The candidates selected for final examinations will be required to appear before the state committee on or about May 6. These scholarships are open to eighth grade boys, not less than 13 nor more than 15 years of age on April 1, 1933.

Four scholarships in Culver Military academy are to be awarded in 1933. These scholarships are among a group of twelve established by the board of trustees of the academy in memory of the wife of the founder, and are known as the Emily Jane memory of the wife of the founder, and are known as the Emily Jane Culver scholarships. They are valued at $4,500 each and cover all costs for board, room, and tuition, which is $1,500 a year, for three full school years and lead to a Culver diploma upon satisfactory completion of the course. They do not cover traveling expenses nor the cost of uniforms, books, and miscellaneous personal needs. The selected ous personal needs. The selected scholars will need funds of their own for these requirements, which are enumerated elsewhere. The states selected for the 1933 awards, effective for the school year beginning next September, are: Iowa, Tennessee, Texas, and Wis-consin. The examinations in each lowa, Tennessee, Texas, and Wisconsin. The examinations in each state will be uniform and will be conducted under the auspices of a committee of the state's leading edurators. Applicants must take the examination in the state in which they permanently reside.

The Emily Jane Culver awards are limited to hove whose parents do amination in the state in which they permanently reside.

The Emily Jane Culver awards are limited to boys whose parents do not have sufficient means to pay their tuition, board, and room in Culver. Only boys whose parents have a total annual income not exeeding $6,000 are eligible to enter the competition.

The donors intend these awards

The donors intend these awards to go to boys whose achievements and prospects are not limited solely to gifted scholarship. The scholarships are aimed as a stimulus to the all-round merits that will contribute most to responsible and useful citizenship. With this objective the applicants will be judged on such points as character, mentality, scholarship, general ability, initiative and originality, physical fitness, faculty for social adjustment and emotional stability. Boys who are making able use of their talents and opportunities will be preferred.

Jimmie Lee has long been in love with Mary Howard, a successful young writer of thirty-one. Just as Jimmie suspects, Mary and her publisher, Rogers Woodruff, are deeply in love. Rogers is married and Mary, believing his wife and he no longer love each other, refuses to let him secure a divorce until they are sure secure a divorce until they are sure of their own love.

In Mary's new novel the heroine, a young weman about Mary's age, lives a year with a married man with whom she is in love, and at the end of that time goes to the wife and explains the situation. The wife, being "intelligent," divorces the husband who then marries the heroine. Rogers has almost persuaded Mary to do as the lady of her book, although he prefers to do his own telling, when the right time comes.

The two are spending the weekend with a mutual friend, Mrs. Bridget Drake, at her summer home in Connecticutt. They plan to rewrite the last chapter of the book—the chapter, ending of which they cannot agree upon, Rogers believing that the heroine would not go to the wife.

Rogers receives a phone call to return to town on urgent business While he is absent Jimmie Lee en While he is absent Jimmie Lee enters accompanied by Mrs. Rogers Woodruff, a very charming woman of thirty-five. Jimmie has become "lost"—quite intentionally. He suspects that Mary and Rogers are together at "Bridgies" and he has a plan to prevent Mary from doing anything for which she would later be sorry. Claire Woodruff has no idea what is going on and consents to be taken as Jimmie's distant cousin, assuming the alias of Mrs. Clara Claire. She supposes her part is assin, assuming the alias of Mrs. Clara Claire. She supposes her part is assisting Jimmie to arouse Mary's interest in him. Of course Jimmie is the only one present who knows her true identity. Mary and Claire are greatly attracted to one another. Because of a storm Jimmie and Claire are forced to spend the night. Claire are forced to spend the night.

Bridgie gives Claire the room adjoining Mary's, so that they may be together to discuss Mary's new book. This room was to have been occupied by Rogers and Bridge instructs the butler to inform Rogers of the change in case he returns that night. Mary desires a woman's opinion of the new novel and was quite happy that Claire was familiar with her former publications. She finds Clara Claire believes, as did Rogers, that the girl in the story would not go to the wife and tell her that she had lived with her husband; that this plot was not true to her that she had lived with her husband; that this plot was not true to life. At Mary's "Now you sound like Rogers," Claire suddenly realizes this is her husband's latest love, the latest of a great many, the new interest of which she had been fully aware, and she sees how truly in love Mary is and how right she feels it is to love him.

love Mary is and how right she feels it is to love him.

At this point Rogers unsuspectingly enters and Mary learns who Claire realy is. Rogers says, "It is Miss Howard's book I am working on."

Claire: "Yes, of course. Miss Howard asked me if I thought the two women could talk to each otherbut it seems to me that it is up to the man to do the talking, don't you think so, Rogers? Don't you think so, Rogers? Don't you think that he ought to tell both women which one he wants to spend the rest of his life with?"

Jimmie and Mary are interrupted by Claire, who has also arisen early to ask Jimmie to take her to town, When Jimmie goes to dress the twe women try to discuss the situation, but are immediately joined by Rogers, and Mary learns in the following scene that, as he has done in every other of his love affairs, Rogers wishes to go back to his wife Mary goes outside, and Claire tells Rogers that her love for him has suddenly died, that she has seen Mary's heart and soul, and "knows so well how he made her love him like that." She leaves in Jimmie's car, by herself, saying to Bridge and Jimmie, who has just entered, "But I am not going home, now, or ever." Rogers follows, alone Jimmie explains to the uncomprehending Bridgie and they are joined by Mary, who enlightens them to the fact that Rogers preferred his wife to her. She is told by Bridgie of Claire's last words. Bridgie is sure that now Mary can have him after all. Mary, however, sees it all clearly, that he does not want her if he has to give up his wife, and that Claire will not love him ever again. "It's what I've done to her. I shall never forget her eyes, what she saw." And they all sit staring thoughtfully, as the curtain falls. Mary goes outside, and Claire tells

By relying on the Bible as an infallible record of facts, he says, mankind has been led to commit countless errors. Why, he asks, can't we accept it as an instructive and frequently beautiful account of the evolution of a race's ideas about God and the soul and human destiny, and let it go at that? ANTI-KNOCK

BRONZE HIGH-TEST GASOLI (Worthy Companion of Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil)

"Step-on-It Customer!.. You Have Wings on Your Car"

At thousands of Conoco stations and dealers, old cars are being re-born. Presto! They start at a spark. Z-00-00m! They're away like a flash. The new, bronze, high-test gas does it. It's the talk of the nation today.

Volatility has been jumped way up. This gasoline is almost self-vaporizing. In the cylinder its vapor floats lightly; so dry, so sensitive that one spark sets it aflame. Higher octane rating gives it improved anti-knock quality; makes the motor fire evenly; makes power flow like the deep, swift current of a stream.

All this, plus long mileage, costs not a penny more. Why not put "wings" on YOUR car? Drive in; fill the tank; step out in a great big way.

AIR LINE TO OPEN

BERLIN.—Four air lines are to participate in a proposed new venture for carrying regular air mail between Berlin and Shanghai, beginning this spring.

A German and a German-Russian company will fly the mail from Berlin to Moscow, a Central Russian company will receive the loads at this point and transport them to the Chinese border at Chugutchak, to be transferred to a German-Chinese air line. This line will complete the journey to Shanghai as well as distribute mail to other sections of China.

China.

The combined distance on the proposed route is 6,2520 miles. It will require five days to make the trip, but officials hope to reduce this to three days later. The volume of freight and mail is to be the deciding factor of the frequency of service on the route. No passengers are to be transported at first, but it is planned to include this type of service in the near future.

Mail is now carried from Berlin to Shanghai by train in 17 days and requires six weeks by boat.

In fact, it is even more pronounced in the case of manufacturing and in trade than in agriculture. A very outstanding example of this shifting from high to low cost producing areas is the rise of the Orient as a cotton manufacturing region compared with the relative decline in Europe. An equally striking case is the shift of cotton manufacturing from New England to the South in the United States. This specialization in industry and the consequent of a substantial home market. The significance of the latter may be illustrated by the fact that in 1930 growth of huge metropolitan areas are creating the markets which are making specialization in agriculture

The ability of an enterprise or a region to Mysterious I aty of an enterprise or a region to survive in such times depends on its ability to produce at low cost and on its accessibility to markets. Agriculture in the Southwest has demonstrated its ability not only to maintain the high production levels reached in 1929 but to make substantial increases in spite of the depression. In 1929 the five states of Texas Oklahoma Arkansas Louof Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Lou-isiana and New Mexico had sixty

During the depression years there have been marked increases in acreage devoted to feed grains, annual legumes, hay and seed, and truck and vegetables. In fact, the total increases in acreage devoted to those crops has been over three million crops has been over three million over or over 13 per cent. While there has been an increase in the total land planted to crops in the Southwest since 1929, that accounts for only a small per cent of the increase devoted to these crops. This increase represents declines in cotton acreage. Indeed, according to preliminary estimates of the crop reporting board the land devoted to cotton in the five Gulf southwest states has declined over five million acres since 1929. A substantial part of this five million acres is being planted to eash grains and tary of commerce, used to be one of those Wilsonian progressives and was one of the die-hard McAdoo leaders in the days when McAdoo was a sort of progressive "white hope." Whether Roper is as liberal as he used to be probably doesn't make much difference. Nor do any straight-thinking liberals worry about the social-economic leanings of Secretary of War Dern and Secretary of the Navy Swanson, whose job it is to maintain effective fighting machines.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes have all demonstrated trends of mind diametrically opposed to the beliefs of the really conservative democrats.

Roosevelt defied the old conservative d. F. of L. hierarchy and delighted most liberals by appointment of Miss Perkins. Wallace has supported various "radical" farm relief plans and believes in inflation. The interior department has been a sore spot with republican progressives for years—and now Roosevelt puts a republican progressive at its head.

It is small wonder that Constance Bennett had a consuming desire to play "Rockabye." Rich in emotion, temperament and human desires, it is the sort of characterization every dramatic actress prays for and frinds so seldom. By such roles talent is measured, and Miss Bennett anticipates showing to her admirers a new power and glamor, a new dramatic stature!

The story shows how Judy, frustrated because of scandal in her desire to adopt a child, finds at last agreat love and them is driven, by her very love for children, to make the supreme sacrifice.

Beautiful and more gorgeously gowned than ever, Miss Bennett, moves against a background or smartness and elegance in "Rockabye," which is an adaptation of Lucia Brouder's play by Jane Murfin and Kubee Chasmon.
