SENATE GROWS OVER CONTEST

ROAD WORK AT ANDREWS DRAWS FIRE

Alleged Midland Men Given Less Work Than Offered

Notice was given the construction company building the highway from Andrews to Seminole Wednesday that unless men sent to work on the job Monday were repaid for the expense they were out, the matter would be carried to the state highway department.

Judge H. T. Wilson of Andrews telephoned the Midland chamber of commerce Sunday afternoon saying that a Mr. Hardcastle thought to be one of the chief engineers of the construction job had asked him to get 35 white men. The Andrews judge specified, according to the chamber of commerce official to whom he talked, that the construction company did not want Mexicans, but wanted white men.

The Midland secretary spent a large part of Sunday afternoon notifying men. Seventeen went to Andrews to work on the strength of Judge Wilson's call, who said he was acting on the request of the construction company official. They were given about two hours' work. This paid them an average of about 60 cents each. Their expenses were about $1 each. The protest from the chamber of commerce called on either Judge Wilson or the highway contractor to repay the Midland men approximately 40 cents each, which represented the net loss.

The secretary said Wednesday that if neither of these would repay the losses suffered by the men, their refusal to pay the expenses of the men and the refusal of the work boss to give white men a job would be carried to the state highway department and recommendation would be made that the Midland chamber of commerce itself repay the men, though they were specifically told that the chamber of commerce guaranteed them nothing and that all the organization could tell them was what Judge Wilson said over the telephone.

The chat pile boss was quoted by the Midland men as claiming he had not sent for any men, and declaring the county judge was not authorized to send for any men. Mr. Hardcastle was not found, and it was believed in Midland that following a call to his office stating the facts, he would give the men fair treatment and repay their actual losses, which totaled about $5 for the entire group.

Ban on Hunting Of Birds Provided

A bill declaring two-year closed season on all game birds in Glasscock county has passed both houses of the legislature and now awaits signature of Governor Ross Sterling, according to Game Warden T. E. Sammons of Midland.

It was not known whether the bill carries an emergency clause. If it does, it will become effective immediately upon the chief executive's signature, otherwise it will not go into force for 90 days.

The bill was introduced in the house by Rep. Penrose Metcalfe on recommendation of the Glasscock county commissioners, Howard and Midland counties are under similar restrictions to run another year.

Sammons said he believes the new law will result in more slaughter of game birds from hawk and road runners than the present arrangement could have made for by hunters.

Sixteen Enrolled In Law Course Here

Embryonic lawyers enrolling Tuesday evening in the law classes conducted on Tuesdays and Thursdays by Frank Stubbeman, Midland attorney, counted 16, four of whom are women.

The women are Mrs. Susie G. Noble, Miss Kathleen Mullino, Miss Aleen McKenzie and Mrs. Luvie Eaves. Others are expecting to join Thursday evening.

Stubbeman has started the class in contracts, upon which nine-tenths of the legal actions in the courts are estimated to hinge. He calls special attention to the fact that this study is almost prerequisite to future study of law and that one may master contracts and consider a knowledge of the subject a form of business insurance. His lectures are vigorous, yet simple, and his class is much interested.

Pleased at Smashing Victory

As democrats hail throughout the country their victory yesterday in Maine, a rockribbed republican state, a forerunner to national success in November, the democratic standard bearers, Roosevelt and Garner, shown above, made simple press statements. Said Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, following election of a democratic governor and two out of three democratic congressmen: "The results are all for the good." Speaker John Garner said: "The people are not going to sustain an

Finds Baby Likes Rough Playmate

When Carter, six-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Benson, 310-A West Kansas, gets a bit older he may give his parents a bit of trouble about selecting his playmates. He evidenced this trait Tuesday by starting with a scorpion.

The mother was in the yard and returned to see the child lying on the floor, crying in both hands, and smiling upward at an outstretched foot on which a large stinging scorpion sat.

The mother was frantic for a brief moment, not realizing the best method of rescuing her baby without getting him stung. She moved as deliberately as a sword force and self, took hold of the child and jerked it quickly, the scorpion falling on the floor, where it was quickly dispatched.

POLICE ACTION SOUGHT AGAINST HOUSEBREAKERS

Police action will be sought against vandals in Midland who are entering vacant houses, breaking windows, stealing bath fixtures and otherwise stealing or destroying property.

Complaints have been made by property owners that boys or men have lately damaged vacant houses and apartments by breaking into them. The owners of the properties will have some detective work done and try to get penitentiary sentences against the thieves on charges of burglary.

In some cases property owners report that the house breakers apparently had nothing in mind except to injure property, as the damage they did could not in any possible way benefit them. Officers have been asked to keep a sharp watch for the house breakers. One particular case known was where a can of lye was set on a carpet and some of the lye scattered about which forced the house owner to buy a new rug.

Potash Operation Has Been Postponed

Plans of the Texas Potash corporation to begin operations on their holdings in Midland, Upton, and Ector counties by Sept. 15 can not be carried out, O. P. Jones, owner of the land on which the corporation has leases, said in Midland Wednesday.

Officials of the corporation are now negotiating with Jones for a further extension of time for starting actual production on the land. The potash holding are approximately 26 miles southwest of Midland.

Midland was awarded the next meeting of the Central West Texas Retail Credit association, when delegates at Big Spring were invited by Mrs. A. E. Horst, secretary of the Midland Retail Credit bureau, to come here. Mrs. Horst extolled the advantages of Midland in a speech before the association.

Makes Couple of Talks at McCamey

Two speeches were made in McCamey Tuesday by Paul T. Vickers, secretary of the Midland chamber of commerce. The Midland man spoke at the Lions club luncheon and in the afternoon to the Parent-Teachers association. The secretary also spoke briefly before the Parent-Teachers association of Mentone. W. G. Riddle, Southwestern Bell district manager, was a special guest at the Lions luncheon. Plans are afoot to adopt the city manager form of government, a public health program has been arranged, new improvements are being made on the school campus, there is talk of establishing a daily newspaper, and the people say business is decidedly improving. The citizenship of McCamey, according to the Midland secretary, are showing a fine spirit of cooperation and are full of enthusiasm to do the best things for their city.

Personal Regard for Jim And Ma Floods Conclave

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following observations were written by the publisher of The Reporter-Telegram upon his arrival here last night from Lubbock, where he filed daily stories to his newspaper on the democratic state convention. His "copy" during the run of the convention was enriched through personal contact with notables present, as well as through affiliation with special staff writers of the Associated and the United Press, with whom he shared the specially reserved press section.

By T. PAUL BARRON
Reporter-Telegram Staff

To one unaccustomed to, and normally uninterested in, politics, the state democratic convention at Lubbock was a revelation. Ferguson forces, heavily outnumbering all opposition, took the city a full two days before opening of preliminary sessions, steadily gathering strength and momentum and never conceding ground to the Sterling supporters who made a comparatively weak fight for what had all the appearance of a lost cause insofar as the convention was concerned.

Once the opposition had been definitely quelled, the followers and supporters of those in power went "hog wild," cheering long and loudly for Fergusonism upon the slightest provocation, and "booming" equally loudly any name which had a definite connection with the opposition.

The term "steam roller," as applied to methods by which the convention voted, was not a new one. The certification of Mrs. Ferguson as gubernatorial nominee, had too mild a note and lacked both weight and momentum.

Ferguson's Take Bow However, everything was in order, going by the rules of the game of politics. The Fergusoners were in power and accepted it as a noble woman couple never received the bows of the "subjects" than did Jim Ferguson, referred to in the keynote speech as "our noblest woman citizen" and Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, whom one might safely refer to as "gubernator-elect."

The democratic convention was a Ferguson convention, everyone knew that this couple may easily boast the greatest following of any state candidates on record. Jim Ferguson, going from hotel to hotel and from meeting place to meeting place with his "body guard," an escort of seven men, wore the men of a "political Moses," ready and waiting to lead the suffering public out of the "well of bitterness." And it is in this role that he was followed by thousands upon thousands of Texas voters, many who probably had not more than the bare funds on which to be in Lubbock, and who traveled from the "sticks," plains and hills of all sections of the state to stand on street corners as Jim went by, satisfied to get even a look at him, and more than satisfied to possess the opportunity to shake his hand.

Possesses Magnetism Ferguson's hands, he is remarked for his magnetism. He has a certain charm, and a certain grace. One of his "bodyguards" said, Jim has shaken hands with 17 million and he ought to be able to take on a few more. His hand was not only warm, but it was firm, and it was moist, thereby saving his strength and energy for the long days of greeting friends. His smile, however, possessed great magnetism. He spoke with reserve to everyone and maintained a calm, dignified expression which showed little change as he listened to either praise or condemnation of Fergusonism.

Mrs. Ferguson, a large, well-groomed and handsome woman, bearing the stamp of years of country or small town life but also revealing the "official" appearance of one who has spent much time at the capitol, was subject to many changes of facial expression. Her smiles almost turned to tears as she and her husband were cheered for several minutes upon the convention platform. Happiness lighted her face as speakers extolled the virtues of Fergusonism and she was seen to enjoy also the scathing denunciations of Sterling followers bearing the stamp of years of country or small town life but also revealing the "official" appearance of one who has spent much time at the capitol, was subject to many changes of facial expression. HIGH ALIMONY AS A DIVORCE CAUSE

Judge Herbert L. Carpenter of Providence, R. I., just about hit the nail on the head the other day when he said, in ruling on an alimony case, that one of the reasons why divorce is so popular is that ex-wives get more money than wives.

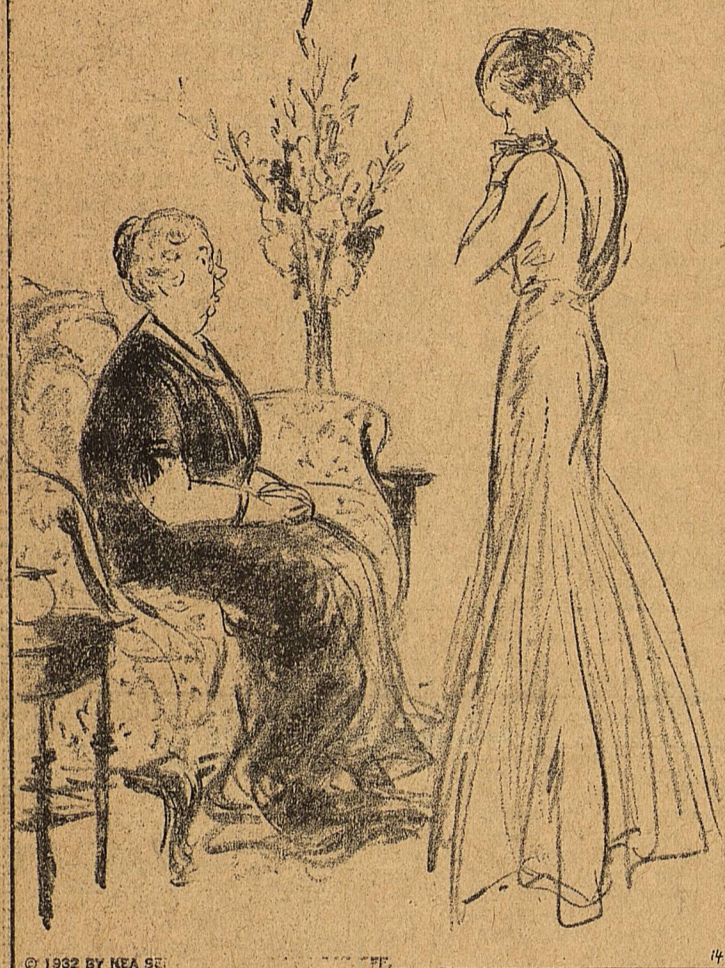

In reducing a landscape gardener's alimony from $28 to $10 a week, Judge Carpenter pointed out that the man had earned $716 since February, and that his ex-wife had collected $28 each week.

Simple arithmetic shows that the ex-wife had received just about the total amount of the money her ex-husband had earned in six months of hard work.

If we had more men like Judge Carpenter on the bench, we should have fewer divorces.

If any added inducement were needed for Junior to cast his vote in favor of a vacation spent in Yellowstone National Park, it has been found with the discovery of a geyser that spouts cold soda water.

The Man Who Stole the Show!

Jean Harlow--Second Love A Second Tragedy for Her

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of four stories on the life of Jean Harlow, the famous platinum blond of the movies, whose second husband, Paul Bern, recently committed suicide.

By DAN THOMAS NEA Service Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 13.—When screenland's foremost blond, Jean Harlow, 21, became the bride of Paul Bern, 41, the movie citadel's most eligible bachelor, Hollywood gasped.

It was not that the cinema world was surprised that its platinum pride should wed again, or even that she should select for her second partner a man twice her age who, besides being an executive of the company which had just signed her to a starring contract, was one of the wealthiest, most influential and perhaps the best loved men in the picture making industry.

What caused the residents of the celluloid capital to breathe excitedly was that the silver-tressed ex-wife of Charles F. McGrew II, the millionaire Chicago sportsman, should be conducted on both her wedding marches by men who, broadly speaking, "could give her everything."

So no one was much surprised when the word got around that Paul Bern's wedding present to his 21-year-old bride was a deed to the $60,000 home in Benedict Canyon, Beverly Hills, where he had lived as a bachelor.

Their marriage on July 2 climaxed a friendship begun almost three years ago, shortly after the premiere of "Hell's Angels," Miss Harlow's first starring vehicle, and her separation from her first husband.

The meeting occurred at a party given by another studio executive, David Selznick.

It was a case of friendship at sight. They began going places together, not as sweethearts but congenial companions, almost platonic friends.

Though Paul Bern often was seen in the company of the blond star, Barbara La Marr when ill health had begun to curtail her career, she was not a friend of her first husband's.

Moreover, he had long been recognized as "the understanding friend" of the misunderstood women and men of Hollywood.

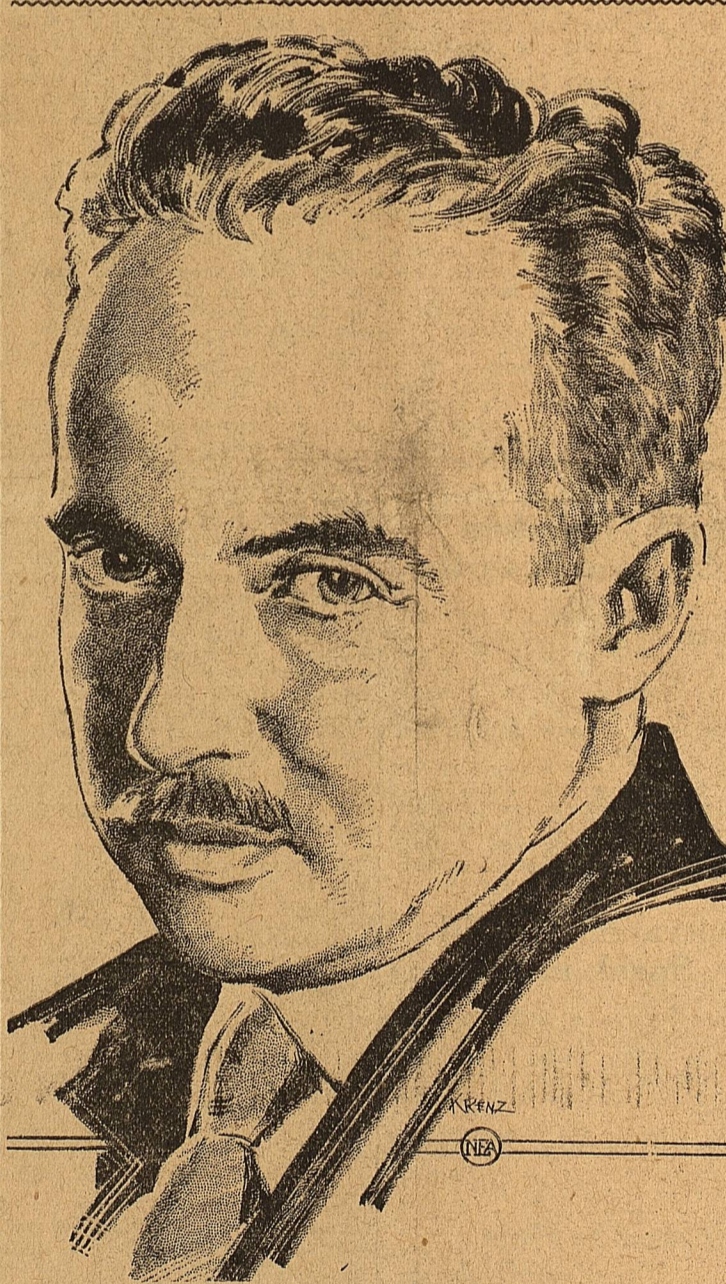

When she returned to Hollywood, it was noted that she once more occupied the seat of honor at the elaborate dinner parties given by Bern at his Benedict Canyon home.

Early last winter Jean departed on another show-herself expedition. Before she left, however, she is reported to have confided to a few close friends that Paul had mentioned matrimony to her.

She returned from the trip to make "Red-Headed Woman," Hardly had she gotten back, though.

STICKERS

By replacing the dashes with correct vowels you can form a sentence that reads the same forwards and backwards.

Paul Bern, the melancholy movie director whose helping hand lifted many stars out of their troubles.

when Bern left on a holiday, his first in several years.

It was shortly after his return last June that they appeared together at the marriage license bureau and filed notice of their intention to wed.

Meanwhile, "Red-Headed Woman" had been finished and was packing the neighborhood houses. It firmly established the platinum-tinted Jean as a celluloid star.

That success is attributed by some of her friends to her sudden decision to remarry.

"Paul has asked me before to marry him," she told one of her friends a few days before their marriage. "But I never accepted until the other night, I wanted to make good first."

They were married July 2 in the Beverly Hills home built for Jean by her first husband and now occupied by her mother and stepfather. One of screenland's leading columnists, commenting on the wedding, wrote that it was a tragic commentary on the gratitude of the film colony to know that only 150 of the 500 persons invited to the nuptial festivities of Hollywood's "good Samaritan" managed to get there.

Those who attended the quiet ceremony, however, were quoted afterwards as saying they had witnessed the culmination of a perfect Hollywood romance.

Yet that romance has already witnessed its own culmination. The kindly little man who renounced his title of "Hollywood's most beloved bachelor" to become the husband of the screen's blondest charmer ended it with his own hand the other day in a small dressing room off the honeymoon chamber.

BLONDIE Of the Follies

By Frances Marion

CHAPTER XXIV

"I'm boring you," said Blondie, glancing at her watch.

"No—you could never bore me—situations bore me, though. I'm getting to distrust everyone and everything I think I must be age."

"You look very well."

"So do you . . . it's not fair for one person to have so much charm—what does it feel like to be a great success?"

"Success!" "Miss McClune wears this—she smokes that . . . I'm always reading about you."

"You wouldn't want me to cry over you, would you?" "You couldn't cry if you tried—over anyone!"

"You mean I'm not sincere? . . . I was sincere with you . . ." Larry paused for an answer, but Blondie was silent. . . . and you know it," he added.

"Well—now is another day, isn't it?" "Yes, funny isn't it?" "Very funny—that's why I laugh and the man echoed with his mocking laughter."

"She'll be a lucky woman—who really gets you seriously?" "The lady who did get me seriously—did turn out to be very lucky—and Larry looked around the luxurious room again."

"And who was that?" "Well, if this place isn't a palace of luck in a circus, guess I don't know what it is—walk up, boys and girls and take your chances for the big life—whoopee!"

Blondie was trembling now as she watched Larry and he seemed to his bitter tirade against her. Oh, she thought, if she could only put her arms around him and beg him to take her out of all this.

"They were interrupted by the ringing of the doorbell. "Who is it?" asked Larry. "Lurline."

"Why?" asked Larry, seriously. "Wait!" "No—why?" "Please—for me," pleaded Blondie. "No," insisted Larry, but Lurline swept into the room.

"Hello, Larry," she said, surprised. "Hello," replied Larry, coldly. "Hello, Lurline," greeted Blondie. "Hello—it's like old home week!" said Lurline.

"Lure down, Lurline—Larry has to hurry." "Now that I'm here—it's a wonder he doesn't dive right through the window . . ."

"I'm saying that until the market goes right down!" "Tea, Lurline—or a drink?" "What do you think?" "Champagne!" said Blondie, turning to the butler.

"When I received your message to come at once I was afraid you were sick—what's it all about?" "I've been worried," said Blondie. "You look it," sarcastically from Lurline, as she glanced around the room.

"I feel that I was the cause of you and Larry breaking up . . ." Blondie said seriously.

"Well—Lurline started to interrupt. "This is the first time I've spoken to either of you since that night on the yacht, and I wondered if I couldn't be the means of bringing you together again. . . . You know you care for Larry, Lurline, and I'm sure Larry cares for you."

Larry rose and started to walk away. But Lurline was affected by what Blondie had said.

"I don't know what I ever did to Larry to make him change," Lurline said simply.

"What was it, Larry?" asked Blondie. "What would you like me to say?" Larry retorted.

"I'd like you to say that you'll make up with Lurline."

"Sorry—we always understood each other perfectly."

"Until you walked out, we did!" said Lurline.

"I feel that . . ." Blondie started again, but Larry cut her short. "We all make mistakes—I thought it was fun when it started, but I began to find out how sordid and empty this sort of thing is."

"Thank you very much," said Lurline, grandly more hurt than she cared to admit.

"I'm not trying to be unkind . . . but don't you realize it's just as bad for the man as the woman? She's not the only one who loses her self-respect . . . he does, too, and there's no real love in it—you know that."

"How do you know, Larry?" said Lurline, biting her lip.

"You never really loved me!" Larry challenged. Blondie watched as Lurline turned away from his gaze.

"That's true, Larry . . ." Lurline admitted, facing him.

"Did I ever say I loved you?" "No! . . . You were honest . . . I'll say that!"

"And I've always been honest—I may be a bum in a lot of ways but I'm honest . . ."

"I turned to Blondie, and his voice shook with feeling. "I and I was honest with you—when I told you—Larry stopped. "What does matter now?—it's too late!" he added, dejectedly.

"You'll have to marry and settle down some day!" Blondie exclaimed quickly.

"To whom?" asked Lurline sharply. "That's a long story. If I treated you badly, I'm sorry—very sorry . . . and thanks, little Blondie, for a sweet thought. I've always known you were fine—fine. . . . Goodbye, kids!"

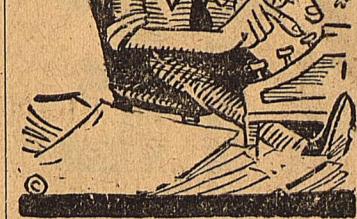

"Good luck, mister . . ." Blondie said, he voice breaking under the strain.

"Mister yourself!" came back Larry, laughing.

Blondie followed him to the door. It seemed as though the weight of the world was resting on her shoulders, and a strange, insistent pain was tugging at her heart.

With his hand on the door, Larry turned and said: "Everyone's some time in his life, has to turn around and do the right thing. I want to be married and have a home . . . and children. The big day isn't so much . . . really! It's pretty empty at times. Well, so long . . ." and he was gone.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

"Certification of Ma Adopted" was the heap big story that appeared on the front page of this newspaper yesterday.

Boy, boy, how I did envy T. Paul Barron as he was covering that story for The Reporter-Telegram. He is in the midst of the most heated session that the democratic party has ever known in Texas.

There is just one thing that I want to bring out in regard to the whole business, and that is that word "harmony." I'll bet that there ain't no such word in the English language.

Then another thing that struck me on the front page of the newspaper was the fact that people will spend more money to have their pictures taken by outside photographers than they will give to the local photographers who do better work and help support the town.

Ha! Ha! I see where republican Maine has at last gained some intelligence. In fact, I have had some of them in such a tight fix.

Spots might be able to get the pretty Boots out of a jam, but I am afraid that the fierce animal will run across an animal that is just a little tougher than he is. Then, what of Boots? How I wish she could change climates all of a sudden.

And the thing that makes me sore is that the hardboiled Easy has fallen for a pretty pair of legs. Bah! I cannot imagine him doing it for 60 years.

Friends, Romans and republicans, you are missing out on great opportunities when you fail to read the classifieds. Gerald Bloss discovered George Keith in the classified columns. Be smart, too!

It happened in E Minor: A man went to a show and put his hat on the seat next to him. Pretty soon a lady came in and sat on his hat.

"Lady, do you know what you are sitting on?" "She: "Sure, I've been sitting on it for 60 years."

Swapping Yarns with Col. True

Col. True maintains a standing invitation to others to write to him and tell of their own extraordinary experiences. No holds barred. Address Col. True, in care of The Reporter-Telegram.

Dear Col. True: I suppose you have often heard of queer tricks played by cyclones, haven't you? I remember hearing an old acquaintance tell of an experience he had in a cyclone one time. Seeing the terrible menacer of the air approaching he took refuge in the nearest likely-looking place, which happened to be a dry cistern.

During the storm he was held by a hog of such enormous proportions that it was necessary to kill it and cut it up in order to get it out of the cistern after the storm.

MRS. S. H. DAVIS, Hollis, Okla.

Madam: Indeed I have heard of the strange antics of cyclones and tornadoes. In fact, I have had some experience with them. I recall that a big twister once came through my house and wound up an eight-day clock so tight it ran for three years without further winding.

A neighbor of mine, during the same storm, was approaching his house with the idea of finding safety therein, but got only as far as the door. With his hand on the doorknob, the storm struck and re-her into a bedroom that a princess would envy.

RANGERS TO FAIR FORT WORTH (UP)—Two Texas Rangers, boots, big hats, guns and all, will be detailed to Chicago to assist in displaying Texas' exhibition at the World Fair, according to plans of the state exposition committee.

Texas' Governor, whether "Ma" Ferguson or R. S. Sterling, will be asked to name the detail. Emmett H. Whitehead, San Antonio, general chairman of the State World's Fair Commission, said here.

This state's exhibit will feature agricultural and mineral resources. In a 4,000 square-foot plot adjoining the exhibition hall languid mesquite trees, towering pecan, sycamore, oak trees and cactus will be set out. A reproduction of the Alamo in native granite will be another feature, Whitehead said.

Texans must raise $150,000 to pay the costs of the display. School children may be asked to contribute pennies, nickels and dimes to the fund.

Other members of the Texas World's Fair commission, appointed by Gov. R. S. Sterling, are J. C. Kennedy, Dallas; Gus Taylor, Tyler; Wilbur Hawk, Amarillo; and Frank W. Kirk, Houston.

Tea at George Ratliff Home for Christian Women

Mrs. George Ratliff entertained women of the First Christian church Monday afternoon with an informal tea at her home, 401 North Marlene-

An interesting program under the direction of Mrs. Glen Brunson was given. Mrs. Rawlins Clark played several piano numbers. Mrs. Ratliff gave a talk on the need of women's work in the church. She urged all circles and different departments of the church to resume their work.

Mrs. Van Camp, accompanied by Mrs. Clark, sang, and Mrs. Jolly Johnson and Doris Lynn Pemberton recited. Mrs. C. E. Adams, president of the Rijnhart circle, announced the first fall meeting of that circle to be Monday at 1 o'clock in the demonstration room of the house. The meeting will be in the form of a luncheon.

Mrs. S. T. Hall was appointed chairman of the welfare work the auxiliary will do this season. The hostess, assisted by her daughters, Dorothy, Bennie Sue and Mrs. Bob Blevins, served tea to Misses E. E. Stevens, Howard, Ben Whitefield, L. A. Denton, Charles Klapproth, S. T. Hall, M. E. Cole, C. E. Adams, Clyde Ingham, L. A. Arrington, L. B. Pemberton, Dunn Reiger, Guy Breuneman, Wood Elkin, Glen Brunson, Ed Erickson, Van Camp, Rawlins Clark, S. S. Elkin, W. B. Elkin, W. B. Driver, Godner Driver, Jolly Johnson, Lee Bradshaw, J. S. Cordill, Carl Reeves and L. C. Rea.

Mrs. Addison Wadley Honors House Guest

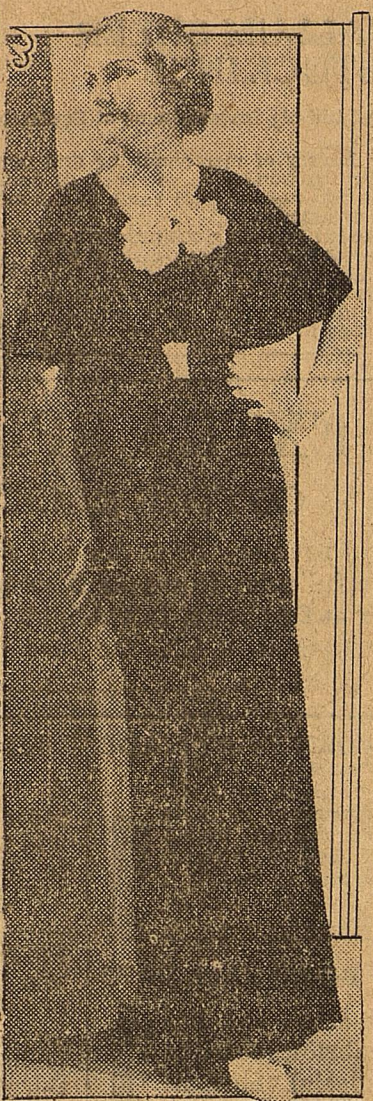

Complimenting her guest, Mrs. E. E. Logan of Dallas, Mrs. Addison Wadley entertained with a bridge party Tuesday evening at her home, 902 West Louisiana.

Mrs. N. W. Bigham won high score. Mrs. A. C. Francis received and Mrs. Logan was presented a gift.

Girl Student's Wardrobe Keen Weapon To Help Her Capture Collegiate World

This black velvet tea frock, which molds the body in a slim, straight line, becomes a formal dinner frock when the cape is removed. Two white flowers add a touch of smartness that just escapes being demure.

If you are going to college, remember that the surface view counts for a great deal.

You may have a nice disposition, and good intentions, but most people are near-sighted to first appearances.

There is something gay and smart and debonair about the campus clothes being shown in Midland shops this year. They are not sweet, or simple, or girlish. They know their way about the campus. They don't cost nearly as much as they did when the present seniors were freshmen, as you won't have to spend much to pack a trunk.

Clothes for classes and campus wear are more important than any other costumes. As a basis for your wardrobe, a four-piece ensemble is splendid. It should include a skirt of one of the new hardy tweeds, a sweater, a jacket, a beret hat and a regular hat, and a swagger coat.

Several sweaters, with rolled up sleeves, will add variety to this costume.

By all means have a sport frock of one of the new, soft woolens. A gay, audacious red, a wine that is so luscious it shines a warm green, or any tan or brown in the autumn woods, will do. If it conforms to the color scheme of your ensemble, the same swaggy coat and hats will be harmonious with it.

You will need a crinkly crepe frock for informal dress wear. See that the frock molds to your body and that the sleeves are large and full. Capulet effects are good. So are blis that protect you in front and tie with long streamers in the back. Wide collars make you demure.

One velvet tea dress is indispensable. Choose one that has glamor. Choose a color that plays up to you—instead of one to which you play up—and choose matching velvet or suede slippers. If you choose a tea dance frock, with a cape or top that comes off, you will be able to use it for an evening gown, too.

Let your evening frocks be as intriguingly feminine, yet as smart and simple as possible. White is lovely. Black may make you appear to know just a little more than you want people to think you know. Evening slippers and bag and gloves and wrap are important.

You will need a pair of clod-hopper shoes for campus wear and a pair of pumps that will do duty either with sports clothes or a silk frock that isn't too much of a dressed-up affair.

Heavy gloves for campus wear and a pair of suede or kid dress up gauntlets, and white gloves for special occasions are necessary.

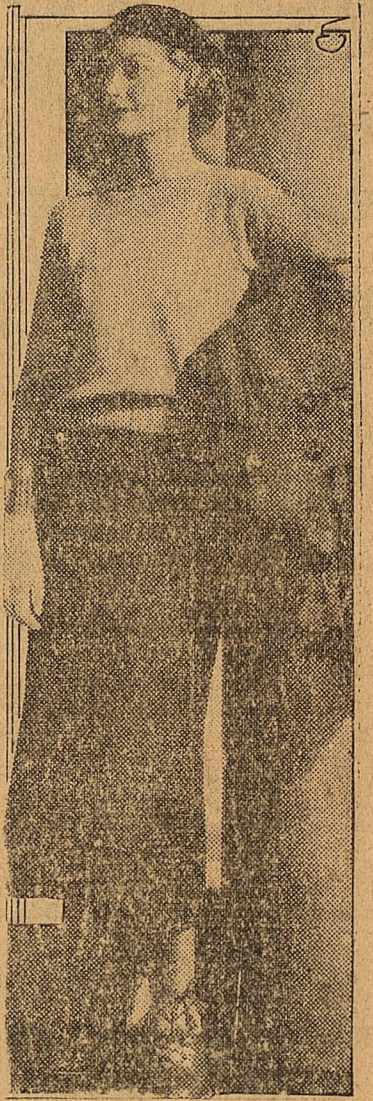

If you have a fur coat, it will solve a good many problems for you. If you haven't, a cloth coat that features the new shoulder and sleeve effects will do nicely for all occasions. Polo coats are splendid when you have a more elaborate coat for dress.

Two hats for campus and sports wear, a small velvet one for dress— or two if your dresses demand them—and a scarf of silk or lace for evening will cover your locks with the necessary glory.

Crepe or wool sports shoes are best for campus wear. Silk shoes are necessary for all other purposes. Sheer, cowbeby effects are best. Don't trust to a heavier weave. Chiffon will do more—very much more.

If you feel the need of another frock, a jumper dress will usually offer plenty of co-operation. Wear it with blouses that have voluminous sleeves. Satin has a certain sheen to it that usually catches a man's eye when the early lamps are lighted whenever you have gone to tea. Crepe is nice—but satin sparkles.

Remember that an understanding of hats has its place as much as a comprehensive knowledge of higher mathematics.

A swagger coat of tweed to match a tweed suit, gets along with the skirt quite as well as the jacket does. A knitted sweater, with a crew neck, and a felt hat make this ensemble at home at any sports event, or any campus.

Happy Birthday!

Pastor Lutheran Church Here Kinsman Of Exiled Swiss Nobleman Century Ago

BIG SPRING.—The German settlements of Texas, such as Fredericksburg, Warda and others familiar to West Texans, have been the scenes of many romances. Recently another of their romances has come to light with the thread of its colorful story interwoven in the life of Big Spring.

The story had its beginning in Switzerland, more than a century ago. Brought up to date, it continues in the life and work of the Rev. W. C. Buchschacher, pastor of the St. Paul's Lutheran church on North Gregg street here and of the Lutheran church of Midland.

In Eriswy, Canton of Bern, in Switzerland, about the middle of the nineteenth century, young Dan Buchschacher attained his majority with all the promise of a brilliant future that wealth and good breeding could assure. He fell in love, not with a girl of his own class but with a beautiful peasant girl in his village. His family protested against the match in vain. Young Dan married the girl he loved, probably hoping that the strict class distinctions of his canton would be set aside in this case. He was mistaken. His father promptly disowned and disinherited him.

It was then his duty as the head of a family to care for his bride, a duty for which his life had poorly equipped him. The social position to which he had hopelessly sunk galled his pride and the small income did not provide the comforts he had always known.

When a son was born, a son also destined to be a peasant because the great family of Buchschacher still refused to recognize the marriage, young Dan decided to emigrate for America and make a new start in a new world where class distinctions were of a man's own making.

The new world was not as friendly as he expected it to be. New York City welcomed him as another foreigner with small earning power. His letters containing the small remittances he was able to send his wife did not hold promises of an immediate fortune. Her replies were at first encouraging. Suddenly they ceased. One day he received word that she and the boy had died.

Civil War That was the end of the world for Dan Buchschacher. He could look only to death for relief. The Civil War had just begun and the south was calling for volunteers. Dan was among the first to respond. He was fighting in Brazos, San Antonio when the war was ended. He had lost the sight of one eye and received a hip wound that made him limp for life.

After that he drifted from one thing to another. He built up a successful florist business in New Orleans but a fire swept away his business fortune and his personal effects, leaving him as poor as the day he entered the United States. Bad luck seemed to dodge his footsteps, and death, the only thing he craved, seemed as elusive as ever. He did not know that life was holding back for him in old age its sweetest gift.

This gift was his son, Godfrey. The notice about the son's death was erroneous. The mother died, but the boy lived. Although his grandfather still refused to acknowledge the peasant child, he contributed to his support. The boy grew up in an orphan's home and was educated to be a teacher.

His Son Follows He had inherited his father's pride and, when he reached manhood, life in the village was almost as intolerable for him as it had been for his father. So he too embarked for America.

Immediately upon his arrival in the United States he advertised in the leading Swiss papers for a Dan Buchschacher, but he received no replies. Life was kinder and more pleasant for him than it had been for his father. When he decided to become a minister in the Methodist church, he was sent as a missionary first to Yorktown, Texas, then to Fredericksburg. Through all his wanderings he kept up his inquiries about another Buchschacher.

He went to Algiers, La., and there decided to enter the Lutheran ministry. After this decision the town of Warda called him for its pastor. The members selected him because he was Swiss and therefore unembroiled in the bitter German controversies that had made exiles of so many of them.

Finds His Father In 1892 he went from Warda to a meeting of the Southern District of the Lutheran church in New Orleans. There he found his father.

The circumstances of the meeting were thus: The minister was asked to conduct the funeral for a member of his father's flock who had moved to New Orleans. Most of the mourners were elderly men. Among them was one who had been so impressed with the sermon that he asked the name of the minister and discovered it was the same as his own. Thus it was that the father found the son he had long thought dead, and the son the father he had come to America to seek.

The two went back to Warda where the last years of the old father's life were spent in serenity and happiness.

He lived to see his son's son grow to manhood, enter the ministry and have sons of his own. He lived to see his first great grandson, Walter Godfrey, entertain ambitions of the ministry. At the age of 92, Dan Buchschacher died and was laid to rest in American soil, far from the home of his fathers.

Dan's Son His son served as minister of the Lutheran church at Warda until he was 78 years of age. He passed away in August, 1930, after 49 years of service in that one town. He had three children, watched them grow to manhood, married them and buried them. He had seen Lutheran churches to which he traveled monthly on horseback grow into prosperous parishes with ministers of their own and buildings surrounded by automobiles on Sunday.

He had seen his own congregation, once so poor that only one woman could afford to buy a dress, grow into modern ministry with worn him out in half the time it had his father.

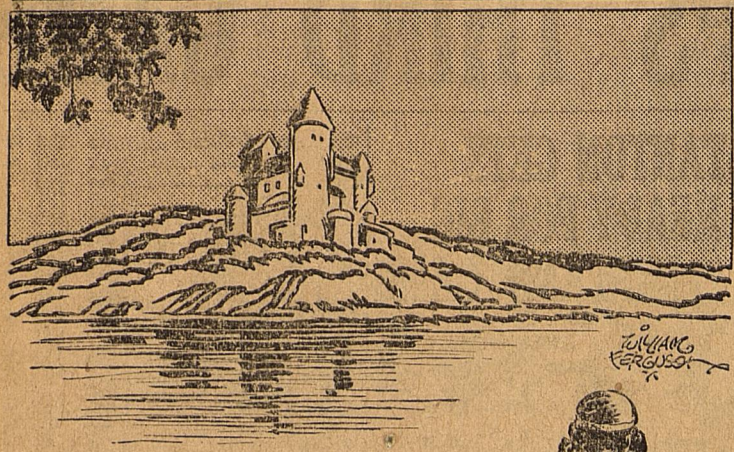

His Grandson The son of the son is the pastor of the St. Paul's Lutheran church of Big Spring—the little light-colored frame building on North Gregg street with its out-fashioned steeple and its Sunday bells. He is the second minister to be located here as a full-time pastor in the history of the city. Before he had served here a year he had done what no other man had been able to do—he had procured a church home for the Lutheran people.

His name is Walter Godfrey Buchschacher. He was graduated in the spring of 1928 from Concordia Seminary in Springfield, Ill., and served here as a pastor that fall, his field including this city and Midland. He was next located here, although he still conducts services twice a month in Loraine and Midland.

GEMMILL'S SUPPORT CRACKS AND HARDWARE COPS THIRD GAME

HARDWAREMEN PARTLY FREE SELVES FROM LOSING JINX, STAGING RALLY THAT NETS A WIN AFTER GAME LOST

By HERB ROUNTREE

The jinx that has pursued Midland Hardware in the current playoff series with the All-Stars lifted last night and the Nocturne winners, still shaky but evidencing more of their usual smoothness, worked nicely in spots behind Joe Pyron and batted out a win in two profitable innings, the sixth and eighth. Until the rally, the leads from the nail and hammer headquarters were in the narrow end of a 3-0 score, but, taking advantage of errors made by the opposing aggregation, snapped into it for an eventual 6 to 4 decision.

The series now stands: All-Stars 2 games, Hardware 1. The fourth game will be played, beginning at 7:30, Thursday evening.

Scotty Gemmill tossed his fast curve ball with the abandon of his old form, his recent back injuries evidently not affecting his delivery last night, but his support was woefully and he could not do the entire night's work of his Hardware alone. His mates made seven errors, the winners counting three.

The hall went into an outburst of cheering when Mrs. Ferguson stepped forward to speak to the delegates. The demonstration continued for a long period. James E. Ferguson and the gubernatorial couple's daughters, Mrs. George Nalle and Mrs. Stewart Watt, both of Austin, all were cheered as they rose to also cheer for "Big Jim."

Governor of All

Mrs. Ferguson said she would be the "governor of all the people."

"I appeal to every patriotic citizen regardless of his political affiliations to lay aside personal feelings and signify his willingness for general cooperation so necessary for the common good," she said. "Let me set the example by declaring here and now that I will welcome advice and counsel of every good citizen as to how best to carry on the affairs of government whether you voted for me in the election or not."

"Let me say to the opposition that I not only need your help but want it, and I crave opportunity to show that I am to be the governor of all the people."

"I congratulate this convention upon its courage to carry out the will of the great democratic masses of our state."

Confident of Outcome

She said her victory at the polls in November was "a foregone conclusion."

Confidence in the outcome also was expressed by James E. Ferguson, who addressed the convention after his wife had made her speech. The throng shouted for "Jim, Jim!" The demonstration when he took the floor was even more intensive than the one that was accorded the nominee.

"We had our fun in the campaign," Ferguson said. "They poured they lost and I poured it on them. They lost and I poured it on them. I want to fight about it, but I don't think that attitude will survive long."

It is the same old crowd that bolted in 1924 and who will be the nominee. My wife will be elected governor of Texas and all hates cannot stop that. If they want to contest her nomination let them hop to it."

Storm Has Passed

"The democrats have recorded their verdict. The storm has passed and we now are looking to the future. I am not taking any notice of this claimed opposition in November. There will always be some disgruntled ones who do not want to take their political medicine."

Francis was replaced on the executive committee by T. R. Boone of Wichita Falls. There was an uproar when the move to leave Francis off started. Many delegates tried to address the chairman. Some of them tried to the stage, where former Senator Paul Page of Bastrop was trying to make himself heard to denounce the Fergusons.

The Fergusons were sitting near Page and at one stage of the controversy Mrs. Ferguson showed a disposition to pour oil on the troubled waters, but she never did intervene.

Maury Hughes Named

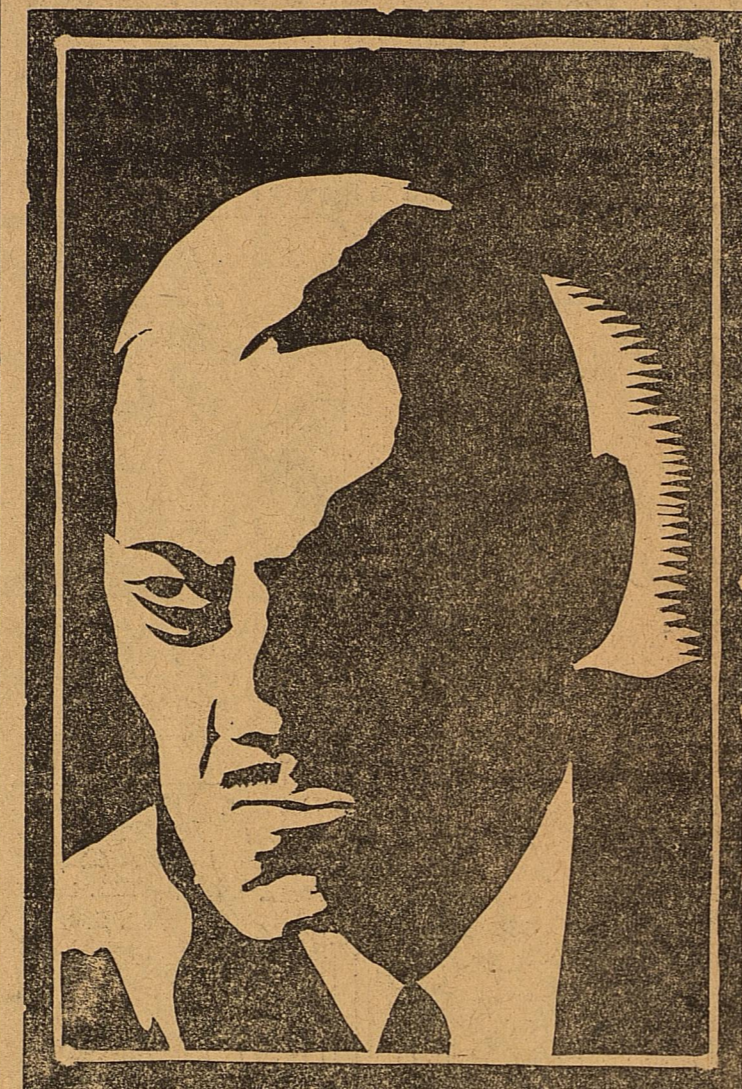

Maury Hughes, of Dallas, was made chairman of the new state executive committee. C. C. McDonald of Wichita Falls was temporary chairman and keynote. John H. Bickett, Jr., of San Antonio was permanent chairman.

The convention called on the new executive committee, before they were nominated to pledge themselves to support the nominees of the party from "governor to constable" and to stand behind the national party standard bearers.

Owsley told the convention that "Texas needs Jim Ferguson and Miriam; Texas will be true to them and they will be true to Texas."

"This is a great hour of satisfaction for those who followed them so

BARRYMORE GIVES GOOD ADVICE TO MIDLAND MEN

Lionel Barrymore, one of movie-dom's greatest stars, gives the advice to Midland men that at this time of year you are as conspicuous in a straw hat as you would be with an elephant at a Democratic Convention.

He also advises that good felt hats have never been cheaper in all his remembrance, with the wonderful quality that you will find in the popular priced hats that are for sale at Wilson Dry Goods Co. This firm is selling brand new Fall Stetson hats at $4.85, and exact reproductions of Stetson and Borsolino hats at $2.85 and $3.85.

Barrymore knows clothes styles and he knows screen styles. He is to appear in one of his masterpieces at the Yucca Theatre tomorrow, entitled "The Washington Masquerade."

Take Barrymore's advice about the Felt for sale by Tommie Wilson and the performance he will give at the Yucca Thursday and Friday, and remember that Honey Boy and Sasafra, great radio stars, will appear in person at the same time in vaudeville acts.

Irwin Not Given Much of a Chance

Chances of a Midland boxer, Tommy Irwin, lasting out his semi-final bout with Jack Kirkland of Waco, when the two meet Friday night on the fight card at the Big Spring Casino, are not great in the eyes of the Big Spring fistic public, the sports editor, Curtis Bishop of the Big Spring Herald, points out.

"This department," writes Kirkland, "despite the nice record of knockouts Irwin has piled up," Bishop writes. He says, in part:

"Jack Kirkland, labelled the 'knockout artist' from Waco, will tackle Tommy Irwin on Friday's bill at the Casino. Kirkland has beaten, among other people, young Kid Williams of the Wellington flash. To do justice to Ray Simmons' protegee, the Waco lad carried a weight advantage of around 15 pounds. Irwin of Midland has done fairly good scuffling, but he admits himself he is not in the best condition he can summon."

Midland-Amarillo Cattleman Is Sad Because He Quit

Sadness came into the face of O. P. Jones, veteran Waco Texas rancher, when he talked to friends in Midland Wednesday about being out of the cattle business temporarily.

"It makes me a little sad to think of quitting the cattle business for three years," he said.

Jones went into the cow business 37 years ago. "I had one cow then and I won't have any after Sept. 20. It will be the first time since 1875 I haven't owned a cow," the Midland-Amarillo man said, but he added, brightening up, "I'll be back in the cattle business after three years."

Recently Jones sold his cattle and leased his Midland ranch to Mabey & Pyle for three years. Jones said his health was not the best and the strain of the business had decided him to take a brief vacation. The biggest herd he ever owned was 3,000 head.

Big Spring Lions Entertain Today

The Big Spring Lions club entertained the Midland club today with a program of songs, instrumental numbers and address. Midland will entertain Big Spring Friday.

These exchange programs between the two clubs were arranged by J. S. Noland, chairman of the Midland entertainment committee.

Miss Gay accompanied by Miss Speedman played two violin numbers, followed by E. W. Potter who sang two baritone numbers. The Reverend Spaw, pastor of the First Methodist church in Big Spring, concluded the program with an inspirational address on the subject, "Are We Kidding Ourselves?"

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14. (UP).—The census bureau today reported 402,091 bales of cotton consumed in the United States in August, compared with 423,030 a year ago. The weatherman said cotton picking and ginning had made rapid progress last week, aided by favorable weather. The week was rainless except in limited areas in southeast parts of the state.

AUSTIN, Sept. 14. (UP).—The house attacked the "unjustified selling" of cotton by speculators on issuance of the federal report and voted for a congressional probe of the exchange today. It asked particularly for elimination of "gambling features."

George B. Terrell, congressman elect, offered the resolution. The resolution to probe activities of the Humble Oil & Refining company was not finished.

Good Political Film at Yucca

The first political picture of our hectic political annum is at the Yucca today.

In the general election year, with primaries, conventions and elections spotting the nation; with candidates from poundkeeper to president engaging the voters, "The Dark Horse" a First National picture, affords a most timely glimpse of behind-the-scenes activities of political leaders.

Yesterday's criticism reaching the management of the Yucca, put "The Dark Horse" in the running as one of the standout screen offerings of the year. Aside from its timeliness, the picture apparently is an authentic story of political manipulation, high-lighted by comedy and melodramatic action in which Warren William, the sensation of "The Mouthpiece," plays the role of a "maker of men."

Bette Davis, triumphant in "The Man Who Played God," starring George Arliss, "So Big," and "The Rich Are Always With Us," both Chatterton's latest successes. Guy Kibbee and Vivienne Osborne, both featured contract players of the Warner Bros.-First National studios, all have important roles.

Red Haired Stars Dominate Team

RALEIGH, N. C. (UP).—There will be an unusually large number of red heads playing on the North Carolina State college football team this fall.

Among them are Capt. William "Red" Espey, at center; "Red" Uley, at one of the tackle berths; "Red" Stevens at end, and possibly "Red" Blair at the other tackle position. Behind the line there will be two redheaded halfbacks, "Red" Goodwin and "Red" McAdams.

STANTON GETS READY FOR BIG MIDLAND GAME

By ELLIS ZIMMERMAN

STANTON—Rain or shine, 28 corn-fed huskies are working out for places on the Stanton grid machine.

Prospects were never better for another championship club this fall. There are six lettermen back, and a number of last year's cubs who will see more action this fall. A small, but shifty backfield, with a heavy experienced line is expected to go places this year. Almost a month's hard training lies between the Buffs and their first game.

The Hydeman will swing into action September 29th, when they will meet the Midland Bulldogs on Lackey field. This is the old grudge battle.

Battling a Class A team, it is natural to suppose that the Buffs—Class B—will have little prospect for cabbaging the victory in this game, but if this scribbler misjudges not, the Doggies will have all they can "chevy" if they leave the field with the long end of the score.

Weighing out, the scribe finds that the Buffs' weights range from 100 to 188 pounds, and we observed they averaged approximately 153 pounds to the player, which is an exceptionally good average for a club of this size. They average slightly larger than the Midland club.

Here is the Buffalo squad, individual weight, position and experience:

Texas Cotton Is Smuggled to Mex.

BROWNSVILLE (UP).—Conditions reminiscent of Civil war days are taxing vigilance of officials on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande as a result of a camp to smuggle Texas grown cotton into Mexico.

Mexican cotton growers in the vicinity of Matamoros are receiving eight cents a pound for cotton as compared to five cents being paid generally on the Texas side of the Rio Grande. Several cargoes of staple have been intercepted.

The situation recalls to settlers Civil war days when a large quantity of United States grown cotton was smuggled into Mexico to escape the Federal blockade.

The higher price is paid the Mexican growers because of that government's extensive campaign to encourage the manufacturing of cotton cloth.

"We needn't rush home—my electric range has started dinner"

Fall shopping days are here and for the first time you needn't fret about dashing home in the middle of the afternoon to fuss and worry about dinner—all you need to do is to put the dinner in the oven early in the day, set the automatic controls and go on your way.

At the proper time, the heat comes on, the proper temperature is attained, the meal cooks itself perfectly and the heat turns off. When you return from downtown, the only thing left to do is to set the table and enjoy the food. Call for a demonstration of electric cookery—don't stay tied to your kitchen any longer.
