COMMITTEE STUDIES FARM BILL

Texas Beer Proponents Lay Plan for Legalizing Drink

TWO BILLS ARE ADVOCATED FOR LEGALIZATION

One Simply Would Be Mere Definition Of Beverage

AUSTIN, Mar. 23. (UP).—Beer proponents today were laying plans for state legislation of 3.2 per cent federally approved beverages. One bill would establish that percentage as non-intoxicating. Another regulates manufacture, disposition and sale of "non-toxic malt liquors," with the non-intoxicating percentage established. It was believed that advertising of beverages within the limit would follow. The bill would not sell to minors under sixteen, would sell only in 12 ounce bottles, with a state tax of a half cent each. Licenses would be issued only to firms in business for as long as two years. It provided fifty dollars state tax licenses for consumption sales and twenty for non-consumption where bought, with city and county allowed a tax half the amount of the state tax.

APPROPRIATION FOR JUDICIARY PASSED

AUSTIN, Mar. 23. (UP).—The senate and the house today passed the judiciary appropriation of $5,699,000, one fourth under the amount a year ago. The bill carried the senate's recommended increase of $183,000 over the original measure passed in the house.

DALLAS MEDICO PAN-AMERICAN ASSN. CHIEFTAIN

DALLAS, March 23. (UP).—Dr. John O. McReynolds of Dallas was elected president of the Pan-American Medical association today, succeeding Dr. Francisco M. Fernandez of Havana. Dr. McReynolds is presiding over the assembly here. Dr. Charles H. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., is first vice-president.

Deadline on Auto Tags Is March 31

Attention of motorists is called to the fact that March 31 is the last day on which to pay auto licenses, under extension granted by the legislature. Although the headlight law has been repealed, county officials point out that it still is necessary to have both headlights and the rear light burning at night. Motorists not observing these regulations will be checked by officers the same as before.

Graf's Father Is Improving

The father of Barney T. Graf and Otis Graf of Midland, H. C. Graf, 77, Cleburne, is recovering from a paralytic attack suffered Monday, according to a telephone message to the sons Wednesday night. The father is a Johnson county pioneer, and his stroke is believed to have resulted partly from grief and a weakened physical condition following the death of his wife Jan. 16.

Play Rehearsal At Later Hour

No rehearsal of "Casey's Trial," comedy presentation to be given Federated clubs, will be held this evening until exercises beginning at 8 o'clock at the high school are completed. Miss Ruth Norwood, director, announced. However, those who wish to get special assistance with roles, will meet with Miss Norwood at 7:30. More singers are needed to complete the large cast.

Production Loan Checks Received

First crop production loan checks have been received by Midland county farmers, seven getting drafts this morning through the office of Supervisor John S. Andrews. Thirty applications have been made for government funds, average amount asked approximating $85.

QUALIFYING SCORES

Only two were reported as having turned in qualifying scores Wednesday for the country club ladder: Shaw an 84 and Kidd a 29 for seven holes (he joined his foursome on No. 3 tee). Qualifying scores are posted on 26 holes. Requalifying of old members is optional.

Her Smile Won a Contract

Margaret McConnell's smile from a cigarette advertisement on a magazine cover attracted attention to Hollywood. She was summoned to Hollywood from Chicago, given a test—and a contract.

HAUGHTY JAP ANSWER MADE TO COMMAND

Uncertainty, Unrest Hover Over Most Of Europe

TOKYO, March 23. (UP).—The government today announced that it had no intention of surrendering the mandated Pacific islands upon withdrawal from the League of Nations. The islands, formerly Germany's, were parcelled out after the war. President Wilson objected to Japanese annexation so a mandate agreement was reached. Japan claimed she understood the act meant annexation.

SMALL NATIONS EXPRESS ANGER

GENEVA, March 23. (UP).—The small nations of Europe, angered at Italy's four power treaty proposal excluding them forced immediate consideration of the MacDonnell arms plan, introduced before Mussolini announced his proposal. The action prevents Easter adjournment of the disarmament commission.

BRITAIN WARNS SOVIET TO RELEASE ENGLISH

LONDON, March 23. (UP).—The government today ordered the Moscow ambassador to demand unconditional release of four Britishers held on sabotage charges. Severing of diplomatic relations were considered and trade agreement negotiations already were suspended.

Missionary to Speak Tonight

Dr. W. D. Powell, globe trotter, lecturer and former Baptist missionary to Mexico, China and other countries, will speak at eight o'clock this evening at the First Baptist church.

Scouts Move into Larger Quarters

The regular Wednesday check meeting of oil scouts of the Permian basin has moved into new quarters here, now occupying the old location of the West Texas Office Supply, west front of the Scharbauer hotel.

Provisions of Beer Bill Listed

WASHINGTON, Mar. 23.—The principal provisions of the beer bill: Legalizes beer and wine of 3.2 per cent alcohol by weight or four percent by volume. Levies a federal tax of $5 a barrel of thirty-one gallons. Becomes effective 12:01 a. m. April 7. Leaves all regulation as to distribution to the states. Protects dry states by re-affirming the Webb-Kenyon act preventing interstate shipment into those that have laws prohibiting sale of beverages of more than one-half of one per cent alcoholic content. Provides that brewers must pay an annual federal license fee of $1,000 for each brewery. Continues existing laws calling for $50 annual fees for wholesalers and $20 for retailers.

COT IS COSTLY

TEXARKANA, Ark. (UP).—Upon his plea of guilty to a charge of stealing a cotton gin under taking establishment, Ed Flynt was fined $10.

Comment on World Peace, Farm Bill

Editor's Note: This is one of a series of articles by T. S. Hogan, Midland oil man and former senator from Montana, who is in Washington for the present session of congress. Sentiments expressed by the writer do not in any way represent, necessarily, those of The Reporter-Telegram, but are based on Mr. Hogan's first-hand contact with legislative affairs at Washington.

By T. S. HOGAN
WASHINGTON, March 20.—At Geneva yesterday 8,000 veterans of all battlefields of Europe, many blind, crippled and gassed, met in what was probably the world's greatest demonstration against war. The 8,000 present represented 8,000,000 others and spoke for the 13,000,000 dead.

The demonstration moved the spectators to tears. Every major national association in the world was represented but Hitler forbade the German veterans the right to obtain passports. However, many German veterans participated. The charge of cowardice so often made against other peace gatherings was silenced here for these men had proven their courage on a thousand battlefields. Their president, Maximilian Brandes, expressed the sentiment of them all in his words, "Peace at any price, peace by every means, peace above all."

Romance of Joan and Young Doug Now Assumes an Ironic Quirk Complexion

Recent Snap

Doug, Jr., and Joan in their last photograph together.

HOLLYWOOD.—A strange turn in affairs has thrown Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., into a real life situation more weird than any story written for him by movie scenarists. Young Fairbanks today finds himself defendant in a $60,000 alienation of affections suit and at the same time without a wife to help him fight those charges.

Following closely the alienation of affections suit by Jorgen Dietz while Fairbanks was on location at Santa Monica, some 60 miles from here, came announcement from Joan Crawford that she and her actor-husband had separated.

Their separation, which did not in the least surprise Hollywood, recalls the early days of their romance—a romance which burned as few others in the film capital ever have. Doug and Joan met nearly six years ago when he was appearing in a stage play at the Belasco theatre here. That casual meeting marked the beginning of their romance.

Almost nightly throughout the remaining run of the play, Joan was in the audience. And after each performance she was with Doug—in various night clubs or slipping off to quiet out-of-the-way places for midnight suppers.

After the play closed, they continued to be seen together so frequently that they were secretly reported to be in love.

Prior to her meeting with young Fairbanks, Joan was quite a play-girl-around-town, the most constant winner of cups and other dancing trophies of any girl in Hollywood. And seldom was she seen with the same man more than a few times. Immensely popular, she enjoyed the variety offered by innumerable invitations and carried on as a free lancer of the first order.

Doug, only son of Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., also was popular in the younger set, but like Joan he preferred not to confine his attentions to any one person.

All that was changed when the new romance began. The young actor "misled" his long list of telephone numbers. With Joan it became "I'll call you sometime" if the person on the other end of the telephone wire was other than Doug.

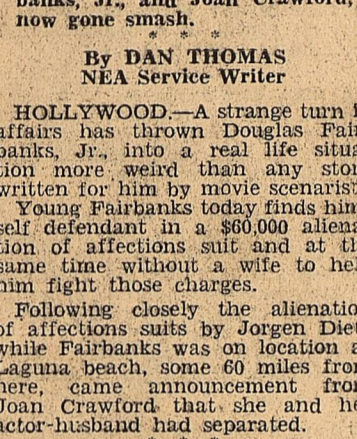

However, they didn't isolate themselves far from each other. There was most excitement Joan and Douglas could be found, always the center of activity. Joan having a passion for dancing trophies, they continued winning them in Friday night contests at the Old Monte, the Cocoanut Grove, the Blitmore supper room, and the Roosevelt Blossom room. Half of the trick dancing steps which became popular in Hollywood were originated by them.

Gradually Joan's girl chums began to sense the beginning of the end of their favorite bachelorette establishment. Before Fairbanks entered her life, Joan's home was the favorite hang-out for Hollywood's single girls.

Extremely feminine throughout, it was the sort of a home in which girls like to gather for those feminine confabs which sometimes last far into the night. And if they lasted too late at Joan's, there always were extra beds.

Slowly but surely Fairbanks changed that. Joan became less and less free to play hostess at such affairs. Her interests were centered elsewhere. She preferred being with the young actor who had swept her off her feet almost at their first meeting. Often they danced. Sometimes they took long drives along the ocean. On occasions they visited the various beach resorts to while away an evening on the concession piers.

Bride Named

Lucy Doraine, above, is honey-mooning with Jorgen Dietz, who murdered Douglas Fairbanks Jr. for alleged alienation of affections of Dietz's former wife, Fairbanks Jr. said Miss Doraine tried to sell him a $500 piece of jewelry for $6000. Fairbanks called this an attempt at extortion.

HOUSTON, Mar. 23.—H. M. Edwards, 37, Reno, Nevada, aviator, was acquitted of charges of murder for the death of his fiancée, Miss Ivy Young, actress, by a jury here.

The verdict or acquittal was returned after the jury had been out four hours. Edwards was charged with murder in connection with the fatal plunge of Miss Young from his hotel room on February 19. The actress fell seven stories to her death.

When the verdict was returned, Edwards smiled for the first time since the hearing began Monday. He arose and shook hands with each of the jurors as the 12 men left the box.

"The only thing I can say was that I was innocent and had two good lawyers," Edwards told reporters as he collected his belongings from a jail cell, which he had occupied since Miss Young's death.

TYLER. (UP)—Already preyed upon by the elements and more recently by fire, the old Tyler post office building, erected in 1887 at the corner of North Bois Arc and West Ferguson, is being razed to make way for a new $300,000 federal building.

Through all of this Joan and Doug continued to get rumors that they had been secretly married. However, as far as her free time was concerned, Joan might just as well have been married. She had lost her standing as Hollywood's champion bachelorette.

Man Injured in a Boiler Explosion

BIG SPRING.—Paul Holden, employe of Elton Taylor, was painfully injured Tuesday afternoon when the pressure boiler on which he was working hurried a valve into his face.

Holden was rushed to a local hospital where he was given emergency treatment. Wednesday he was still confined to his bed.

At the time of the accident he was working on the boiler which was then under pressure. The explosion hurled oil and the valve into his face, cutting a huge gash on left side of his upper lip.

SENATE WILL WAGE A STIFF FIGHT LIKELY

Other Plans Likely To Be Written Into Bill

WASHINGTON, March 23. (UP). The Roosevelt farm bill, passed in the house yesterday, was referred today to the senate agriculture committee. Consideration was expected to begin tomorrow.

The two-billion dollar Roosevelt plan to refinance and scale down farm mortgages was submitted to Secretary of the Treasury Woodin before being sent to congress. Speaker Rainey said the plan was nearing completion and would be written into the bill passed yesterday as a senate amendment.

A similar plan to refinance small home mortgages will be a separate bill.

PERKINS DEFENDS DOLLAR-A-DAY WAGE

WASHINGTON, March 23. (UP). Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins today defended the dollar a day reforestation program wage scale before the senate labor committee. She said she does not think it should be considered "sweated labor."

House Majority Leader Eymus expressed no hope of action on the unemployment relief bill before Monday.

Banker, Singers Entertain Rotes

A detailed talk on the origin of money was given at the Rotary club today by Ralph M. Burron. His speech will appear in the Friday issue of The Reporter-Telegram at request of the club members who voiced appreciation of the informative talk.

J. E. Hall made brief but inspiring talk on "What I Like About Rotary." Songs were given by the girls' choral club and the boys' glee club of Midland high school. The songs were new numbers, to be sung to night at the literary society program.

Visiting Rotarians at the luncheon were J. E. Hall and Father Francis of Big Spring.

Final Gin Report Shows 9745 Bales

With plans announced for the building of a new gin at Midland and the doubling of capacity of another Midland farmers will be assured of getting their 1933 crop handled with a minimum of delay.

A total of 9745 bales of the 1932 crop was ginned by the three Midland gins, and the Farmers' Cooperative Gin company has about 20 more bales to run out this week making the total approximately 9765.
The final gin report, made Wednesday, follows:

JUSTICE DEALS WITH A MOB

A band of alleged Klansmen some weeks ago raided the home of one David Milder in Long Beach, Calif. Milder was supposed to be a more or less radical labor agitator so the members of the mob burned a fiery cross in his yard and administered a beating to him, to members of his family and to a guest.

But in this case justice proved able to deal with a mob. The raiders were caught, identified and taken into court and the other day 15 members of the mob were convicted, and heavy fines and prison terms are now in prospect for them.

Officers of the law everywhere might well make a note of this action. The danger of mob violence of any kind would be extremely small if the authorities everywhere were as quick to punish such lawless outbreaks as were the authorities at Long Beach.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

Have you noticed that most criticism comes from someone in a sitting position?

Don't be envious of anyone who is doing well. When other people are prosperous, your chances to prosper are better.

President Roosevelt certainly is an operator. I've heard that every so often business has to undergo an operation before it can operate.

In voting for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, the states have no precedent to follow. It's the first time in history there has been a vote on repeal of a constitutional amendment. Am I right?

A man here in town who has learned a lot by experience told me no precedent to follow. It's the first time in history there has been a vote on repeal of a constitutional amendment. Am I right?

Before the oil business slowed up a little bit, they say Bob Patterson had an office boy. A man called one day and asked for Mr. Patterson. "Are you a salesman, bill collector or friend of his?" asked the boy. "All three," was the reply.

Living Fabric in Yucca's Film Offer

"Humanity" the new dramatic romance from Fox, closes at the Yucca theatre tonight, and must be put down as one that should be seen. The opening audience attested to that with what seemed to be an enthusiasm and a satisfaction not often seen in a movie theatre.

The cast, headed by Ralph Morgan, Boots Mallory, Alexander Kirkland and Irene Ware, brings to life a group of vivid characters excellently portrayed. The direction by John Francis Dillon is sensitive and understanding. Bradley King wrote the screen play from the story, "The Road to Heaven" by Harry Fried.

"Humanity" is made of living fabric. It is a picture that should strike a responsive chord in everyone who sees it.

Iraan Road Is Being Completed

MCCAMEY-With only finishing touches left to be placed on Upton county's latest road improvement before it will be opened to the public for travel, the workmen of the G. B. Dryson Construction Co. were pouring the last tank full of asphalt late Thursday afternoon on Burlington Avenue, making it a paved street from curb to curb from its intersection with Seventh street to the corner of the high school campus.

Work was started on a similar project about the same time when workmen started improving the Rankin-Iraan road which intersects with Highway No. 99, and it is reported that surfacing of this strip will start in the near future. The road which is just being completed is being built with the excess funds of the road bond issue voted in 1928. A total of $65,000 is being spent on the two roads running south toward Iraan. Both roads will be all-weather highways constructed of a solid caliche base and topped with asphalt. The contract was given to the Dryson Construction Co. with the understanding that only home labor would be used in the construction of these roads. These have furnished employment for a large crew of men for the past five months, which has helped much in alleviating the unemployment situation.

The Reporter-Telegram presents this serialization of "Rasputin and the Empress," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture version of the dramatic fall of the Romanoff family, starring the three Barrymores: Eitel, John and Lionel. The exciting story of the Imperial downfall, against a background of world-shaking events, combined with the tender love story of Prince Paul and the Lady-in-Waiting, Natasha, will be presented daily for the next two weeks by The Reporter-Telegram.

CHAPTER ONE

Before a tumbledown house in one of the meanest streets in the slum quarters of Moscow an elegant carriage waited, glossy with high polish and glistening with silver trimmings. Two blooded horses, fretting and stamping in aristocratic impatience stood before it, and a coachman and footman, smart in new liveries and cocked hats, sat on the box. The sleek horses, dapper servants and bright carriage were sorely in contrast with the drab street and the miserable house before which they were standing.

In a room on the second floor of the house an even more striking contrast could be seen. Seated at either side of a greasy deal table were two people. The first, young beautiful woman of the court, a lady-in-waiting to the Empress. The second was a tremendous man with a huge black beard flowing over a massive chest.

The Lady-in-Waiting, Natasha, would have stood out in any gathering. She was beautiful. Her pale blonde hair and the light blue of her eyes were of the sort that the Russians describe as "St. Peter'sburg blonde." But unlike most fair women there was character, courage and dignity in her even features and intelligence in her eyes.

As for the man, it was the fierce, compelling gleam of his eyes that impressed one. And now these eyes, glowing as he spoke, were fastened on the eyes of the lady who sat opposite him. Not once while he spoke with her did they waver or go down before her clear, direct gaze.

In a professionally paternal tone which seemed to soften his gruff voice, he was speaking to her.

"Who sent you to me, my child?" "Maria Feodorovna, my old nurse," she answered simply.

"I see. And what did Maria Feodorovna say that I could do for you, my little one?" The black-bearded man asked.

"Nothing, Father Gregory." "The man laughed with a short, ugly catch on his breath.

"Few people come here who want nothing from me," he said. "Why did you come here?"

"Father Gregory—believe me—I came only for guidance."

"The snore on the bearded lips was plainly evident to her when he said: "Ah. An unfortunate love affair, eh? Even the ladies of the court sometimes have their little difficulties, ha?"

"No. It was no unfortunate love affair that brought me here. I came because Maria Feodorovna told me that of all the Holy men she has known, only you could lift the clouds of doubt and sadness from one's soul."

"And what sadness afflicts you?" he asked. "You look sound and healthy. Perhaps it is a dear relative that you have lost."

"No. It is the plight of Russia that brings me here."

"What is Russia's plight?" he asked. "Isn't tomorrow the day that the court celebrates the three hundredth anniversary of the Romanoff reign? Surely there is no need for grief at such a festival."

"It is something I sense rather than know," she told him. "Give me some hope for the future, Father Gregory."

Father Gregory, born a peasant, bred a monk, and practicing as a false priest and prophet in the poorest quarter of Moscow, felt a stirring of mounting ambition. This woman was of the court. If he could practice his strange powers upon her, relieve her mind, then perhaps she would bring others to see him. He could wring fat fees from them. It would be better than fleecing servant girls and drunken horseboys. And, perhaps, who could tell, Gregory Rasputin might even become a man of wealth and power. It was a long time before he answered Natasha. Then he said:

"I can give you no hope for the near future. There is too much misery in Holy Russia. The people cry out beneath the hard heels of their oppressors. I can give you no help and no hope until the Tsar and his Uncles give help and hope to the miseries of their people."

"But he loves them—I know," he interrupted her. "Come with me."

Parting a curtain hanging in a broken doorway, he led her into another room. There a young boy, no more than twelve years old, lay moaning on a pile of straw in the corner. A bloody bandage around his head gave a clue to his plan. "There is how the Tsar loves his dear people," Rasputin said. "This boy was hawking papers on the Nevsky Prospect. He brushed against a police officer by accident. A Cossack slashed at him with his sabre. Without God's aid the boy will die."

"Oh, Natasha exclaimed. "It can't be. There must have been an accident."

"So it was reported. But it was no accident. It was the Tsar's love for his people."

"As he said this, he turned to her and said in an impressive tone of voice:

"Now behold God's love!" Bending over the boy, he weakened him, spoke to him softly, then calling upon God, he bent still further until his eyes were no more than an inch from the eyes of the wounded boy. For a moment he remained this way, murmuring monotonous phrases which Natasha could not overhear. Then he straightened up and motioned to her to look at the boy.

She did so. He was breathing easily, his eyes closed in a gentle sleep and already blood was flowing back into the anguished cheeks.

"It is a Miracle," she exclaimed. "God be praised," the monk said simply.

A quarter of an hour later, Natasha, firm in her belief that she had discovered a worker of miracles, stepped out into the street again. Her carriage was waiting for her, and drawn up beside it was a motorcar. In it sat a young man dressed in the grey fatigue uniform of the Cavalier Guards.

He smiled as he got out of the car and came forward to kiss her hand.

"Paul," she exclaimed. "What are you doing here?" "And what are you doing here?" he interrogated, laughing.

"Ah, I have been keeping a rendezvous with such a handsome man," she teased him.

Paul, the commanding officer of Her Imperial Majesty's Cavalier Guards and himself the Prince Cherodief, cocked a quizzical eye at the tenement which she had just left.

"Your lover lives in a palace," he said.

She laughed, then said in a low voice:

"I love no one but you, Paul."

"Not the Tsar, nor the Empress, nor the Imperial children, nor Russia?" he asked.

"Yes, I love them, too. I'd give my life for them. But that's a different sort of love. It's a love that's been bred in my bones, by my love for you is all my own—it's in my heart."

He pressed her hand tenderly. "And you love the people of Russia, too, or else you would not come to so foul a place to distribute alms."

Quickly, she corrected him. "That's not why I am here."

"Ah, I forgot—the handsome lover!" "No," she said seriously, her eye widening. "I came to see a Holy man."

He laughed. "Don't laugh. I have just seen him perform a miracle. It's a man who can save Russia much pain," she insisted.

She described Rasputin and the miracle he had performed. Prince Paul was tenderly incredulous. He did not wish to hurt her feelings, only commenting:

"On my father's estate in the Ukraine, there was a faith healer. I watched him work. It was a crude form of hypnotism; that was all."

Student Officers Named for School Band Organization

Arrangements were completed today which named student officers for the Midland high school band. The band organization is getting down to hard work on the contest numbers and the repertoire of the spring commencement concert. Some very fine numbers are being used in both these outstanding events.

Student officers in the band are appointed by the director and approved by the principal and the superintendent. Seniors are generally selected. Other factors considered are period of band service, ability to shoulder responsibility, and general good standing in the school.

The following officers were named: Fred Hallman (post graduate), assistant student director; Joe Beane, student manager; Billy Day, assistant student manager in junior high school; Fouché Pollard, librarian.

Fred Hallman, appointed for the post of assistant student director has been a member of the band for four years, and one of the best high school cornetists that has been turned out of the high school band. He won solo honors in the contest last year and next year will take his place in some college band.

Joe Beane, named for the post of student manager, will complete his third year in the band this year and recently advanced to 1st clarinet. Joe is known for his dependability and ability in managing student projects.

Billy Day, appointed to the junior high school manager's post, is a one-year man in the band and has made excellent progress as a drummer since taking up band study about nine months ago. It is necessary to have an assistant manager in the junior high school because of the increasing number of band members in the school.

Fouché Pollard, named for the post of librarian, has been a member of the band for four years and since this post requires the mind of a punctual student, Fouché will prove a logical choice.

Other posts of honor in the band may be attained by any student through diligent study. These are strictly musical-achievement honors and have very definite and simple requirements. The first honor is "first musician," signified by one chevron on the right sleeve of the uniform; the next highest honor is "master musician," and is signified by two chevrons on the right sleeve of the uniform; the highest honor is "chief musician," and is signified by three chevrons worn on the right sleeve of the uniform.

All student officers will wear a significant insignia on the right sleeve of their uniform.

administered with caution so as not to too rapidly disturb existing business in these commodities.

The government bureau of agricultural economics has figured out the following table of comparative prices:

Commodity	Average	1900-14 Feb. '33
Cotton, per pound.....	12.4c	5.5c
Corn, per bushel.....	64.2c	19.4c
Wheat, per bushel.....	83.4c	32.2c
Beef cattle, pound.....	5.20c	3.31c
Hogs, per pound.....	7.24c	2.94c
Butter, per pound.....	25.5c	18.4c
Butterfat, per pound.....	26.3c	15.8c
Lamb, per pound.....	5.9c	4.19c

Of course in the case of cotton only that portion of the crop used in the United States could participate in the increased price. That applies also to wheat and meat but cotton is the only crop of which about sixty per cent is exported.

There is no escaping the fact that this is a complex and difficult problem to handle.
