Roosevelt Quickly Shoves Farm Relief Through House

SENATE MAY BE DIFFICULT WHEN BILL GOES THERE

President Turns His Attention to Aid of Home Owner

WASHINGTON, Mar. 22, (UP).-President Roosevelt's legislative machinery sped the farm relief bill through the house today, with votes

Balloting came after an nour and a half debate. The measure takes poor land out of production, placing a round-about bounty on reduced cotton acreage and taxing farm products for benefit of the farmers.

The measure now goes to the sen-ate where difficulty is expected.

ROOSEVELT PRESSES FARM RELIEF

WASHINGTON, Mar. 22, (UP).— President Roosevelt today was planning early relief for the small home owner and on farm credits.

A farm mesage soon will seek consolidation of eight credit agencies in one or two bodies, reduce the morteage interest rate and evethe mortgage interest rate and ex-tend time in a general financing scheme.

It was understood that the message would include federal and private mortgages.

Relief for the home owner was believed similar in nature.

The Roosevelt tax program was expected to include reenactment of the cent a gallon federal tax, House Majority Leader Rainey said.

Road Strip Is Nearly Finished

Completion of spreading caliche on the strip of highway between Germania and the Martin county line by the end of the week is expected, after which work on the segment between Germania and the city of Midland will result. From two to three weeks will be required for completion of the latter, it is estimated.

Without interruption, work will then shift to strips west of the city, with the exception of the cutoff, which, it is understood, awaits financial provisions.

The personnel of workers includes drivers for 27 trucks, 12 day labor-ers, six spreaders and several fill men at bridges. Varied Program

GIVING CHILDREN BETTER CHANCE

Lincoln Steffens, old-time muckraker and disillusioned reporter, is a candidate for school trustee in his home town of Carmel, Calif.; and his informally-announced Graves who opposed the race horse bill. In his debate before the house platform indicates that he would make a school trustee of a strange and refreshing newness.

"My principal purpose," he says, "would be to develop the schools to the point where they could really have the signatures of the followeducate. By that I mean that I would work to see that ing:

Pete Flanigan our children are not a repetition of ourselves, but a needed improvement on us."

And how would he do this? Well, he would begin by having a survey made of all the grown-ups, to find out what their "funny certainties" are.

"Then, having made the survey," he says, "I would have the children taught the opposite. This may be a rough method, but it reveals my theory; to get us out of our troubles we must somehow produce children who will have sought to have the race bill of the weak. It is with a manily produce children who will have somehow the some have been somehow produce children who will have some have been somehow to be a somehow who will have somehow the som our troubles we must somehow produce children who will develop into grown-ups utterly different from us."

Here is a notion which almost every grown-up has had at one time or another. To look into a schoolyard full of bright, lively youngsters is to feel both lifted up and depressed. The children was a notion which almost every grown-up has discovered in Massachusetts. He was jilted by a spinster 55 years ago and he went out and carved the following opitary and carv and depressed. The children are so unspoiled, so eager, so ready to be filled full of the faith that can move mountains—but just as this thought encourages you, you reflect that in 20 years or so they will simply be grown men and women no better and no worse than we ourselves are today.

Somewhere along the way the brightness gets worn off and the eagerness gets dulled, and instead of faith there comes disillusionment, and year by year the world's follies and stupidities get repeated by a tribe of adults who are not recognizably better than their fathers and mothers.

I believe this story was in one of Mr. Hogan's articles last week but it was sent in again yesterday by Ben Stanley, who clipped it from an Oklahoma paper. It's a good story:

An old Indian wanted to take a hunting trip and needed the sum of $20.00, so he went to the bank to borrow that amount. The bank-to borrow that amount are an object to the monster and at the head of the monster and at the hea

Probably all of us have mused over this melancholy fact now and again. We might not be quite ready to adopt Mr. Steffens' scheme, for it would be a drastic one, and if carried out it might leave us, in our old age, lonely strangers in a world which our children had re-made. But it's an idea that bears thinking about, just the same. The welfare of the world depends ultimately on the emergence of people who are wiser and kinder and in all ways better folk than we ourselves are.

Stuffed Baked Apples

1½ cups sugar 1/4 cup water 6 apples

1 or 2 bananas 1 tablespoon butter 6 marshmallows

Make a syrup by boiling sugar and water together three minutes. Core apples and pare the tops. Fill cavities with thinly sliced bananas and arrange in a baking pan. Pour the syrup over them and bake about half an hour until tender, in a moderate oven (385° F.) When done, dot each apple with a little butter and baste well with remaining syrup; then place marshmallow on each and put them back into the oven to brown. This is a new combination that will please the children and the will please the children and the benefit and to the disadvantage of other European countries. In order to make further progress toward peace, France must be induced to join with Italy and England and then Germany must be brought in to the general agreement.

Mussolini evidently followed the same course which Italy did during the world war when she waited to see which side was most likely to win and then repudiated her treaty with Germany and joined the allies. No matter how diplomatically the matter is handled by the press, the fact remains that Hitler lost his principal element of power when Italy practically deserted him and his war-like plans.

Whatever the outcome may be it

Whatever the outcome may be it is the greatest drama of world diplomacy staged in modern times. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that the white man's civilization is at stake. An European war at this time would undoubtedly leave Japan the dominant nation of the world. The greatest menace of the whole situation lies in the fact that neither Mussolini nor Hitler can bring prosperity to their people under their dictatorship. Italy's economic structure is beginning to fold up. Hitler cannot even start to fill his grandiose promises to the German people. Under such circumstances in all history the choice of incompetent
