ENCOURAGING NEWS

One of the best bits of news of the year surely is the revelation by the American College of Surgeons that five-year cures of cancer have been reported in no less than 12,476 cases in the United States and Europe.

As Dr. Beckwith Whitehouse, of the British Radium Commission, says, "The statement that cancer is curable is the great contribution the profession can make to the public."

Surgery, X-ray, and radium irradiation were the weapons used in these cases; and the important thing to notice is the fact that the surgeons all agreed that even more cures could be recorded if patients would apply for treatment earlier.

A cancer that is just starting is far easier to handle than one which has been allowed to have its own way until it has become painful. The time factor is a tremendous one in the war on this malady.

The Georgia postmaster who had been serving continuously since 1877, through a long series of political changes, seems to be one example of the "forgotten

El Paso. (Try this on your Rand McNally.) The United States with Texas left out would look like a three-legged Boston Terrier. "The chief occupation of the people of Texas is to try to keep from making all the money in the world, and at that the wealth of Texas increased 53% between 1900 and 1927. At one time Texas was so wild that not even the law of gravitation was obeyed, and the chief pursuit of the Texans was Indians and Mexicans, but now it is crop records and oil production. It is so healthy in Texas that out in Eastland a horned frog lived 30 years sealed in a cornerstone without food, air or water."

"Texans are so proud of the Lone Star State that they cannot sleep at night. If a Texan's head should be opened the map of the State would be found on his brain. The word 'Texas' is of Indian origin and means 'Friends' and the Texas people are that way yet unless you take a siam at their state. If your front gate is not at least 18 miles from your front door, you do not belong to society as constituted in Texas. Down on the King ranch the front gate is 150 miles from the front porch and the owner is thinking of moving the house back so as not to be annoyed by passing automobiles. Other Texas landlords have ranches and one Texan has 40 miles of navigable river on his farm. If Texas were the same as in Illinois, the value of Texas crops would equal that of the other 47 States combined. If all the people of the United States were to move to Texas, it still would be no more densely populated than in Massachusetts. Texas has land enough to supply every man, woman and child in the whole world with a tract 200 x 300 feet, and have enough left over for all the armies of the world to march around five abreast."

"To move the Texas corn crop would take a string of box cars longer than the distance between New York and San Francisco. If the 1,500,000 tons of sulphur mined in Texas annually were in the hands of his Satanic Majesty, they would solve his fuel problem. If all the cotton grown in Texas were baled and built into a stairway, it would reach to the Pearly Gates. If the 255,587,000 barrels of oil produced in Texas in 1928 were made into gasoline, it would run a well-known make of light car throughout eternity. If all the hogs of Texas were one hog, he could dig the Panama Canal in three roots and one grunt."

Chapter II. The publicity department of Monarch Pictures, Inc., wore much the aspect of a newspaper office with its tortoise-shell bespectacled young men pounding away at typewriters, short-skirted secretaries displaying trim, silken-clad legs as they took dictation, office boys clipping papers, messages, copy and photographs.

"Get this," said one of the girls, glancing up from a newspaper. "Here's a guy claims he's married to Burns." "That's the proof she's a big star," said another young woman. "Attracts all the nuts." "But he says he's here in Hollywood to prove it." The friendly atmosphere prevailing in the room was disturbed by the entrance of a very beautiful brunette, stylishly gowned and furred, who came in wrathfully with a bunch of photographs under her arm. "Betty," she addressed the young woman who was inserting photos of the Monarch stars in mailers, "who told you to release these simply terrible monstrosities?" "I'm sorry, Miss Cole, but Mr. Hanlon put his okay on that bunch yesterday." "He did, did he, after promising—"

She turned and went directly into the outer office of "Space" Hanlon, publicity and advertising director for Monarch Pictures, walked majestically past the secretary of her desk, without a glance for her own portraits or those of other Monarch stars plastered over the walls, and into Hanlon's private office. A secretary with a short-hand pad sat patiently by his desk while he talked into one of three telephones, the art director standing by with a colored lay-out for a twenty-four sheet. Alice Cole all but elbowed the art director out of her way and threw the bunch of photographs on Hanlon's desk.

"Look here, Space Hanlon—" "No, no, I don't want any shots with the judges," Space was saying into a phone. "What good is a dog-show judge? Put her in with a couple of St. Bernards." He put down the phone and looked up at Alice Cole. "Hello, honey. What are you in mourning for?" "You told me you wouldn't use the front office on him. What does he think we are going to put out in front of the theatres?" He turned to Alice Cole. "You are beautiful and I love you." "You said you'd destroy these awful—" An assistant interrupted, holding up sketches for a lay-out for a Lola Burns twenty-four sheet. "All I want is your okay." "No, no, that's not the Burns idea at all." "Burns' Burns!" exclaimed Miss Cole, wrathfully. "She's not the only star on this lot. If you'd think a little more of the rest of us—" "Darling, darling," said Space, looking up placatingly. "It's personal prejudice, that's what it is. You're glaupey-eyed about her, only you're too stubborn to admit it."

"Darling, my love-life is right here," he returned to the lay-out. "Listen, you know better than that. We're not putting Burns over with hearts and flowers. Forget the art school. This is a Burns billboard. Pull the dress tighter here and let the superstructure leap out loud and clear. The heck with traffic accident. Let's give the man on the sidewalk a break." He got up and put his arm around Miss Cole as she exclaimed: "Disgusting!" He asked: "And now what's the matter with darling?" "You promised me you wouldn't release these. Look, the wrong side of my profile—"

"Don't worry, honey. They're only being released in China." The studio policeman in his sentry box inside the main entrance gate at Monarch Pictures knew it was Lola Burns arriving without even looking at the car driving up, for the crowd of school girls and boys and tourists about the gate became suddenly excited, began to scramble up on the walk.

Sandy, second assistant director ran up to Lola, as followed by Miss Mac, Loretta and the four world-hounds, she entered the long corridor upon which opened the row of dressing rooms. "So snap into it, will you, please?" "All right, Sandy, all right. Have some coffee on the set, will you? And don't think I'm going to get in that rain barrel if the water's as cold as it was last time. A polar bear would have died in it!" "It's heated, Lola, honest."

As Lola opened the door of her two dressing rooms, she was greeted by her assistant assemblage awaiting her arrival in the automobile salesman, an insurance agent, and others with hopes of fattening their pocket-books through her influence. "What do you fellows do? Sleep here?" she demanded as she swept through into her dressing room. "Hear me," begged Ike. "I'm the one honest agent in Hollywood. I've got all ready on hand to sign a new contract—" Miss Mac interrupted: "He'd fallen downstairs to sign it two months ago. Got him all worked up. Miss Mac closed the door between the hangers-on and the film star, took the insurance agent out of earshot of the others. "I told you not to bother her. I'll get to her father for you, if you can't, and I'll get your policy."

FOOTBALL SKETCHES

By R. C. HANKINS

Pat Murphy, coach of the Austin high school of El Paso, has his own methods of breaking up the social game of losing football players. If the club does not get in there and hustle, he doesn't let his men date the little girls. A sure fire remedy for those who play football just for the glory of wearing the school colors. Listen to this story.

"We went to Tucson the other day," said Murphy. "The boys are green and spent the afternoon playing around and getting ready for a big time after the game. They got beat 7-0 when they should have won easily. After supper I told them 'get your stuff and get on the bus.' Twenty-four Tucson girls got stood up that night."

Austin high has a little fellow named "Mickey Mouse" Salome, an Assyrian ball totter who is the class of West Texas high school backs. In the opinion of Murphy, Salome's unorthodox stride and low drive recalls a bird dog hot on the trail. He is going just as hard the last play as the first.

Wilbur Wimberly, son of Mrs. W. W. Wimberly of Midland and principal of the El Paso school, was Coach Murphy's old scoutmaster. The principal still rates a three-fingered salute from the hard-boiled little mentor, we are told.

This department did not get as many answers to the football guessing contest (run in the Wednesday edition of The Reporter-Telegram) as expected. Manager Hal Grady of the Yucca theatre is offering 20 passes to "Saturday's Millions," the football romance of 1933, one pass to each of the 20 highest scorers first to mail in blanks. You still have time to enter, so get the back page of the Wednesday edition and fill out your blanks and mail to "Saturday's Millions" Football Contest Editor, The Reporter-Telegram, City. The blanks already received show unusual ability to pick 'em.

Picked up. Alphonse, Minnesota's slashing sophomore halfback, is the first ice man ever to play on the Gophers' team. . . . He started carrying ice at 12 for his father's ice company in Cumberland, Wis. . . . He estimates he has carried about 1,700 tons of ice in the nine years he has been handling tongs and opening refrigerators.

Ed Angliemyer, Indiana lineman, goes in weighing 210 and comes out weighing about 200 or under. . . . Two Negroes play on the Indiana team. . . . they are Jesse Babb, fleet halfback, and Fitzhugh Lyons, giant end.

Golfer Is Grid Star
Frankie Fisch, Ohio State sophomore halfback, is one of the best golfers in the Big Ten. . . . He shoots in the 70's and has a 69 to Mansfield, O. . . . Until Michigan beat Ohio State, 13-0, Fisch never had played on a team which lost a football game.

Paul Pardoner, Purdue's drop-kick quarterback, kicked his 23rd goal after touchdown in 23 attempts when he booted the tying point in the Minnesota 7-7 deadlock. . . . Purdue hasn't been blanked in straight games. . . . The last time the Bollermakers were shutout was back in 1923 when Minnesota beat Purdue, 15-0.

It's a tough season on the newspapermen. Milwaukee photographer was injured by Coach Doc Spears of Wisconsin during the Wisconsin-Illinois game. . . . The photographer was obstructing his view. . . . Northwestern dressing room after the Stanford game. . . . Newspapermen were barred from practice at Michigan and Chicago before the Ohio State and Purdue games, respectively. . . . Bob Zupke of Illinois says secret practice is all hokum and that newspapermen can come and see all his plays anytime.

Big Ten's Toughest Coach
Bernie Bierman at Minnesota and Ossie Solem at Iowa, played on the same Minnesota team in 1915. . . . Noble Klizer is the youngest coach in the Big Ten. He played guard on the "Four Horsemen" team at Notre Dame, and went directly to Purdue as assistant to Jimmy Phelan. . . . Nobody heard much about him until Phelan went to Washington and he got the head coaching job. Now they're saying he's one of the smartest coaches in the country.

Clark Staughnessy of Chicago gives the Big Ten three coaches who played at Minnesota under Dr. Williams, formerly Coach Spears at Wisconsin, formerly coached at Minnesota, so the Gophers seem to be fairly representative of Western Conference coaching circles.

More pickup: Some of the nation's outstanding football players are performing on midwestern grid-irons this season.

Michigan has three bona fide All-American candidates in Charlie Bernard, 215-pound center; Ted Petoskey, 185-pound end; and John Regecki, perhaps the greatest punter in the country.

Ohio State has four great players in Sid Gillman, one of the finest ends in any section; Joe Gallus, a rip-roaring guard; Ted Rosequist, 6-foot, 4 1/2 inch tackle, who scales 215 pounds; and Carl Cramer, brilliant field general.

Notre Dame has Hugh De Vere, a smashing end; Ed Krause, a veteran tackle; Nick Lukacs, versatile left halfback; and its two spectacular sophomores, Andy Plinley, left halfback, and Don Elser, 220-pound fullback.

Purdue's big guns are Fred Heckler, fullback, who has averaged five yards every time he's carried the ball for two years, and Duane Purvis, great punter, passer, and runner.

Illinois' star is Les Lindberg, some say a reincarnation of Red Grange, Iowa has Dick Crayne, smashing fullback, and Bernie Page, a hawk-like end. Northwestern has its brilliant end, Milt Land is one of the Big Ten's most valuable backs.

These are only a few of the leaders who performed brilliantly in the early games.

Down in the land of cotton and corn liquor, they have their share of great football players again this season.

Among the best in the south are Beattie Feathers, Tennessee halfback; Fred Crawford, Duke tackle; Ralph P. Kercheval, Kentucky halfback; Tom Hupke, Alabama guard; J. B. Ellis, Tennessee guard; Corky Cornelius, Duke halfback; Graham Batchelor, Georgia end; and Clarence Roberts, Georgia Tech quarterback.

The south has some of the best punters in the country, among them Feathers, Tennessee; Howell, Alabama; Kercheval, Kentucky; Mickal, Louisiana State; Simons, Tulane; Dixon, Vanderbilt (who broke his arm in North Carolina game); Laney, Duke; and Grant, Georgia Tech.

pulled down the shade. Space raised it again, thrust his head in with a happy smile.

"Geez, look at all the curtain calls I'm taking!"

"Listen, Space," pleaded the ising man. "She'll be late as it is."

"A lot he cares," snapped Lola, dabbing her face. "Throw some blue ointment on him."

"Okay, Screwy," said Space. "Here's the whole reason. I'm here 'business. You know you've got to show up at the Wampus Club ball tonight?"

"I'm perfectly aware of that."

"Well, what time'll I drop around and pick you up?"

"Her voice was cold. "I beg your pardon?"

"Come on, Lola," said Space, really trying to be nice. "How about you and me ending this dog fight?"

"She wanted to him suddenly at his comradely air."

"Aw, gee, Space, I'd like to. You were awful nice to me when I first came on the lot. But ever since I began to get a name, you've doubt crossed me with that dirty publicity of yours. You've printed lies about me and made my life about as private as a goldfish's and—"

"But, Lola, that's the racket—what your public wants to read!"

"Well, I'm sick and tired of it."

"We'll talk it over tonight, eh—at the Wampus?"

"Thanks, but I'm going with somebody else."

"Oh, the Marquis, I suppose?"

"I am," said Lola, and there was defiance in her voice.

"What are you doing? Playing follow the leader?"

"At least he's a gentleman," said Lola coolly.

"Oh, I know he's got a dress suit!"

"And he happens to have royal blood in his veins!"

"Well, I work for a living. I don't let a whole procession of dames lead me around by the nose!"

"That's because they forgot to put a ring in it!" said Lola, arising and pulling down the shade.

CHILLICOTHE, O. (UP)—A watchdog, "Jack," her sole companion and protector in her suburban home here, is left the income from a $5,000 fund set up in the will of the late Mary B. Smart, entered for probate recently.

The money is left in trust to Charles Allen Smart, a nephew, of Wallingford, Conn., and is to be used to provide a home and food for the dog as long as he lives.

It cost the government $2.66 per head for 25,000 animals to feed its elk herds in the Jackson Hole district of Wyoming last winter.

Features of supremacy came a few months ago when Garbo returned from Europe and insisted upon having Rouben Mamoulian direct her new picture, "Queen Christina."

The fact that Greta was a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star and Mamoulian under contract to Paramount made no difference. She told studio officials very plainly that they either borrow Mamoulian for her picture or she wouldn't work.

"Queen Christina" was just about to go into production when Mamoulian returned from her vacation and immediately started making preparations for a similar picture, "The Scarlet Parade."

And that's where the situation stands today. When both were here and working they were on a pretty even footing. When Garbo returned to Sweden for a prolonged vacation, Dietrich stepped into the leading spot. Then she went to Europe and Garbo returned, thus making herself the big figure.

And now that Dietrich is back, it has become a neck and neck race again.

XER Radio Artist Plays Sensational Instrument at Ritz

To be heard for the first time in this city will be the new XER Radio stars' musical sensation, a stringed instrument named "VIO" appearing in person at the Ritz theatre on Saturday, preview Saturday night, and Sunday. They are the first to bring this strange new instrument to this city. Many years of painstaking, scientific research by Dr. Fisher of Germany now brings forth the first and only one-stringed instrument constructed according to the true laws of physics. The first demonstration of this weird invention occurred recently at the Physical Institute of the University in Germany. Its success was soon recognized and now it is the latest rage among Hollywood stars. Such well known players as Lew Ayres, John Boles, Theima Todd, etc. are now playing the VIO. "Our Gang" has recently made a picture with six of Hal Roach's youthful artists playing the VIO. Also George Olsson's Victor Recording orchestra have a quintet playing this new invention.

Mr. Russ Davis, chief announcer of XER, Little Dorothy Blue, Famous String Band, Sharpshooting, Comedy and Novelties.

This group are bringing the VIO to this city and its music will be played as part of the regular performance when appearing with the feature film attraction at the Ritz theatre, where the artists will be an added attraction for two days starting Saturday.

Stanton Gridsters Make Good Records In School Studies

STANTON—It is generally considered that football players are not very consistent in the matter of regularity or punctuality in their school attendance. This practice apparently does not exist in the Stanton high school. The following is the record made by the different members of the squad during the first and second months of the current session of school:

Handkerchief Shower for Mrs. Burchfiel

A handkerchief shower was given at the home of Miss Leona McCormick Wednesday afternoon following the meeting there of the Play Readers club. The party honored Mrs. Hugh Burchfiel.

Miss Stella Maye Lanham read a poem of Miss McCormick's and a gold box of handkerchiefs was presented Mrs. Burchfiel, who will move to Tampa, Fla., for the winter before sailing for Arabia to join her husband.

The home was decorated in yellow and white, and yellow chrysanthemums made for an early autumn effect.

The poem, "To Camille Burchfiel," follows:

To Camille Burchfiel
I hope in your heart there's a secret place,
Which may never prove defective—
And as the waters of time onward race,
You may pause a bit reflective.

With a light in your eye and a smile on your lips,
You'll heed not the days commotion,
For maybe you'll go down to Arabia in a ship
And be far on the world's vast ocean.

Think of our club as it goes on and on,
Reading new plays and old,
Which brings to you ere you're gone,
This little gift of gold.

Then swiftly as your boat goes
With many a love-gift freighted—
O'er these remembrances, as
Your cargo grows,
May you ever be elated.

"Ah, Wilderness!" Preview Is Read

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following review of "Ah, Wilderness!" recent play done by Eugene O'Neill, was read before the Play Readers club Wednesday by Mrs. J. Howard Hodge.

Eugene O'Neill has written a simple American family comedy having to do with paternal confusion and rebellious adolescence. With thorough going objectivity for the most part, Mr. O'Neill has told in "Ah, Wilderness!" the serio-comic story of a youth's rapture and distress during the throes of first love. Richard's mental and emotional disturbance is increased at the same time by his astonished discovery of Swinburne, Ibsen, Shaw and Omar Khayyam. So when Richard's father forbids him to see the over-estimated Richard he plunges into an adventure with liquor and a painted woman, being rescued from both by his innate decency before harm is done.

The play ends with his self-confident deflated, a new perspective acquired and a boy more tenderly understood by his father.

"Ah, Wilderness!" began its New York run at the Guild theatre on October 2. Critics say by all signs the play is an important contribution to the contemporary theatre, and is socially constructive in its total effect.

George M. Cohn and Elissa Cook, Jr., are playing the leads in the New York production.

BARKS AND GROWLS

Poodle was whining at a butterfly when Bobby came running out. He had spread the news about moving to the country. The moving van had just arrived.

Everyone was very busy. Bobby propped the door open with a box. Jane helped her mother around with the last minute things and the cook was busy fixing water for the workmen.

Poodle ran in thru the open door and between the legs of a man with a table and chair on his back, behind him was another man. The first fell down with the other on top of him, not to mention the furniture. Before they could get up, another man came along with a table held in front of him. He went kerplunk onto the heap with the others. Legs and arms reached from the pile of furniture. The cook walking very fast with some ice water. Before she could stop herself, she was down on them, giving them all a bath with the water.

Bobby came along, walking, very slow. He stopped in surprise at the heap before his eyes. The cook started yelling at the top of her voice, at which the neighbors came running to see what the matter was, and everybody laughed. The cook got up, saying something about "A body can't do anything without being helped." The neighbors laughing made a joke of it. The neighbors left, holding their sides. All this happened because of naughty Poodle.

COMING HOME
James Van Huss, North Ward
One time when our dog, Poochie, was young we took him with us to the swimming pool. When we went swimming, we tied Poochie with a cord. We paid no attention to her. When we got out, she was gone. We looked everywhere for her before we left. It was dark when we got home and we had not found her. Next morning we went out to build our clubhouse. We found her in a big box, asleep.

OUR DOG, JIGGS
Mary Helen Walker, North Ward
I once had a full blooded Spitz. I got him when he was a week old. His hair was about an inch thick. His name was Jiggs.

Every time Daddy tried to bathe him, he would try to bite him and play with him because he did not like to be bathed.

He liked meat a lot, as most dogs do.

MY DOG
Wallace Henry Roy, North Ward
My dog's name is Collie. She can do many tricks. She is brown and white. Mother calls her a waton dog because she bites anyone who stomps around the house at night.

"One night she bit my father. If you did not say 'Collie' she would bite you. You can roll a tire and say, 'Jump thru it, Collie,' and she would do it."

One night we went to take the milk. When we got back, she was gone. We looked everywhere for her but we could not find her. I wish we could.

My father got her ten years ago. When we first had her, we had to tie her. But after a while, we did not.

Party Honors Child Wednesday
Rebecca Rae Weaver, 10, was honored by her mother, Mrs. Sam Weaver, with a birthday party Wednesday. The home was decorated in pink and green, games were played, and refreshments served.

Guests were: Jessa Lynn Tuttle, Minnie Louise McLean, Nell Ruth Bedford, Edythe Wempie, James Frank Johnson, Bobby York, Shirley Ruth Jolly, Charles Barron, Fred Gordon Middleton, Frank Wade Arrington, Dorris Lynn Pemberton, Glen Brunson, George Hyatt, Terry Tidwell, Tad Crane, Mary Jack Beavers, Patsy Lou Arrington and Marjorie Barron.

BABY SON BORN
A baby son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Norman Benedict Wednesday, weighing eight and a half pounds. He was given the name John Norman.
