of Dewey Edwards, negro orchestra member, would be in the hands of the jury about 3 o'clock.
County Attorney Duke Kimbrough began the arguments. He was to have been followed by Attorney Tucker of Stanton, who with Sam Wasaff of Midland conducted the case for the defense. District Attorney W. R. Smith was to close the arguments for the state.

The negress shot Edwards to death when the two met in a hall of the negro hotel in Southwest Midland. They had lived together, it was testified in court, and had a difficulty after another woman with whom Edwards had lived had forced him to choose between them.
He was shot down a few nights after he had decided to live with the other woman.

Another negro murder case will be tried Wednesday. Searcy Baker, defendant, is charged by indictment

Case of Jack Hall

PECOS. Sept. 20.—The case of Jack Hall, charged with murder for slaying T. C. Barnsley went to the jury late Monday. Attorneys had argued seven hours.

The case had been on trial before District Judge J. A. Drane here for eight days. Hall, a cowboy well-known over a large part of West Texas, claimed that he shot Barnsley, a ranchman of Ward and Crane counties, fearing that the latter would kill him. They had had trouble over a land lease.

Hall was convicted at a trial in Crane county and given a 30-year sentence. The case was reversed and brought here from Midland on a chamber of commerce from

A WORTHY AMENDMENT

One bit of good news that almost passed unnoticed in the crush of more spectacular doings was the fact that Texas recently added its ratification to the lame duck amendment to the U.S. constitution.

This, of course, is the amendment which would advance the date of presidential inaugurals and congressional session openings from March to January, and which would, thereby, do away with the evil of the "short term" in which defeated congressmen legislate for the country after having been rejected at the polls.

Fifteen states have now ratified the amendment. Twenty-one more must do so before the amendment goes into effect. It is to be hoped that these 21 ratifications will be obtained without delay during the coming winter legislative sessions.

It is worth repeating, once more, that here is an amendment which simply cannot be opposed on any ground except that of selfish partisan politics. There can te no excuse for defeating it, or even for delaying ratitication. Citizens in states which have not yet passed on ic would do well to insist that their legislatures take it up at the earliest possible moment.

BULLDOGS PROGRESS SLOWLY, STANTON ONLY 7 PRACTICES OFF

BARRY ADMITS HE'S WORRIED; CLUB NOT SNAPPING INTO SHAPE AS FAST AS EXPECTED; SEVEN MEN LOOKING GOOD

With the annual Midland-Stanton classic only seven practices off, Coach Barry is losing sleep over what he calls his annual "nightmare."

"There are about seven of the men I have counted on to start the Stanton game who are showing all the improvement that I could ask for, but the other four and practically all the reserves are not picking up the fundamentals as fast as I had hoped. They are particularly weak in blocking and timing of the plays and in tackling."

The Bulldogs will be led this year by Captain G. B. Hailman, who is holding the fullback position for the fourth consecutive year. Hallman is holding the fullback position for the fourth consecutive year. Hallman is particularly famous to the fans as a line plunger. The coaches prize him most highly as a blocker and tackler but think he is as good a ball toter as there was in the district last year, and they plan to cut him loose with the ball this year on end runs as well as line plunges. The Midland coaches do not hesitate to declare that, in their opinion, Hallman was the best all-around back in the district last year.

"With the possible exception of Dennis, none of the star backs who received so much publicity last year were in the same class with Hallman either as a blocker, tackler, or pass receiver." Barry says. Hallman probably will call the signals this year and back up the line on the defense.

Allen Sherrod, Tom Collins and Bill Hogsett are the only other lettermen on the squad this year. These men are coming up to the coaches' expectations and will be the nucleus of the team. Hill and Parr at guards and Bonner at end are showing great promise and will be as good, if not better, than were the men whose places they are taking. Myrie Welch at tackle and "Stink" Dorsey at end are two big boys in the first string line who must improve considerably in their blocking to play Class A football. Gordon Jones and Jo

Evans, Mills, Jack Prothro, and Johnnie Sherrod are the light weight second team linemen who must approach perfection in skill to make up for lack of weight, if they are to get in the battles.

The second team backfield is still a problem. All the boys except Rick Lewellen are light and inexperienced. On the whole, however, they are fast, and they seem to have a good deal of natural ability and determination. Among these backs are: John Nobles, Hunter Midkiff, Sam Midkiff, Sam Jones, J. D. Montgomery and Clyde Chandler. In another week these boys will have their plays learned and timed to where they can really show up behind a good line.

"I'm so glad!" Blondie said, sincerely.
"Sweet kid!"
"Goodbye, mister!" and Blondie held out her hand with a little smile.
"Mister yourself!" and Larry suddenly nulled her terms then then then then then then then signals.

Coach Barry was voluble in his praise for Rick Lewellen, now sectond string back. Barry said that as soon as Rick had proven his ability to block that some man on the first team would lose his position unless more life were showed. Barry explained that he was satisfied with Rick's ball-carrying ability, but that proficiency in all departments would increase his value to the team. "Ch, don't talk to me — you'd sneak him now if you could."

Escape from 'Lady Dynamo' Role Taken From Mad Cap Eva

One, two, three, four more years—she became 34, and still no escape. The old pep was going—but how was an audience to know that!

The whirling speed was now so great that Blondie could hardly talk. Lurline's answer was another jab of her fingernalis. Blondie almost cried out in pain Blood was occase from the in pain. Blood was oozing from the clincked hands of the girls.

As Blondie and Lurline were about to face the audience with their mad whirl Lurline spayled: to face the audience with their mad whirl Lurline snarled:

"I... hate... you... get i... away... from ... me!"

Suddenly she pulled her hand free was on the end of the line, like the cracker on a whip. She flew into the air with terrific speed. The grip on her other hand broke. As though shot from a gun she catapulted across the footlights and fell into the orchestra pit.

There was a mighty scream from the audience. A musician leaped high in the air. On the stage girls went tumbling head over heels. The curtain came down with a thud.

"Keep the show going!" shouted o'Brien.

Attempts Come-Back The dynamic one went up country for a rest. But came back. More years—and by 1923 she was selling at auction the luxuries that cluttered her summer home. The "Drive" place had already been abandoned Someone said that to look like her old self she would have to have her
