Harvey Bailey, Farm Boy, Turns GROUNDS AROUND Outlaw; Becomes No. 1 Bad Man

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of two stories on the career of Harvey Bailey, notorious criminal and outlaw, who faces trial for kidnaping at Oklahoma City today City today.

By ROBERT TALLEY NEA Service Writer

It's a far cry from the prosaic life of a farm boy in the quiet hills o northern Missouri to that of "the most dangerous criminal in the na-tion," but Harvey Bailey has tray-eled that road and now, at 48, the law has closed in on his career of cittlawry which has been the most spectacular the southwest has known since the days of Jesse

Chained to an iron cot in a cell in Oklahoma City's jail is this super-desperado, kidnaper, jail breaker, machine gun killer and bank robber who is the prize catch in the federal government's new war on crime. He faces trial in federal court there on Sept. 18 for the kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma oil millionaire, for whose release a ransom of $200,000 is said to have been paid.

Uncle Sam, warned by Bailey's recent single - handed escape from a death cell in the Dallas, Tex., a death cell in the Dallas, Tex., jail, is taking no chances this time. Not only is Bailey handcuffed and shackled in such a manner that he can hardly move, but guards armed with machine guns surround the jail to prevent any possibility of Bailey's escape or his rescue by members of his band.

When Harvey Bailey is brought into court at Oklahoma City to answer for the Urschel kidnaping, spectators and jury will see a man spectators and jury will see a man far different from the type that would be implied by his reputation as "the most dangerous criminal in the nation"—the description given him by Asst. #### A 'NEW WORLD' IS WELCOME

Prof. Philip Cabot of Harvard tells the state convention of the Pennsylvania Electric Association that the powers bestowed on the U.S. government under the NRA program must be terminated at the earliest possible moment if the American people wish to continue the governmental forms to which they have been accustomed.
