PEDDLING MEASURE STUDIED

Committee of CC to Report Findings To Body

A proposed city ordinance to govern street peddling was referred to the judiciary committee, composed of B. Frank Haag, Judge Charles L. Klapproth, and G. W. Dunaway. Mayor Leon Goodman asked this committee to make recommendations to the city council following its study.

The directors declined to take membership in the United States chamber of commerce on grounds of economy, and also declined to enter a campaign whose success would have meant additional taxation.

A proposed road connection from Midland to Big Lake via Stiles, which was originated over a year ago when Sam R. Preston was a director of the chamber of commerce, was reported as having received encouragement from Reagan officials recently.

Various other problems concerning Midland, particularly its economic life were discussed, and the chamber will continue its work along these lines.

James S. Noland, manager of Barnsdall Oil company, president of Veterans of Foreign Wars, president of the Scottish Rite club, and a civic leader, was elected a vice president of the chamber of commerce to succeed Ambrose.

GANDHI AS IDOL OF WOMEN SHOWN AT ROUND TABLE

LONDON.—If Mahatma Gandhi, unrivaled leader of the Indian people, remains for the whole of the second Indian Round Table Conference to decide on the future government of India, will he exert the same magnetic influence on the women of England that he has had in India?

This is a question that serious Englishmen are asking themselves. It seems odd to speak of Gandhi as a magnet for women. For he is the very extreme antithesis of all that men ordinarily consider magnetic for the other sex.

Nevertheless that he is a magnet for the other sex is a fact beyond dispute. For the women of his own land and his own blood and color there has been nothing like him in modern times.

Jewelry Innovation.

A diamond hair net worn by a dancer at one of London's famous night clubs is the latest in jewelry novelties. Other unusual and costly trifles turned out recently include a gold match-box holder with bridge rules printed in color, and flat, engine-turned gold cigarette case fashioned with an inclined plane inside so that no matter how full the case may be a cigarette can always be extracted easily.

Decoration Hint.

White contrasting with a dark shade is the smartest thing in interior decoration. To achieve this effect, white satin damask drapes were hung in a room with dark brown walls. More conventional are chintz draperies with a brown background and large floral pattern in white.

Measuring Flour.

The only sure way to get accurate measurements of flour is to sift it directly into a measuring bowl and then very gently transfer it to the measuring cup by spoon.

In Wall Paper Mode.

Dark wall papers are very new. A dark brown paper with white woodwork is one of the most popular combinations. Colonial scenic papers are shown with gray backgrounds and blue paper with the design in deeper blue. White grounds with gold or silver designs are offered for formal rooms.

"Sunshine Curtains."

Threads of pale gold woven into rayon net lace curtains give the effect of sunlight, and if the sun is shining outside they increase the brightness of the room. These curtains are recommended for a sun room and should have simple overdrapes of solid color on a subdued design.

Choice Cooks' Corner

Savory Sauerkraut

1 quart sauerkraut 1-4 teaspoon celery or caraway seed 1-4 cup butter

Heat the butter in a skillet until golden brown, and add the kraut and the seasoning. Mix well using a fork to separate the kraut. Cover and cook for five minutes. Serve hot.

Harvard Beets

6 medium sized beets 1-2 cup sugar 1 tablespoon cornstarch 1-2 teaspoon salt 1-2 cup vinegar 2 tablespoons butter

Wash the beets, cook them in boiling water until tender, remove the skins and cut the beets into thin slices or cubes. Mix the sugar, cornstarch, and salt, add the vinegar, let the sauce boil for five minutes, stirring constantly. Add the fat, pour the sauce over the beets, and let stand for a few minutes to absorb the sweet-sour flavor of the sauce.

Helpful Health Suggestions

TYPHOID CARRIERS

In many outbreaks of typhoid fever it has been learned that many of the cases had common supplies of food, milk or water and that these supplies were infected by certain individuals. In most instances it was possible to obtain histories of typhoid fever in these individuals even though the cases had occurred as much as 30 years or more ago. Laboratory examinations of feces and urine of these people proved that they were discharging the germs of typhoid fever. Careless or neglect of properly cleansing their hands led to contaminating food or milk supplies which they touched and which in turn spread the disease to persons not protected or immunized against typhoid fever.

Carriers exist in large numbers and are always a menace. About 3 out of every 100 who recover from typhoid fever continue to be carriers for indefinite periods. All persons recovering from typhoid fever should have examinations made of bowel and bladder discharges 2 months or more after recovery. —State Health News.

United Press Staff Correspondent PARIS, Sept. 29. (UP)—An umbrella and a cane thought things over when neither of them were being used. They wondered why it was that they had been going out so seldom lately. Neither was too old to keep late hours without showing the ill effects and they were as attractive as any of their breed.

"Then the umbrella said, 'Maybe it's our heads. Perhaps we need a new nob to attract attention.' The cane turned breathlessly to his sister and said, 'If you could get the folds of your silk skirt in a wooden coat that would make you no larger than I am, and if I could change my head for a golf club head or masher or driver, we both could get into high society, I believe.'"

A few weeks later they met, and while resting comfortably against velvet chairs compared notes. "How do you like your new life?" said Mrs. Cane, the former Miss Umbrella.

"I'm going all the time these days," replied her brother Cane who had assumed the hyphenated name of Cane-Club. "I go out in rain or shine, and I'm used to practice new golf shots whenever I'm not being leaned against or gesticulated with."

STANTON-BIG SPRING GAME DRAWS MOST INTEREST OF THIS AREA

MIDLAND TO SCOUT BOTH CLUBS CLOSELY

Stanton goes to Big Spring Friday for more than a football game with the Big Spring Steers. The Class B team makes the journey to further carry out experiments in the theory that Class A is faster than Class B.

Stanton has its own doubt of the theory, if the positive assurance of players may be taken into consideration, Stanton not only beat, but humbled, Colorado, a Class A team. That Big Spring has a considerably larger squad, much heavier and better flanked by reserves, means next to nothing to Coach Rufus Hyde and his Bison charges. They have met and defeated heavier teams before.

The Big Spring-Stanton game will offer interest to more than two towns involved in the scrimmage. Every club in the loop will have scouts watching the Bristowmen, and Midland will go a step farther—closely watching every move of Stanton.

For Stanton will play in Midland before Big Spring treks over—and there are numerous fans who feel no inflation over the possibilities.

And Stanton is included with those who forecast of Midland defeat.

The two clubs met twice last year, playing a scoreless tie the first meeting and Midland winning the second, 13-0. Midland lost the championship of this end of the Class B district, however, when White, Midland lineman, was made ineligible when charges were brought up that he played a baseball game during the summer preceding and on the roster of which club was a man who received money for playing.

Big Spring plays here Oct. 17.

SPORTS REPORTS

By R. C. HANKINS

While alibis are to avoided whenever possible, we are taking the risk of trying to partly justify team play in the Austin-Midland game Friday. We have found out how two members of the club, one in the backfield and one in the line, played most of the game while knowing comparatively little of what was going on save the tweet-tweet of sweet cuckoos. One boy remarked after the game, while someone was undressing him, that the game was good to have been "played at night."

As we remarked yesterday, there were no injuries out of the ordinary. The backs sustained bruises of the general variety and there were a few sprains scattered here and there. Just the usual assortment. But in the backfield, where quick thinking is sometimes better than fast legs, one of the backs we felt like criticizing for his failure to break up passes in his accustomed manner was playing in a dreamy daze. Like a lotus eater, he watched the ball float down the zone he was supposed to guard, into the arms of an opposing end or back—or a lineman made eligible by one of the various shift plays Austin used. He had only one predominant thought—to hit the man when he got the ball. And he remembered that, that he wasn't right and that, should Coach Barry find out, he should be sent off the field. So he kept plugging along and, except for his pass defense, played a game that was as pretty as one might want to see.

Mothers, seeing their sons running around like that, sometimes get the idea they'd rather football be dropped by their promising scion. That would be a mistake if carried out. Every football player knows what it is to get a blow that shadows his memory and makes time and space turgid. Everything is fancy and peopled with absurdity of shape and sound. We've seen players "under the influence" make brilliant runs they never remembered. We saw one southwest conference back return a kickoff 60 yards for touchdown. When he saw a newsreel of the play at a theatre later, he asked who carried the ball! Football is the grandest game of them all. Players sometimes get a broken bone or twisted knee, or knocked down shoulder, but bodies are being built up at the same time and the risk of sacrifice is well justified. So we read from some of the higher medical and surgical authorities. Another thing, if mothers don't want their sons to play football they should bear girls and be done with the game automatically.

We mention the alibi just to show you that Midland's backs know better than to let a job pass be caught under their very olefactory protuberances. It just so happens some of them had rammed their noses into a bit of trouble. Midland had little that could be termed dependable reserve power that day, and the regulars had to work overtime. But wait—just a little longer. Coaches Barry, Henderson, and Lingo are working at that second string. Some good men are in the making and we predict, before the season is over, that the value of reserves will not only be realized but utilized.

The way the coaches lectured their charges between halves of the game reminds us of what the cannibal king said to his ravenous son who wanted to know if he was too late for dinner. "Yep, son, everybody's eaten."

Alas and alack! We discover in our plume that vacation time is about to give way to office whiteness. This observation, in turn, calls to mind the husband who found his wife with her head in the gas oven. "Why, Janie, don't tell me you're contemplating sui-

BRUSHING UP SPORTS . . . By Laufer

side?" "Tut, tut, my dear!" said friend wife who had just returned from her vacation. "Suicide nothing! I'm determined to show up at the office with a scorched face somehow."

Take Fred Wemple, playground ball shark, for instance. If he went on a vacation with his family he'd probably return with one hand sun-burned and one white. A family man has to keep reaching in his pocket.

Dick Graves comes swaggering in under the weight of a large melon. It's just before press time but that m'ees no difference to Dick. He wants to talk about football, and talk about football we do. He's an ardent supporter of TCU—and so we happen to be.

Mrs. Sandy Auchterlorie, wife of the pro, joins us for a last round at the course for a couple of months. She left this morning for a visit with her mother, ill in St. Louis. The most extraordinary thing we've seen this season—she didn't miss a putt on the five holes we played before dark rolled up. One-putted on every green. Distances varied from three feet to nearly 20. She's the kind of player little known to the frailer sex. For instance, she doesn't walk down the paths when she starts after her ball. Just takes the rough as a matter of course. Incidentally, she is not in the rough much of the time, hitting a low, straight ball most of the time, and getting good strikes. Generally she is on the green or at the edge of it in the number of strokes that anger her. She is one wife that listened to her husband. The husband is known on both sides of the ocean for his game and instruction success—so there you are.

Frank Day shot the course in par. Twenty-six. First time he has ever turned the trick. Frank practices assiduously and deserved breaking par that day. He had hard luck on a couple of shots, but his recovery-ies were always excellent.

And then we have Joe Chambers. Joe is one of those queer ducks. He thinks one should keep his golf trousers buckled at the knee only in tournaments, and one can see him any evening, trudging around like some kewpie papa, knickers hanging to his ankles and nothing hanging right except his arms. These he keeps in the right place, right elbow to his body and a that. Some pro told him that form would make up for his drooping breeches, we've been told.

NEVER HEARD LUCKIES

B. A. Rolfe, director of the Lucky Strike dance orchestra is a man unique among millions, for he is probably the only radio listener in the country who has never heard the Lucky Strike orchestra on the radio.

This unusual fact was disclosed recently in a conference of executives responsible for the presentation of the Lucky Strike programs. Throughout more than three years in which the program has been on the air, Rolfe has maintained an unbroken record of continuous attendance. Naturally, being in the studio during the actual broadcasts it would have been a physical impossibility for him to have heard the Lucky Strike orchestra unless he turned over the baton to a substitute.

On the other hand, practically every one of the 50-odd members of the orchestra has, at one time or another, been absent from at least one program, and as a result, had an opportunity to listen in.

shaw in the fifth game in St. Louis that meant so much.

Grove is the greatest pitcher in baseball today, but those Cardinals proved last year that he could be beaten. It will be their job this year to prove they can beat Earnshaw.

In this adventure—the beating of Earnshaw—about the only thing you can do is wish them luck. If Big George is right, he's very tough, but his tendency lately in American league games has been to be a trifle wild. A sore shoulder has bothered him now and then.

A factor enters this series that was not there last year. I mean Paul Derringer. In his own league he has rolled up almost the same sort of record this year that Earnshaw holds in the American Youthful, yet he has a cool head under fire.

It would be no surprise to see him march to the mound to start off the series in St. Louis. And you have only to go back to Babe Adams for evidence that a young pitcher can win a few world series ball games. Offsetting the two great pitchers of the Athletics, the Cards have five fine hurlers, Derringer, Hallahan, Grimes, Haines and Lindsey. Haines has been bothered by a sore shoulder, but probably will be able to pitch one of the games. He beat the A's last year.

Grimes has been muttering ominously into his beard since the defeats handed to him last year.

This is the third pennant for the Athletics, and a casual glance back over the records shows that few great teams have held the top that long. No team ever has won three world series in a row.

The A's have displayed several times this year that they are only human after all. Foxe had a bad year. Haas had a good year and then had to leave the lineup with a leg injury. At one time or another every one of the Athletics' regulars has had to take time out for sickness or injuries. These are the signs of decay.

Mack's men may get back into form by Oct. 1. It is my hunch they won't.

The PROOF of the pudding is in the advertising section

WHEN A WOMAN is called "gifted" at cooking, you'll probably find that she owes a good deal to her reading of advertisements.

For it's through the advertisements that the clever housewife discovers the tested—and trusted—food products which assure the success of her dishes. And it's through the advertisements that she discovers the many convenient and dependable appliances which make her kitchen tasks so much more simple.

She has found that advertised products will never disappoint her. She can always count upon them for unvarying quality, no matter when or how she buys them.

In fact, the wise hostess is always willing to stake her reputation on the trade-marked advertised product. For a responsible manufacturer has staked his name upon that product first!

Read the advertisements. They are full of vital, dependable buying news.
