7-Year Chess Game Is Ended

PORTLAND, Ore. (UP)—Walter J. Dodge, Portland, recently completed a chess game that started in 1926, seven years ago, and believes he holds a record of some kind.

His opponent was George S. Dodge, Montebello, Cal., a brother-in-law.

First contests were completed in 1926, after a mere four years of cogitation and planning of moves.

Six-inch cardboard chess boards, which can be folded, were used. The positions of the men after each move were plainly marked and erased on the board.

Death Takes Fred Cowden, Aged Ranchman, Financier

Spots in Today's News

W. Fred Cowden, 74, famous with other members of his family in the history of cattle raising in West Texas, succumbed early this morning to an illness which has affected his health for several years.

Death came at his Midland home, 208 South I.

Funeral rites will be read at the residence at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon. Interment will be in the family lot at Fairview.

The life of the aged cattleman closely interlinks itself with the progress of this country. He came to Midland proper in the early '90s and immediately began to prosper.

Children of the hardy pioneer family were: Eliza Quintilla (Mrs. I. H. Bell of El Paso); Johnson Cowden, (the late Mrs. James Lafayette of Snyder); Martia Caroline (the late Mrs. John S. Strawn of Straw); W. F. Cowden; Jeff Cowden; David Cowden; the late George Franklin Cowden; the late J. Thomas Cowden of Abilene, and E. Walter Cowden.

The proposed national strike of farmers has been called off, but Wisconsin dairy farmers are going right ahead with their blockade to force higher prices.

If the mails were a little late out around Ravenswood, Ind., no one ought to complain. For here is Postmaster Roy Goodpasture in his boots in front of his postoffice during recent floods which followed heavy rains in Indiana and Illinois.

FARM SESSION IS HELD HERE THIS SATURDAY

Farm women and men will hold an all-day session in Midland Saturday to take part in a program arranged by Miss Myrtle Miller, county home demonstrator.

The day will start at 11 a. m. with a demonstration in cheese making. Miss Miller will show country and town women how to make American cheese, "the store bought" variety.

At noon, the people will eat luncheon. Each person is expected to bring a dish of some kind of food. The luncheon as well as the 10 and 11 o'clock meetings will be held in the assembly room of the home demonstration office of the court house.

The meeting will adjourn at 2:30 for all to enjoy the Arkansas Traveler band concert and the horse shoe pitching contest.

Graduation exercises for the seventh grade at the Cotton Flat school will be held Friday night, beginning promptly at 8 o'clock.

Instead of a drawing, the chamber of commerce retailers committee has substituted a program of music and a horse shoe pitching contest.

Midlanders are invited to attend.

CATTLE TRADING IN MIDLAND ACTIVE FOR PAST WEEK, THE RECORDS SHOW

Cattle trading for the past week has been active, shipping reports show.

Shipments Tuesday included twenty cars, or about 1,000 head, to the Eads Commission company, Eads, Colo., consisting of steer yearlings bought from Foy Proctor, Frank Orson and the firm of Mabee, Eyle and Proctor.

MARTIAL LAW IN WISCONSIN VIOLENCE AREA

SHAWANO, May 18. (UP)—Virtual martial law was in force here today as 1,500 men patrolled this section of Wisconsin to prevent outbreak of violence in the milk strike.

Three new national guard units were in the field and 750 guardsmen were held ready if needed.

An anonymous letter threatened the Beloit Daily News with bombing unless it changes its attitude toward the strike.

Sorry Calf Put In Cans and Its Value Balloons

A sorry little old mixed breed jersey and shorthorn calf worth $6 on hoof, advanced a little over 400 per cent in value Wednesday.

Miss Myrtle Miller, county home demonstration agent, did something to the little calf that made him climb from a meager $6 value to a value of over $25—she canned the brute!

The calf was nine months old and small, but he made 96 No. 3 cans and 28 No. 2 cans of soup, roast beef, rolled roast, steaks, meat loaf, chili and tongue stew.

About 50 people attended the demonstration in the John Scharbauer building in the 200 block on East Wall street.

BLATANT VOICE OF HITLER ANCHOR TO HOPES OF ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The recent happening in Germany put in jeopardy the success of the World Economic conference which meets next month.

Neighbors are now thankful that they never relaxed their military preparedness and it will be like talking against the wind to ask them now to reduce their armaments.

Three major issues must be settled by that conference if it is to be a complete success. These issues are disarmament, tariffs and stabilization of currencies.

ARMED ESCORT IS RETURNING THEM TO LINE

Had Been Held in a Wild Section of Coahuila

ALPINE, May 18. (UP)—C. L. Hamhold and John Rollins, American ranchers who were kidnaped when they rode into Mexico May 9 seeking stolen horses, were being returned from Ocampo to Boquillas, border town, today, protected by a Mexican formation.

The report that Hamhold and Rollins were safe ended plans to send a punitive expedition of armed cowboys and ranchers into Mexico.

C. L. Hamhold, father of Art, had told Mexican officials he would invade the country after Balzo's outlaw if the son was not released.

Fear for the safety of the American cattlemen was pressed last night as authorities swung into action to bring about their rescue.

Art Hamhold and John Collins, each about 35 years old, had been missing since May 9, when they rode away from the Hamhold ranch near San Vicente on the trail of four horses stolen by rustlers.

About 20 miles from the river they were surrounded suddenly by a score of bandits headed by Candelario Balzo desperate wanted in the United States for murder and by both Mexican and American authorities for cattle rustling.

Telegrams signed by county officials and the American Legion here were sent to Congressman R. E. Thomson in Washington, advising him of the seriousness of the cattlemen's plight.

Thomson advised that the state department had taken up the matter with American consular officials at Pedras Negras, and Saltillo, 200 miles southeast of Ocampo, and with Mexico City.

The father was waiting, however, until it could be determined whether release could be effected through diplomatic channels. It was feared that unless prompt action was taken the Americans might be "adobado" that is, taken out and summarily shot.

Regains Citizenship After Four Years

SPOKANE, Wash. (UP)—After being deprived of her vote, passport, and shorn of her life savings when a bank was forced to the wall, one woman thinks that 72-year-old Mrs. H. A. Charles would be quite unhappy and discontented.

But the little blue-eyed lady is smiling now for after four years of estrangement from citizenship because of jaw revision, it was an American citizen, and able to vote.

She had voted at all elections for many years until four years ago. The citizenship ruling, which deprived her of her citizenship also deprived her the right to a passport when she wished to visit a sister in Denmark.

A widow since 1909, she saw all her savings—the result of painstaking needlework—vanish when a bank closed. But she believes her troubles are now at an end. For the new deal has resulted in naturalization for her.

WASTED EDUCATION

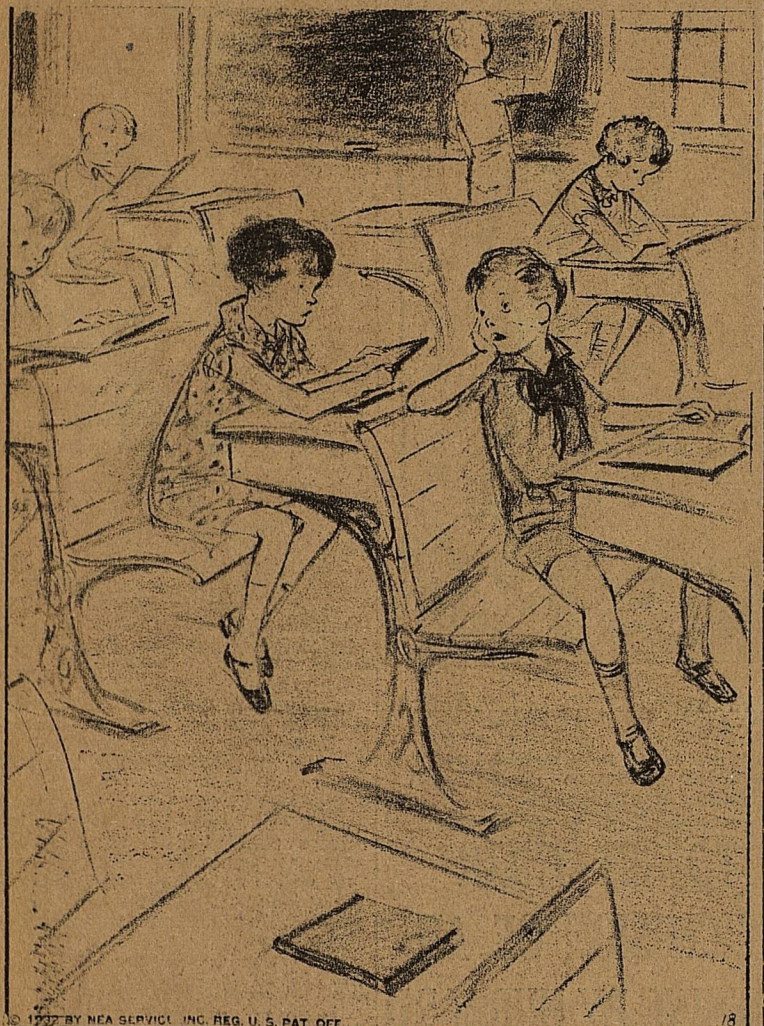

That delegation of college graduates in cap and gown who visited Washington to call attention to the plight of the student who gets a diploma and then finds there isn't the shadow of a job for him emphasizes one of the most tragic aspects of the whole depression.

All through these difficult years our colleges have been industriously training young men and women for leadership; and whatever the colleges' shortcomings, they have in the main done a good job and they have had fine material to work with.

Not least among the wastes caused by the depression is this waste of brain power.

Reviewing the last fifteen years, we reach the conclusion that it would also be advisable in time of war to prepare for peace.

Mothers' Self Culture Club Holds Last Meeting of Year Wednesday Afternoon; All Officers Will Serve Another Term

The final meeting of the Mothers' Self Culture club was held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. N. Swanson, 811 North D street. Mrs. J. M. Haygood was co-hostess.

A program on American Indians was presented with Mrs. Fred Wright, program leader, reading a paper entitled "American Indians—A National Problem." She was assisted by Mrs. Earl Payne who described Indian art and craft. These talks were illustrated with rugs, blankets, pottery, jewelry and beaded work obtained from various Indian tribes. The display is owned by Midland women.

To further emphasize the Indian theme, Mrs. Leon Goodman sang "Pale Moon." She was accompanied by Miss Edna Marie Jones.

Seven guests, including Mrs. Goodman, Miss Jones and Mmes. Rose, Little, Don Carlos Davis, Miller and Harper, were present. Two incoming members, Mmes. J. R. Martin and J. W. Day, were also in attendance.

At the close of the meeting, the hostess served an attractive salad course.

ORGANIZED IN YEAR OF 1925

This club was organized in 1925, became a member of the Texas Federation of Women's clubs in 1926 and of the General Federation of Women's clubs in 1929.

Simpson, J. M. Speed, C. N. Swanson, Allen Tolbert, Fred Turner, Frank Wolcott, Fred Wright, W. E. Whitcomb and J. D. Young.

The next meeting will be held on Oct. 4.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Mexican Salad

- 1 cup bread crumbs
1/4 cup olive oil
3 slices onion
1/2 cup diced celery
1 cup diced potato
1 pint tomato
1/2 cup shaved onion
1/2 cup shaved carrot
2 tbsps. green pepper
1 cup cooked beans
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. paprika
2 tbsps. vinegar

Heat 1 tsp. olive oil, add onion, the bread cubes, and cook until light brown. Remove onion, add remaining oil, vegetables, seasoning, and vinegar. Serve with lettuce or watercress. Save the vinegar from bottle pickles and use it in making French dressing. Its pungent, spicy flavoring makes delicious dressing.

Henry Ford Dearborn, Mich.
May 15, 1933
Time and again I am told—by my own organization and by others—that I penalize myself by quality. Friendly critics protest our putting into the Ford V-8 what they call "twenty-year steel." They say such quality is not necessary; the public does not expect it; and that the public does not know the difference anyway. But I know the difference. I know that the car a man sees is not the car he drives—he drives the car which the engineer sees. The car which is seen, comprises beauty of design, color and attractive accessories—all desirable, of course. The best evidence that we think so is that they are all found on the Ford V-8. But these are not the car. The car proper, which is the basis of all the rest, is the type of engine and its reliability; the structure of chassis and body, ruggedly durable; the long thought and experiment given to safety factors; the steady development of comfort, convenience and economy. These make the car. A car can be built that will last two or three years. But we have never built one. We want the basic material of our car to be as dependable the day it is discarded as the day it is bought. Ford cars built 15 years ago are still on the road. It costs more to build a durable car—but two items we do not skimp are cost and conscience. A great many things could "get by"—the public would never know the difference. But we would know. The new Ford V-8 is a car that I endorse without any hesitancy. I know what is in it. I trust our whole thirty years' reputation with it. It is even better than our previous V-8. It is larger, more rugged and mechanically a better job all round. I readily say this in an advertisement because I know the car will back it up. Henry Ford

The WOMAN I STOLE

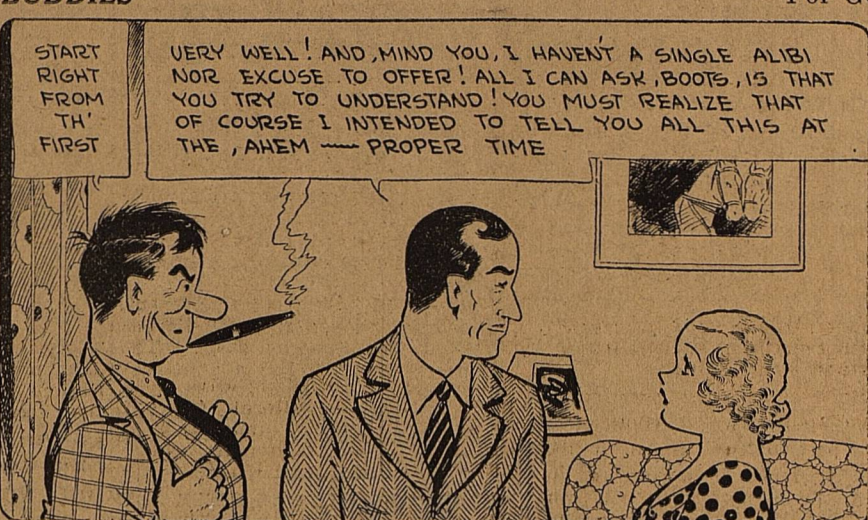

Jim Bradier, founder of the Alianza Petroleum Corporation in Northern Africa, returns to the oil fields after a long trip in America. He is in love with Vida Corew, wife of Stephen Corew, superintendent of the Alianza. General Rayon, leader of a gang of native bandits, has been terrorizing the company with his maraudings, when Bradier, by a bit of strategy, brings Rayon round to his side to protect the Alianza instead of wrecking it. Rayon reveals that he was being paid by George K. Lentz, general manager of the Alianza, who has been double-crossing the company so that he may get complete control. Bradier is set to leave on the steamer at night with Vida. He has just said good-bye to Teresa, a dancing girl of the Sixto Cafe, who is desperately in love with him.

CHAPTER SIX
Bradier walked up into his room in the Imperial Hotel. Corew was sitting in a chair. Bradier, surprised, blurted out:
"What's on your mind? What are you doing here in my room?"
Corew's lips moved—tried to speak—when, suddenly, his body collapsed and toppled off the chair. Bradier rushed over and lifted the inert form and placed it on the chair again. His hand came away bloody.
"Lentz—meant—to—kill you," whispered Corew, with difficulty. "The shot—came from over—there. I came over—there. He slumped over, unconscious."
Bradier was on the phone in an instant and in a few minutes the doctor was working busily on Corew. The door opened. "Lentz! He started back, frightened, at the sight of a live Bradier. Bradier rushed to the door and pulled the covering figure into the room.
Lentz whined, "Bradier, I promise you anything. I'll get out of Africa. Let me live—that's all I want! Please—please—"
"Bradier—" came a whisper. Corew shook his head. Bradier looked at him, hesitated, then with loathing muttered, "Get out! Get out!" Lentz ran from the room. As he ran down the steps from the cafe a shot rang out. He crumpled, dead, his body tumbling grotesquely down the stairs. General Rayon leered out from an adjoining building—a smoking rifle in his hands. He laughed.
Vida Corew, resplendent in revealing underwear around which was draped a loose-flung robe, was busily packing when there was a knock at the door.

"Come in," she called. Bradier entered. "Jim!" She flung her arms around him pressing her lips to his. "Did you get my note?" she asked. "Don't tell me you're packed already? What sort of cabins did you get on the boat? Are they adjoining? Jim—what's the number of my cabin?"
"Twenty-seven."
"Jim, you don't know how glad I am to leave this terrible place! I—" she stopped, noticing his reticent mood. "Why, what's the matter, darling?"
"I don't know just how to tell you," answered Bradier. "I'm sorry—I'm in an awful fog. I had it all arranged in my mind what to say to you, but it got all twisted. It's about Steve."
"What about him?"
"I had him all wrong. I want you to know why I—well, I wanted to get him straightened out before I left."
She sighed relievedly. "Oh, silly!"
"When I got to New York I'm going to make him manager."
"And what will you make me, darling? Mrs. Jim Bradier?"
Bradier walked over to her suddenly and grabbed her arm. "Vida, there's been an accident. Steve's in my room. The doctor's with him now. He was shot!"
Startled, she cried, "Shot? Oh, good heavens! You didn't do it, did you?"
"No, but he got the bullet meant for me," Bradier answered. "Vida's tone was vexed, irritated. "Oh, Jim, don't tell me this is going to postpone our sailing again! I couldn't bear another delay!" The cold-blooded reaction of Vida released the innate savagery in Bradier.
"Why, you—" He glared as though about to hit her. "You'd better call your trunks back. I couldn't stand you on the same boat—I couldn't stand you on the same Continent!"
Bradier slammed the door behind him, leaving Vida in speechless rage.
The doctor was talking to Corew in Bradier's room. "Half an inch lower, my boy, and you wouldn't have needed me at all. As it is, you'll be as good as new in a few days."
"Thank you, doctor," answered Corew. They shook hands. As the doctor walked out, Vida entered. Corew's face was expressionless; Vida's full of concern and pity. (See WOMAN I STOLE, page 4)

Yucca Stages Colorful Revue and Has Thrilling Mystery Screen Attraction

A veritable double show at the Yucca theatre today and Friday, with matinees both afternoons, brings Jimmie Allard and his Southern Brevities to the stage and a Fox picture, "Trick for Trick," featuring Ralph Morgan, Victor Jory and Sally Blaine to the screen.

The vaudeville attraction is something strictly new, according to the billing, in musical revues. The night club stage show brings "the South's favorite comedian," Allard, who has headlined numerous major vaudeville circuits; a musi-girl revue; novel song and dance ensemble; vaudeville specialties; Emmet Powers and his "Louisiana Buddies"; a stage band; the "Dixie Four," a radio quartet; novel song and dance bits,

Woman I Stole

"Stephen, I wish I could tell you how sorry I am. I heard you were hurt and I came right down. I-I couldn't bear to stay away."

"Corey didn't answer. I made a dreadful mistake, Stephen. I was just a silly infatuation. You were right about Jim Bradley. I just told him I couldn't go through with it. They told me you were hurt, and I knew my place was with you, darling." She bent down and put her hand on his shoulder caressingly. She spoke softly. "Stephen—"

Corey pushed her hand away. She straightened, her eyes flashing. "Get out!" said Corey with bitter contempt.

The door slammed loudly behind her as she ran from the room, her eyes black with rage.

Corey sank back on his pillow. His eyes closed later, a long black steamer crept through the night. On it, Jim Bradley, in his stateroom was unpacking his trunk. He yanked out a bottle of cognac. As he started for the sink for a glass, sounds of a wild commotion came to him from outside his cabin door. A woman's voice yelled:

"Leave me alone. I tell you I know him!"

Bradley strode across to the door and pulled it open, revealing Teresa struggling with two sailors.

"She's a stowaway, sir," said one of the men.

"She says she knows you," said the other.

Teresa kicked and struggled. "Jim, tell them you know me! Tell them you will pay for my ticket."

Bradley spoke resignedly. "I know her. I'll pay for her. Let her loose." They relaxed their grips and she threw herself on Bradley. "Shut the door, please," he said.

In the privacy of the cabin, Teresa turned to Bradley. "Look, Bradley, I come in my new dress," she said, "black silk with a golden hem." She reached down and pulled up her dress to show him the embroidered hem revealing her shapely legs. A dagger was stuck in one of her garments.

"Very pretty," said Bradley. "And what's the dagger for?"

"To kill you, if you give one look at the woman you bring with you!" "I haven't brought any woman with me," answered Jim.

"No?" She walked to the communicating door and tried to pull it open.

"Teresa, have sense. I tell you there's nobody there." "I show what a liar you are!" She yanked the door open, then stepped back with an exclamation of surprise. Stephen Corey was in the cabin.

Bradley behind Teresa, gaped in amazement, then a slow grin spread over his face.

"Come in, won't you," invited Corey.

"Don't mind if I do," answered Bradley. He turned to Teresa. "Pour me a drink. Pour two drinks!" She started off to obey his command.

Bradley looked around Corey's cabin. "Are you alone?" he asked. Corey nodded.

"I thought I left you in charge of the company," said Bradley. "You said an office boy could run it. I'm not an office boy."

Teresa brought the drinks. "Have a drink?" Bradley asked Corey.

"Don't mind if I do," said Corey grinning. Suddenly Corey burst into laughter.

"What are you laughing at?" queried Bradley, and then he, too, laughed.

"What are you?" retorted Corey. Between loud roars, Bradley gasped, "I came half way across the world to leave with another man's wife."

16 stars; haunting music; rhythm dancing; lots of comedy and plenty of girls in gorgeous brevity of costumes.

The stage unit will be presented in addition to the regular screen program, announced Manager Bill Blair.

"Trick For Trick" the new Fox mystery melodrama reveals secrets of magic as two magicians vie with each other for superiority.

The film, directed by Hamilton MacFadden is said to show in a simple manner just how two adepts practice the black art. One of them suspects the other of a murder. The other, guilty or not guilty, wants at least to throw the first one off the track. In this parry of wits and magic, they reveal to each other the utmost in their art.

In setting, lighting and musical accompaniment, "Trick For Trick" is said to set a new standard. It is reported as being entirely different from the type of mystery thriller often seen. It sets forth a unification of every element of mystery and suspense known to the cinematic art. As the two magicians, Ralph Morgan and Victor Jory have been preparing for their roles more thoroughly than for any other they have ever played.

The romantic elements of the plot are depicted through the characters portrayed by Sally Blaine and Clifford Jones.

unions and seized their officers and headquarters and installed Nazi officers.

They also took over by equally drastic measures the control of the Steel Helms. The French claim that Hitler now has an effective army of 1,600,000 men.

That is the situation which will confront the American delegation when it presents a demand for disarmament as a preliminary to the reduction of debts due the United States. Certainly the outlook for any material reduction in armaments is not encouraging.

Agreements of tariffs and currencies are nearly impossible in an atmosphere of mutual fear and distrust.

Yet the statesmen of every nation in the world, including Germany, know that there can be neither peace nor prosperity until international agreements on these subjects are reached.

An unsuccessful conference will be worse than none as an acknowledgment of defeat will bankrupt the financial institutions of many of the nations.

It is true that when the Fascists marched on Rome they indulged in all the excesses of speech and action which have marked the Nazi regime, but it is also true that there was no peace in Europe for seven years after that march. France's tremendous military machine of today was built largely as a response to the blatant calls of Mussolini to the Italian people to rebuild the Roman empire. But Mussolini at his worst, and that was pretty bad, never equaled Hitler.

His act in placing the Nazi in charge of all the Protestant churches in Germany and merging them in the state controlled German Lutheran church has never been equaled in modern times.

But the thing which most completely lost the respect and confidence of the world was the spectacle of students from the great universities of Germany burning in the public squares the literature and art of many of the world's greatest authors and artists, including her own.

In the list of authors whose books were destroyed are found Ferdinand La Salle, Carl Marx, Friedrich Engels, August Bebel, Einstein, Erich Maria Remarque, Bertha von Suttner, Thomas Mann (these last two Nobel prizes) Upton Sinclair, Jack London, Morris Hilquit and Helen Keller.

None but utter fools would destroy the writings of the gentle and beloved Helen Keller, whose mastery over her affliction has been an inspiration and a hope to countless thousands.

Air Hostesses Get Thrills in Ozone

The movies have given us heroes of the front line trenches, of the hospital nursing wards, of the business world and of the home, but in Columbia's spectacular film, "Air Hostess," at the Ritz theatre Friday and Saturday, we are regaled with the first real heroine of the air in the person of one of those romantic young women of today who fly the great trans-continental planes night and day for their livelihood.

It is a particularly exciting picture, as well as a novel one, with one of the most amazing climaxes ever brought to the screen in the form of a crashing of a plane only a few yards ahead of a passenger train. "Air Hostess" has too, a competent cast of players, with the charming Miss Evelyn Knapp appearing as the glorifier of the air hostesses, the manly looking James Murray as the famous flyer who is so reckless and irresponsible that he has difficulty earning a living, Thelma Todd as a wealthy vamp, and Arthur Pearson as a dependable young pilot.

"Air Hostess," which ran in True Story Magazine and was enjoyed by millions of readers, was adapted for the screen by Keene Thompson, Milton Reason, well-known writers. Al Rogell directed the production, a tingling tale of intrepid Miss 1933 who flies the always seeking adventure and finding romance, love, Speed, wonderful aerial photography and breath taking escapes. "Air Hostess" is the intimate revelations of a modern Venus of the air.

Tobacco Chewing New Fire Hazard

BOSTON. (UP).—Smoking has long been listed as a leading fire hazard. Now comes tobacco chewing.

Insurance men, at a state safety conference, demonstrated how a tobacco cut, under certain conditions can start a blaze. It was explained that the bleaching room of a textile factory was the one locale where tobacco chewing was a fire menace.

To demonstrate, the insurance men sprinkled sawdust on a table to represent the floor of a bleaching room. On this was spilled a small quantity of bleach, containing sodium peroxide. Tobacco juice, contacting this combination, caused a burst of flame.

Resolution of WTCC Received

Copies of a WTCC resolution urging refunding of money spent by farmers in sterilization and fumigation of cotton in the so-called pink boll worm infested area of West Texas, have been received by the Fumigation and Sterilization Relief organization of Pecos, according to Hal Burnett, prominent farmer of Reeves county.

Burnett in showing the resolution, here calls to attention the necessity for need of cooperation with the Pecos organization of other counties in a common fight for restoration of funds.

The resolution, resulting from the work of Burnett and Judge C. C. Stapleton of Sierra Blanca, follows: "Whereas in the past the farmers of 11 West Texas counties have suffered great loss through the quarantine of cotton areas and the fumigation and sterilization costs assessed on them in eradicating the pink boll worm, and

"Whereas, House Bill 176, now before the Texas legislature, carries relief for these farmers; and

"Now, therefore, be it resolved that the West Texas chamber of commerce urgently request prompt and favorable action on this bill."

was greatly improved and was stocked with pure bred cattle. Mr. Cowden's family was his greatest pride. Born here were Mayme (Mrs. Homer W. Rowe), Freddie (Mrs. J. O. Nobles), J. Ellis Cowden, Frank Cowden, Essie (Mrs. Whit Stafford of Dallas) and Geraldine (Mrs. W. Clifford Hill), making a total of 11 children. He took his wife and Mayme to Europe and the Holy Land about 20 years ago and always felt the investment was one of his best.

Mrs. Cowden, his wife, was killed in an automobile accident, and after a few years he was married again, to Miss Emma Long.

Everything he touched turned to money, it seemed. He became a stockholder in the First National bank, made extensive loans, acquired much ranch and city property and made much from his oil lands in Ector county about three years ago.

He was a member of the First Baptist church for many years and was one of the strongest financial supporters of it.

Besides his widow, he leaves the following children at Midland: Mrs. Clarence Schanbauer, Mrs. J. O. Nobles, Mrs. B. H. Blakeney, Mrs. Homer W. Rowe, Mrs. B. C. Girdley, Mrs. Clifford Hill, Ellis and Frank Cowden and Mrs. Whit Stafford of Dallas; two brothers, Jeff and Walter of Midland, and a sister, Mrs. I. H. Bell of El Paso.

Customers Offered Fuel with "Bouquet"

AMARILLO, TEXAS. (UP).—The Amarillo Gas company here is offering its customers a fuel with a "bouquet."

Gas in the company's distributing lines is to be odorized to make the detection of leaking heaters, pipes and hose connections an easy matter.

Nearly 15 gallons of Calodorant, a volatile oil product, will be vaporized into the gas daily. The odorant gives the gas a penetrating but harmless odor and does not affect the heating value of the fuel, according to officials of the company.

TULARE, Calif. (UP).—And now, tree-nesting ducks!

Two mallard hens recently built nests and laid eggs high above the ground in Mooney park, near here.

How the baby ducks will get down after they are hatched was a problem which bothered many local residents, but apparently was of no concern to the mothers.

The ducks' penthouse residences were the first ever reported here.
