BRIDGEPORT BANK LOSES $2,000 LOOT

Assistant Cashier Is Kidnapped and Freed Later

BRIDGEPORT, Aug. 29. (UP)—Three men robbed the Bridgeport State bank today of approximately $2,000. They kidnaped Assistant Cashier Roger Ray and escaped in a car driven by an accomplice waiting at the bank door. Ray was released a mile from town.

INSURANCE ROW LOOMS AT NEXT CALL SESSION

AUSTIN (UP)—A furious battle between "home" life insurance companies and outside companies including those that quit Texas under the Robertson insurance law was passed in 1907 is one of the probabilities of the special session of the Texas legislature.

The major feature of that law is a requirement that life insurance companies operating in the state keep 75 per cent of their legal reserve invested in Texas securities and Texas real estate.

Governor Ross S. Sterling's call for the special session to open Aug. 30, submits to the legislature amendments to the laws governing the investments of life insurance companies. In the submission, it is declared to be for the purpose of allowing them to invest in stock of the Federal Home Loan bank. But, it has been held, when a subject is submitted, the legislature is free to legislate as its pleases under that topic and is limited to the type of law suggested in the Governor's call.

Efforts to modify the Robertson law have been unsuccessfully since 1909. In that year, minor amendments to the new act were made. A state association for the purpose has been organized. H. L. Kokernot of San Antonio is chairman and C. S. Fowler, brother of a former member of the state highway commission, its executive secretary. Home insurance companies, under leadership of Harry Seay of Dallas, have been active in defense of the law.

Those urging its repeal assert it is done away with, big foreign insurance companies will secure Texas permits and they will make loans on Texas properties. It will be an "encouragement" to capital to come into Texas say the advocates of the Robertson law. They indignantly contradict a report that the state highway commission, its executive secretary, Harry Seay that efforts to obtain repeal were "part of a scheme to defraud the state of $10,000,000 in back taxes due the state by foreign insurance companies."

Former Midland Girl Is Injured

A former Midland girl, Miss Evelyn Garlington, sustained a broken arm Sunday afternoon in a fall from a horse while visiting on a Midland county ranch with friends. She has been visiting with Miss Imogene Cox and other friends here. She was released from a Midland hospital today.

JUST FOOLED 'EM

TORONTO—The family of James Middleton, 19, was terrified when he calmly walked downstairs and said: "I've emptied a bottle of iodine." Someone else rushed into a chair and stood around him. Sirens screamed as an ambulance rushed to the house. As soon as James could calm the family, he explained that he had emptied the iodine over his hands and arms, and that he didn't drink any.

BODIES OF MEN FOUND IN MINE; ANOTHER SOUGHT

LIVERMORE, Calif., Aug. 29. (UP)—Bodies of four of five men buried beneath an avalanche of dirt and rocks when a section of the Valee-Mocho tunnel of Hetch-Hetchy project collapsed, were found by rescue workers today. No hope was held for the fifth man.

Few Changes in Football Rules

With the football season opening next month, now is a good time to look over the principal changes in the playing rules. Briefly, the changes follow: One. The ball becomes dead when any portion of the player's feet, touches the ground, except a player holding the ball for a place-kick. Two. A player withdrawn from the game may return at any time, except the quarter in which he is withdrawn. Substitutions may be made only when time is out for some other purpose except for the replacement of an injured player. Three. Five players of the team receiving a kickoff are required to remain within five yards of their restraining line (40-yard line) until the kick is actually made. Four. Players on the defense are allowed to use the palms of their hands only above the shoulders to push their hands on the ball or the player carrying it. Striking with hands on head, neck or face of an opponent is prohibited. Five. Knee and elbow pads and other protective equipment must be made of, or covered by, a soft outside surface. Six. The flying tackle and flying block are prohibited. The most important of these changes is the first one, which provides that the ball is dead when any portion of a player's body, except his hands, or feet, touches the ground. Northwestern and Notre Dame tried out the new rules in spring games, and found that players instinctively carry the ball until they are halted by opponents. In each game a player stumbled, got up and ran for a touchdown, only to have the play called back. Football coaches always have taught players to fight for that extra inch or extra yard, and it is going to be hard for a player to stop running if he should stumble or merely be knocked off his feet by a tackler. Many important games are likely to be won and lost by the enforcing of this rule. To offset this handicap to the offense, the new rule preventing a defensive player from using anything but the palm of his hand above the shoulders of an opponent promises to help the ball carrier get out into open.

"Ma" Ferguson Is Brand Contributor

Bar-Two Mule Shoe brand of Uncle Will Cochran, drawn by Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, added another page to the collection of cattle brand drawings belonging to Marjorie F. Peters. Mrs. Ferguson's letter accompanying the drawing read: "I thank you for your letter of the 13th and just now have the chance to read some of my mail. Enclosed please find Uncle Will Cochran's cattle brand with my name signed thereunder. "Uncle Will Cochran is a fine man and a mighty loyal supporter to our cause. Everything points toward my victory tomorrow and I want all our friends to remind everyone to vote, rain or shine, as this is no time for anyone to fall by the wayside because of over-confidence."

AMARILLO, Aug. 29. (UP)—Four persons, including two small children, drowned last night as a result of a six-inch rain at Bovina, southwest of here. The dead: MRS. C. B. WADDELL of Friona; VIRGINIA, 6, and VIVIAN, 4, RICHARD CALDWELL, 21. The car of the Waddells was caught in a wall of water rushing down an arroyo. Caldwell lost his life searching for the victims.

Bulletin

W. L. Jones picked the first bale of 1932 cotton in Midland.

The cotton was ginned at the Farmers Co-operative gin Monday afternoon. The cotton was grown by Jones on the R. D. (Uncle Bob) Mealy farm.

The bale had not been weighed at press time, as ginning was not started until 2:20 p. m. The bale was scheduled to be auctioned off by Col. W. E. (Cap) Wallace.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. (UP)—Cotton sold at ten cents today for the first time since July 23, 1931. A wild bull stampede sent the market up to net gains of 26 to 35 points.

MEN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS INDEPENDENT

The Men's class of Hotel Scharbauer became a 100 per cent independent organization Sunday to be sponsored by all the churches of the city and to cooperate with all of them.

The Men's class was completely separated from the Baptist church to which it had been reporting its attendance. No more Baptist envelopes will be placed on the table, and the entire plate collection, as always has been the case, will go to the class exclusively.

Though the class has been non-denominational or inter-denominational since it was started, random Baptist classes and that church was left without a men's class, attendance has been counted for the Baptist Sunday school, but beginning next Sunday attendance at the Men's class will not be counted with any Sunday school, but will be an independent count.

The reason for making the men's class absolutely independent, or rather making it cooperative with all churches on an equal basis, is that the Baptist church has organized its own class which starts meeting at the church next Sunday, while the men's class continues at the Hotel Scharbauer as usual.

Officers of the Men's class pointed out that the Baptist church, as did other churches, has organized a men's class, and the separation from the Baptist church was cooperated in by the Men's class and the two groups are friendly, as will the Men's class be to all other groups, since it now depends on all churches to "mother" it.

The Men's class is now composed of Methodists, Christians, Baptists, Catholics, Episcopalians, Lutherans, Jews, Church of Christ members, Presbyterians, unbelievers, free thinkers and others who belong to other churches or no church. Officers of the Men's class have arrived in the Scharbauer class, as many Baptists going to their own new class will leave a big hole in attendance. They say if the men of Midland are to have a men's class, they will support and start attending. Every man and boy not attending elsewhere will be welcomed at 9:45 on Sunday mornings.

Despite Colorado's winning Sunday over Midland in the Sand Belt Golf association, Big Spring went into the lead two points.

Two Games on Nocturne Card

Hokus-Pokus and The Reporter-Telegram play the first game of the Nocturne schedule this evening, Midland Hardware and United Dry Goods playing at 8. The second game is the last scheduled evening of play this season. A picked all-star club will then engage in a series with Midland Hardware, in order to determine if any combination of players of all the other clubs can beat the league leaders. An all-star club will then be formed to play the "Brothers' club" 16 of the siblings being in the loop. A challenge from the Bell Telephone company and directed against the Texas Electric Service company for a series is understood to have been unanswered by Manager Andy Northington of Tesco. Harry Bunnell, manager of the Phones, is persistent in efforts to get the series matched.

ROAD BOND TAX SUBJECT NEXT LEGISLATURE

By GORDON K. SHEARER, United Press Staff Correspondent. AUSTIN, (UP)—Relief for taxpayers from the local taxes levied to pay off county and district bond issues—main topic of the special session of the Texas legislature—will take much figuring.

Until it is determined what type of bill is to be passed, there is no way to make estimates. The Brooks bill passed at the second called session of the legislature was vetoed by Governor Ross Sterling. The state should take over the burden of bonds issued up to Jan. 1, 1931 if the proceeds were used on roads now a part of the state highway system.

A fourth of the state gasoline tax has been ordered set aside in a suspense fund for the purpose. The comptroller, state treasurer and state highway engineer were designated to ascertain the amount of such bonds each county had outstanding prior to passage of the act. They were given until Jan. 1, 1932, to complete computations.

The county commissioners' courts, the county auditors and various other county officers possessing records and accounts of road building were required by the Brooks bill to assist the comptroller and engineer in the work.

When these amounts had been determined, the bill directed that there be allocated to each county a portion of the suspense fund. This apportionment was made a trust fund which the county officers were obliged to use for retirement of bonds and for no other purpose. Each county was declared to be entitled to a part of the fund proportionately. This was stated to be the proportion of bonds used in the state, and very only enough tax to meet the difference.

Time required to accumulate a retirement fund from the gasoline tax was given as one of the governor's reason for veto of the Brooks bill. It has been suggested at this session that difficulty may be met by a provision allowing the transfer of existing highway funds for the purpose to be refunded as the retirement fund accumulates. Brooks has announced he will offer his bill again at the special session. What the administration bill will be and how it will differ from the Brooks bill has not been announced.

Several Teachers Back in Midland

Teachers are steadily drifting back into the city as the time for the opening of school next Monday nears.

This morning found Head Coach L. K. Barry and Mrs. Barry, the Russell E. Shraders, Mrs. E. R. Thomas, Bryan C. Henderson and Charles A. Lingo here. Barry said if supplies reached here practice will be started Tuesday afternoon. He says his grid charged weigh about as much as last year's club and that the club will have more power than had been expected. He cites as a reason for believing progress in training will be faster than last year the fact that the training staff has worked with the club and its methods are well known.

FERGUSONS REFUSE TO MAKE STATEMENT

AUSTIN, Aug. 29. (UP)—Ross Sterling today expressed confidence that his 3,434 lead over Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson in the gubernatorial race would not be overcome. He appeared the picture of health.

"I am in better shape than ten years ago," he said. "The campaign agreed with me. I had a good cause and a clear conscience." He began preparing a message to the legislature which meets tomorrow.

AUSTIN, Aug. 29. (UP)—Jim Ferguson was silent on the possible outcome of the gubernatorial race today.

"I have nothing to say," he asserted when asked about the status of the race and the possibility of an election investigation.

GREAT SUM OF MONEY TO BE ASKED IN CASE

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. (UP)—The Irving Trust company, trustee for Ivar Kreuger's International Match Corporation, today was authorized to institute suit for more than a hundred and thirty-five millions against eight American directors of the match company.

Suit is for a hundred millions allegedly lost through negligence. The thirty-five millions was allegedly lost through illegal payments of dividends from the capital.

Directors named were Frederick W. Allen, Donald Durant, Henry C. Havemeyer, Fred L. Giggison, Adrian H. Larkins, John McHugh, Samuel P. Pryor, Perce A. Rockefeller.

Khaki Shirts to Organize in Tex.

DALLAS (UP)—Organization of a Texas branch of the Khaki Shirts of America is awaiting receipt of information from R. B. Ellison, national organizer in Washington, J. W. Wilford, state organizer here, said.

Wilford bears credentials from Walter E. Waters, commander-in-chief of the Bonus Expeditionary Forces, and Ellison. The information was obtained from Ellison who definitely outline aims and purposes of the proposed group.

The Khaki Shirts organization has been incorporated in Washington and approved by heads of service men gathered there, Wilford said. According to his understanding, every citizen over 18 is eligible for membership regardless of sex, religion, service connection, or social position. Dues will be $2 per year, half of which will be sent to national headquarters, 50 cents to state headquarters, and the rest retained by the local chapter. Bonus Expeditionary Force members are entitled to lifetime memberships.

An organization insignia is now being designed in New York. Wilford asserted the insignia, although its shape and size is still indeterminate, will doubtless be some variation of the letters K. S. Several large shirt manufacturers have been approached and asked for bids on a number of shirts which will be of ordinary material. They will be worn only on occasions of ceremony, the state organizer said.

A short pledge outlined for temporary use by the Khaki Shirts follows: "I do hereby pledge myself to support the constitution of the United States, and to support the work and principles of the Khaki Shirts of America, which is the only organization of its kind having the endorsement of Walter E. Waters, commander-in-chief of the Bonus Expeditionary Force."

The organization's sole initial aim was the support of insignia, for benefit of unemployed and ex-service men. Wilford said leaders had no thought of organizing a third party, and no promises have been made to throw strength to either of the two major political parties. An independent attitude will be maintained, Wilford asserted.

The Khaki Shirts have acquired a 40-acre farm near Arlington, and this will be the center of all state activities. Use of a printing press on the property is expected to aid materially in organization work. Wilford said he thought 250,000 will be recruited in Texas during the first year. Its potential membership is the entire population of Texas over 18 years of age.

Wilford was in charge of the Bonus Army sixth regiment in Washington. He was quoted in the Washington News as charging the Bonus Army riots were started and aggravated by Government agents who wanted an excuse to evict the veterans. He said none in his command took part in the riots.

UNDERGOES OPERATION

Mrs. H. C. Barrow of Odessa underwent an appendix operation at a Midland hospital early today. She came to Midland last week for medical treatment. She is resting well.

SON IS BORN

A son weighing 8 1/2 pounds was born to Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Wilson Sunday afternoon at 7 o'clock at a Midland hospital. Both mother and child are resting well. Wilson was elected county attorney in the Saturday primary.

Identity of Cow Poke Established

The identity of Midland's Bob White, who was reported in the general news to be a big game purveyor as trekking to Buffalo, N. Y., headquarters of Franklin D. Roosevelt via burro and bus and getting a memorandum, cup-of-the-New York governor and democratic presidential nominee for his trouble, has been given by Virgil C. Ray.

White worked on the Queen Sabre ranch here several years ago, when the ranch extended from Midland to Shaffield on the Peecos, according to Ray. He was known as "Raw Tomatoes" White, from his pronounced liking for uncooked tomatoes.

FISHERMAN'S SURPRISE

HOUSTON, (UP)—Imagine Oscar Dodgen's surprise when he, fishing placidly for speckled trout, suddenly hooked a huge tarpon.

Dodgen was casting with a light fly rod in an arm of Galveston bay when there was a sudden eruption near his skirt. A tarpon leaped five feet into the air. Dodgen's hook caught in its gills.

Dodgen reeled in furiously. The tarpon leaped again, then headed in the general direction of Cuba. So far as Dodgen knows, the fish is still going—and so are Dodgen's rod and reel.

THE LANCASTER VERDICT

Perhaps the professor of psychology can explain why a Miami court room full of women cheered and wept for joy when Captain W. N. Lancaster was acquitted of the murder of Haden Clarke, a rival for the affection of his beloved "Chubbie," Mrs. Jessie Keith-Miller.

Did they view Captain Lancaster as an avenging hero, who—so the state charged—took into his own hands the law of "one man for one woman"?

Did they see in this love triangle a romance in which they could picture themselves as the heroine?

Could their act be called the expression of motherly protective instinct aroused by the fact that the British captain was a stranger within our gates whose sense of justice had been outraged?

Were they merely voicing sympathy for "Chubbie," regarding her as, in the words of a movie subtitle writer, "one of Fate's poor playthings"?

Women have not always been so protective and sympathetic. During the French Revolution, women sat with their knitting to view the spectacle of men's decapitation. Their needles clacked calmly in the manufacture of shawls as they waited for the blade burred with men's blood to claim another writhing victim.

Were women different then?

The questions are for you—and the professor of psychology—to consider. And each question may have many answers.

A SOLUTION FOR CHINA'S ILLS

China's ills have long disturbed the world, and after nearly 20 years of almost constant revolution and battling, seem just about as far from a permanent solution as they were when Sun Yat Sen first began experimenting with democracy in the Far East.

But there is at least a ray of hope in the suggestion recently made by T. V. Soong, minister of finance and one of the leading figures in China. His suggestion is that the Nanking government start taxing the foreign concessions within China's vast domains and use the money obtained therefrom to promote a stable government, stamp out communism by educational methods, and to promote economic development.

One of China's great problems has always been the raising of sufficient money to carry on the work of the government. The real reason for this situation has been that the richest parts of the nation—the foreign concessions—paid no federal taxes.

American and British investors in China have no more right to go tax free than have American and British concerns in Argentina or Canada.

And if Mr. Soong's suggestion is finally adopted, a long step forward will have been taken—a step looking to the emergence of China as a greater nation, able to buy more goods, to pay her debts, and hold up her head in world affairs.

HATS OFF TO GRAND RAPIDS

Among American cities, Grand Rapids, Mich., seems to have a distinction for which every town in the land can envy her.

Grand Rapids has had only two traffic fatalities since the first of the year. For the last six months Grand Rapids has not had any at all. The city held a parade to commemorate the fact recently—and small wonder! In an era when auto kill 30,000 Americans annually, a city which finds a way of keeping its streets free from deaths for six months has something to crow over.

Indeed, a record of that kind might well be the proudest boast a city could make. "Move to our town and be sure your children are safe" ought to be a potent sort of slogan. Let's hope the Grand Rapids idea spreads far and wide.

Customer: No, but maybe I can arrange matters with your manager.

Lurline swept into the room in her dressing gown. She stopped short at Larry's words and the familiarity in his voice. She looked at Blondie's flushed face, and her eyes narrowed dangerously.

"Oh, we met before," Larry said, quickly. "Come on—I'll get you a drink."

Lurline turned, quickly stepped into her pajamas and said: "I'll be there in a moment—wait in the drawing room for me. Come here Blondie."

"Okay," replied Larry. "Hurry up then, it's getting late, and he left the door open."

"Who's that?" asked Blondie. "Only Larry Belmont—ever heard of him? . . . stock exchange . . . smart as a whip . . . millions . . . he's self made."

"You don't say—I like him. Of course you like him—everybody likes Larry!" Lurline was combing her hair, thinking rapidly. Suddenly she stopped and said: "Blondie, I didn't know it was so late—I'm going to let you go now—it's so very late—you understand?"

"Yes, thank you, Lottie." "Lur-line"

"Lurline then—it's swell up here. Could I come and see you one day when your friends are out?" Blondie asked anxiously.

"Yes—do. Give me a buzz—it's in the book. Lurline Cavendish, C-a-v-e-n-d-i-s-h!" Lurline spelled.

"You can't go out, you're out-right at the end of the hall."

"So long, Lurline. I'm so glad about you," and Blondie's tone showed she really meant it.

"So long," said Lurline as she gave her a friendly little push toward the door.

As Blondie was about to close the door behind her Lurline called out: "Here, Blondie, come here!" And as Blondie came back inquiringly, she said: "You can't go out, like that."

Lurline stepped to the wardrobe. Sliding the door open she revealed to Blondie dozens of beautiful gowns, hats and innumerable pairs of shoes.

"Here's a hat," and she handed Blondie a chic Parisian model. Blondie quickly put it on, her face all smiles, her eyes shining.

Frantically, I grabbed an axe and chopped. The first beak fell off inside and splattered on the floor. More mosquitoes were coming now, heating their beaks and plunging them through the walls to get at me. It is probable that these red hot beaks falling to the floor as I chopped would have set the cabin on fire and forced me out to my death among these ferocious insects, except for the fact that as I worked the perspiration rolled off me in great streams and cooled them off. This perspiration was soon knee deep around me and the hot mosquito beaks fell into it with a loud sizzling, raising great clouds of salty steam.

It was a tough battle but I won. About daylight the last of the swarm passed over and the beakless, bewildered insects that had attacked me fell in bunches on the floor. Later in the morning I ventured forth and began carrying out the mosquito beaks that I had chopped off. I piled them behind my cabin and later in the year used them for fence posts having enough to enclose a 60-acre field.

BLONDIE Of the Follies

By Frances Marion

CHAPTER X When Blondie entered the bathroom she was speechless from the excitement of coming face-to-face with Larry. Now she was almost breathless from the heavy perfume and sweet steam of Lurline's bath.

She looked around through the haze for a moment, getting her bearings, then spoke to Lurline lolling back in the huge tub:

"Who's that good-looking fellow? He started to come right in here!"

"Not me, thank you," said Lurline, unconcerned as she gently raised and rubbed a shapely leg. "He's incorrigible!"

"Who's that means. But he's darn fresh. . . he said to me. . . Mut Maedon's entrance interrupted."

"Would you like a cocktail?" Lurline asked Blondie.

"Run along—then—you'll be splashed. Madelon must rub me down with 'Night Kiss'."

"Okay!" and Blondie opened the door slowly and sid into the bedroom.

There was Larry romping on the bed with a tiny Pekinese dog. Her entrance unnoticed, Blondie stood watching Larry. He certainly was handsome, she thought, and he must be full of fun, the way he was playing now. Yes he was fresh. . . look Blondie's way was tearing up that nice bed. What right had he in Blondie's thoughts were interrupted when Larry saw her.

"Hello again," he said, pleasantly. "Look at this!" and he made the dog sit up. "Cute isn't he?"

"Very," Blondie had at last found her voice even if for one word and that about a dog.

"So you, Larry noticed her embarrassment now, and made a definite effort to make her forget it by being unusually friendly.

"Thanks," Blondie could feel herself being deeply.

"Thank your mother. . . thank your father. . ." Larry was laughing and pretended not to see the blush on her face.

Lurline swept into the room in her dressing gown. She stopped short at Larry's words and the familiarity in his voice. She looked at Blondie's flushed face, and her eyes narrowed dangerously.

"Oh, we met before," Larry said, quickly. "Come on—I'll get you a drink."

Eastern Stars Are to Meet at Picnic

In celebration of the birthday of Robert Morris, founder of the order of Eastern Star, members of the Midland chapter and their families will meet for an old-fashioned basket picnic Wednesday evening at 6:45 at the Masonic building. They will then drive to Cloverdale.

In case of rain, the picnic will be held on the first floor of the Masonic building.

Visiting members and their families are invited to join the Midland group, the worthy matron announced today.

"You don't have to," said Lurline a bit partronizingly. "And here's a bit of fur," as she handed Blondie a shawl—Oh, fur jacket. . . like Blondie accepted it with eyes wide and unbelieving. Never in her widest dreams had she ever thought of wearing anything like this. She dashes to the mirror, throwing on the jacket, and surveyed herself with bewildered admiration as she primed and fussed over the new apparel. Lurline, putting on her diamond bracelets, pretended not to notice.

"You're not going to give me the fur, are you?" Blondie asked incredulously.

"Yes—I'm through with it," said Lurline. Then suddenly her voice changed. "Hurry up," she snapped.

"Okay," replied Blondie, but she couldn't seem to drag herself away from the mirror. She looked at herself in utter surprise. How she had changed, she thought. Then she could contain herself no longer.

"Oh, boy—Oh, boy! I look like Joan Crawford, look!" And Blondie went into an imitation of Joan Crawford: "I'm only a poor working girl—you cannot trust your work to me. . . Isn't that good, Lurline?"

"I've met Miss Crawford—she's charming—I've never seen her on the screen though—I never go to movies."

Suddenly Blondie sensed the change the clothes made in her. She felt more self-assured. Her embarrassment, and the consciousness of her surroundings were not nearly as great, as she looked in the mirror. At first she had admired the new hat and coat. Now she was admiring herself in them. From somewhere she found the courage to say:

"Lurline, do I have to go? I hate to—it's grand here. Blondie looked squarely into the eyes of her former pal of the tenements. They gazed at each other for an instant, then Lurline said impulsively:

"If I introduce you to my friends' will you promise not to make any cracks?"

"Me?" Blondie was surprised. "Well, about the store and mother—and uptown—and—"

"Of course I wouldn't if you said no."

"Let me see," Lurline said reflectively. "I could hardly call you a relative . . ."

"Why not?" Blondie cut in, anxiously.

"Oh, don't be sill . . ." Whatever comparisons between them that Lurline might have voiced were never to be mentioned. From the apartment hall came Larry's voice, talking loudly over the telephone.

"Shh! Quiet!" cautioned Lurline. And both girls stood silent, listening intently, Blondie's face flushed with excitement.

Methodist Young People Discuss Raising Money

Plans for raising money for the Kerrville Methodist encampment were made at the general assembly of the young people's division Sunday evening. Miss Phyllis Gemmill led the song service.

A playlet, "Sin of Waste," was the feature of the intermediate program. Characters were Mary Jane Walker, Corin Stephenson, Charlie Patterson, Phyllis Gemmill and Ray Gwyn. Nine members were present.

The intermediate department will give a farewell party Friday evening for Phyllis Gemmill, who will enter the senior department.

Miss Alma Lee Hankins led the discussion of "His Turning Point" at the senior department meeting, with Harriet and Audrey Ticknor, Lucille Cochran, Fred and G. B. Hallman, M. D. Johnson and Ruth Long assisting. Fifty members and two visitors attended.

Miss Nellie Stephenson conducted the lesson study at the young people's department meeting. Nine members were present.

Miss Marie Cook of Big Spring visited with Miss Ruth Long Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Wadley and sons of Amarillo expected this week to visit with Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Wadley.

Mrs. N. W. Higham and Mrs. Clyde Cowden left Sunday for Alpine, where they will visit with Miss Virginia Hale.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stubbeman were here Saturday and Sunday but returned yesterday to Abilene where her mother, Mrs. Mollie Graves, is seriously ill. Little improvement had been shown since Mrs. Stubbeman was called there shortly over a week ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell E. Shraeder returned late Sunday from Austin where they have spent the summer attending the University. They will resume their duties with the public schools here Monday.

Mrs. J. H. Barron returned Sunday evening from Clovis where she has visited her daughter, Mrs. Herman Spaulding, for six weeks.

ANTS STOP TRAIN MARSHALL, Tex. (UP)—Ants, common red ants, stopped traffic on the Louisiana division of the Texas & Pacific railroad for a time. Passenger train No. 24, eastbound encountered a red light in the block signal near Scottsville, and came to a halt. Trainmen were unable to find the cause. Train No. 26 had the same trouble. An investigation by Signal Supervisor M. T. Belvin revealed ants had worked into the signal box and formed the contact. Many ants had been electrocuted, breaking the current and causing the signal to remain red. Leather dressing was one of the most important trades among the ancient Egyptians, and at Thebes, in the days of Egypt's glory, a special quarter of the city was set apart for tanners.

VETERAN GRID PLAYERS WILL PLAY FOR TCU

Editor's Note: The following is the third of a series of articles dealing with southwestern conference football teams, their prospects for the season, and schedules. Others will follow.

FORT WORTH (UP)—A team of football veterans will carry Texas Christian university's bid for the 1932 championship onto Southwest Conference gridiron this fall. Coach Francis A. Schmidt has ordered his squad of about 40 men to report for training Sept. 10. The team wheels into the season's schedule seven days later against the Denton State Teachers college here. "A weighty wall of bone and muscle will comprise T. C. U.'s forward line, expecting to average over 90 pounds per man. Veteran linemen include Captain Johnny Vaught, 6-foot all-conference guard of Roswell, N. M., and Jack Graves, Baylor, and a good interference man who broke up many plays in last year's game with Rice Institute. "Other veteran ends are Dan Salkie, Abilene; Wallace Meyers, Jackboro; Jack Langdon, Cleburne; and Richard Allison, Dallas, who is due to be shifted from the tackle post he played last year.

Truelson, tennis star who played end on the Oak Cliff high school squad, may be converted into a tackle by Coach Schmidt. The condition of Ben Boswell's knee, injured in the A. & M. game last year, will govern his success in 1932 play. Jack Shackelford, a strong offensive tackle from Abilene, is relied upon as a mainstay. Cy Ferrasser, fast running tackle from Olney, is another man clasped by Coach Schmidt as A-1.

Among the guards, Bud Taylor, Austin; Lee Bassinger, Fort Worth; and Lynn Brown, San Antonio, are due to see frequent service. J. W. Townsend, Lufkin, a steady performer, and Jack Armes are scheduled for the center post. Coach Schmidt's football "X" or unknown is the backfield. Although he has a group of good, fast veterans, none of them is superb at passing. Buster Brannon, basketball star from Athens, may solve the problem if he can learn to look one way and shoot the ball to its target in another direction. He has part of this summer passing footballs at moving targets. Brannon has a slight advantage in being left-handed. Joe Coleman, Waco, short, small, a fast and sure passer, is a good early season prospect for a quarterback berth. Other good candidates are Otho Tiner, Waco, and Elbert Walker, Dallas. Coach Schmidt will rely on a good field of half backs for headwork and football cunning. Among them are Richard (Red) Oliver, Fort Worth; B. W. Spearman, Jermyn; Hubert Dennis, Jermyn; Charles Casper, a left-handed passer from San Antonio; Lucy Phelps, Abilene; and Wendell (Doc) Sumner, who has about recovered from a grafting operation on his hand.

Jewell Wallace Wallace, Texarkana, a real "jewel" to T. C. U. athletics and John Kitchin, Oklahoma, a ballback, aspirant and Coach Schmidt may make one of Hubert Dennis.

There are only seven tough spots on T. C. U.'s schedule. Coach Schmidt observed, "Six conference games and the game with Louisiana."

The university's complete schedule follows: Sept. 17—Denton Teachers college, Fort Worth. Sept. 24—Louisiana State, Baton Rouge (night game). Oct. 1—Daniel Baker college, Fort Worth. Oct. 8—Arkansas university, Fort Worth.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES "Christ Jesus" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, Aug. 28. The Golden Text was from Hebrews 13:8, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and for ever."

The following from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, was also read as a part of the service (p. 131): "The mission of Jesus confirmed prophecy, and explained the so-called miracles of olden times as natural demonstrations of divine power, demonstrations which were not understood. Jesus' works established his claim to the Messiahship."

Chevrolet Reports A Seasonal Gain

A gain of 13.7 per cent in the first six months of this year over the same period of 1931 in the sale of fleets of cars and trucks for commercial use, was reported today by H. J. Klingler, vice-president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company.

The period was the largest in fleet business ever enjoyed by this company, and fleet sales for the first half of this year were greater than for the full year of 1929, Mr. Klingler said.

Prominent among the list of purchasers were the United States government, states and municipalities, and large packing, tire, utility, taxi, and drive-young companies. Such organizations keep a strict record of cost of maintenance and operation of their equipment, and replace it as soon as the mileage expense of the old cars and trucks exceeds that of new vehicles.

Much of the equipment now being replaced was purchased in the boom years of 1928 and 1929, and because of the hard service it underwent in commercial use, it has now reached the age of obsolescence, according to Mr. Klingler. He also pointed out that Chevrolet, due to the Government's purchase of its product, is constantly getting an increasing proportion of total available fleet business.

In the first six months of this year the Government purchased more than 1,000 Chevrolet sixes with an aggregate value of $750,000 for use in the postal, interior, agriculture, commerce, treasury and other departments. More than 3,000 sixes were sold to states and municipalities for use in police work, and for expanding highway maintenance and construction developments, Mr. Klingler said.

Photographing a fight scene in a motion picture isn't a matter of merely staging a fight and grinding a couple of cameras on it, as many a new director has found out to his sorrow. William Wellman, who directed Barbara Stanwyck in her latest Warner Brothers production, "The Purchase Price," at the Yucca theatre today, knows better than that. He does it the old way. The film is shot piece-meal, here a leg flying through the air, there a man landing on a table and breaking it; here a fist crashing against a jaw, there a knee finding the receptive pit of a stomach.

It may sound simple but it's the hardest way possible to do the job. It consumes hours of extra time, some expert timing, and an inexhaustible amount of fighting on the part of the players, as George Brent and Lyle Talbot, who play opposite Miss Stanwyck, found out to their sorrow.

Yet this is the only proper way to film a fight, for it affords exciting closeup that are impossible of achievement by filming a fight as it takes place.

Wellman credits D. W. Griffith with instituting this manner of filming action, but says years of experience in filming action pictures has perfected it for him.

"The Purchase Price" was adapted from Arthur Stringers' great novel and Saturday Evening Post story, "The Mud Lark." It is a thrilling story of a night club hostess who, through a matrimonial ad, marries a man she has never met before.

The cast supporting Miss Stanwyck includes George Brent, Lyle Talbot, Hardie Albright, Matt McHugh, Leila Bennett, David Landau and Murray Kinnell.

How Movie Fights Made to Look Real

Photographing a fight scene in a motion picture isn't a matter of merely staging a fight and grinding a couple of cameras on it, as many a new director has found out to his sorrow.

William Wellman, who directed Barbara Stanwyck in her latest Warner Brothers production, "The Purchase Price," at the Yucca theatre today, knows better than that. He does it the old way. The film is shot piece-meal, here a leg flying through the air, there a man landing on a table and breaking it; here a fist crashing against a jaw, there a knee finding the receptive pit of a stomach.

Perverved Idea of Fun in Hollywood

HOOLYWOOD—It's hard to believe that some of the greatest directorial minds in the studios turn to slapstick for inspiration, admits a writer in Picture Play magazine, who goes on to prove, however, that this is true. While prowling about one of the talkie stages, she was startled to hear a bloodcurdling shriek, accompanied by a roar of laughter. High up in the "flies," on a narrow cat-walk, one of the biggest directors in Hollywood was tugging a protesting prop man. The more the prop fellow protested, the more the director enjoyed it. Inquiry brought out the fact that the prop man was kept on the pay roll for this purpose.

"What does Mr.—get out of it?" the writer asked. "Mental stimulation," answered another prop man. "Or so it seems."

On the same set a certain well-known star was supplying himself with a little stimulation of another sort. He pulled a chair from under an unsuspecting extra. The rest of the company did what was expected of them and laughed heartily. All but the extra.

"What's the matter, Tom?" the star inquired sardonically. "Lost your sense of humor?" The extra eyed him levelly. "Not at all," he quietly answered. "Was that supposed to be funny?"

The star shrugged. "You're a poor sport." His tone was contemptuous. Several minutes later the star tipped behind his unappreciative victim, slipped something in his pocket, and retreated to a safe distance. Suddenly there was a deafening explosion and the extra slapped frantically at his tattered, smoking pocket. His face was white. Again the crowd laughed. A satisfied smirk crawled the star's features.

At another studio the company was working late. Every one was tired and an elderly extra, recently out of the hospital, was particularly weary. His check had been cut from the usual fifteen dollars to seven fifty. Leaning against a flat, he closed his eyes for a moment. The director, seeing an opportunity to liven things up, had one of his assistants steal up and dash an enormous electric bulb to the floor at his feet. The explosion sent the man leaping into the air. Incidentally, the bulb cost seven fifty. But mental stimulation for the director, and another week in the hospital for the extra. But all in fun, you understand. No real harm done.

But still they come back for more. Try to keep them away from the studios!

German Movie Fans Increase BERLIN (UP)—Perhaps because Germans now, more than ever before, are seeking a place where they can forget reality, movie attendance increased during the past year despite drops in nearly everyone's income.

Germany's biggest movie concern, the Ufa, announced that 1,500,000 more people visited the concern's theatres between April, 1931, and March 1932, than during the preceding year. This film producers here have weathered had times fairly well. They have naturally profited from the vogue of the German talking film, which greatly helped them toward of American competition. Besides, the government's protective measures tended to keep foreign competition off the market.

On the other hand, currency regulations in Southeastern Europe curtailed the German movie producers' receipts from foreign countries. The revenues of the theatres also were curtailed by reduction of ticket prices, which proved to be inevitable. The tax burden, however, remained unchanged. Thus, movies were also affected by the crisis.

One of the biggest German motion picture concerns, the Emelka, recently suspended its payments and applied for receivership.

One of the deepest holes in the world was drilled in 1926 in Orange county, California. It was sunk 8201 feet.

THROWS OUT IMPERFECT CIGARETTES

Uncanny Device Spots Flaws In Manufacture

Twenty electric fingers search every pack of Chesterfields before it's sealed up. Every Chesterfield is checked to make sure that it is made right; that is, the right size and properly filled. And that's why Chesterfields are firm, round, filled full—to smoke cool and last longer. And they're made of mild, ripe tobacco—cross-blended! . . . They're not to be milder and tastier.
