DON'T SACRIFICE THE CHARACTER AGENCIES

A question which is going to be raised in nearly every city in the land during the Community Chest campaigns this fall was brought up in a letter to a Cleveland newspaper the other day by Mr. Joseph J. Lopresti, who contends that 50 per cent of the chest dollar goes to "petty, parasitic bureaucracy," and then goes on to point out that he means such agencies as the Boy Scouts and the Y. M.

Mr. Lopresti's argument is answered just about as effectively as possible by Newton D. Baker, national chest campaign head, in a letter to the same newspaper.

"The peril of our civilization is not a dearth of material things," Mr. Baker says. "The real danger is that this glittering, material civilization will dwarf individual character and that personal integrity and industry and thrift and reverence will be lost sight of in a high-speed, industrialized society which has broken many of the molds in Billy which character used to be formed.

'I am sure that Mr. Lopresti will agree with me," Mr. Baker goes on to say, "that the ideal for our race is that they should be strong and wise and love beauty rather than that they should be well fed and selfish and satisfied like cows in long grass.

"As a matter of fact, character is essential to happiness and the character-building agencies are indispensable to any effort which confronts poverty, want and disease,"

Mr. Baker then discusses the plan for immediate relief for unemployment by shorter working hours and the shorter working week, and concludes with "Indeed, I am persuaded that the answer to these problems and a relief from these distresses will come chiefly from the building up in us of that very character which for the moment Mr. up in us of that very character which for the moment Mr. Lopresti impatiently discards.

It is doubtless true that many persons will fail to see the reason for not spending—for the time being—nearly 100 cents of every dollar available for bread and meat for the destitute.

But at the same time it is also true that the characterbuilding agencies were never more needed than now—that they have never faced a harder, more important task that they have never accomplished so much with so little And if all these things are considered—and they must be before any hasty action is taken—one cannot help agreeing with Mr. Baker that "character-building agencies are indispensable to any effort which confronts poverty, want and disease.

TAX BANKRUPTCY

Between 1913 and 1929 the national wealth increased from $192,500,000,000 to $361,873,000,000 an increase of 88 per cent.

National income increased from $34,400,000,000 to $85,200,000,000—an increase of 347 per cent.

During the same period total governmental expendi tures, Federal, State and local grew from $2,919,000,000 to $13,048,000,000—an increase of 347 per cent.

Governmental indebtedness increased from $4,205, 000,000 to $30,194,000,000—an increase of 615 per cent. In 1913 governmental expenditures represented 8.5 per cent of the national income, and in 1929 represented

15.3 per cent. Bad as this may seem it by no means tells the worst. Since 1929 taxes have steadily risen while incomes have sharply declined. It is reliably estimated that this year government will absorb not less than 30 per cent of the national income. It is apparent that we are facing tax bankruptcy. There is a point beyond which we cannot pay—a point at which taxation and confiscation begins. All over the country farms, homes, real estate, even factories, have been taken over by the states in lieu of taxes. We are at last paying the price of government waste and extravagance. Only a decisive "tax revolt," that demands economy and efficiency and government retrenchment, can save us from the inevitable consequences of the present the state. We were spared the flood damage, of course, not having creeks and rivers to get out of their banks; but we were also spared the crop damage. Maize and other row crops were beginning to show signs of black and of sprouting in the heads, which would have meant considerable damage in another day or two; but with the let-up today, it looks like everything ought to be all right. Dod you stop to think that Midland county farmers went through the summer without leaf worm atacks on the coton crops? Down the country, to the southeast, boll worms and weevils, as well as floods, have cut the crop pretty.

It is likely that our crop will be handled at the right time to get the advantage of a better price, and that the land wil have a batter viola var eare.

The Preacher Borum is reported to have a shotgun that will knock 'em over. They say he was out with Clarence Scharbauer the other day and drove up to the place where Billy Peay does his cow-punching. Billy used a familiar, but forceful, name for the gun and said it looked like it would bring down the birds. For the name of Borum's gun, see him, or if you really want to find out, see Clarence. We expect to have a staff correspondent in Lubbock next week for the state democratic "contention." I think there will be contention and fights over everything that comes up. Captain Hamer and five other Rangers are getting over there to keep a dozen eyes on the order or disorder, and it looks like every-body who tries to get away with a thing will be watched closely. The editor said that in view of the fact he hadn't taken a vacation this summer, he probably would go over and cover the convention, shooting home a story each day with the high spots and the casualty figures. ## Swapping Yarns with Col. True

Col. True maintains a standing invitation to others to write to him and tell of their own extraordinary experiences. No holds barred, Address Col. True, in care of The Reporter-Telegram,

No doubt you are a great hunter and have possibly seen or made some eventful shots. I want to tell ou of an experience my brother and had one time when we went deer nunting. We had only one gun and drew straws to see which would be irst to use it. My brother won and we started for the hills, found a skirtly location and came to a stand. Shortly afterward an enormous suck passed slightly below us. My brother had placed the gun on the ground and was in no position to shoot quickly. I grabbed the gun and was in the act of shooting when he ierked the gun from my hand, saying he was to get first shot. The ppeared around a mountain. Angered, I grabbed the gun, bent he barrel around a tree and fired he shot that was in it. Then I the shot that was if it. Then I started for the ranch house, in the direction the deer went, and incidentally in the direction I fired the shot. Going a short distance I found the deer dead, shot through the heart.

I called to my brother and we dressed the deer, starting again for the house. Less than a quarter of a mile away we found a bear, shot squarely through the brain by the same shot that killed the deer. The bear weighed between 700 and 800 pounds, and this with our deer was more than we could handle, so I set out for help, leaving my brother to look out for the kill. Remembering the bullet had passed through the bear's head, my curithrough the bear's head, my curi-osity was aroused as to what had become of it.

I watched closely for the next mile, finding where it had grazed several small trees, finally entering huge oak tree.

Going on to the house I found Going on to the house I found everyone away, leaving only one horse and an old sled used for hauling water. I rigged up a set of harmess and set out after our kill. We loaded the deer and bear on the sled, and cut the bee tree down to take the honey. We found several hundred gallons in the tree and not having a container big enough to hold it, we skinned the bear and used the hide to put the honey in. Again we started for the ranch house, just as it started raining. It rained harder than I had ever seen it rain before. And when we arrived and looked back for the sled, it was gone.

In my haste to rig up the harness In my haste to rig up the nathess, I had worked in some rawhide tugs. The rain had softened them and they had stretched, leaving our sled right where we started. I was terribly vexed and wet, so I tied the tugs to a tree and we went in to get some dry clothes and something to eat

When we came out again, the rain when we came out again, the rain had stopped and the sun was shining. We looked up and there was our sled coming over the hill, deer, bear and honey intact. The tugs were drying out and resuming their normal length.

EARL TICKNOR.

Sir: Your exploit ealls to my mind a hunting trip I took one day last summer in the Rockies.

A man bought 280 dozen oranges for 24 cents per dozen. He sold them at nine for 36 cents. What was his profit?

I had been wandering all day and was thirty miles from home when suddenly I was attacked when suddenly I was attacked by a grizzly bear. Frightened, I leaped for the nearest tree, a tall, slender pine. As I climbed I looked down and the bear was coming right up after me. As we went higher and higher the tree bent farther and farther over under our weight.

I reached the top of the tree but was so scared that I just kept on climbing. The tree, relieved of my weight, straightened suddenly and nurled the bear violently away. When I got home that night my parsner had some nice bear steak cooked for me. The tree had thrown the bear over two mountains and a river, over two mountains and a river, right into our own front yard.

"In this island group which constitutes the Territory of Hawaii we are keenly aware of the necessity of friendly cooperation between the several nations bordering the Pacific ocean. Unless we can develop a more neighborly attitude among these nations with a will on the part of each to understand the others and judge their actions on the same basis which prevails between good neighbors, I believe that the future of the Pacific will be just as temptuous and war-torn as the Atlantic region has been during the past centuries. ## Kerosene Causes Big Spring Death

BIG SPRING, Sept. 9.—Santiago, 15 months old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Proctor Garcia, residing on the Stanley Williams farm near Knott, died at 6:50 a. m. Wednesday from effects of coal oil which he drank late Tuesday.

Justice of the Peace C. C. Collings was to hold an inquest into the baby's death, since no physician was called by the family. The parents said the child apparently had gotten rid of the poison and that it slept well Tuesday night, but became suddenly ill again early Wednesday morning.

The family has lived on the Williams farm at intervals for ten years. Five brothers and five sisters also survive. Burial will be in the Catholic cemetery here.

Gragg said that reports had been think of the counties of the state on a questionnaire sent out some two weeks ago on the need for relief in various communities and also asking a report on relief work done in the communities.

"It is imperative this information be gathered and submitted to the governor as a basis for a request for a loan from the Reconstruction Finance corporation," Gragg said.

"No loan can be secured until this data is properly assembled and presented," Gragg said. The questionnaire was sent to county judges and to other city and county officials.

Under the provisions of the relief bill recently enacted by Congress two classes of loans will be made, (1) for the relief of destitution, to be administered by the governors of states, and (2) for financing construction projects of self-liquidating character.

Loans "for relief of destitution" cannot be secured except through application to the governor, Gragg said, and the activities of the state unemployment committee have to do only with such loans.

"No, Blondie, I'll never be finished with you—never," her father said, looking at her sadly. "What I meant was, I'd finished with tour—arefully, and a parent has no right to try and hold a child back from doing what she wants—unless she wants to do something very wrong, could you, Blondie?"

"You know I couldn't do anything very wrong, could you, Blondie?"
