate had voted. Votes marked in a number of counties exceeded the number of poll tax receipts, this having been true especially of the East Texas oil field sector, where Sterling had been censured for placing that area under martial law to better enforce production of oil.

The governor posted a reward to be paid for evidence leading to conviction of primary officials or voters knowing violations of election laws during today's voting.

Ferguson claimed the illegal voting charge was a "sour grapes" allegation manufactured by the Sterling forces to intimidate voters.

Mrs. Ferguson was a candidate two years ago against Sterling and went into the run-off primary with him. She received many less votes in the first primary in 1930 than she did last month.

Mrs. Ferguson had been defeated for re-election in 1926 by Dan Moody, attorney general in her administration.

Three congressmen-at-large also were nominated. Joseph Weldon Bailey of Dallas, son of an ex-United States senator from Texas, and J. H. (Cyclone) Davis, of Sulphur Springs, 77-year-old former congressman, were opponents for one seat. George B. Terrell, former state commissioner of agriculture, and Pink Parrish of Lubbock, state senator, were candidates for another place, and the third at-large position was sought by Sterling P. Strong of Dallas and Joe Burkett of San Antonio.

Several organizations favoring modification or repeal of the eighteenth amendment had recommended Bailey, Terrell and Burkett.

C. V. Terrell, incumbent, and Lee Satterwhite, former speaker of the Texas house of representatives, were candidates for a six-year term on the railroad commission and Ernest O. Thompson, former mayor of Amarillo, and W. Gregory Hatcher of Dallas, former state treasurer were asking nomination to a four-year membership on the commission. Thompson is filling the place by appointment.

William Pierson, associate justice of the Texas supreme court, was opposed for renomination by J. E. Hickman of Eastland, chief justice of the court of civil appeals.

Nominations for all other state offices had been made in the first primary.

Democratic nomination in Texas is equal to election. The republican party had nominated a full slate of candidates to oppose the democrats in the November general election.

Mrs. Vickers to Open Her Studio

New materials and newest methods as gained by a visit to the Ned Wayburn, nationally known aesthetics dance studio in New York City, as well as ideas gathered through a correspondence post graduate course supplemented by study in the New York studio last year and again this year, will be employed by Mrs. Cecelia R. Vickers when she opens her Midland studio of expression, dramatic art and the classical dances in the Petroleum building, September 5.

At Boston, Mrs. Vickers made the round of the publishing houses, shopping for public speaking, expression, play and show work.

She worked with several teachers in New York, in perfecting a new dance step.

DEMANDS ENFORCEMENT

ODESSA.—The public health committee of the Odessa chamber of commerce, which for the past few months has been conducting a public health campaign, demanded that the city council of Odessa enforce health ordinances.

The letter written to the council called attention to the fact that the burning of trash with the fire lights had been permitted, and that the council was not enforcing the health ordinance. Mayor V. C. Wiggins called a special session of the council to discuss the matter. Repeated demands have been made upon the city officers and no steps had been taken to correct the situation, it was alleged.

again."

Addison Wadley, head of Addison Wadley Co., department store, told Thursday in a letter from Chicago, of improved conditions as reflected in the markets, Saturday, after his return here, he enlarged upon his statements, as follows:

"There is a feeling of optimism through the eastern markets and everyone seems to feel that the 'corner' has been turned' at last.

"The wholesale houses in Dallas, St. Louis and Chicago, have had the biggest market season in several years.

"It looked like 1927 and 1928, to see the aisles jammed with truck loads of merchandise headed for the shipping rooms.

"There is no question that prices have hit bottom and are on the upward swing, and already staple merchandise is showing sharp advances in price.

"One of the biggest merchandisers in the wholesale dry goods field gave instructions to the buyers of staple goods, underwear, etc., to buy every dollar's worth of merchandise available within the next thirty days and stated that not only would merchandise of this character be higher in price but that there would develop a very serious shortage within ninety days.

"Those in a position to now, as well as anyone could, are predicting a good price for cotton and ten cents the pound is talked of, although some of the more conservative hardly expect that much.

"One of the best signs is the depleted wholesale stocks. Many items cannot be delivered for thirty days, mills are behind with orders and this surely means that workers will be put back to work, which means added buying of commodities that in turn will put others back to work."

"As sure as the sunshine follows the rain, good times will follow depression. And, since it has been said and proved that this section can stage a quicker recovery than any other in the United States, it is my opinion that the last quarter of this year will be 'happy days' here

Old Rail Employee Tells How He Was Rain Chief of '93

FORT WORTH (UP).—The man "who made it rain" during the famous Cherokee Strip land run in Oklahoma has retired after 59 years as a railroad employee.

Ill health forced the 70-year-old D. W. Goodman to retire as a conductor of the Rock Island railroad, but his retirement gave him reason and time to tell about "making rain."

Goodman was conductor on the train that ran from Caldwell, Kan., to Hennessy, Okla., Sept. 16, 1893, when the Cherokee Strip was opened to settlers. When he returned to Caldwell from the trip the train dispatcher took him back to Oklahoma territory "to make it rain."

"It hadn't rained in the region for 17 weeks," Goodman said. "A terrible drought was on. My train dispatcher, C. B. Jewell, named me as assistant rainmaker and took me and a rain car back to the strip.

"The car was an ordinary caboose carrying 50 large earthen vessels filled with chemicals. These chemicals were treated with an electric current and their vapors were supposed to cause rain.

"We caused a lot of excitement when we switched out the car at North End. Settlers pored in from their cabins and tents to watch the miracle performed.

"The electric current was applied to the chemicals at 8 a. m. We sat all day waiting. The settlers had about decided we were a bunch of fakirs. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon storm clouds arose and a heavy downpour started. The rain lasted four and one-half hours. Streams were swollen and squatters were forced to move their tents to higher ground.

"The next day settlers rode in from miles around. Some brought their families, and a gala celebration was held around the rain car. I don't know whether the rain car had any effect on the rain or not, but there was no doubt among the settlers."

Goodman began his railroad career as a waterboy for a construction gang which was building a line from Sedalia to Hannibal, Mo., when 11 years old. One of the triumphal hours of his life, he said,

TO SEE ECLIPSE

FORT WORTH (UP).—When the day turns black in mid-afternoon in Quebec, Aug. 31, a group of Texans will be on hand to witness the total eclipse of the sun.

Oscar Monig, Fort Worth enthusiast, will lead a group to Magog, Quebec, which is in the 50-mile-wide path of the total eclipse. James Logan of Dallas will join the group in New York City, and Sterling Bunch, formerly of Fort Worth, will go with them from Knoxville, Tenn.

The eclipse probably will not be noticeable in Texas unless dark instruments, such as smoked glass or photographic films are held over the eyes, Monig said.

The eclipse will start at 12:44 and end at 5:22 Eastern Standard Time. The path of total eclipse will pass through New England, Canada, and into the Arctic circle. A partial eclipse will be visible from all points in Texas.

FOR BOOZE CONTROL

HOUSTON. (UP).—The Texas Federation of 12 Prohibition clubs, according to Chairman John Henry Kirby, is selecting a committee to devise a state liquor control plan which will "actually promote temperance."

In addition, the plan sought by the federation will "not only prevent the return of the old-time saloon, but will bring the liquor traffic in Texas out into the open, where it can be regulated, controlled and taxed," Kirby said.

The committee will be composed of six or more members of the Texas legislature and 12 outstanding citizens including two women and two representatives of organized labor.

"It is hoped by this method to secure the services of an unbiased and patriotic committee which will evolve a model state liquor control plan to take the place of all present state prohibitory laws that have proved ineffective and unworkable," said Kirby.

Kirby hopes to announce the personnel of the committee within the next two weeks.

The heaviest rainfall in Los Angeles was in 1884, when more than 38 inches of rain fell.

When he was 18, Goodman became a brakeman and a "real" railroad.

NEW FOR FALL

Knits...

Knitwear for fall is decidedly different in styling, as well as in pattern and weave of materials used. One, two and three-piece frocks are much in vogue. The skirts of these models are more or less plain, with interest centered above the waist line in chic little low collars and varied sleeve effects. They are all here and open for your inspection. We'll be glad to show you.

FEATURED—We have just received 12 new knit dresses in a beautiful assortment of styling and weaves.—These dresses would sell regularly for $7.50. We picked them up at a very special price which permits this very low price.

P. S.—These will make wonderful little school frocks. There are only 12 of these, which necessitates an early selection.

FALL ARRIVALS

Not in twenty-five years of merchandising, have prices been so reasonable and never has merchandise been more varied or more beautiful.

That there is an upward turn is unquestioned, and wanted merchandise will be at a premium within 90 days.

The prudent customer will make selections early and especially in such things as household linens, towels, etc., will supply their needs at present low prices for it is doubtful that any one of us will ever see them as cheap again.

This store has made preparations for a larger business this fall. We believe it will come and have made plans and purchases to take care of the customers' needs.

NOTE.—We want to call your attention to one other exceptional value in early fall dresses—there are about 15 of these dresses in genuine Ribbo crepes and prints, as well as a few solids. They are unusual at

FOOTWEAR

—With more attention focused on the feet than ever, shoes of plainer lines are predominating. Suedes are leading with the new Cordo fabrics and Kids running a close second.—Patents also come in for their share of popularity. Browns and blacks hold even advantages for colors. They are all here and we will be pleased to show them.
